TORONTO POLICE MAY STRIKE OVER MERIT BADGES

KING PRAJADHIPOK ABDICATES THRONE AFTER WIDE SPLIT

Parliament's Rejection of His Conditions is Final Straw

KING VISITS ENGLAND

Months of International Strife Fail to Patch up Break

Cranleigh, England, March 1 (AP)—King Prajadhipok of Siam was announced by his private secretary today to have abdicated the throne.

The announcement of abdication of the diminutive monarch was made by M. R. Smaksman who has been here with the King on a "vacation" from troubled Siam.

The King's rejection of his throne follows months of internal disputes in Siam over governmental matters and repeated conferences in London with a delegation of countrymen who attempted to patch up the wide split between the monarch and his administration officials.

An official notification reaching King Prajadhipok from his capital, Bangkok, that Parliament had bluntly rejected his conditions for retaining the throne was the final straw for the picturesque monarch.

Smaksman announced: "The delegation realized that this answer from Siam means abdication."

APPRENTICESHIP BILL BROUGHT IN

British Columbia Labor Minister Plans to Direct 6 Trades

Victoria, March 1—(CP)—British Columbia was moving another step forward in industrial legislation today with announcement by Hon. G. S. Pearson, Minister of Labor, of a regulated system of apprenticeships.

Mr. Pearson introduced a measure designed to launch state-regulated apprenticeship in six trades, carpentry and joinery, bench work; painting and decorating; plastering; sheet-metal work; plumbing and steam-fitting, and electrical work. It would apply especially to boys from 16 to 18 years of age.

Employers in the trades covered would be prohibited from employing boys of this age for more than three months except under apprenticeship contracts. Employment of boys under 16 in the specified trades would be prohibited after the act came into force.

CAPTAIN COMPLETES HIS LAST VOYAGE

Halifax, March 1—(CP)—Captain Ewen H. Cameron completed his last voyage aboard the steamship Lady Somers as master today, docking his craft after a stormy voyage up the Atlantic coast from the West Indies with a stop at Boston. He will proceed to Montreal to take up his new duties as dockmaster under the harbor commissioners.

QUINTS NOW 'NORMAL'

Callander, Ont., March 1.— Two months premature at birth, the Dionne quintuplets were declared "absolutely normal" by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe today when they reached the age of nine months.

CARNIVAL SPIRIT REIGNS SUPREME AT MARDI GRAS

Thousands of visitors from all parts of the United States and many from Canada, are thronging New Orleans for the festive Mardi Gras celebration. Multi-colored decorations and brilliant lights have transformed this old French city into a veritable fairyland. Masqued balls, spectacular pageants and symbolic tableaux fill the eventful days of Mardi Gras week which ends when the chimes of old St. Louis cathedral peal out at midnight of Shrove Tuesday, marking the beginning of Lent. The gay costumes and elaborate floats traditional to the Mardi Gras are shown above.

LIFESAVERS RISK LIVES TO RESCUE MAROONED DOG

Dogs are always news and here is a bedraggled canine that caused members of the Toronto lifesaving crew to risk their lives in rescuing him from the icy waters of Lake Ontario. The dog had broken through the ice and lifesavers jumped from block to block. (LEFT) at risk of life to bring the daring puppy to safety.

Men Risk Lives to Save Police Dog

Toronto, Mar. 1—(CP)—Two Toronto lifesavers, watched by hundreds of office-bound motorists, risked their life by venturing out on thin ice cakes to save the life of a marooned, half-frozen police dog.

First Officer Ernest Russell and Patrol Officer Isaac Pond jumped from floe to floe dragging a boat behind them at the Canadian National Exhibition waterfront to reach the cake where the whimpering dog stood.

The ice thinned out 20 yards from the animal and Russell poled his way out on a cake. He put a noose around the pup's neck and broght it ashore where it was wrapped in warm blankets and fed.

End of World Will be 'One Stupendous Broadcast'

Energy From Radiation Will be in Form of Hertjian Waves

ASTRONOMER'S VIEW

London, March 1 (CP)—The World had warning today from Sir Arthur Eddington, Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge University, it's end will come "in one stupendous broadcast."

"The ultimate fate of protons and electrons is to annihilate each other and delease energy from radiation, Sir Arthur explained dast night. "Thus finally the universe will become a ball of radiation, becoming more and more rarified and passing into longer and longer wave lengths.

The longest waves of radiation and hertzian waves—the kind used in broadcasting. So the end of the physical world will be one stupendous broadcast."

Sir Arthur hastened to add this will not take place for several billion years when human life will long since have expired from radiation of heat.

JOHNNY WING CAPTAIN

Kingston, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Johnny Wing, crack kicker and outside wing, has been elected captain of Queen's University senior intercollegiate rugby team for next fall.

Wing is a native of Gananoque and is noted as one of the finest paddlers in Eastern Ontario. In addition he was first-string centre on Queen's senior hockey team.

Lamb, Lion War Over March!

A woolly March lamb and a somewhat sulky March lion fought a no-decision battle today in this district in between periods of swirling snow scurries, biting winds and occasional flashes of sun shine through the low hanging clouds. By noon, however, an interested populace had not learned whether the lion or the lamb would lead the weather procession into the district on today the first day of the fabled month of uncertain weather.

Whether the winds will roar and stormy weather will prevail, or whether the month will be favored by warm sunshine during the next thirty days is uncertain. The battle for the privilege of indicating just what may be expected in this matter was still being fought at noon today.

Beleaguered Family Recalls Paardeberg

WINDSOR, March 1. — (CP) — Among the guests at the Paardeberg Remembrance dinner here were Mrs. Joseph Masterman and her two daughters, Mrs. James Hathaway and Mrs. Samuel Portman, all of whom were present at the siege of Ladysmith during the South African war, 35 years ago. Mrs. Masterman was referred to by William Tucker, Naval Brigade veteran, as "a second Florence Nightingale". Mr. Masterman, one of the veterans of the conflict, was too ill to attend.

Brindis Won't Allow Workers To Cut Wages, Suggests Increase

Lawrence, Mass., March 1 (CP)—He never worked at a bench himself but Nathan Brindis, 45-year-old shoe executive, who came to the United States as a lad of 12, knows how his 700 workers feel about it—he won't let them cut their pay. If business holds up he may even raise their salaries.

In the Modern Milchen Shoe Company there was cheer in the air today. Men and women recounted again the dramatic scene night before last when Brindis burst into a workers' meeting called by labor executives to discuss a voluntary wage reduction and told them he couldn't even consider their proposed sacrifice.

"In my opinion," he told his cheering employees, "wage cuts made in other shoe centres were unwarranted. The present is no time to cut wages because of the recent sharp increase in the cost of living.

"I have received a large order for shoes and, if conditions warrant, I hope to give you a 10 percent increase in wages by July 1."

Through troubled times in other factories and cities the Company has been practically free from labor dissension. It is a closed shop with its workers enrolled as members of the American Shoe Workers Inc., an independent union having a membership of about 2,000. The average weekly wage for experienced workers is $30 a week.

VERDICT IS OPEN IN GIRL'S DEATH IN PERTH OFFICE

Failure of Respiratory Organs Found As Cause

DOCTOR'S TESTIMONY

Dr. W. J. Hobson And Rupert Mackler Face Hearing

Perth, Ont., Mar. 1—(CP)—After hearing the evidence of 17 witnesses a coroner's jury investigating the death of a Carleton Place girl returned an open verdict here early this afternoon. It took the jury three quarters of an hour to reach its verdict which read as follows:

"We the jury summoned to inquire into the death of Lila Pickering find that the deceased came to her death on February 14 in Dr. Hobson's office as a result of the failure of the respiratory organs to function after the administration of an anaesthetic."

The inquest followed the death of the 28-year-old girl here in the office of Dr. W. J. Hobson, well known Perth physician.

"Dr. Hobson told me the girl came into his office suffering from cramps," said Dr. Fowler at the inquest. "The girl was suffering so much Dr. Hobson administered chloroform," he told me." This concluded Dr. Fowler's evidence.

Sergeant Harry Storey of the Ontario Provincial Police who conducted the investigation was then called. "I questioned Dr. Hobson who told me about the girl coming to his office suffering from cramps."

Witness said he did not see any blood stains on any of the clothing. "Rupert Mackler then came into the office," said Sergt. Storey, "and I questioned him. He told me the girl came to his home Tuesday on a visit and Thursday night he took her for a car drive. During the car drive she complained of cramps and he took her to the office of Dr. Hobson." Sergt. Storey said Mackler told him.

Testimony Produced

"We searched Mackler's clothing and found among other papers a receipt date February 28th., 1935, from Dr. Hobson. I secured a statement from Mackler which was voluntary. I also gave the usual warning, then took Mackler to the police station and arrested Dr. Hobson at eight a.m. the next morning."

Miss Jean Anderson, Reg.N., of Perth, housekeeper for Dr. Hobson said she was called and asked to get a hypo prepared. Asked by Crown Attorney Pollock if she had heard an outcry she replied she thought she heard some person moaning.

Miss Ivy Cook, Reg.N., of Perth Memorial Hospital, told of Dr. Hobson's visit to the hospital February 14th for the loan of some surgical instruments.

Dr. Frankish's Finding

The next witness was Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Attorney General's Department. He performed a post mortem examination on the night of February 15, he testified and gave as his opinion his examination indicated an attempt had been made to produce or encourage abortion.

Charges of using an instrument with intent to perform an illegal operation were laid against the doctor while Mackler is charged with aiding abeting and counselling the same.

9000 Mile Trip To Save Patient Made by Doctor

Darmouth, N.S., March 1 (CP)—It was just a sick call but it took Dr. P. M. Creighton on a 9,000-mile air journey and still promises to keep the Darmouth-born physician away from his practice in London, England, for several weeks to come.

The call came to Dr. Creighton in his London office. Java was on the telephone and soon the doctor learned one of his patients had been taken ill on a yachting cruise off the Dutch East Indian Island.

He was to "hurry right out" just as though the request had come from one of the London suburban homes he visits. And just as casually as though it had Dr. Creighton threw a few necessities together, picked up his kit, and soon was aboard an air liner speeding southward. Arriving at Java eight days after starting he found he would have to stay with the patient some weeks, and he is there yet.

Nine Hundred Members Of Police Association Protest Badge Cancelling

Police Too Sensible Says Mayor, To Go On Strike

PARLEY IS SOUGHT

Restoration of Badge System Sought By Constables

TORONTO, March 1.—(CP)—Unless good conduct badges are restored and other grievances redressed there will be a strike of Toronto police officers at twelve o'clock Saturday midnight, President William Hutchinson of the Toronto Police Association, announced here today.

Toronto, March 1.—(CP)—Mayor James Simpson today in commenting on the threatened strike of local constables said he did not think citizens need fear a strike.

"The police are reasonable men," he stated. "They want their grievances heard by the Board of Control and I am sure both the Board and the Police Commission will give them a hearing."

Magistrate Frank Denton, K.C., a member of the Toronto Police Commission, said the Commission never opposed the system of good conduct badges and was "very much opposed" to cutting it off.

There is no question about there being a strike if the badge system is not restored, Mr. Hutchinson said. More than upwards of the 900 members of the Association voted to strike if the Police Commission refused to meet the Association's Executive and restore the Badge System which gave graded increases in pay periodically as a constable advanced in seniority and kept a good record.

A letter was sent to Mayor James Simpson, J. Palmer Kent, secretary of the Police Commission, and Chief of Police D. C. Draper today asking officials to meet the Police Association's Committee.

HUGE CROSS GUIDE TO BOY ON FLOE

Bishop Tells of 'Miracle' One of Whites' Bad Ways

Winnipeg, March 1—(CP)—Bishop Alfred Turquetil came out of the north today with the story of a miracle and a belief the greatest obstacle to the advance of Christianity among the Eskimos has been the white men themselves.

Famed throughout Canada as the "Bishop of the Arctic", Bishop Turquetil is the spiritual ruler of the largest Roman Catholic diocese in the world.

Hard-boiled whalers first contaminated Eskimos with the white man's vices, said the Bishop, who has spent 35 years in the Arctic. The wild lawless men of 50 years ago taught the natives trickery and dishonesty.

The miraculous escape from death by a boy near Chesterfield Inlet was told by the Bishop. The boy and a man were out sealing when enveloped by a fog. They became separated. Unable to find the lad, the man returned to the settlement and organized a search.

It was 50 below zero. The searchers failed to locate the boy. They knew he was adrift on an ice floe and feared he would be carried out to sea and drowned. After two days the party returned to the settlement. They all went to church to pray for the lad's safety.

While they prayed, the boy walked into the mission. The current that swept the ice floe away from the shore had driven it back again to solid ice within sight of the huge cross at Chesterfield.

3 Million in South Ahwei Province Face Famine

SERIES OF TRAGEDIES

Starving Man Climbs Hill to Cut Fuel And Falls Dead

Wuhu Awhei, China, March 1 —(AP)—Three million inhabitants of southern Ahwei Province, scattered over an area of 6,000 square miles, were reported today to be starving to death in the worst famine this section of China has experienced in recent memory. Missionary advices received here said the death list already is appaling and growing day by day.

Letter Tells Story

A description of the conditions was contained in a letter written by George Birch, China Inland Mission Worker of New Westminster, B. C., to Dr. Robert Brown of Chicago, Superintendent of the American Wuhu General Hospital. It was this same hospital which received little Helen Priscilla Stam, the baby, rescued from an abandoned house in Tsingteh after the abduction of her parents.

Canadian Soil Placed on Grave

Tolpuddle, England, March 1. (CP Cable) — Soil from Canada lay today on the grave of one of the first Trades-Unionists, a symbol of the unity of purpose which bound the Tolpuddle Martyrs in their campaign for labor a century ago.

The soil, taken from the grave of George Loveless, in Siloam Cemetery, London, Ont., was sprinkled yesterday upon the grave of William Hammett, only Tolpuddle Martyr buried here. John Marchbank, General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, performed the ceremony.

It recalled how six farm laborers who attempted to organize a union to resist an attempt to lower their wages in 1834 were convicted of acts "injurious to trade and commerce and dangerous to the country's tranquility." They were deported to Australia, then a convict settlement. Years later they were pardoned and five, including George Loveless, came to Canada.

Marchbank last year was a Trade Union delegate to the Golden Jubilee celebration of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at Toronto. He took with him soil from Tolpuddle which was sprinkled on the grave of Loveless.

Chinese Reds Create Reign of Terror

(Copyright 1935, By The Associated Press).

Sian, Shensi, China, March 1 — A reign of terror, accompanied by wholesale executions and looting of towns, marked the passage of 25,000 Communist troops through southwest Shensi province during the last fortnight, missionary reports disclosed today.

Some 25 missionaries abandoned their posts to escape the menace and fled through ice and snow covered mountains.

Lady Margaret Young Missing In Flight Over African Lion Country

Livingstone, Northern Rhodesia, Mach 1.—(AP) — Lady Margaret Young, wife of Major Sir Hubert Young, Governor of Northern Rhodesia, was missing today on an aeroplane flight over African jungle country teeming with lions, rhinoceroses and other wild animals.

Lady Margaret, recovering from an attack of malaria, was accompanied on the air trip by a government physician, Dr. A. Kirby. They took off from here yesterday on a 300 mile flight to Lusaka where Lady Margaret was to have joined Sir Hubert. The plane was last seen near Kaloma, 100 miles along its route. Observers said its engine appeared to be functioning improperly at that time.

HERO OF 2,000 MILE TREK IS NOW RECOVERING

Is Contemplating Journey From Baker Lake to Churchill

A SIX WEEK TRIP

Has Dislocated Knee And Hand Crippled by Frost Bite

Churchill, Man., March 1 (CP)—A young camera-carrying adventurer, laid up at Baker Lake, N.W.T. after two years of zig-zagging his way across the Arctic country today contemplated a long journey home to his parents at Grand Rapids, Mich. He is Dave Irwin and wireless messages which told of the proposed trip said he was recovering from a dislocated knee and a hand crippled by frostbite.

Baker Lake is 400 miles north of Churchill. It will be a long, aduous journey for the 24-year-old Arctic traveller whom Eskimos found in exhausted condition a week ago.

When the northern nomads located Iryin he was slowly trailing his way southward from King William Island, 830 miles north of here in the Arctic Ocean.

Travel by Dog Team

The hardest part of his journey home will be the trip from Baker Lake to Churchill. It is a dog-team journey requiring six weeks with overnight camps made in far below zero temperatures.

Too weak to make the journey from Baker Lake to Churchill alone, Irwin is endeavoring to get one or more Eskimos to make the trip with him. Then he will head for Winnipeg and on to his father's home at Grand Rapids.

Wandered For 2 Years

Irwin's wanderings in the sparsely settled Arctic started two years ago when he quit the herders guiding reindeer to Kittigazuit on the Arctic shores for the Canadian government. He travelled down the Mackenzie River from Aklavik 500 miles into the Great Bear Lake area.

Then he struck northward to the Arctic Circle, went to King William Island and still further north to Boothia Peninsula and the North Magnetic Pole. He was on Boothia Peninsula last July. Tiring of his adventuring, he started back south only to run into misfortune. His journey took him over the route of the ill-fated Franklin expedition of 70 years ago.

Ate Raw Fish

His dogs died as he travelled south. He had only raw fish to eat. He met the odd trapper and lived with Eskimos. He fell through the ice and was drenched, gradually he kept losing strength. He was found nearly exhausted a week ago by Eskimos who hurried him to Baker Lake.

Receiving aid from Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Roman Catholic Mission, Irwin has been recovering and soon will be starting his journey to Churchill. Messages indicated he would probably start over the dog-team trail within a week.

DESTROYERS COLLIDE

Valetta, Malta, March 1—(AP)—The British destroyers Witch and Whitshed returned to port today to repair slight damages sustained during manoeuvres of the Mediterranean fleet. There were no casualties aboard either vessel.

WEATHER

Pressure is high over the Maritime provinces and Eastern States, also in the Mackenzie valley but relatively low in Saskatchewan and the Western States. With the exception of some local snowflurries the weather has been for the most part fair, cold in Quebec and the Maritimes but comparatively mild over the Great Lakes and in Alberta.

Lake Superior: Moderate shifting winds; partly cloudy with a few scattered snowflurries.

Kenora and Rainy River: Partly cloudy, with somewhat lower temperature at night.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — Moderate winds; partly cloudy, with a few light snowflurries.

DEACONS NOTIFIED OF PLAY-OFF DATE

The Deacon A. C. basketball team, junior champions of the E.O.A.B.A., were officially notified today that their opponents in the first round of the O.A.B.A. provincial playdowns will be the famous "Lizzies", junior champions of the Toronto and District League. The first game is scheduled to be played tomorrow night in Toronto at eight o'clock in the Jewish Community House on St. George Street. The return game will be played here next week, total points on the round to determine the winner. The Elizabeth Park quintette won the Queen City honors by defeating the Broadview "Y", last year's junior O.B.A.A. finalists, who eliminated the Deacons in 1934. The local squad leave early tomorrow for the game in Toronto.

BROCKVILLE TEAM STOP OFF IN TOWN

Enroute to Oshawa, where they play the second game of the first round play-offs in the senior "B" series of the O. H. A., the Brockville Magedomas Hockey Club passed through the city at noon today. The team stopped in Belleville over the noon hour and partook of a light meal. The Magedomas enjoy a three goal lead over the Oshawa "Chevies" for tonight's return game in the Motor City. Included in the party were a number of ex-Belleville hockey players, such as Les Tice, Bill Sherry, Harry Nicol and Doug. "Red" MacDonald. The party was in charge of Coach Jess Spring and travelled in the private bus of the club.

MEETING HELD BY IMPERIAL VETERANS

A regular meeting of Imperial veterans held last evening in the Army and Navy Memorial Hall was well attended. In the absence of President James Sheppard, Comrade Robt. Fisher occupied the chair.

The business transacted was chiefly of a routine nature. Some twenty-five members signified their intention of attending the funeral this Friday afternoon of the late Capt. E. E. Ketcheson of Frankford, a veteran.

After the business meeting a social time was spent by all present during which songs were rendered by T. Pritchard, W. Edwards and others. Fred Stagg and Bert Solder were the pianists. It was an evening that was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended and was voted one of the best meetings held by the organization.

FATHERLESS BOYS APPEAR IN COURT

Mother or Guardian Must be Present, Magistrate Declares

Four local boys, all under the age of 16 years, appeared in juvenile Court today before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., charged with a series of break-ins and robberies. Due to the fact the three of the boys were not accompanied by parents or guardian, the cases were enlarged until Saturday. The remaining youth who was accompanied by his uncle, pleaded guilty to three charges of breaking, entering and theft.

The three charges in question included those of breaking into and theft of two rifles from the Walker Hardware Store last Sunday and a previous breaking and theft from Kellaway's grocery store on Church street. The boy was brought before His Worship and given a severe lecture. He was turned over to the custody of his uncle, who assured the court that he would personally be responsible for his nephew's behaviour in the future. It was this lad's first offence. The remaining three youths were instructed to return to the court with either a parent or guardian tomorrow.

"Apparently these boys' parents are not sufficiently interested in their welfare to appear here in court with them, but they must be present when the trial is heard," stated Magistrate Butler.

"Your Worship, none of these boys have a father, three of their mothers being widows while a third father is not living in Belleville, with his family," stated T. D. Ruston, local Children's Aid Society Superintendent to the court. "Regardless, either their mothers or guardians must appear in court with them," came back the Bench.

Two of the lads were charged with breaking, entering and theft at Walker's Hardware and Kellaway's grocery while the other two will face charges of stealing moneys from local charity boxes. The court was held in camera.

Fire of London a Blessing In Disguise, Says Speaker

Lecturer at Women's Canadian Club Given Interesting Address

BENEFITS MANY

Miss Winnifred Kydd, C.B.E., Dean of Women at Queen's University, was guest speaker at an open meeting of the Women's Canadian Club which was largely attended in John Street Church Hall yesterday afternoon. Miss Kydd's subject was "The Great Fire of London" and in a very interesting manner she traced the special bearing this event has on discussions in the parliaments and press of today.

From a thorough study of old manuscript relating to the terrible disaster of 1666, Miss Kydd has collected many unusual facts and presented them to her audience in a clear and witty manner. The London of 1666 was not the London of Charles II, she said. but a city much older with mediaevilism upon its face. Etchings of that day and old manuscripts tell of its outstanding scenic characteristic.....its beautiful spires. Even travellers, familiar with the wonderful skylines of mosque and temple, found it difficult to rival in beauty the London skyline, its collections of spires like minarets rising to the stars.

Deplorable Housing Conditions

While the fire came as a terrible surprise to the people it was also a great blessing in disguise and one of the great enterprises the world had even seen resulted, Miss Kydd described the deplorable housing conditions of that time, the narrow muddy lanes, the overhanging houses, and the shocking dwelling places in which the majority of people lived. London was still a walled city to be entered from the Liberties (suburbs) only at the gates.

The shocking housing conditions a prey to the ravages of plague elicited a royal prolamation that greater care be exercised in future building operations in order that areas would not be more crowded and that too many families would not be housed together. But they still persisted at the time of the fire.

Cause of Fire

Many legends have arisen as to the cause of the fire's outbreak, but the story to which most credence is given is that a baker was drying some clothes in a by-lane when they caught fire. As this was in the most densely populated part of London and a high wind was blowing, the fire swept through the city with terrific force and speed.

The plight of the people was pitiful. They fled from the city to the Liberties. Their properties and chattels were totally lost as there was no such thing as fire insurance in those days. The fire department was so primitive that it could hardly be recognized as such. Utter destitution faced the people as there was no organized charitable aid, as for example, the Red Cross, to come to their assistance. The postal system was totally disorganized for nearly a week and the rumours which were circulated in the country were very terrifying.

Few Written Accounts

Little is actually written by eye witnesses of the fire although Samuel Pepys who always regretted having gone to bed after seeing the first flames, described its effects in his famous diaries. The literature of that time abounded with the writings of seers who had horrific visions of London's doom, brought on by her sins and wickedness. Walter Gostelo who achieved fame as a prophet because of his prognostication fulfilled by the fire had written in 1656.

"London go on still in thy presumptuous wickednesses. Put the evil day far off from thee and repent not. Do so London. But if fire make not ashes of this city and thy bones also, conclude me a liar forever. Oh, London, London, sinful as Sodom and Gomorrah the decree is gone out. Repent or burn as Sodom and Gomorrah!"

Gostelo was regarded with awe for the rest of his life, but as Miss Kydd naively pointed out, he did not risk losing his reputation as a prophet by attempting the foretelling of other events.

Many Benefits

The benefits of the fire were many. One good work that it accomplished was to burn out all decaying, fever haunted and horribly insanitary houses and to purge with flames the unwholesome conditions under which the citizens had been compelled to live. The London which rose under the new Building Acts was different in everything that counts for the welfare of human life. The Black Death which had taken toll of thousands of lives never again visited London. The first public health measures, the organization of sewerage and garbage collection systems, fire departments were instituted and there came into being a great commercial enterprise, fire insurance.

Present day interest in the problem of housing has brought frequently reference in the press and in discussions to the great fire.

Housing Reform

"It took a great fire," she concluded, "with millions of pounds worth of property lost and the deaths of thousands of persons to show the grave need for reformed housing conditions. It is to be hoped that no such catastrophe will be needed to stir us to clear up our own housing problem in Canada."

Mrs. J. W. Kinnear who in introducing the speaker had referred to her position as president of the National Council of Women, as Dean of women at Queen's University and to her outstanding work which meritted her a decoration from the King, charmingly thanked Miss Kydd for her splendid address.

The members were then guests at tea. Mrs. A. E. McColl and Mrs. E. R. Logie presiding at the tea table.

PATRONS CROWD FINE NEW STORE ON OPENING DAY

Blue's Marketeria Handsome Addition to Belleville's Business Section

Belleville's business section is gradually being revolutionised and modernized, the movement in this direction having become more marked during the past year or two with new fronts to stores and general remodelling of interiors to keep pace with modern business methods. Yesterday another forward step in modern merchandising was revealed in the opening of Blue's Marketeria, a food market combining grocery, meats, fruits and vegetables in one modern emporium as a groceteria if desired, that is self serve, or service by clerks if desired, combining both systems for the convenience of the customer.

Blue's Marketeria was conceived and carried out by Gordon Blue, one of the younger business men of Belleville, who served as manager in the upper Dominion Store for some time previous to starting in business nearly a year ago under the firm name of Ciceri & Blue. Mr. Blue has made a close study of merchandising in the modern manner and its necessary companion, newspaper advertising, and carrying out his ideas as inspired by experience and study. An outstanding success was made of the venture, the only difficulty being cramped quarters. This is now remedied in the spacious quarters which house Blue's Groceteria.

An outstanding feature of the new store is the "Personal Shopping Service" department where three telephones bring in a constant stream of phone orders to be selected and filled by the young ladies in charge of this department.

The fruit and vegetable department shows new features and the meat department is the last word in the sanitary handling of all kinds of fresh meat.

Cash registers and other time-saving machines of the latest type are situated in strategical places in the store to facilitate the speedy transaction of business.

Another prominent feature which attracts attention at once is the neat uniforms of the staff, and the uniform courtesy of all.

Everything in the new store is planned for the convenience of the customer—modern scales reveal to the customer the exact weight of his or her purchase, and cash registers give an itemised receipt to every customer.

In Blue's Marketeria the customer can take a basket and follow the self-serve route about the store choosing at will, carrying the basket with the purchases to the cashier when completed and receiving a slip showing individual purchase price. If the customer prefers clerks are available to give sales service and direct the customer through the various departments.

All in all the new store is a creditable addition to the business life of Belleville, and Gordon Blue, who conceived the idea and worked it out to satisfactory completion is to be congratulated for his progressiveness.

POLICE COURT

Walter Coughlin, transient of Stratford Ont., Chatham, N.B., and other points, was found guilty of assaulting one Arthur Deline of Sidney Township and sentenced to serve two months in the common jail, dating from the time of his arrest, Feb. 18th.

Coughlin was charged with beating and robbing Deline, but only found guilty of the former charge. According to Deline's evidence the two men met in a local hotel and consumed two bottles of beer. Subsequently they walked down towards the bay and entered a building at the foot of George St. where Coughlin was alleged to have attacked Deline and beat him, later removing a one dollar bill from his pocket. In his evidence Coughlin admitted striking Deline because he made improper advances towards him, but denied robbing him. According to his record sheet Coughlin had four times been previously convicted in a Canadian court.

Walter J. Hedger, charged with breaking entering and theft at the Belleville Creameries, Limited, had his case further enlarged at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., further police investigation being necessary.

Thanksgiving Day For Saar Return

BERLIN, March 1.— (AP) —All Germany prepared today for tomorrow's celebration of the League of Nations' formal restoration of the Saar Basin Territory to the Fatherland.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler decreed the "greatest day of Thanksgiving of the year" to commemorate the occasion which Nazis see as the springboard for their doctrine of "all Germans under the same roof."

Church bells, factory sirens and ship whistles will herald the homecoming of the Saarlanders after their 15 years' absence from the family fold. Schools will be closed after their pupils have been given instruction for one hour on the "injustices" of the Versailles Treaty. Excursions into the Saar will be held.

BLUE'S MARKETERIA THANKS YOU
Blue's Marketeria Management desires to return sincere thanks to the citizens of Belleville and District for the very large patronage accorded this store on opening day.
We did not anticipate such an overwhelming rush of business, hence the service was not as perfect as we planned. For this we apologize.
To those who sent in telephone orders we owe a special apology for delay in delivering, in some cases, and for condition of goods on arrival. This was caused by the rush of orders being so much larger than we anticipated.
These defects have been remedied and the Personal Telephone Shopping Service as well as the entire store system should now work smoothly and be equal to all demands.
Again thanking the public for generous patronage, I remain
GORDON BLUE.

25,000 FREE SCHOOLS OPENED IN CANTON

CANTON, China, March 1. —(CP)—Kwangsi Province, which lies inland from here, is opening 25,000 Free Public Schools at the end of this month and plans on launching a scheme for free compulsory education for all children between the ages of seven and 11 years. The plan calls for the pupils attending school only half a day each day for four years. This spreading out of the time is necessitated by the lack of teachers and funds.

HITLER FORCED TO DROP POLICY AGAINST HEBREWS

No More Attacks Against Jews as Boycott is Feared

LOSSES OF EXCHANGE

Public Manifestations Ordered Halted by Reichsfuehrer

(By A. D. Stefferud)
(Copyright 1935 by The Associated Press)

Berlin, Feb. 28—Intense economic pressure, it became apparent today, has forced Reichsfuehrer Hitler to abandon for the present at least the public manifestations of his cherished anti-semitism policy.

While berating Jews as "vampires and exploiters," speakers at a Nazi meeting concluded their addresses by saying:

"It may be asked of you why the adminsitration undertakes nothing more against the Jews. It cannot for foreign political reasons, since further boycotts, foreign exchange dufficulties and other troubles are thereby threatened.

"Therefore, you must go about and spread what you have been told and act accordingly."

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of Economics, is fighting Germany's terrific economic battle and cannot risk further boycotts and loss in bill of exchange. Dr. Schacht, who has emerged with increased prestige from several similar encounters over questions of policy in the last three months, has kept a Jew at the head of his foreign exchange department. He also has been quoted as saying he would stand by his other Jewish co-workers.

FAMILY FLEES IN NIGHT GARB

Strathroy, Ont., Feb. 28 (CP)—Fire believed caused by a defective chimney today totally destroyed the frame house of Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Brown about a mile west of here.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their 12-year-old son were in bed when the fire was discovered and they were forced to make a hurried exit in their night clothes. The thermometer was around zero.

Kidneys Gave No Rest

WHEN pain over kidneys or bladder irregularities keep you getting up at night; if you feel nervous, despondent, heed the warning. The kidneys may not be working as they should to filter the blood and keep you free from too much uric acid. Drink plenty of pure water and get Dr. Pierce's Anuric at any drug store. Read what Mrs. E. Hoffman of 85 Holborne Ave., London, Ont., said: "I was in agony from frequent urination, and I had many drowsy spells. But, after taking a few of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets I have never had any trouble since."

70-YEAR-OLD MOTHER OF BOBSLED CHAMPIONS, GETS RIDE

The seventy-year-old mother of the famous bob-sledding Stevenses of Lake Placid, had heard so much about the sport, around her home, that she determined to try the thrilling and dangerous sport, at least once. He she is shown seated between her burly sons just before her ride down the Olympic bob run, Mount Van Hoevenberg. LEFT to RIGHT are: Hubert Stevens, Mrs. George Stevens, mother of the boys, Paul Stevens and Curtis Stevens. After her ride Mrs. Stevens said: "It was a grand ride, but I wouldn't care to do it often."

Obituary

MRS. JAMES LILLIE

(Contributed)

After a brief illness there passed away peacefully to rest in the Belleville General Hospital early Saturday morning, Feb. 16th, Theresa Jane Johnston, beloved wife of John James Lillie, of Kinburn, Ont.

The late Mrs. Lillie was a daughter of Mrs. Johnston and the late Thomas Johnston of Hillier, Prince Edward County. She was born in the Township of Olden, Frontenac County, and with her parents came to Prince Edward County in 1919. She received her high school education at Sydenham high school. After graduating from Peterboro Normal she taught school in Prince Edward also in Lanark County for some time.

Since her marriage to Mr. Lillie in 1930 they resided on their farm near Kinburn in Fitzroy Township.

While in the teaching profession as in all other walks of life she, by her kind and cheerful disposition endeared herself to a large circle of friends, by whom she was held in high esteem and who will regret her untimely passing.

She was a member of the United Church, a faithful Christian ever willing to assist, if possible, with any phase of church work.

In the home she proved herself to be a devoted wife, true to her husband and friends, and ever thoughtful of the well-being of those about her.

During her illness she evinced great fortitude and serenity. All that loving hands and medical skill could do was of no avail.

Surviving to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband and mother are four sisters; Mrs. Alex Gilmour, Rednersville; Mrs. Alfred Smith, Trenton, Ont.; Mrs. R. J. Sargeant, Snow Road, Ont.; Mrs. George McKay, Hillier, Ont.; three brothers, Thomas Herbert, Robert Arnold and Harold Elwood Johnston of Hillier, also a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was conducted at the home of her sister, Mrs. George McKay on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 19th, by the Rev. Mr. McRae of Melville United Church assisted by the Rev. Mr. Knox of Belleville, who in his sincere manner spoke an inspiring and impressive message of comfort from the Scriptural words "Forever with the Lord." The hymns used "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Forever with the Lord," were favorites also "In the Garden" sung by Mr. King Terry and "The Old Rugged Cross" rendered as a guitar solo by Mr. J. Farley of Rednersville.

The remains were interred in Burr's cemetery beside those of her infant son who passed away on Monday, Feb. 11th.

The pall bearers were six brother-in-laws, Alex Gilmour, Alfred Smith, Robert Sargeant, Allan Lillie, Bruce Lillie and Mac Lillie.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Those from a distance who attended the funeral were Mrs. Robert Harper and daughter Lorraine of Perth, Ont.; Salem Johnston of Perth; Donald Conboy of Maberly; Miss Lizzie M. Abrams, Oshawa; Allan Lillie, of Antrim, Ont.; Bruce Lillie, of Kinburn, Ont.; William Baxter, of Shirley Bay, Ont.; Donald Caldwell of Arnprior, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Sargeant and children of Snow Road.

HIGHER WAGE SEEN BY HENRY FORD

Farsighted Management Will Bring Advance About

New York, March 1 (AP)—Henry Ford, in a letter to Matthew Woll, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, predicts wages will reach higher levels than ever before because of experienced and far-sighted industrial management.

Ford wrote he had "in no wise changed his mind" about the desirability of high wages, and said:

"I believe wages will continue to go higher not as a result of politics or from purely humanitarian motives, but as a result of the kind of management that will enable men to earn more. You understand, of course inexperienced or short-sighted management does not create the conditions under which men can earn more. "I do not believe production costs are ever really decreased by reducing wages but I have known higher wages usually to bring lower costs."

MERITS HOLIDAY ON YEAR'S WORK

3rd Sidney, March 1—Sunday School and church were fairly well attended at Aiken's on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Johnson's modern versions of the old texts are most interesting, and his remarks are full of inspiration and a challenge to the church members of the present day. Miss Phyllis May was present and sang very feelingly "A Heart that was Broken for Me." Miss May's solos are always appreciated by her friends at Aiken's.

Mrs. Allan Latta has been entertaining her sister Mrs. Elliott for the past week.

Miss Marjorie Kells of Peterboro Normal School is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Henry Kells.

Congratulations are extended to Marjorie for her high standing in her work which has eliminated examinations and has entitled her to a short holiday at her home.

Miss Phyllis May spent the week end at the home of her aunt, Mrs. H. Hubble.

Mrs. Oden Fenn and Mr. and Mrs. Selburn Westover were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills.

Mrs. L. Hubble was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday and was operated on for appendicitis. Her many friends hope for her a speedy and complete recovery.

Miss Lenora Cook spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Reg. Dracup in Belleville.

UKRAINIAN PRIEST CHARGES AGITATORS

Oshawa, March 1 (CP)—Declaring only a small proportion of his congregation had left, Father Sarmatuik deposed priest of the Ukrainian Church, stated he is continuing with his church and charged agitators in the parish were responsible for Bishop Ladyka suspending him for failure to give up his wife some weeks ago.

He said that Ukrainian newspapers had failed to disclose he had married four years after his ordination.

Father Sarmatuik was suspended because he refused to give up his wife, whom, the Bishop ruled, he had married contrary to the edicts of the church. The priest today observed that Bishop Budka, former prelate at Winnipeg, knew he was married for some time.

She Keeps Her Slim Figure

Still Stock Size at Age Forty

A PERFECT FIT, AND STOCK SIZE, TOO!
AH, YES! BUT MADAME'S WAIST IS NOW 2½ INCHES SMALLER

The approach of middle age is certainly no excuse to-day for developing a double chin and for allowing your figure to bulge in the wrong places. If, at forty, you cannot have a body as supple as a young willow tree, you can at least keep it to its proper proportions, so that you are able to wear the modern, flattering fashions with confidence. The following letter shows how the Kruschen treatment can help you to avoid that pathetic refuge of the overstout—the Outsize Department.

"I am approaching the dangerous age of forty, and a year ago my hips began to get fuller. This was alarming, for I am a business woman and must keep my slender figure. I then thought I would try Kruschen, and from the day I started it has been wonderful. Not only are my hips normal, but, I feel better in health than ever."—(Mrs.) H. J.

Kruschen is a saline—not a drug—it is an ideal blend of mineral salts found in the aperient waters of those European Spas which have been resorted to for generations by wealthy people in search of health and fitness. Kruschen is obtainable from all Drug Stores, at 45c. and 75c. a bottle.

BULWARK IN INSURANCE

It is said that there are three and a half million policy-holders of insurance in Canada. Certain that is that the protection they have has stood many in good stead during the trying days which are passing. Money in insurance has been a bulwark for many against the days of the lost job or reduced salary. The money which the companies have been able to loan their policyholders who found it necessary to borrow has been a safety valve for many.

Those who have insured will not reduce their insurance and many who had not protected themselves in this way have taken on obligations of this kind trusting to the insurance companies ad the safeguards which are thrown about insurance-companies' investments rather than to their own lonely limited opportunity to have learned, the ways of making safe investments.

This money which is laid by is doing good service in many fields allowed by the law regulating these companies as well as protecting the policyholders.

Canadian companies have been able to meet all requests for loans to the full whenever desired. This speaks well for the Canadian insurance law.

PREPARING FOR THE JUBILEE

The King and Queen have gone to Eastbourne and are resting at the residence of the Duke of Devonshire prior to the Silver Jubilee celebrations. A remarkable testimony to the esteem in which Their Majesties are held was given along the route, cheering crowds greeting them all the way. It is evident that the festivities will parallel similar great events of the past, such as Queen Victoria's golden and diamond jubilees, which attracted world-wide attention, and at which gathered rulers and statesmen from all quarters. The people are entering into the spirit of the jubilee and already are giving veidence of their respect for their sovereign. The King will have a busy part to play and it is fitting that he should rest while he may. He has approved the plans and they have been published in a communique issued by the Home Office. There is to be a thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral on May 6, and on the same day a broadcast to the Empire by His Majesty. There is also to be a chain of bonfires throughout the country. A reception and ball at which the King and Queen will be present will be held in the City of London's historic Guildhall. In this connection it is stated that not once in the past hundred years has the Sovereign attended a ball at the Guildhall. At Victoria's Golden Jubilee in 1887 a reception and ball were given there, and again in 1897 for the Diamond Jubilee, but on neither occasion did the Queen attend in person. Victoria was the last Sovereign to follow the custom of many of her predecessors in honoring the City with her presence at the Lord Mayor's banquet—the first after her accession to the throne in 1837. Now King George is to grace a Guildhall event with his presence, and it may be presumed that the ball will be on a magnificent scale, for London is noted for its capacity to stage brilliant affairs.

Reviews of the Forces and an inspection of the police in Hyde Park are events that will appeal to the fancy of the people, and there are to be two State dinners and two State balls at Buckingham Palace. Dominion representatives will be invited to these, as well as to the Guildhall on the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen. There are to be ceremonies at Cardiff which the Prince of Wales will attend; at Edinburgh, where the King will be represented by the Duke of York, and at Belfast, with the Duke of Gloucester as royal guest. Elsewhere throughout the Empire ceremonies will likewise be undertaken. The Silver Jubilee, in fact, will be fittingly observed by all British peoples, who will everywhere express their feelings of loyalty, respect and love for a Sovereign whose motto has always been "Duty".—Montreal Gazette.

MOTORISTS INDICTED

One of the great allies of highway manslaughter is public opinion, as Mr. T. B. McQuesten so well pointed out at the annual banquet of the Ontario Motor League. For too long has it been prone to regard the toll of death and accident as normal, he said, motorists and juries hesitating from acting unjustly because of fear and sentimentality. The motorist fears he may be himself involved in an accident; juries think of the family of the accused instead of that of the killed or injured.

This is an indictment of our ethical standards, but it is not too severe. It amounts to a charge that motorists generally are moral cowards, and that juries are accessories before the act, for the effect of leniency is to encourage recklessness in other drivers.

It is time that the motoring public revised their judgments about motor accidents. In most cases some one is culpable, and excessive tenderness in dealing with the offenders increases the evil. This false tolerance is short-sighted and weak. Instead of thinking, "I may get into trouble," the motorist should say, "Unless this is stopped, I may be killed." The juryman instead of saying, "The unfortunate family of the accused," should rather think, "My family may be unfortunate unless I show these reckless drivers they cannot kill or injure with impunity."—Hamilton Spectator.

THE LION AND THE LAMB

Since the bear did not see his shadow on the second of February, the winter has been quite severe, seeming to fulfil the truth, which is attached to the old adage that when the hibernating creature does not see a shadow the winter continues for six weeks. Four weeks have gone and the adage appears to be fulfilling itself.

From now on, it should require but little over three weeks of winter to give a hint of spring's approach. Today the weatherwise scanned the sky to look for signs based on another adage of March coming in like a lamb and going out like a lion or vice versa. Will this prove as true as the bear story?

NO FLOOD MENACE

Whatever the weather is to be, there is now no indication of a flood this spring. The amount of snow on the land is not great and at no time this winter have the roadways been filled up with drifts to create a blockade. There has been considerable thawing since the first of the year so that much of the snow has already been drained off in the form of water which has passed down the river into the bay.

Spring freshets have often been a terror to merchants and riverbank residents, who know from experience what a hard winter has often meant to the people who find their homes or their stores on the quiet Moira stream which under compulsion of heavy ice and a vast amount of water seeking escape has wrought havoc in the last few days of March.

Of late years loss has not been experienced. But there have been a number of bad floods within memory for instance that of March 1918, when for days Coleman anl West Bridge Streets and a portion of Front Street ran with water, when bridges were damaged and the footbridge battered to such an extent that it had to be rebuilt.

FOREST HILL'S MILK MEN

A rubberized milk service is suggested for the people of Forest Hill Village, that exclusive spot crowding in at the north and west of the great City of Toronto. For some reason or other Forest Hill Village residents do not like the click-clack-click-clack of the horses' shoes, the rumble of the wheels of the wagons, the opening and shutting of the little doors leading to the receptacle where the milk is placed, and the jingling of the milk bottles against the wires of the milk-carriers' racks. In Forest Hill Village perhaps the click clack is a little more pronounced as the stately sober milk wagon horses put down their shoes on the exclusive roads of the village.

Or is it the loud talk of milkmen before dawn? It is a strange fact that the ear can pick out the sound of a milk man better than it can any other noise. Milk men in Toronto have been known to come driving along a street in tandem and to carry on a conversation near one another or from across the street while the purchasers of the milk toss in pain and agony on their pillows. Are the Forest Hill Village folk going to have a rubber band placed over the lips of the milk men to prevent their delightful pre-dawn exchange of compliments across a street or stretching from one end to another?

Those who have been in Toronto know that there is an early bird who would scare any other early bird and that is the milk man. He posseses in some remarkable manner the art of creating all sounds the ear can record, emphasized by the unhallowed hour when he peregrinates up and down the streets and the sidewalks up to the milk bottle boxes in the house walls.

Probably the Forest Hill Village people are not more alert and their nerves no more on edge than those of other people but they are awake to the milkman's noises and justly seek remedy. Will rubberizing the horses' hoofs, the bottoms of the milk bottles, the bottle racks and the tires make the deliverers do the desired work any more quietly?

There should be some cure in all our inventions for the noise of the milk trade.

But once again Belleville has little kick. Her milkmen are quiet fellows, who can close a door without disturbing a mouse or waking the lightest sleeper. They are gentle with doors. Then again when snow is on the streets here (there is not a sound except at the door and that is little) the sound of the horseshoes is not heard. But it is different in Toronto where the streets are largely bare and where houses are so near you can tell the progress of a milk man up the street as he calls at your house, at your neighbor's, on and on up the street and as his horse is clicking-clacking up the road.

NO BED FOR "DE LAWD"

"DE LAWD" as personified by Richard B. Harrison, in that great stage classic "Green Pastures", was refused a place to lay his head, other than the railway station, at Madison, Wisconsin, the home of the grandson of William Lloyd Garrison, the noted abolitionist. The "Green Pastures" company of colored artists reached Madison when the mercury was playing around the twenty-five below zero mark and were refused accommodation at the hotels. The night was passed by the company in the railroad station where some of the women cried all night. The same thing happened at other places, notably Rochester, Minnesota, where the S.R.O. sign was hung out not only in the hotels against colored folk but at the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., according to Mr. Harrison, whose impersonation of "De Lawd" is one of the big features of the play.

x

The worst states in this regard, said Mr. Harrison, were Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa and North and South Dakota.

x

Lubbock, Texas, achieved the doubtful distinction of being the only place which refused a hearing to "Green Pastures."

x

Big Spring, Texas, did not get het up over the play and contributed only $600 to the box office, the lowest "take" of the tour, but other Texas towns more than made up for Big Springs apathy.

x

Jacksonville, Florida, gave the company the most enthusiastic reception they received on tour.

x

It is hardly believable that artists of this calibre, or for that matter, why any decent folk with money to pay for accommodation should be refused room and board in a public hostel just because their complexion is a bit different from the majority of citizens of that burg.

x

It is noted that the towns which drew the colored line on all the great personages of the Old Testament as revealed in "Green Pastures", were Northern towns, the same North which gave up the lives of the young men in thousands that the negro might be free.

x

Richard B. Harrison records a better reception in his own home town of London, Ontario, when he returned after a absence of fifty years. His mother and father escaped from slavery in the South and made their way to Canada via the "underground railway" and were married in a little church in London in 1854. This church still stands and here the wandering boy was tendered a reception "after the show." Two brothers and a sister reside in London.

x

Leaving home early in life, Richard B. Harrison sold newspapers on the streets of Detroit, became a hotel "bell-hop" and acted in various other capacities in search of a full meal ticket. He was always fond of the theatre and studied Shakespeare to such good purpose that he memorized three plays and fifty recitations, taking to the road as a Shakespearean reciter, playing the "tank" towns to colored audiences, as a rule. Finally he rose to the eminence of teacher of elocution in a college and also did a Chautauqua tour.

When the cast of "Green Pastures" was being selected great care was taken to secure true types for the various parts, and the greatest trouble was found in locating a type which would fit the role of "De Lawd". Finally the searchers located Richard B. Harrison, and he has played the role with perfect satisfaction 1,652 times, since the opening performance in New York City and on the road where the company travelled 40,000 miles, appeared in 203 cities in 39 states and Canada.

"Green Pastures" after three and a half years on the road has returned to New York City for another run, its first run there lasting several seasons and being one of the greatest theatrical records of all time.

"SECRET" PACTS IN HYDRO DEAL, ROEBUCK CHARGES

Details of Agreements Unfolded in 3-Hour Address

POLICY OF ADAM BECK

Roebuck Calls Power Purchase Oturage on Ontario

TORONTO, March 1.—(CP) — Into the annals of — years of publicly-owned Hydro power in Ontario the declaration was written today negotiation of the Gatineau Power purchase by the Hydro Electric Power Commission in May, 1926, was accompanied by four secret supplementary agreements and followed a month later by a fifth.

Details of the agreements were unfolded in a three-hour speech in the Provincial Legislature yesterday by Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney-General and member of the new Hydro Commission. He said as far as he knew no public reference had been made heretofore to the agreements which received the approval of the government of former premier, G. Howard Ferguson.

Gobetween Contracts

Mr. Roebuck was continuing the review of the Hydro situation he started Wednesday when he rose to speak in the Throne Speech debate. He dealt principally with the Gatineau contract yesterday and is expected to refer to other contracts at the resumption of the debate today.

Decision of the commission to purchase Quebec power was attacked by Mr. Roebuck as a departure from the policy of the late Sir Adam Beck, who, he said, favored construction of steam plants to be operated for a short time only during hours of peak demand until growth of the Hydro Commission's business justified further developments on the Niagara, St. Lawrence or Ottawa Rivers.

Calls Purchase Betrayal

"The purchase was a reversal of Sir Adam's policy, a betrayal of Hydro and an outrage upon Ontario."

Mr. Roebuck further attacked the Gatineau deal because there was no provision in the contract for renewal when the 30-year period of the agreement elapses in 1938. "The failure to obtain an option of renewal is a complete capitulation by the Commission to the owners of this source of power," he said.

The first supplemenatry agreement, he said, provided the contract might be terminated immediately by an act of the Quebec legislature. The second stipulated any new or increased taxation by the Quebec or Federal governments or increase in Quebec's water rentals would be added to the price per horsepower of Gatineau power.

Third Agreement Agreeable

Mr. Roebuck found little fault with the third agreement which was purely technical but he attacked the fourth one because it said the company could cancel the contract if it failed to obtain a power site for which it was negotiating.

Chief provision of the fifth agreement was for changing the place of delivery from the International boundary line to a point 10 feet distant on the Ontario side because A. R. Graustein, President of the Gatineau Company had been advised the agreement was unenforcable on the existing arrangement for delivery.

The Attorney-General detailed the financial set-up of the Gatineau Company. He described before packed galleries how three power sites—Farmers, Paugan and Chelsea which cost slightly more than $4,000,000 were turned over by A. R. Graustein of New York, President of the International Paper Company, to A. R. Graustein, President for more than $41,000,000.

Graustein Terms

He said C. A. Magrath, chairman of the Commission, had signified his intention to discuss immediately with Graustein terms to cover purchase of 100,000 to 300,000 horsepower from the company and then declared Magrath accepted the agreement submitted by Gatineau the same day as he received it—April 1, 1926.

Then, he said, Mr. Magrath forwarded copies of the agreement and the supplementaries to Premier Ferguson and suggested two Orders-in-Council, one for the agreement proper and one for the others. The necessary order was passed May 14, 1926.

Earlier in his address Mr. Roebuck had charged "misuse of Commission Funds for political purposes." He said R. J. Stevenson of Toronto, received $450 from C. A. Maguire, vice-chairman, after writing political articles. A broadcast by Controller (now Mayor) James Simpson of Toronto, on June 16, 1934, cost $500 and the cost was paid from Commission Funds.

J. B. Buchanan of Ingersoll, who "took an active part in the Provincial general election" was charged by the Attorney-General with receiving $3,650 and T. J. Hannigan of Guelph, secretary of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association was described as "the political manipulator of those in charge of Commission affairs."

FAMILIES ESCAPE WITH THEIR LIVES

Saint John, N.B., March 1 (CP)—Four families, clad mostly in sleeping apparel and overcoats, barely escaped with their lives when the Ideal Stores Ltd. apartments were swept by flames Thursday. Damage was roughly estimated at $70,000. Mrs. Mary A. Seely, 78-year-old feeble widow, was carried to safety by police constable Samuel A. Gill through smoke-filled rooms and hallway. She was sleeping peacefully when the constable and three others pounded on her bedroom door, smashing it in when the quite-deaf widow failed to hear them.

GLEN ROSS GIVES FANS SURPRISE

Come From Behind to Take West Huntingdon On The Round

Stirling, March 1—The ticket sellers had their troubles at Stirling arena on Tuesday night when Glen Ross defeated West Huntingdon 4 to 2, as the crowd forged their way through the lobby to secure the spots giving the best view on the ice. Free publicity had been given this game by the fans who saw the first game battled out on Thursday night last, when West Huntingdon won over Glen Ross by 1-0. Going into the last game with a one goal lead made West Huntingdon the favorites to take the series, and brought out the largest crowd seen in the rink this winter. Glen Ross upset the dope by winning the game 4-2, and the round by 4-3.

Although their supporters were confident they would come through, the players wouldn't commit themselves at any time previous to the final game. They won a hard fought battle that was packed with thrills, chills and spills, and that's all, they just won. Last year's champions never looked better. They offer no alibis; they gave their best and lost to a great team. Glen Ross goes on toward the championship when they meet Zion's Hill in the first of a home and home series with goals to count, on Friday night.

Some of the Zion boys were present, looking over their prospective opponents, and they must have felt a bit shaky, for after the game they went into a hard practise. One of the Zion's stars said both teams looked good and they had to meet one of them.

Ackers, cagey coach of the Glen Ross team, tried a different style of play in this game. Instead of working Friday Fraser, the flashy centre, as a threat, his boys fed G. Fraser all through the game. The centre man was watched all the time, and while West Huntingdon watched him, his brother went on a scoring spree. Mott received the first penalty when he collided with Friday Fraser. It looked accidental, but it proved very unlucky. With the extra man, Glen Ross stepped on it, and Fraser lifted a high one, and skating in fast for the rebound, banged it home for the first counter. Mott came on again, and on one of his smart rushes, using Wright for a threat, coasted in on Hagerman to put his team ahead again, ending the period, 1-1.

Second Period

Glen Ross had nothing to lose and sent every man up on the attack. Their supporters felt rather hopeless as Mott, Kerby and Wright broke away and scored to make it 2-1. Gerald Fraser who wasn't watched very closely got a great hand just before the bell went to end the period, when he scored his second goal, making it 2-2.

Penalties—Armstrong.

Last Period

Heavy body checking began to show in this period. Mott was taken out pretty heavily by Armstrong and Brown on one of his solo rushes. Wright and Armstrong were penalized for thinking out loud, and the play got quite warm. Glen Ross pressed hard, and in a scramble out in front of West Huntingdon net, they gave Sarles plenty of shots to stop. Finally Scott got his stick on one and battled it in for Glen Ross's third counter. The crowd went wild as this goal tied them on the round. West Huntingdon played a wonderful game, showering Hagerman with shots from every angle for the remainder of the period. Hagerman was right on and did everything but catch them in his mouth; they just couldn't score. Mott lost a good chance once, after going through the whole team he missed the open net. With less than five minutes to play, Fraser cut loose again and secured the million dollar goal that gave Glen Ross the round 4 to 3. Only the smart work of Hagerman in the Glen Ross nets kept West Huntingdon from tying it up. In the last five minutes the play was all around the net, but he turned them all away. Can these boys take Zion? That is the question. There will be plenty of folks drop in to see on Friday night.

Lineup:

West Huntingdon—goal Sarles; defence, McGowan brothers; wings, Wright and Kerby; centre, Mott. Alternates: Thompson, Cook, Bray, and Moran.

Glen Ross—goal, Hagerman; defence, Brown and Armstrong; wings Roy Brooks and G. Fraser; centre, Friday Fraser. Alternates: Scott, H. Brooks and Pyear.

Referee—Leo Barrett, Belleville.

Bible Class Banquet

On Tuesday evening the two senior Adult Bible Classes of St. Paul's United Church gave a splendid banquet to their members and friends. Sixty sat down to a sumptuous dinner provided by the ladies. The tables were arranged in a triangular formation, and gaily decorated with many flowers and with an abundant supply of good things to eat, they presented a very appetizing appearance. Between courses all joined heartily in community singing led by Robert Patterson. At the end of this part of the program, which was carried out in a very fine manner, due to the efforts of the provision committee, headed by Mrs. White and Mrs. Thompson, Rev. F. W. Rowland officiated as toast master.

The toast to King and Country was responded to by Mr. J. Butler and Mr. C. F. Linn. Both made mention of the sailor King who rose high in the ranks of seamanship, from the humble post of midshipman. After the singing of the National Anthem. Mr. Bob Patterson gave a selection on his harp. The toast to the Sunday School proposed by Mrs. D. Heath, was very fittingly responded to by Mr. W. S. Martin. Mr. Martin, who is eighty six years of age, has been active in Sunday School work for eighty one years and still attends quite regularly. This was followed by a toast to the Bible Class by Mr. Wilbert Hagerman, and responded to by Mr. Harry Hulin.

A vocal quartette by members of the men's class, composed of W. Hagerman, W. Fitchett, Rev. F. W. Rowland and R. Patterson. "The Old Rugged Cross." was well received. Mr. Patterson gave another selection on his harp.

The three oldest members present were: Mrs. Wood, Miss Sarah Knox and Mr. W. S. Martin, all well over eighty years. Other aged members were Mr. Finkle and Mr. John Chard.

The program committee composed of Rev. F. W. Rowland, convener, Mrs. Hockey, Mrs. Gordonier, and Mr. Fitchett, exercised great taste in arranging the program for the evening.

Reorganization of the two classes took place at the close of the program. The following officers were installed.

Ladies' Class—President, Mrs. Hockey. Secretary, Mrs. White. Treasurer, Mrs. W. S. Martin. Teacher, Mrs. Heath, with Mrs. J. Wilson assistant.

Men's Class—President, W. Fitchett. Sec. Treasurer, Wilbur Jones. Teacher, H. W. Hulin, with Mr. Heasman assistant.

The evening was brought to a close by singing a hymn and repeating the Benediction.

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 26, a group of friends enjoyed a very pleasant dinner party at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Koffend. The party was in honor of Mrs. Koffend, who celebrated her birthday on that date. It was in the form of a surprise party. After dinner the guests numbering eight in all, enjoyed a delightful social evening. They were, Mr. and Mrs. W. Shaw and son, Wilton, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McGee, Mrs. Mae Nolan, Miss Lenora Ward, and Dr. L. L. Young of Japan.

Mr. Ned Potts of Toronto, visited friends in Stirling on Tuesday.

Friends of Mrs. George Mason will be sorry to learn that she is suffering from a severe attack of 'flu.

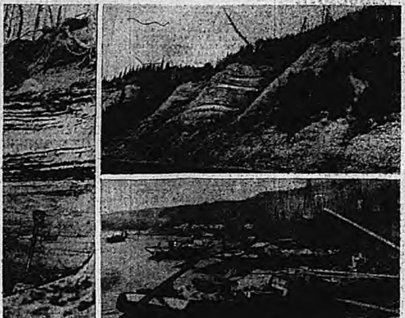
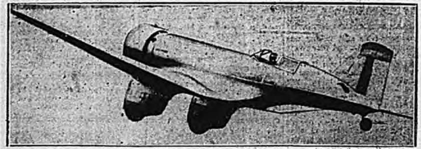
NEW PROCESS MAY MEAN OIL RICHES FOR CANADA



According to an Ottawa dispatch the bituminous sands of the McMurray district of Alberta, are to be developed by a Denver, Colorado, firm, following successful tests from which gasoline and oil were derived from the sands which according to S. C. Ells, Canadian government geologist, cover an area of 6,000 square miles. Estimates show that the field, which is between 40,000,000 and 100,000,000 years old, contains enough oil supplies to last the world 500 years at present rate of consumption. Millions have been spent to take the oil out of the stands economically. The Ottawa dispatch leads to the possible solution of the problem. Photos show LEFT, bituminous sand exposure on the Athabasca river near McMurray; UPPER RIGHT, oil sands, after top layer of vegetation and trees removed near McMurray. LOWER RIGHT, some of the supply boats and an oil well of a previous attempt to procure oil from the sands.

U. S. ARMY BUILDING NEW AND DEADLIER 'PLANES



Sixty new-type aeroplanes which will form the United States army's most lethal weapon of the air, are under construction at El Segundo, Calif. Known as attack aeroplanes, the new death-dealers will do their fighting close to the ground supplementing the work of present model pursuit and bombing planes. The attack models will carry two men, six heavy machine guns, and 500 pounds of bombs. Photo shows the new attack model which is expected to revolutionize modern air defence, as it appears in action. J. P. MORGAN GOING TO ENGLAND OR PREPARING FOR INFLATION?

TOWN HOUSE, MADISON AVE., AT 37TH ST.

MORGAN ESTATE, GLEN COVE, L.I.

A suggestion that J. P. Morgan plans to quit America and live permanently in England has been denied by close friends of the New York banker. The report emanated when Morgan recently placed on sale 31 acres of his estate at Glen Cove, L.I. and 18 acres at Locut Valley, L.I., as well as disposing of six famous paintings for $1,500,000. Some of the most costly possessions of Morgan are pictured above. Persons close to Morgan say he merely "is getting his estate into more manageable shape". Wall St. wonders whether the financier is getting ready for inflation— and, if so, where he is reinvesting his money. And the rumors about England persists.

A lovely lunch was served after which young and old enjoyed a couple of hours of round and square dancing.

Born in Marmora on Sunday, Feb. 24th, 1935, to Mr. and Mrs V. Lynch, a son.

Born in Marmora on Friday, Feb. 22nd., 1935, to Mr. and Mrs. F. Darby, a son.

On Monday evening, in spite of the inclemency of the weather, a very large crowd attended the dance held in Deloro Hall under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Sodality of the Sacred Heart Church, Marmora.

The stage was smartly decorated with yellow, blue and white bunting, and yellow and white crepe paper. At the extreme back, in the centre was an artistic crest, "C. of M", done in blue and white, Old English lettering, which was most attractive. Subdued lights and lamps shone forth, making a very cosy setting.

Jack Grant and his "Aces" provided up-to-date music for the occasion.

A very dainty luncheon was served at midnight, and the social event was a decided success enjoyed by all those present.

TIPS ON MARRIAGE BY THE BACHELOR "BABY" SENATOR

Copyright, 1935,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

When there's a bachelor senator in Washington, that's news. But when he's under 30 and has to wait for another birthday before he can be sworn in to defend the Constitution, that's almost an "extra".

Rush D. Holt of West Virginia, patiently waiting for his 30th. birthday to dawn, is unmarried. Furthermore, he is good-looking and speaks delightfully. When he sits in the gallery, or peeps from a corridor looking at the seat he's too young to occupy, a distinct flutter in the Senate Chamber is evident.

Eyes wander to the "baby" senator, who puts up a brave front and manages to imply he's unconscious of the attention he's creating.

But after the other night, when he handed out advice to hundreds of young girl graduates at the Roosevelt High School mid-year commencement, no one will ever question his courage. Older senators have quailed at performing this charming office; not so young Mr. Holt, who said:

"Marry if you wish, but don't go into politics"

This was startling, not only to the youthful grads but to their friends, seeing how well the "baby" senator had done in this difficult act or game, whichever you choose to call it. But, that's what he said at any rate.

He also told the girls, who had just got their diplomas, that very probably they would not marry the type of man they most desired to marry. Was it imagination, or did a wave of sighing actually ascend toward the youthful senator?

He told them, too, with all the wisdom of the unwed, that they should try to surpass their neighbors in being good wives and housewives when they did marry.

Education, the youthful senator-elect told the graduates, is an investment by the government on which they can either return six percent or turn out bankrupts. And he praised the New Deal for giving ear to the ideas of young people.

The senator's remarks on education were well-chosen, for in these days, as we have been told time and time again, marriage does not offer economic security for women. And a girl who seems to have every provision made for her future today may be looking for a job tomorrow.

Adult education and vocational training are a tremendous help to job-seeking women, but the difficulty which most often confronts the instructors who undertake this work is the lack of educational foundation on the part of students who wish to enroll in these courses.

Happily, high school graduates have this foundation, and that, as the senator reminded them, is equal to a six per cent investment.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Copyright, 1935,

THE GENTLEMAN STANDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young lady and I were in a cafe dining last Sunday evening and while eating (we were at a table close to the wall with hardly room for two people) a married woman friend of my friend stopped at our table on her way to another table, where her two sons had already gone with the waiter. She was in the rear and the sons did not notice that she had stopped at our tabel. The lady with me said, "How do you do Mrs. Smith". She stopped and recognized my friend and spoke very graciously; they had known each other for years. In due course of time—fifteen seconds—my friend introduced Mrs. Smith to me. I stood up, bowed and said, "I am pleased to have the pleasure of your acquaintance".

The question is: When I finished I sat down again, stopped eating and joined in the conversation. She (Mrs. Smith) stood talking for about five minutes. Now the cafe was quite crowded, the aisles were very narrow, and the public was somewhat restless....eager to get tables to have their dinner. My friend claims that I pulled a boner by not standing and remaining by my chair until Mrs. Smith left and that I should have made some remark to the effect that I was sorry she could not join us at our table. She was a total stranger to me, I had never seen her before. I sat still listening very attentively.. and now and then joining in the conversation.

Was it rude of me to remain seated after the introduction, or was it right under the conditions—crowded cafe—after rising and bowing. to be seated again?

Reader.

No excuse in the world—a crowded restaurant, narrow aisles, restless public—would justify your sitting down while this woman stood at your table. For you to have sat down while this older-woman-visitor-to-your-table stod talking was a definite rudeness, and your young friend was thoroughly justified in being embarrassed. Even if there was not room for you to stand in the aisle beside your table, you could have stood at your chair—but you should have stood until this woman left... The fact that she was a stranger to you, that you had never seen her before, doesn't alter the case. Gallantry and mannerliness demands that a gentleman stands while a lady is standing, and especially under the circumstances about which you inquire. It was not, however, necessary that you "make some remark to the effect that you were sorry that she could not join you at your table.

Two more details in your letter also need attention, and I hope you won't mind if I chat with you about them. You say, "My friend introduced Mrs. Smith to me". Keep in mind that a man is introduced to a woman—"My friend introduced me to Mrs. Smith"

Also don't say, in acknowledging an introduction, "I am pleased to have the pleasure of your acquaintance". This is an awkward and incorrect way of acknowledging an introduction—avoid it. The always-correct way of acknowledging an introduction is, "How do you do", or better to add the name, "How do you do, Mrs. Smith".

SPOONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please let me know what kind of spoon a fruit cocktail should be eaten with? At one particular place where we had dinner recently, we had two teaspoons and a small round-bowled spoon, with a short handle, at our places. Which was proper to use?

Puzzled.

A fruit cocktail is eaten with a teaspoon. The small round bowled spoon with the short handle is, I feel sure, the cream soup spoon, to use with soup served in the wide soup cup. The other tea spoon might have been for tea or a large cup of coffee. Does this check up with menu you had

Student Government Is Called Solution

OTTAWA, March 1—(CP)—Student government is the best solution to the problem of University discipline, Dr. Hamilton Fyfe, principal of Queen's believes.

"We have very little against fraternities as such," he said, "but we feel that Queen's is a fraternity and it would not be well to have a fraternity within a fraternity."

Dr. Fyfe spoke on the occasion of the annual dinner dance of Ottawa Queen's Alumni Association.

BEDS JUMP ABOUT AS EARTH MOVES

Kansas City Dwellers Roused From Sleep by 'Jars'

Kansas City, March 1.—(AP)—An earth movement, severe enough to awaken many residents, shook Greater Kansas City early today.

Police Departments of both Kansas City and Independence, Mo., received numerous calls from residents but none of them reported any damage.

Thomas Burgess, dispatcher for the Burlington Railroad, said he felt the shock distinctly and a few minutes later received word from dipatchers at St. Joseph, Mo., and Omaha, Neb., that those points also had felt the movement.

Residents reported to police their beds had "jumped". Persons at work at the time said their chairs "jerked". Z. M. Moore, railroad towerman, said a co-worker reported his hand had been jarred from a telegraph key he was operating.

The shock occurred about 5.01 a.m., Central Standard time.

L. V. Ockerman, St. Joseph, Mo., railroad man, said he had received reports of the movement from Wymore, and Red Cloud, Neb., and Payne, Iowa.

ROBEY PLAYS ROLE OF SIR JOHN FALSTAFF

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 1 (CP Cable)—That eminent comedian of the huge eyebrows, George Robey, appeared as Falstaff in Shakespeare's Henry IV at His Majesty's Theatre last night and everybody liked it.

It was a regular old-style "fashionable first night." Even the most blase critic was eager to settle in his seat.

Equally interesting in different manner was last night's revival of the Rose of Persian at the Prince's Theatre. This was the last complete opera Sullivan composed and proved the most successful of any outside the historic Gilbert and Sullivan collaborations.

245 LB. WRESTLER SENTENCED TO PEN

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 1 (AP)—Accepting the verdict of a Shelby County Criminal Court jury, "Big Jim" Clinstock, 245-pound professional wrestler, today was ready to begin a sentence of from two to eight years on a charge of manslaughter.

Convicted January 31 of the fatal beating of Keo Kahn, Memphis furniture dealer, the part-Indian wrestler had planned to appeal but yesterday he announced through his attorney, "Inasmuch as the jury has decided under the circumstances I should be imprisoned, I accept their decision."

The State contended Clinstock beat Kahn to death as the result of an argument over a furniture bill but the defendant testified at his trial Kahn had insulted his wife.

FINDS GAS WITH MATCH

SARNIA, Ont., March 1.— (CP)—Henry L. Barnes of Sarnia, thought he detected odor of gas in his house. He started to look for a leak, lit a match and found it. The gas meter exploded, causing slight burns to his face and $25 damage to the house.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Murder In The Clouds"

Thrilling, Suspense Packed Air Drama!

Although passengers aboard the Los Angeles to Salt Lake City airplane one day recently didn't know it, they were served their tea and bouillon by one of Hollywood's best known motion picture stars.

Her name is Ann Dvorak, but the passengers in the plane looked upon her merely as a charming young hostess, for that's what she was on the flight.

Ann is at present portraying the role of an air stewardess in "Murder In The Clouds," now on the screen at the Capitol, and in order to thoroughly acquaint herself with the technicalities of the profession, attended the instruction classes held for girls aspiring for the work.

Finishing the training routine at one of the local airports, she decided to complete her air education and prevailed upon one of the air line officials to permit her to make a regular passenger flight with one of the experienced stewardesses. On the trip, Ann entered into the duties of the job and, according to her mentor, came through creditably.

"The uniform was a perfect disguise," declared Ann upon completion of the round trip. "It was loads of fun."

"Murder in The Clouds" is a thrilling mystery drama, involving several murders in the air and the kidnapping of a beautiful girl by plane. The all star cast includes Miss Dvorak, Lyle Talbot, Gordon Westcott in a triangular love match, and George Cooper provides plenty of comedy interest throughout the film.

"Ready For Love"

The havoc a girl with big town ideas can innocently create in a small town is amusingly portrayed in the romantic comedy "Ready For Love" which is also showing on this bill.

Featuring Richard Arlen and Ida Lupino in the leading roles, the story is concerned with amusing misunderstandings, dramatic complications and a fresh and breezy romance.

Ida Lupino, as a girl, comes to Cretwattle Falls on the train that bears the mortal remains of the town's most dignified hypocrite. Her arrival on the same train is pure coincidence, but the town's gossips immediately deduce some connection.

Then the editor of the local newspaper furthers their suspicions and in a short time a totally innocent girl is branded as a shameless hussy.

More amused than dismayed by this strange turn of events, Miss Lupino proceeds to capitalize on her ready made reputation. Finally the enraged housewives of the community, fearing unnecessarily for their husband's safety, mob the girl.

Richard Arlen, as the editor, is thoroughly alarmed now at the possible danger to the girl. By an ingenious ruse he diverts the female mob, rescues the girl and the close of the picture finds these two happy in their love.

Capitol Super News completes the programme.

Complete shows 2.30. 7.10. 9.10.

AT THE BELLE

"The Gilded Lily"

Claudette Colbert Star of Charming Comedy Film

One of those gay, effervescent and light-hearted comedies, Paramount's "The Gilded Lily" comes to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday), and according to the critics to score another hit for its star Claudette Colbert who has been seen in so many of the recent season's successes.

Assisted by Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland in the principal romantic roles, Miss Colbert gives an entire performance in her topnotch comedy vein, with short and delightful sequences of the dancing and singing she first introduced in "Torch Singer."

In "The Gilded Lily," Miss Colbert plays a romantic soul, a girl who expects love to blow her 'three feet off the ground." Until the fateful moment and love arrive, she is content to sit on a park bench with her shipnews reporting pal, MacMurray, and munch popcorn.

Love arrives and parts. Through a series of extraordinary incidents Miss Colbert becomes the most sought-after night club entertainer on two continents. But the series of mad and exciting episodes bring her finally to the realization that she really loved only one man and never knew it. The final episode shows Miss Colbert and MacMurray happily reunited on the park bench where they can watch the world go by.

Bristling with fresh sallies of wit and crisp, fast dialogue, "The Gilded Lily" moves rapidly and happily from opening scene to final fade-out.

Wesley Ruggles turned in a fine job of direction and all the players including C. Aubrey Smith, Luis Alberni and Tom Dugan, contribute to the general hilarity.

Zane Grey Western Story

A story with the gripping interest of a Sherlock Holmes mystery and the scenic beauty and action of a "Covered Wagon" or "Wagon Wheels". Paramount's new Zane Grey thriller, "Rocky Mountain Mystery," is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

Heading the cast is Randolph Scott, veteran of many Zane Grey outdoor action stories, who is coupled with Ann Sheridan, Texas beauty, in the romantic leads. The supporting cast has Charles "Chic" Sale in another of his famous rural characterizations, and Mrs. Leslie Carter, famous character actress, who makes her screen debut.

The action of "Rocky Mountain Mystery" is laid in an abandoned Western mining town, and is packed with thrills, mystery, fun and romance.

The excellent supporting cast includes Kathleen Burke leading lady in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer", George Marion, Sr.; James C. Eagles, Willie Fung and Florence Roberts are outstanding in minor characterizations.

The Belle Latest News of the World will be exhibited on the same program. At the Saturday matinee performance Ken Maynard and his wonder horse "Tarzan" will appear in "The Mystery Mountain."

Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery are appearing tonight for the last times in "Forsaking All Others."

Wm. Stringer Subject Of M.P.P's. Enquiry

TORONTO, Mar. 1—(CP)—Dismissal of William Stringer, chief inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Ontario Provincial Police, is the subject of a question T. A. Murphy (Cons. Toronto-Beaches), has placed on the order paper of the provincial Legislature.

Mr. Murphy asks why Mr. Stringer was dismissed, if he will be re-engaged, if he is on superannuation and if he was given any retiring allowance.

ATOMIC STRUCTURE IS UNDER STUDY

EDMONTON, March 1— (CP) — Research into atomic structure is being carried on at the University of Alberta by Prof. Stanley Smith, Department of Physics. "We are getting more accurate measurements of the separation of the components into which spectral lines are split," he declared.

NEW HOTEL REGULATION

Toronto, Mar. 1—(CP)— Ontario Liquor Commissioner E. G. Odette announced today he has already put into effect the amendment to the hotel regulation requiring at least 12 guest rooms in city and town hotels and six in rural hotels.

Wants Information on Number of Dismissals

TORONTO, March 1—(CP)— Request for information as to how many employees have been taken on by the Niagara Parks Commission since July 11, 1934, and how many have been dismissed or asked to resign since the date is contained in questions George S. Henry, leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, has placed on the order paper.

CANARIES' CHIRPING SAVES HOUSEHOLD

Toronto, Mar. 1—(CP)—Frenzied chirping and fluttering of four pet canaries aroused two families here as smoke from a basement fire filled their rooms in a duplex house and enabled five other residents to reach the street and escape suffocation from the fumes. The four birds were unharmed. Firemen brought Mrs. Alexander Irving, living on the second floor, down a ladder from a balcony. Mr. Irving brought their canary down by the same route rather than take it through the smoke-filled halls.

MORE DISMISSALS

Brantford, Ont., Mar. 1—(CP) — The staff at the Brantford store of the Ontario Liquor Control Board was reduced today when H. C. Cuff and Walter Harris were dismissed. H. L. Hagey, N. D. Neill and William Prior are the three remaining on the staff.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINING

A new high price for bar gold in London started active demand for the yellow metal stocks today and advances were showing all along the line. Buying was particularly active in Hollinger and in the secondary issues the features were Central Patricia, Siscoe and McWatters. Gains up to 50 cents were registered. McWatters touched a new high, McMillan continued under selling pressure, touching 22. The Base Metal and silvers practically no trade.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, March 1 (AP)—Definite trends were still lacking in today's financial markets and securities and staples, generally, backed and filled listlessly.

In the Canadian section of the list, McIntyre firmed a major fraction, while Dome, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were about even. On the curb, Lake Shore and Hiram Walker showed small advances. Dominion Bonds ruled inactive. Canadian funds held unchanged.

Shares of U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound, Cerro De Pasco and American Smelting got up to 3 points. Coca Cola advanced 4 and Columbia Pictures certificates recovered 2. Canada Dry dropped more than a point, and U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Consolidated Gas and numerous others were unchanged to fractionally.

INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, March 1. — (CP)— A sweeping forward movement in the Mining Section finally pulled the Industrial Department out of the rut today and a buoyant trend was in evidence in the late afternoon. The sinking trend in the Utilities, during the morning, particularly the Power Stocks, was the main drag on the early market but with selling of these out of the way a firming trend set in in the Foods, Constructions, Steels and Metals. Nickel and Smelters were heavy traders at higher prices.

MINING CLOSE

Toronto, March 1—(CP)—Traders jumped into the mining market on the buying side today and the sudden scramble for stock sent prices flying upward in the best general rise they have had in fourmonths. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of the senior gold issues changed hands in the afternoon when activity was at its height and advances up to $1.50 were registered. Several days of succeeding advances for gold in the London market with the feeling in some quarters that a new fixed price for gold at a new high level was in the offing, stimulated the trade. Silvers and Base Metals also climbed.

TORONTO WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REVIEW

Heavy Supply of Hogs Forced Prices Lower Calves Firmer

On a heavier than usual run, the calf division jumped 50 cents to $1.00. Choice vealers sold at $8.00 to $8.50 with 30 tops at $9.00 cwt. Common, light calves brought $5.00 to $6.25 No calves were expected to the United States. Choice fed calves sold at $6.50 to $7.25 with mediums at $5.00 to $6.00. Truck deliveries made up more than half the supply, a new high record for Toronto yards.

Heavy hog runs at all Ontario market points weakened the market here and after a steady opening truck supplies closed 40 to 50 cents lower and off cars 25 lower. Closing levels were at $7.75 f.o.b. for bacons $8.00 to $8.10 off truck and $8.50 off car. Packers issued bids of $7.25 f.o.b. for week-end deliveries.

Sheep and lamb receipts of 2,700 head included 2,300 western lambs. The market was down 25 cents at $7.00 for good lambs and appeared weak at the close. Some 1,400 westerns were expected over the week-end. A few lots of natives sold at $5.00 to $7.00 cwt according to quality. Sheep were unchanged at $1.00 to $4.00 cwt and a few yearlings brought $4.50 cwt.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were:

This week—Cattle 5636; calves 1,978; hogs, 4,405; sheep and lambs 2,690.

Last week, cattle, 5,146; calves, 1,609; hogs, 3,210; sheep and cattle, 2,197.

1934 to date, cattle 45,539; calves, 15,096; hogs, 43,588; sheep and lambs 22,436.

This week 1934 cattle 4,338; calves 1,456; hogs, 4,938; sheep and lambs 1,551.

LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb 28—(CP)—Light supplies prevailed on all classes at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market today and early sales on cattle and calves were steady. Hogs, however, were unsettled with bids another 25 cents lower than the week's lows. No sales were made on sheep or lambs.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 80; Calves 20; Hogs 110; Sheep and Lambs 200.

A few medium to good handyweight cattle sold from $5.00 to $5.75 while butcher cows brought $2.50 to $4.25.

Calves were steady at $6.00 to $8.00 cwt.

Bids on the hog division were lower at $7.50 f.o.b. for bacons, $7.85 off truck and $8.25 off car.

HYDRO DISMISSALS SUBJECT OF INQUIRY

Arthur Ellis Seeks Information of Ontario House

Toronto, March 1—(CP)— Three questions relating to Hydro were placed on the order paper of the Provincial Legislature today by the Conservative opposition.

Arthur Ellis, Ottawa, asks reasons for the dismissal of F. A. Gaby, former chief engineer and of three members of the commission, the late J. R. Cooke, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and C. A. Maguire.

He asks who succeeded them and whether the new appointee had "at the time of his appointment any actual experience in the administration or management of any company developing or selling electricity.

Mr. Ellis also asked why P. D. Ross was dismissed from the Ottawa Hydro-Electric Power "Commission.

Shower is Held For Fire Victims

Frankford—A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Caskey on Feb. 22, when over ninety friends and neighbors presented Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Osterhout with a miscellaneous shower of groceries, kitchen utensils and many other useful gifts among them two comforters from Tabernacle Ladies Aid, also two quilted from Zion Aid and a pair of blankets showing the sympathy of the neighborhood in the loss of their home on Feb. 11. Mr. and Mrs. Osterhout both thanked their friends in a few well chosen words for their kindness. Rev. A. S. McConnell, their pastor also made a few suitable remarks on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Osterhout. The evening was spent in games after which the ladies served a bountiful lunch.

PHILIP BARRY PLAY IS PUT ON

One of the most important plays in the career of one of the American drama's chief exponents will be presented before Belleville audince tonight, when Philip Barry's delightful comedy-drama, "The Youngest", will be performed in the College Auditorium by the Albert College Dramatic Society. The rapid-paced humor, the tender sentiment and gilt-edged satire of this obviously autobiographical work has endeared it to drama lovers, and its theme is definitely vital and applicable today. Under the deft hands of Miss Jessie B. Tuite, will known to Bellevillites as a director of wisdom and power, the Albert College presentation of "The Youngest" is being skilfully moulded for public presentation tonight.

PRINCE EDWARD FINALS REACHED

Bloomfield Disposes of Wellington by 5 to 3 Score

Bloomfield and Consecon entered the finals in the Wellington and District Hockey League last night when the former defeated Wellington 5 to 3 as the latter downed Roseall two to one in the league semi-finals played in the Wellington Arena before some 600 spectators.

Phillips and Abbott starred for the winning Bloomfield sextette while Noble, Harris and MacDonald looked the best for the losing team. Bloomfield won the round by the total score of 9 to 6, having won a previous game 4 to 3. Consecon were forced to the limit to defeat Rosehall 2 to 1 in the nightcap affair and win the round by a single goal.

Leo Barrett of Belleville impartially acted as the referee.

The line-ups: Wellington —Munro, Brumley, St. Pierre, MacDonald, T. Fillingham, McCarthy, G. Fillingham, C. Young, N. Young.

Bloomfield—Irvine, Ward, Gough, Phillips, Bowerman, Abbott, Lovelace, Mann and East.

MANY OBSERVE ST. DAVID'S DAY

Welshmen Wear The Leek as a Symbol of Their Faith

A tiny sprig of leek in the coat lapel of some strolling pedestrian on the walks of the city recognizes the fact that today is St. David's Day, observed the world over by Welsh folk who bow in memory to their patron saint.

Not all with wear the leek, however; many a staunch Welshman will show a preference for a daffodil, which it is claimed, is interpreted to signify "St. David's Leaf".

Of St. David himself but little authentic history is available. From documents preserved it is shown that he lived in the fifth century in that part of Wales known as Dayfed. He is said to have been noted for his sanctity and exemplary life, on account of which he was beloved by his race.

Wherever domiciled, the sons and daughters of Cymru will observe today as one of remembrance. It is expected that little more actual observance other than parties will be noted in Belleville.

ICE HARVEST NOW ALMOST FINISHED

With storehouses packed, and even temporary buildings pressed into service to hold a record crop, ice men of the city have about finished their annual work of ice cutting in the Bay of Quinte. This week just one lone outfit is engaged cutting a small supply.

SOCIETIES

CHAPTER 435 OF MOOSE

The members of Belleville Chapter 435, and Belleville Lodge 1004 of the Loyal Order of the Moose and their friends, paid a visit to Trenton Lodge last night, on the occasion of the visit of Brother Norman G. Heyd, Regional Director of Canada, who, was accompanied by Brother Joseph Jackson.

Brother Heyd gave an inspiring address in which he pointed out the different benefits to be derived from the fraternity and explained the services the fraternity renders to its members. To illustrate his remarks on the Mooseheart Service he displayed coloured slides of Mooseheart, which proved very interesting and were much enjoyed.

A carpet ball game was won by the Belleville members.

During the evening Mr. Clare Patterson of Belleville rendered two vocal solos which were heartily applauded. Mr. James Lazenby also pleased those present with his amusing impersonation.

At the close of the program delightful refreshments were served and cards and dancing were enjoyed.

Wolves Spend Night Within Log House

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Abe Singleton and his sons, Clifford and John, don't believe the old saying wolves are wary of human scent. The trio, cutting wood on a nearby farm and eating their lunch in a 40-year-old-log house, were surprised to find the door of the log house open on their arrival. Investigation showed the wolves had spent the night in the dwelling.

FATAL CRASH WITH TRUCK

Hamilton, Ont. March 1.—(CP)—One person was killed and two injured when a car containing Toronto motorists crashed against a truck on an icy stretch of highway Number Five near Peter's Corners, on Thursday.

The victim of crash was Elinor Hargreaves, aged 11, Toronto, who was so badly injured she succumbed within a few minutes.

Many Resolutions Passed By Cheesemen at Meeting

Recommend Formation of Association of Cheese Boards

SOFTER CHEESE

At a highly successful and important meeting of cheese men held in the city hall, this city, yesterday afternoon and attended by those connected with the industry from throughout a wide area, several important resolutions were passed. Chief of those was a resolution unanimously adopted, that an association of boards be formed, or provincial scope and to be known as the United Cheese Boards of Ontario. This was moved by Mr. George S. Cooke and seconded by Mr. W. S. Stiles.

In opening the meeting, Mr. W. H. Montgomery, president of the Belleville Cheese Board, who occupied the chair, pointed out that the purpose of the meeting was an effort to bring some order out of the chaos that now exists in the industry.

"Our cheese boards have been an established form of selling cheese at least a half century, and the time has come when it is best to try and unite them into an association to promote unity of action, and also create an executive that would be representative of cheese producers, and one which could meet and discuss dairy matters with the other branches of the industry," said the president. "Also we could unite with our Federal and Provincial governments in an effort to better this condition."

Letter Is Read.

At this point Mr. Fred Mallory, secretary of the Belleville Board, read to the meeting a letter from Mr. Allan C. Fraser, Ottawa, secretary-manager of the National Dairy Council of Canada. The letter explained the writer's inability to attend the meeting but was able to give a comprehensive report of recent conventions of dairy associations and an outline of what was being accomplished in other sections of the country.

Dear Mr. Mallory: I would feel that the place of cheese in the dairy industry of Canada has been placed before the people in a light which is new to many and that good will come out of it all. There has been opposition and very strong opposition to the scheme which is being developed and with which you are familiar. I will review my experiences as follows:

Eastern Dairy Convention, Napanee: This convention endorsed the scheme with but one dissenting voice. The attendance at the convention was not large but I would consider it representative.

Western Ontario Dairy Convention in London: The first vote at the convention brought forth only three dissenting votes. Second vote was taken on the second day, and upon this occasion it was endorsed unanimously.

New Brunswick Farmers' and Dairymen's Convention at Fredericton: The scheme was very fully discussed at this convention and appeared to have a sympathetic hearing. They were not disposed to pass a resolution until dealing with all other resolutions, and we were obliged to leave before the resolutions were dealt with. Subsequently we received an intimation that they felt they should not deal with the matter in as much as the Dairy Association was being revived and would deal with the subject at a separate dairy convention. We have not heard further from that quarter but I really feel there will be no hostility.

At Halifax we had a very full and free discussion and finally the scheme was endorsed unanimously by both producers and dealers. While this convention was not large it was very representative and I feel their endorsation was well worth while.

I should say one of the great difficulties we had to get over in the Maritimes was Maritime Rights, and the hostility to Ontario interests.

Manitoba Convention: This was a good anl largely attended convention. The proposal was discussed separately with producers and manufacturers, and in joint meetings. There was hostility at the outset not only to our scheme but to marketing schemes in general. Manitoba appears hostile to these movements. I could not secure even a mover or seconder of the resolution, but did secure its reference to the executive committee, which committee incidentally is composed equally of producers and manufacturers. That committee after deliberating nearly a full day passed a resolution for developing a scheme with the proviso that no scheme should go into effect without submitting it to the producers for approval by vote.

In Saskatchewan we secured a similar resolution from the general meeting of producers and dealers, the vote being 47 or 48 for, and 12 against.

In Alberta where again there was a good and representative convention and a large one, there was positive hostility, and while I was able to get a mover and seconder of the resolution so as to get it properly before the meeting, for discussion, was able to secure only one favourable vote. At this convention I spoke to and discussed with the producers for more than an hour the whole scheme. At their request I met them again at night, and here again there was discussion for more than another hour. Then I met the convention in joint session and had again more than an hour of discussion. I was among friends here and able to speak very frankly, but they, knowing me, were equally frank, and would have nothing whatsoever to do with the resolution or the scheme or anything like it. Instead they appointed a committee to develop some scheme for dealing with the problem of surplus butter.

It is quite evident in one prairie province at least there is political interference. There is also the difficulty of persuading the western producer, who receives about 14 cents per pound for butter fat that he should make any contribution to the aid of the cheese industry in which producers receive about 20 cents per pound butterfat.

The issue in the west was still further confused by the campaign which was then being carried on by the Egg and Poultry Pool in connection with which considerable bitterness had developed, causing any scheme under the Marketing Act to be viewed with suspicion.

The creamery operators in Manitoba and Saskatchewan seemed to be favorable to the scheme. The producers were distinctly hostile in all three provinces. In Alberta I would say there were not five per cent of the creamery men who were at all sympathetic, and as I have stated, no producers.

I have not dealt with our own convention at all. It is sufficient to say that the movement was started there. Nor have I dealt with the annual convention of the Ontario creamery men, nor the milk distributors, because at the time of holding their meetings the scheme had not been developed to the point where it could be discussed, and it was only mentioned by me in general terms, and without any request for endorsation.

I have not mentioned either the Cornwall or Picton cheese makers' conventions where the matter was discussed, and where it was obviously well received, even if these bodies were uncomplimentary in their attitude to our council. Nor have I mentioned quite a good meeting which I had at Port Arthur. I stopped there at the request of some of the Thunder Bay Co-operative officers who decided to have a general and informal discussion. At this meeting I took the opportunity of telling these people what we were proposing and did not ask for a vote, and would not have obtained one because the meeting was quite informal. There are some 800 producers in this group.

Now what you are interested in is the position at the moment. Some work had been done on the details of the scheme before I left for the west, and during my absence Mr. Cowan offered to carry on and did so, and called a meeting of the committee. The tentative draft called for the setting up of a board and a vote of the producers within nine months either on the scheme itself or on the re-election of officers.

My personal view and recommendation to my committee will be that such a scheme cannot go through without a vote and that a vote of producers will be necessary else the scheme will be launched in a hostile atmosphere and never have a chance of successful operation. I am endeavoring now to get a meeting of my committee for the purpose of obtaining their views as to this. I cannot say what the final discussion will be, but have the impression that they will take the same view as I have taken and ask that the scheme be submitted to the vote. I have also, in company with Mr. Cowan discussed the matter with the chairman and secretary of the Marketing Board, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Dr. Barton, and finally with Mr. Weir, the minister. Our interview with Mr. Weir occurred at eleven o'clock last night, at which interview we asked him if he would require this vote or otherwise. He is taking the matter into consideration but my present view is that he will decide the vote is necessary.

Now just how soon the scheme can be developed and submitted to a vote I cannot say, beyond the fact that it will be done as quickly as possible I fancy, as there is every desire on the part of those concerned to get this matter decided once and for all. If a vote is taken no doubt the machinery which has been used for the Egg and Poultry vote can be used effectively in this case. The poll no doubt will be conducted by the Marketing Board as has been done in the poultry scheme.

I think some good will come out of all this. The first vote may not be successful but it will result in a discussion of dainty problems and a better knowledge by all concerned.

I can tell you frankly I have had a great deal of difficulty in bringing myself to believe that there is much virtue in these control measures. I do now believe in the scheme which we have been discussing. At the same time I feel that out of your Belleville meeting there should grow some committee which could sit around a table with the Ontario creamery men and iron out many differences and perhaps accomplish a very great deal towards the desired end. I personally feel there is going to be continual confusion if not actual conflict until something of this kind is done. I see no reason why men of good will cannot accomplish this.

One of the great objections to the scheme or any scheme under the Natural Products Marketing Act is that while you may endeavour to benefit one branch of the industry there is the danger that in the doing of this you may unbalance another element. That I think is the fear now — the danger that aid given to the cheese industry will put the creamery industry out of balance and in need of similar assistance before long. I do not think the scheme we have evolved or are evolving would have this result and I think it is a subject which should be discussed by men in the industry rather than by men like myself, though I have discussed it and believe that I am right.

Putting the thing in another way, I do not think the cheese industry can hold itself aloof from the other elements of the dairy industry and be entirely successful in the operation.

Resolutions Passed

Following further discussion of matters connected with the industry, the following resolutions were then passed, in each case with an unanimous vote;

Moved by George S. Cooke, seconded by W. S. Stiles:

(1) Resolved, that it would be in the interests of the cheese milk producers and the cheese trade in general to form an association of Provincial scope to be known as the United Cheese Boards of Ontario, embracing producers, from all cheese boards and assembling plants located in the Province of Ontario.—Carried.

Moved by W. E. Morrow, seconded by Fred Brayea:

(2) Resolved, that a uniform fee be adopted to be paid by each factory as a membership fee to cheese boards and that assembling plants be requested to form producers' organizations consisting of the salesmen of the factories using the plant for cheese purposes, and that these factories be assessed a small fee for membership in our united body.—Carried.

(3) Resolved, that in as far as possible we ask for the aid of buyers and commission houses to establish weighing and grading stations in connection with each cheese board or assembling plant, where such stations are not now in operation. This resolution was tabled.

(4) Resolved, that our cheese factories should make arrangements to pay for milk weekly in order that they may compete with creameries for prompt payment. Also, that a committee be appointed to draft a standard annual statement for the use of cheese factories. This resolution was tabled.

Moved by W. S. Styles, seconded by James Cook:

(5) Resolved, that we make a united effort to procure special freight rates to be effective until such time as the cheese market warrants a better return to the producer.—Carried.

Moved by C. H. Ketcheson, seconded by W. E. Morrow:

(6) Resolved, that we give our united endorsement to the butter fat tax now being advocated by the National Dairy Council and that we consider the equalization plan as a very forward step to balance the monetary value of the products produced by the different branches of the Dairy Industry.

Moved by Wm. McCreary, seconded by Ewart Bailey:

(7) Resolved, that this organization become a member of the National Dairy Council in order that cheese producers may have representation upon public questions pertaining to the industry.—Carried.

(8) Resolved, that it would be in the interests of all concerned if production and marketing interests would hold an annual convocation to discuss the trade in general and to try to restore some of the personal touch which seems to be completely lost since grading of cheese became effective. Differences of opinion could be ironed out, and new problems which are arising in a changed world could be forcibly dealt with.

(9) Resolved, that in the opinion of this meeting our grading laws could be amended to allow a softer type of cheese for our domestic market, without injury to the quality, and that in our opinion it would meet with more ready sale, as well as take less pounds of milk to make a pound of cheese.

Moved by M. Sine, seconded by S. Dies:

(10) Resolved, that we express our appreciation to our Federal and Provincial Governments for their great interest in the cheese situation and we implore them to make every possible effort to improve the condition of the trade especially that of the farmer producing the milk.—Carried.

Moved by Wm. McCreary, seconded by W. E. Morrow:

(11) Resolved, that we ask the cheesemakers' associations to concur in the foregoing resolutions, especially interesting to those makers who are owners of the plant in which they make; and that we ask the co-operation of all of them to try and interest their patrons in assisting us to save our cheese factories from further loss of patronage.—Carried.

Other resolution passed was:

Moved by Mr. Halliday and seconded by Mr. Stiles: "That in the opinion of this meeting the selling of cheese through the cheese factory patrons should not be brought under the Marketing Act without a majority vote of all the cheese patrons in the Province of Ontario.

Committee to Act

A committee representing the various cheese boards was then appointed to act as a pro tem executive until such time as provincial officials were selected to represent the United Cheese Factory Boards of Ontario.

A vote of thanks by those present was then expressed to the officials of the Belleville Cheese Board for their efficient work in preparing and arranging the meeting. A similar vote of appreciation was expressed to those visitors who had come to attend from outside points.

Pound Sterling Slumps Again

By George Hambleton
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 1—(CP Cable)—The pound sterling slumped again with no early prospect of stabilization in sight.

For the first time it touched 11 shillings, eightpence against the French franc. Against the United States dollar it dropped three cents below the old gold parity.

It's up to Boston Bruins now to do something about the dead-locked race for leadership in the National Hockey League's American division.

New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks both tried to break things up last night and had to accept defeat, leaving the stretch drive for first place still a wide open affair.

Hawks moved in to Detroit last night expecting to pick up two badly needed points from the downtrodden Red Wings. They found Johnny Sorrell, Larry Aurie, Ebbie Goodfellow and the rest of the boys working as though they were headed for the Stanley Cup and came away with the short end of a 5-1 count.

'Law' Fails to Work

Lester Patrick's Rangers figured that after their 3-1 defeat by Maroons Tuesday the law of averages or something should reverse the procedure last night. But the Montrealers knew no law and 10,000 fans in Madison Square Garden saw their hopes for the world championship beaten 5-2.

The beatings handed the Hawks and Rangers left the division standing unchanged with Rangers and Boston on top and Hawks only a point behind them. Boston get the first crack at taking the lead Saturday night when they play Maroons. Chicago have a game with Canadiens Sunday but the Rangers won't get back into action until Tuesday when they meet Bruins.

Montreal Canadiens made themselves almost a sure bet for the play offs by defeating St. Louis Eagles 4-2 in Montreal. New York Americans who trail them by seven points in the International division, can pile up only 46 points if they win all their eight remaining games. The Habitants have 10 contests in which to pick up 10 points that would assure them of a place in the extra-money series.

Detroiters' Surprise

Their chances of making the playoffs gone, Detroit players probably were thinking of next season's contracts when they gave everything they had against the world champions, outplaying and outskating the Chicagoans. They tied up an early goal in the first period and rammed four more past Lorne Chabot in the second.

Johnny Sorrell and Larry Aurie led the attack with two goals each and Eddie Wiseman got the other. Ebbie Goodfellow gave three assists and Sorrell two. Altogether the wings made 14 scoring points. Mush March got the Hawks' only goal.

Game Without Penalty

Maroons and Rangers equalled the performance of Toronto and Chicago last Saturday when they staged the New York game without a penalty.

The Montrealers got two goals in the first period just as they did in Montreal Tuesday but last night they added more in the final session. Bob Gracie scored two of the third period goals and Jimmy Ward got the other after Baldy Northcott and Herb Cain had given Tommy Gorman's team their first period lead.

Bill Cook, working the old Cook-Boucher-Cook passing attack, opened the third period with a goal and Cecil Dillon got the other with Murray Murdoch's help when the score stood 4-1.

The win improved whatever chances Maroons have to catch Toronto Leafs. With six games to play each, Leafs lead the Montreals by six points.

Although he had only 24 shots to stop, Wilf Cude, Canadien goalie, was the hero of the game at Montreal. Most of the drives Eagles sent his way were from close in and he saved the Habitants repeatedly.

Leroy Goldsworthy and Rogers Jenkins scored for Leo Dandurand's team in the first period. George Manthia slipped in a pass from brother Sylvio in the second and "Black Cat" Johnny Gagnon finished off the Canadien attack in the third. Frank Jerwa and Pete Kelly got the Eagle goals in the middle frame.

BluenoseGoes Barnstorming

Lunenburg, N.S., March 1—(CP)—England will see the Bluenose, champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleets, even if Gloucester's Gertrude L. Thebaud is not entered in a proposed trans-Atlantic schooner race.

That was decided at the annual meeting of Bluenose Schooner Company, Limited, shareholders, who figured their famous wind-ship would make more money on a barnstorming tour of the British Isles than on the Grand Banks.

Directors of the Company were instructed to interview Captain Ben Pine, one of the Thebaud owners, regarding the prospects of an ocean race.

HARMSWORTH CUP TO STAY IN U.S.

No Challenger Has Turned up to Contest Gar Wood

Detroit, March 1.— (AP)—The Harmsworth Trophy, symbol of International speed boat Supremacy, remains in the United States for another year without a challenge but 1936 may find England, Italy and a new crop of American racers seeking the famous plaque.

Gar Wood, who has beaten every Harmsworth Challenger since 1920, is the present holder of the Trophy but, J. Lee Barrett, secretary of the Yachtsman's Association of America, said he expected a revival of "formidable competition" next year.

As the deadline passed last night, Barrett said no one challenged Wood for the trophy he won in 1920 when he defeated Sir Mackay Edgar's Maple Leaf.

"I feel confident England will renew its challenge and in Italy they are experimenting with a 2,900 horsepower motor which we may see in the next challenge race," Barrett said regarding 1936.

CANUCKS SUFFER FIRST DEFEAT

Touring Winnipeg Monarchs Downed 2-0 at Wembley

LONDON, March 1.—(CP Cable) — Winnipeg Monarchs today had the first defeat in 41 hockey games in England and the continent chalked up on their record following a bruising battle with the heavyweight Wembley Lions that had the crowd in an uproar several times.

Scenes unprecedented in the short history of ice hockey here featured the game in which the Lions, most of whose men were Canadians, defeated the Winnipeg team by 2-0 before a crowd of 10,000 at the Wembley Arena.

While the visitors were trying to even up the court near the end two of the Lions were sent off, one for rough tactics and the other for arguing unduly with the referee about it.

Play was held up as excited spectators clambered over the barriers on to the ice and players of both teams clustered around the referee. The mix-up was so bad it looked as though the game would have to be abandoned but the referee eventually succeeded in getting the spectators to get back in their places and the players to resume the match.

The rest of the game was played to the accompaniment of shouts, cat-calls and boos.

'CHING' JOHNSON UP AND COMING

Veteran Ranger on Way To Complete Recovery

NEW YORK, March 1.—(CP)—Ivan "Ching" Johnson, the hockeyman they can not keep out of the playoffs.

The big rock of New York Ranger's defence was well on the way to complete recovery today from the last of the score of injuries that have threatened to puncture his lengthy career and it seemed the only thing necessary to see him in another National League playoffs was for Rangers to land a berth.

The man who is aptly called "The Star of a Thousand Stitches" still is wan after fighting the infection which set into a seemingly minor leg injury. He lost 20 pounds while holding down a hospital cot but he is mending superbly and was full of fight and hope in Madison Square Garden last night.

From the sidelines, he watched the Rangers go down by 5-2 before the passing of Montreal Maroons. The defeat in no wise dimmed his optimism. He said:

"That is just one game. We're stil helping lead the American section, aren't we?"

NAPANEE KIDS DOWN KINGSTON

Play 8-8 Tie, But Homesters Win Round 13-10

Napanee, March 1. — Battling a hectic 60 minutes of hockey Kingston tied Napanee in the second game of the O.H.A. junior playdowns last night, the score standing 8 to 8. Napanee wins the round by 13 to 10.

The teams met in Kingston on Monday night for the first game in the play-downs and surprised the home team in winning by the score of 5 to 2.

To make a third game necessary Kingston had to secure a margin of four goals which they were unable to do, and the locals feel confident of emerging victors in the next round with Peterborough.

In the game at Kingston the home team failed to show the form which they have displayed throughout the season and were outclassed. In tonight's game, however, they came back strongly, scoring five goals in the final period. Napanee suffered from penalties in this period, and at one time had only four men on the ice. The locals, undaunted by the five goals scored in quick succession by Kingston, came back with a rush to net three counters.

Napanee had the better of the play in the first two periods and were leading 5 to 3 when the final period opened. Penalties were frequent, Napanee having the majority. The largest crowd of the season was in attendance.

Kingston — Goal, Laird, defense, Smith, Mosley; centre, Catlin; wings, Foreman, Shea; subs., Gow, Goldup, Brennan, Hoget.

Napanee — Goal, Currin, defense Murphy, Richardson; centre, C. Jackson; wings, W. Jackson, Tompkins; subs., D. Leary, Gerow, Evans, G. Currin.

Referee — Bouncer Holway of Belleville.

Belleville 'Y' Cagers Stage Hectic Finish and Down Kingston Rivals Score 46-45

Farley Faulkner Sinks Winning Basket in Last Second of Play

UP IN E.O.B.A. RACE

Belleville Comes From Behind in Last Period Splurge

Staging a hectic last period finish the Belleville "Y" intermediate E.O.B.A. basketball team came from behind to down the Kingston "Y" sextette in Kingston by the score of 46 to 45 when Farley Faulkner, elongated Belleville centre player, tossed the winning basketball with exactly two seconds left before the full time whistle sounded. Faulkner took Atkins' passout along the right wall and sunk the winning basket from a difficult angle. The Morden-coached Quinte gang played stellar basketball, especially late in the last half after being 12 points down. The locals were unselfish throughout, every player entering into the contest to play their best game of the season.

The Belleville victory assures the local squad of second position, one game behind R.M.C., who have one stiff tussle yet to play. Information received in Kingston last night enlightening the Belleville squad to the fact that Queen's University team, during the Belleville-Queen's game, played illegible players, thus practically assuring the local "Y" aggregation of finishing at least a tie with R.M.C. for the top rung of the loop.

On two occasions during last night's tilt the Belleville "Y" sextette were 12 points behind, but unselfishness and determination gave the locals a last-second victory that was well earned. A mid-game lapse on the part of the local's however, placed them in a rather difficult position, which they managed to overcome in hectic style. Ernie Smith, local forward, led the scorers of the night with seven baskets. Faulkner with four "sinkers" and a foul shot followed while Scott, Burley, White and Atkins also turned in fine scoring efforts. McMahon, Thompson and Vivian were the big scoring threats for the Kingston aggregation, counting 33 of their teams' 45 points. The game was bitterly fought through with no less than 32 foul shots being awarded, twelve of which entered into the ultimate scoring. Belleville counted six scoring points during their 18 free hoists while Kingston bagged seven scoring points in 14 free tries.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Early this week President Max Swanston of the C.O.B.L. announced that the semi-annual meeting of the C.O.B.L. would be held on March 16th next, two weeks from tomorrow, most likely at Oshawa. The usual routine of league affairs and business will be thoroughly discussed and unless rumours are widely amiss the league may vote to enlarge its roster for the coming year. The Central League delegates to the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A., which is to be held in Kitchener this year, will be appointed also. The matter of the 1935 schedule and any necessary changes in the rules, bylaws and league constitution will also be tabled. There have been current rumours all around the circuit during the off season and the hot stove league has burned more fuel, quietly, than in some years past.

Of course, where there is smoke there usually is fire, but doubtless to say it will all dwindle down from a boil to a simmer before Prexy Swanston calls the meeting to order. Most likely that old bone of contention—the umpires—will occupy considerable debate as it is understood that a number of the veteran umpires of the C.O.B.L. have hung up their paraphernalia for good, at least that's their story and they're stuck with it.

"Say, what's doing in local baseball circles?" asked an old diamond lover yesterday, who seemed keenly interested in the welfare of senior baseball in Belleville. "Why, we're going to have a snappy senior team, better than the 1934 edition, we hope," was our reply. By this time our friend had decided that his opinions in the matter were well worth voicing and he opened up for a period of well over an hour. The sum and substance of his oration was the formation of a Belleville Baseball Association, to head and control all amateur baseball in the city, something like a governing body or tribunal. For instance the association would be made up of a body of three or five citizens, whose duty it would be to enter all local teams, senior, junior and intermediate into the provincial body, the O.B.A.A., for competition. Then at a regular meeting of the association or board, at which the citizens would be welcome, each franchise would be meted out to local industrial firms or interested organizations and they in turn to operate each club as a separate unit. By so doing the senior club could use intermediate and junior players without the customary release and vice versa.

"That's OK old timer," says we, "but who is going to name this committee?" "Quite simple, my lad, quite simple," came back the old lad as he nipped off another chaw of Napoleon. "You see, it's like this, all you have to do is make a canvass of industrial firms, business concerns and merchants and invite the heads of these places of business to an open meeting, at which all interested citizens would also be present. Then the matter could be more fully explained and once the influential men of the city became more closely acquainted with the inner workings and efforts of amateur baseball it would be an easy matter to pick out your tribunal or officers for a Belleville Baseball Association," pointed out the veteran sportsman in triumph. Incidently a similar plan has been in operation in Peterboro for many years, and has met with success, while in the city of Galt the identical same set-up, as presented by "old-timer" has been operated with marked success. The "Terriers" accomplishments in the O.B.A.A. over a period of years has proven this beyond a shadow of a doubt. Just whether the local baseball moguls would warm up to such a proposition or not is another matter, but, without fear of contradiction the proposal is undoubtedly the best set-up we have heard yet and would be well worth trying.

Last spring Vern Page, who at that time was in charge of athletics at the Albert College, introduced locally inter-city swimming and fancy diving meets with marked success in this city. So popular did this aquatic indoor sport become that local swimmers and divers approached the subject of resuming the activity, to Instructor Ralph Morden of the Y. M. C. A. Sensing the advantages of such an organization, Mr. Morden formed a swimming club within the realm of the "Y" and on Wednesday night this organization held its first meet. Over 25 enthusiastic swimmers and divers were on hand and held an evening of aquatic sports such as dashes, diving, etc., in the "Y" pool. Once the local club gets under way Instructor Morden intends to stage inter-city tournaments.

Phyllis Dewar, Moose Jaw's swimming ace, won't be able to compete for the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club for six months—a C.A.S.A. regulation. Meanwhile the British Empire champion will give exhibitions here and perhaps in the United States.

* * * * *

Mr. Ralph Morden's intermediate basketball team apparently plays a better brand of the cage game on the road than they do at home. Down in Kingston last night the "Y" hoopsters staged another of those Merriwell climaxes when Farley Faulkner sank the winning basket with exactly two seconds left to play to give the Mordenites a 46 to 45 verdict over the Kingston "Y" aggregation. The local victory assured the "Y" team of second place and due to the fact that Queens are known to have played senior intercollegiate players against Belleville, when the locals lost in Kingston, it is likely that that game will be ordered replayed and providing the locals win, they will cop the group honors. Without fear of contradiction the intermediate group of the E. O. B. A. has seen more thrilling finishes this season than any sport played in Eastern Ontario. Five of the local team's games have been decided in the last 20 seconds of play or less, two going overtime. At any rate last night's Belleville victory keeps the local "Y" squad in the running.

* * * * *

A goodly crowd of 'maple busters' enjoyed the second annual bowling tournament sponsored by the local V.O.N. at the "Y" alleys last night. Plenty of keen competition was seen before the prize-winners were announced long after 11 p.m.

Eagle Eye View of Sport In Many Branches

Curling's Greatest Asset Is Cheerful Sociability

The Macdonald Brier Trophy, emblematic of the Dominion championship in curling

The article on curling produced herewith was written by an ardent curler who for many years was an active Canadian newspaperman. The material was published in the 1935 Annual of the Ontario Curling Association and was reproduced from this volume.

"When winter muffles up his cloak,
And binds the mire like a rock,
Then to the loch the curlers flock
Wi' gleesome speed."

ROBERT BURNS

Ancient lore of the curling game contains many references to its origin and development and there is probably no other form of sport that has so interesting a background. Among the earliest is the tradition that Albyn Jove sent curling as a gift to "Auld Daddy Scotland", as he sat one day "bare leggit on a snowy brae," with icicles on his snout and crying:

"Oh for a cheery, heartsome game
To send through a' the soul a flame
Pitt birr and smeddum in the frame
An' set the blude a-dinling."

That the game in the olden days had a strong hold on the nobility as well as the common folk is shown by a curious old coat-of-arms in which curling is embodied in the family crest of Drummond of Carlowrie in the country of Linlithgow.

The design, while connecting ancient nobility with the game, also is interesting in view of the fact that it shows that in the early periods of play, the stone was flung without the aid of a handle.

The most ancient extant specimens of curling stones are preserved in the Macfarlane museum in Stirling. One goes back to a date anterior to the Battle of Flodden while the other appears to be still more ancient.

Played on Sunday

Before the middle of the seventeenth century curling was generally practised on Sundays, that sacred day being alloted for amusements of all kinds. But those unregenerate days seem to have passed at an early date as in the report of the general assembly for 1638, it is noted that George Graham, bishop of Orkney, was charged with "being a curler on the ice on the Sabbath day." There is no evidence, however, as to the penalty he drew, if indeed he were found guilty.

The early name of the sport was "channel-stane," presumably from the fact that the rocks were originally secured from the beds of running streams.

The first attempt toward organization in Scotland on a proper basis was made in 1834 when the "Amateur Curling Club of Scotland" was formed, but a current commentator later expressed its failure in the words: "This mutual admiration society came to nothing as might have been expected."

It led the way, however, in 1838 to the formation of the Grand Caledonian Club, the most important event in the history of curling. Its great development is familiar to all, its progress having been vastly stimulated by the addition of the title "royal" granted in 1843 by express permission.

The Game In Canada

In the development of the game in Canada bell-shaped irons were first used. The origin of the use of irons is said to have been the metal-rimmed hubs of the gun carriages into which iron handles were inserted. These primitive stones were used by officers of the garrison who soon had a blacksmith imitate them. The use of granites was checked by the fact that the col dat times became so intense that it cracked the stones and the irons game is still in vogue in the east.

In contrast to the use of irons was the practice in the Fergus club, which, founded in 1834, has celebrated its centenary last year. In the early days, when Hon. Adam Ferguson, founder of the settlement was president of the club, blocks of hardwood were used, usually of beech or maple, and these were sometimes loaded with lead so that the weight would be equalized. Iron handles were inserted in these blocks.

The association of whiskey with curling has apparently existed ever since the game originated. This was no doubt, due in the first place to the fact that whiskey was the national drink of Scotland and that as all games were in the open, a gentle stimulant was almost necessary. In the 1876 annual of the Ontario Curling Association appears an article by Wm. Roper, entitled "A Canadian Plea For Curling" reprinted from the Guelph Mercury from which is the following quotation:

> "Many people are under the impression that whiskey and curling go hand in hand. This was the case at one time but I rejoice to say that bottles of whiskey at the head of each rink is now the exception and not the rule."

Famed Toronto Rink

In the same issue of the annual, however, there appears a picture of the famed Toronto Red Jackets playing a game on the bay and the engraving showed a basket of bottles in plain view at one end of the rink. The growth of the temperance spirit was demonstrated, however, in the 1879 issue of the Annual in which the same engraving is shown but with the appearance of a black cloth discreetly drawn over the bottles.

The name of "Red Jackets" was applied to a Toronto Rink at the international bonspiel held in Buffalo in 1865 when 23 rinks from Canada defeated the representatives of the United States by a score of 658 to 478. This rink of Red Jackets at the height of its career, consisted of Thos. McGaw, lead; Major Gray, second; D. Walker, vice-skip; and Capt. Chas. Perry, skip, and the players continued in the same positions for about ten years (1868-1878). They had a wonderful record as they won no fewer than 75 matches in succession before they were defeated.

The curling game has one most characteristic feature and that is the sociability that it develops. Once on the ice all divisions and differences caused by rank, riches, religion politics or anything else may be said to disappear. It is very, very rarely the subject of betting although it frequently happened in the earlier days that rinks played for a stake in the form of a barrel of flour or some such object that could be turned over to the poor. This was the case at the opening of the first rink in Winnipeg on December 11th, 1876, when the old Scottish custom was observed by playing for a barrel of oatmeal which was donated to the Winnipeg General Hospital.

It Roamed Western Plains!

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

Edmonton, Alta., Mar. 1—Add to the galaxy of strange things that are the natural heritages of western Canadians, a skull of a large carnivorous dinosaur which is now on exhibition in the mineral museum of the University of Alberta.

The specimen was mounted by George F. Sternberg and his son, Charles, both of Kansas City, Mo., who are working on Alberta's campus for the Carnegie Foundation Fund. According to Dr. J. A. Allan of the university geological department, who discovered the skull in the Red Deer river valley, 100 miles south of Edmonton and the same distance from Calgary, the dinosaur lived 100,000,000 years ago.

The special laboratory on the campus fitted for Mr. Sternberg and his son presents a strange appearance. Disconnected vertebrae, odd-shaped bones and skulls are slowly being assembled into skeletons of the strange monsters that roamed western Canada's plains millions of years ago.

When dinosaurs and other strange reptiles inhabited the west, the plains tropical and semi-tropical flourished in a steaming hot climate. The west of the dinosaur period was similar to vegetation and climatic conditions of southern Mexico to-day, says Mr. Sternberg.

"The specimen I have just mounted represent the finest dinosaur skull in Canada," the expert told Central Press Canadian. "The beats that bore it is called gorgasaurus libratus, which means 'the fierce, easily balanced reptile.'"

A part of the skeleton was also present and if complete the animal would be about 25 feet long and over 12 feet high.

"He had a long tail that served to balance him as he walked or ran on his hind legs. The lower jaws are 34 inches long. The teeth are long sharp scimitar-shaped with serrated edges. We believe that the gorgasaurus was a carrion feeder, although he could undoubtedly kill any of the contemporary herbivorous dinosaurs. He lived about 100,000,000 years ago," related Mr. Sternberg.

The two Sternbergs are now working on the nearly complete duck-billed dinosaur which will also be placed on exhibition in Alberta's university.

BOSTON NEXT STOP

The Babe packs his bags and gets aboard, settled at last in a baseball role for 1935. His destination is announced—Boston. Thus Ruth, the long-term Yankee slugger, returns to his old haunts, but instead of the Red Sox he will wear the uniform of the Braves. Vice-president of the club, player and assistant-manager, that Ruth's job. The National League welcomes him with open arms.

LITTLE BEAVER—HEAP BIG POISON

Just a snarling redskin on the warpath—that's "Little Beaver" the full blooded Cherokee grapple champ., when he climbs into the padded square.

Although only 22 years old, he is a veteran man mauler, employing all the most punishing ring tactics, and can always be depended upon to get the fans to "hate and hiss him."

One of his appearances once started a riot, and before it was quelled both his arms were put out of commission, one by a knife stab, the other by a bullet.

While he has not as yet displayed all of the endurance qualities of Ed "Strangler" Lewis, the Ageless Iron Man of Wrestling, this redman from North Carolina has shown that he can "take it" as well as "dish it out."

He has had his eyes cut and his nose broken 23 times. Christened Clarence, he had to learn young to defend himself. This grunt and groan artist has developed a reputation for roughhouse performances that you would think would shock the ladies, yet his gouging, kicking, fouling, and biting seems to intrigue them, for Little Beaver has had to declare a ban on autographing for the fair sex.

To see this Indian in action conjures up a picture of his half-naked, painted, forebears, grappling for their lives with a bear or wolf, disputing the right of way to some waterhole.

"BATTERY FOR THE A'S, FOXX AND FOXX"

Connie Mack (CENTRE) has expectations of having the brothers Foxx, Jimmy (LEFT) and Sammy (RIGHT) as a battery capable of turning back pennant rushes of other contenders in American league this season. Jimmy has been shifted from first to the plate and Sammy added to the hurling staff. He's been shining in minors.

SMART CENTRE ONCE "KID LINE" PIVOT

EDDIE CONVEY

This smiling hockey star is Eddie Convey, first-string pivot for Windsor Bulldogs in International Hockey league and leading scorer of this loop. Convey has rung up 35 points in present campaign compiled by scoring 21 goals and handing over 12 assists. He has made a great comeback from his last season form when he registered only 12 points throughout the race. Convey, a Toronto boy, played amateur hockey with Toronto Marlboroughs and was the pivot man for Charlie Conacher and Harvey Jackson as first line for the Dukes.

PROSPECTIVE BIG-TIME PUCKCHASERS

Here are three stellar puck-chasers who this year made the jump from amateur to pro hockey ranks and who may very easily step up to the big time when another campaign rolls around. At present they are playing for Windsor Bulldogs of the International League and all going well. LEFT, Aubrey Webster, Kenora; CENTRE, Clarence Drouillard, Windsor; and RIGHT, "Duke" McDonald, Fort Frances. Webster and McDonald were last year with Moncton Hawks, the latter turning pro. only when the Allan Cup-holders disbanded recently. Drouillard was with last year's Canadian junior champion's, St. Michael's College.

Detroit Flag Hopes Wrapped in Boy From Arkansas

SCHOOLBOY ROWE

A young man who eight years ago had his mind set on becoming another Jack Dempsey holds in his right hand the hopes of the Detroit Tigers to win another American League pennant. If Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe has another good year Detroit can win the flag. If Rowe fails, the Tigers hardly can look for a pennant.

Rowe, 23 years old, 6 feet 4 1-2 inches tall and with 209 pounds on his bony, muscular frame, will begin the 1935 season with the psychological advantage of a world series under his belt. His manager, Mickey Cochrane, claims that the championship experience is just what the Schoolboy needed to overcome an inferiority complex that has held him back.

The Tigers' pennant-winning campaign of 1934 was Rowe's first year as a full-fledged major leaguer. He won 24 games and lost 8 and tied the American League record by winning 16 games in a row. In the world series he downed the Cardinals in 12 innings and might have won another game but for an injury to his pitching hand.

Rowe has everything a star should have, a great overhand fast ball and curve, side-arm cross-fire, change of pace and control. He has a fine temperament for a pitcher, being unruffled by errors. He does his best pitching in close games, the mark of a great competitor, winning six games last year by a single run, three by a 2 to 0 score and four others by a two-run margin. In addition, he can hit.

Not many all-round athletes star particularly at baseball. Back in 1925 at Hugh Goodwin school, in El Dorado, Ark., Rowe was determined to become heavyweight champion of the world and handled himself very creditably in the ring.

In addition, he won state-wide mention as an end on the football team, centre at basketball, interscholastic golf champion and high point track man. He caddied at the country club in his home town and equalled the course record at the Conway club, two under par, held also by Paul Runyan.

The Schoolboy got his start in baseball in 1927 and his nickname in a twilight league at El Dorado as pitcher for the Christian church team. He hurled a one-hit game against the Methodist team, the lone bingle being made by his former coach J. Alva Waddell. The local newspaper next day carried a line, "Coach Ruins No-Hit Game of Schoolboy." After that he was called Schoolboy regularly in the headlines and by the fans.

After pitching on semi-pro teams in Kansas and Louisiana he became the property of the Fort Smith Western Association team, a Detroit farm. From Port Smith he went to Beaumont, in the Texas League where he won 19 games and lost 7 in 1932. Then came his big chance.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Bareheaded in the blinding sun, he put her in a taxi. He stood, a crooked little smile on his sensitive lips, watching her drive off. She looked back to see his long gaunt figure silhouetted against grey stones, his hair a burning patch against the white blur of his face. Then she leaned back in the taxi, watching the funny little terraces, the dingy antique shops, the old courtyards and churches of the left Bank drop behind her.

The driver crossed the Seine and Faith was once more in the suave Paris of majestic squares and sweeping avenues; of sleek cars and ornamental women. This was what she had chosen, and she didn't regret it, she told herself defiantly.

Leon bobbed at the door of the apartment, his faithful old face anxious his hands busy in a pantomime she understood no more than his mumbled French. He seemed to be trying to convey to her that there was someone in the living room who had insisted on waiting for Madame.

She brushed by him along the hall. It was cool and smelt sweetly of flowers.

Someone sitting in the dim shaded living room rose and came forward with the narrow footed gait of a dancer.

Faith stopped short, her startled gaze on the dapper figure confronting her. Roger Welsh stood smiling in a pose that presented him as a fashion mannequin in a plate glass window.

"Didn't expect to see me here, did you?" Roger said enjoying her speechless surprise. "I was lunching at Laurent's today with a lady —" he smirked. "You were too absorbed in your grand party to notice humble tourists. But I asked the headwaiter a few questions—and the rest was easy."

"How dare you come here?" Faith gasped at last. Her mind swept back to that terrible taxi ride —she and Roger—after Agnes' suicide. It was he who had trapped her into running away from the police; who had frightened her with his horrible insinuations. She saw again that wan street corner where she had left him craven and venomous.

"Just a call on an old friend," Roger said softly. "You needn't worry, I'm well fixed. My friend is a widow and very generous." He minced and swaggered as he walked back to his chair, narrow and glistening in his new clothes.

"I don't want you calling on me." Faith couldn't control the loathing in her face.

He shrugged his shoulders at her tone. "I thought mutual congratulations were in order since we've both come up in the world." He sounded injured as if she had snubbed an old friend. "I've always admired you, Faith," he murmured padding back to her. "Let's forget the past and be friends. Cajolingly, he held out his hand.

But Faith felt back of his dark bold eyes the watching spirit of evil. She must be very careful not to rouse him.

"I can't ask you to stay," she said, pretending not to see his hand. "I'm very tired, and—I don't receive many people, Roger. My husband—"

"What he doesn't know needn't hurt him." Roger had dropped his polished manner.

"Please, Roger—" Faith tried flattering him with her helplessness. "As a —gentleman, you know how it is. I'm sure you'll go. If Hunter found you here—he wouldn't like it." Faith had touched the right note.

"Anything to please a lady," Roger said with odious gallantry. "But I'll be seeing you." His full lidded eyes drooped, his red lips pouted. "I'm at the Meurice, one of the swell hotels. Better give me a ring.' He waved with a flip of his fingers from the doorway, and cat-stepped into the hall where, Faith felt sure, Leon waited to show him out.

Faith sank weakly into a chair. While he was in Paris, Roger would be a constant menace to her. Wriggling his way into her life. Ready to lie about her if it suited his interests.

SOCIAL ERROR

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

When, the next morning, Hunter told Faith that they were going to the Chateau de Luze for a week's visit, she could hardly believe her good fortune. Through the night she had worried about Roger—what he might do, what he could do, to harm her. And now she would be out of his reach.

"I don't know why she wants me,' she said honestly to Hunter. "I was not very popular with your friends yesterday."

Hunter didn't contradict her, but there was a humorous quirk to his eyes as he murmured: "Yesterday doesn't count. You'll get used to us."

Faith glanced at him quickly. "I wish you'd get used to me,' she said.

He didn't answer, but there was a thoughtful expression on his face. He paced to the window and back, his dark head bent a little forward his hands in his pockets, his tall figure very smart this morning in English tweeds. He paused suddenly and patted her lightly on the shoulder.

"Poor child!" he said with such gentleness that tears started up in Faith's eyes.

But he had already turned aside with one of his abrupt changes in mood. "Leon will put you on the train tomorrow morning." he said. "I'm driving down. Have to meet someone—Dan Rider. He'll want to see you, by the way," he added. "He was an old pal of my father's."

Faith stared after him with quickened color as he strode from the room. It showed that he wasn't ashamed of her now if he introduced her to a friend of his father's. It made her feel really in the Barclay family. She would be happy this one week, anyway, she decided. Push all the shadows back. Forget Paul and Roger and Gertrude Stevens. She was young, beautiful. Why coudn't she make Hunter love her?

The Chateau de Luze of the Renaissance period lifted its round towers over the Indres River, in the Loire district. The pretty little village of de Luze nestled below, fringed by poplars and willows. The chateau stood among courtyards and parapets, an ornate grey pile with a wide approach. A stately record of de Luze courtiers, statesmen, soldiers, and de Luze beauties decorated its great halls and those lofty rooms which were in use. The Countess had her own apartments in one of the towers rendered habitable for summer months, and when—as she rarely did—she entertained, she threw open the left wing and reception rooms. In the vast kitchens a white-capped chef and his staff prepared delicacies on a princely scale. Lackeys in the black and yellow de Luze livery paraded the huge chambers, and women from the de Luze village attended to the suites in which the guests were lodged.

An enchantment was laid over Faith as she entered these ancient splendors —a stage set for a very modern party of people who, like quicksilver, slid through her grasp. A gay band of men and women banded together by a hundred small intimacies of word and gesture.

To her surprise and frank delight the first person to greet Faith after Madame de Luze was Sacha de Markoff, bigger and blonder than ever in white tennis flannels.

"I knew you were coming, so I invited myself," he bent to whisper, with a flash of his teeth.

Faces and names were whirling in the bright air of the terrace where they were all having tea when Faith arrived. She recognized the old gentleman with the red rosette and monocle who had set at her right at Laurent's. The General de Chabrier, his name was. He and his wife, a plump, white-haired woman, who was engaged on an intricate embroidery, were the only elderly guests there.

"And Mrs. Duane-Smith," the Countess graciously completed her round of the circle.

De Markoff's reckless eyes, full of mischief, met Faith's. Mrs. Duane-Smith was the haughty woman who had monopolized him on the boat.

Faith decided later that this pale and tenacious lady recognized her, for from the start Mrs. Duane-Smith's manner was arrogant and hostile. Her fierce possessive attitude toward the Russian was almost pathetic since she had so obviously lost his interest. Faith overheard the other women talking about it after dinner.

"Poor Frances," Mrs. Pat Dawtrey, a vivacious brunette, observed. "she was born divorced, and she'll die an old maid."

Madame de Luze raised her beautiful hand to the folds of her coiffure, narrowed and pulled forward to the thin bridge of her nose. "An old maid with alimony," she said drily, and they all laughed.

There was carelessness in their laughter, and in the brittle sweetness they opposed to Faith's efforts to please them. She was glad that Hunter wasn't there that first evening to see her sitting by herself, vaguely turning the pages of a book in chivalry the old General had recommended at dinner, while the others played bridge.

But when, with a murmured excuse even Madame de Luze was too absorbed to notice, Faith slipped off to bed, de Markoff managed to follow her through tapestried halls to the arched entrance of the guest wing.

A blond, laughing giant, he barred her path. "Why run away?"

Faith couldn't help laughing back at him. "Because I'm a silly and don't play bridge,' she said. "You'd better not stay here. Someone will miss you."

He shrugged his shoulders, stroking his short yellow mustache. "You are not a silly," he said in his caressing Russian gutturals. "But the women will never love you."

"But I want them to," Faith cried impulsively.

"Then do not be too nice to them," said de Markoff ."I will tell you a secret, little dove. When I wish to please a pretty woman, I do her favors. But when you wish to please another woman, let her do you favors." He leaned nearer, imps dancing in his eyes. "Ask her advice on private things of love and clothes."

Faith wrinkled her delicate brows. "Why are you all so cynical?"

"Sacha—Sacha!" Mrs. Duane-Smith appeared at the other end of the long hall, her voice thinly raised through the arched stone spaces. "We're waiting for you."

De Markoff made a grimace. Then he lifted Faith's hand to his lips, leaving her to ponder on how complicated everything was.

The next day Hunter and Mr. Dan Rider arrived. Faith liked Mr. Rider at once. There was a saneness, a soundness about this white-haired, red-cheeked man, with his slightly senatorial air and bulky waistline.

"So this is Faith!" He grasped both her hands, his shrewd eyes twinkling, probing through tortoise shell glasses.

She looked like a mere slip of a girl today in a fine white linen, a pink rose at her belt, a large, floppy hat on her shining hair. Her clear gaze met his trustingly. "I thought I'd be scared of you," she said.

A hearty laugh rumbled from Mr. Rider's generous throat. He turned to Hunter, who stood rather stiffly to one side. "She's a grand girl, my lad," he said. And, with an old-fashioned courtesy offering his arm to Faith, he marched past flanking lackeys, into the chateau. He was leaving the following morning, he told Faith.

"I'm in the automobile business, and it keeps me pretty busy, but I had to see you, my dear. Though I didn't think Hunter would make any mistake." There was an odd, dry inflection to his voice. He peered around the great living room where with light chatter and laughter the other women of the party had gathered about Hunter.

"You're not a society girl, are you?" Mr. Rider's surprisingly youthful eyes rested again upon Faith, who shook her head.

"Thank Heaven for that," he said heartily. "You may make something of Hunter yet, then, if you don't let 'em spoil you."

"He's already made, isn't he?" Faith was watching Hunter as the Count de Markoff and Frances Duane-Smith strolled in from the terrace. Hunter's nod in their direction was casual and good-humored enough. He would never betray any personal distaste for a fellow guest. All the same, Faith felt relieved.

"He's been an idler since the war," Mr. Rider retorted with sudden testiness. At Faith's startled look, he patted her hand. "Mark my words, my child, too much money does as much mischief as too little."

Faith had never thought of Hunter as an idler. Later in the evening she watched him across the reflectory table in the panelled dining hall. His dark, handsome head was bent sleekly toward Madame de Luze whose thin red lips uttered amusing gossip. Candles in tall silver candelabras shone upon a red brocade strip and yellow roses, among the glitter of crystal glasses filled with wine. Further down the table, Mr. Rider, rosy in his dinner clothes, answered old Madame la Generale's questions on America. De Markoff tossed off champagne with a Russian's thirst.

Tony Dexter, a young Englishman fresh from Oxford, on Faith's right, talked of punting on the Thames and cricket, while he attacked his small bird—an ortolan stuffed with olives.

Why, it was true, Faith thought. None of these charming people worked at anything except enjoying themselves. And they were Hunter's world. His life! Well, he was right, she decided. When you knew the hard, grim side of life as she did, it was wonderful to learn the art of ease, the luxury and beauty of what Mr. Rider too severely called idleness.

For instants I mite say that the ferst indecribable juxtaposition of this impeccable creation with the gustatory apparatus is more than sufficient to send the digestive juices into swooning gambols of delirious exstacy, yet even when I've said that I've said comparatively nothing, he said, and ma said, You've been saying nothing for ten minnits and unless you dont mind womanly screems you'll tell me wether this is a good pie or not.

Good? pop said. It's the best darn pie I ever gobbled down with unseemly haste so I could ask for a 2nd helping, am I rite, Benny? he said, and I said, Sure, gosh. It's swell.

That's all I wanted to know, ma said.

And she gave us both 2nd helpings and me a 3rd by special request.

CAPT. KETCHESON WIDELY MOURNED

Frankford Resident Took Great Interest in Affairs of Community

The funeral of Capt. E. E. Ketcheson which is to take place at Frankford this Friday afternoon will be largely attended by representatives of the Church, Military, Fraternal and Civic bodies as well as by a large number of citizens in general. Military honors will be accorded the late Capt. Ketcheson, who served overseas in the Great War and was seriously wounded. The veterans will attend in a body under the command of Col. Roscoe Vandervater D.S.O. and Bar; V.D.; and the funeral procession will proceed from his late residence to Trinity Church, Frankford, where the Burial Office of the Church of England will be conducted by the Rev. A. S. McConnell, rector of Stirling and Frankford. The Rt. Rev. Dr. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, will be present at the service, also the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas', Belleville; the Rev. B. F. Byers, Belleville, former rector of Stirling and Frankford; the Rev. T. H. H. Hall, Belleville; the Rev. Arthur Smith, rector of St. George's church, Trenton and the Rev. Rural Dean, Caldwell of Marmora.

In the death of Capt. Ketcheson the village of Frankford and the County of Hastings has lost a good citizen; a man of high moral character, public spirited, generous, friendly and a friend to many. His passing has cast a gloom of sadness over the village where he lived and for a long time to come he will be sadly missed. Since the first of this year he had been confined to his bed with heart trouble and on Wednesday evening he passed away.

The late Capt. Ketcheson was born in Sidney township 41 years ago, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ketcheson of Sidney township. For about fifteen years he had held the position of post master in Frankford and he filled that office efficiently and to the satisfaction of all residents of the village and district.

He was a devout member of the Church of England and was very active in work in connection with Trinity Church, Frankford. For many years he held the office of People's Warden in the parish and was a leader in the Young People's Association. It was largely through his efforts that the fine Church Hall was erected in the parish. He was also President of the Laymen's Association of the Joint Deaneries of Hastings and Prince Edward. He was a member of the Orange Order; Past Master of Franc Lodge, No. 127, A.F. and A.M. and chairman of the Public Library Board.

Surviving to mourn his passing are his widow, formerly, Miss Gladys Clarke, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ketcheson; two sisters, Mrs. M. McLaren of Sidney Township: Mrs. Edith Van Allen of Sidney Township and one brother, Mr. Walter Ketcheson of Trenton.

CRIB CONSTRUCTION IS NEAR COMPLETION

Workers Are Complimented For Their Skill by Commissioners

An example of almost perfect crib construction is being viewed this week by residents of the city following the placement of the last of the heavy structures in the harbor as part of the new dock extension. Favored by ideal weather conditions the work of constructing and placing the heavy cribs which has been carried on for the past several weeks has now reached the last stage. Shaped to the contour of the bottom of the harbor, each crib as it has been placed fitted perfectly with the neighboring one. Many compliments have been given the workers by members of the Belleville Harbor Commission or the manner and speed with which the work has been carried on.

40TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY IS OBSERVED

Rawdon—On Tuesday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Maybee, Wellman's was the scene of a happy gathering when over forty friends, members of Wellman's Young People's Society and The Daisy Mission Band assembled at their home to celebrate with Mr. and Mrs. Maybee their 40th wedding anniversary which took place on February 27th., 1895, the bride being Miss Annie Rowe.

The bride and groom were given honored seats for the occasion and Rev. F. G. Joblin, pastor of the Rawdon circuit was master of ceremonies. The programme opened with the singing of "Glory to God for His Sunshine is Free" and Mr. H. V. Hoover offered a gracious prayer.

Miss Florence Dunham read the Bible lesson followed by "Jesus Saves". Miss Priscilla Cook told a missionary story and the Misses Mina and Lucille Dracup contributed a pleasing duet.

Miss Grace Drayman delighted with a reading and Master Everett Maybee gave a selection of music on the accordian. Mr. Stewart Hoover rendered a solo and the company joined in "Blest be the Tie that Binds".

Miss Dorothy Dunham staged an amusing contest and several games sponsored by league members were enjoyed.

The collection for missionary purposes was gathered by two members of the Mission band Masters Gerald Johnson and Charlie Maybee.

A bountiful lunch was then served, the center of attraction being a lovely tiered anniversary cake donated by their daughter Mrs. Percy Coutts (nee Elsie Maybee) of Toronto.

The cake was cut by a close neighbor and the oldest person present in the person of Mrs. Hubbard Sine and everyone enjoyed a slice.

At this juncture short addresses were given by Miss Grace Dayman, president of the Y. P. S. Miss Carlyn Johnson on behalf of the Mission Band, Rev. Joblin on behalf of the Church, Messrs. H. V. Hoover on behalf of the quarterly Board, Miss Priscilla Cowl and Mrs. Roy. Thrasher on behalf of the friends. All these addresses tendered deepest appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Maybee for offering their home for this unique occasion and wishing them many more years of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Maybee both suitably replied to all these kind words and the company joined in "God be with You Till We Meet Again".

At a late hour the gathering dispersed and everyone thoroughly enjoyed this happy celebration with such a fine host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Reid and baby son were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Murney Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walsh of Toronto spent the week-end with her mother Mrs. Sarah McKeown and brother Mr. Edgar McKeown and family. Mrs. McKeown returned to Toronto with her daughter for a holiday.

Miss Leatha Hoover is spending a couple of weeks with friends at Rylestone.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene King of Stirling moved on Wednesday to the apartment of Mr. George Maybee at Wellmans.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey and Miss Isobel Turner were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Heath.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott visited Mr. and Mrs. Murney Scott on Saturday evening.

Mrs. Roy Thrasher of Mount Pleasant is spending this week with Mrs. Edith Sharp at Wellman.

RINTELEN PLEADS NOT GUILTY AT PUTSCH TRIAL

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Saint John, N.B., March 2 (CP)—Little Joseph MacKinnon, four, pleaded with his mother to allow him to go out and play. She consented warning him to be careful of cars. A few minutes later his body was carried into the house crushed under the wheels of a truck. The driver was exonerated at an inquest last night.

Edinburgh, Scotland, March 2 (CP)—Amazing incidents of a St. Louis, Missouri, woman's knowledge of medieval England as divulged by her subconscious mind were reported at a meeting of the Edinburgh Psychic College.

The American woman, known only as Mrs. Curran, was described by Mrs. Hewat M'Kenzie of London as a "living sensitive."

"She has been the subject of research by the most distinguished psychologists," said Mrs. M'Kenzie. "Her knowledge of medieval England as dictated by her mediumship, is almost uncanny.

"Brilliant conversations, epigrams, proverbs, poetry and repartee — in a style reminiscent of Shakespeare or Marlow yet with indications of Saxon speech even before their time-flow from her."

• • • •

London, March 2 (CP)—For the first time on record a chimpanzee has been born in captivity in London.

The birth caused a sensation at the London zoo, famous for its chimpanzee tea parties. "Boo Boo" the mother came to the zoo from abroad in 1927. She was so small that she could not join in the tea party and had to amuse herself on the floor while the larger chimps gorged happily at the table.

Elden, Me., March 2 (CP) — Imagine Mrs. Charles [illegible] surprise when her house started to tip over and dishes crashed to the floor.

It wasn't an earthquake.

Her husband had started the engine of his dump truck in the basement garage, not realizing the hoisting apparatus was in gear. The house was lifted six inches off its foundation.

• • • •

Stephenville, Tex., March 2 — (CP)—Eggs are getting higher here. Farmer Mark Hilburn reported it yesterday.

He noticed one of his hens scolding and fluttering around a tall tree, while a hawk sailored about over it.

He also noticed a squirrel's nest high in the tree. He climbed the tree and found five hen's eggs.

New York, March 2 (CP)—A 15-pound chunk of ice fell from Manhattan Bridge Friday and killed Henry Wigger, 34, of Brooklyn who was walking under the anchorage in South Street. His skull was crushed by the impact of the ice which dropped an estimated distance of 115 feet.

• • • •

San Diego, Calif., March 2 — (CP)—Officers said a 50-year-old grandmother, holding a toy pistol in one hand and a hungry baby in the other, robbed a grocery store last night and made off with a can of milk and six oranges. Police traced Mrs. Louise Knapp to her home. R. L. Perkins, store manager, declined to prosecute and permitted the woman to keep the groceries.

OFFICER REDUCED

Captain H. R. Sawbridge stands relieved of his command of H.M.S. Renown, and reduced to half pay, as result of his conviction of negligence in connection with crash of the British warship with another. He was formerly naval attache at Washington.

RINTELEN DENIES PLOT CONSPIRACY TO BE CHANCELLOR

Hesitation in Showing Loyalty is Cited Against Accused

ALL EYES ON TRIAL

Life Imprisonment is Heaviest Penalty if Convicted

By WADE WERNER

Vienna, March 2—(AP)— "King Anton" Rintelen, former Austrian Minister to Rome, pleaded not guilty today to charges of complicity in the Putsch last July which was to have made him Chancellor.

The Prosecuting Attorney described Rintelen who looked very old and frail as an extraordinarily clever and cautious intriguer who, however, fel victim to his own excessive caution—"He hesitated till he was lost."

The very fact he hesitated to show his loyalty to the government when the Federal Chancellory was occupied by the Putschers was cited as important evidence against Rintelen.

All Austria was vitally interested in whether the trial will at last unmask the forces behind the Nazi Putsch.

Hesitated Too Long?

After last night's Nazi demonstrations in which police arrested 150 persons, the Army took elaborate precautions against disorders. The trial was held amidst bayonets and machine guns.

Life imprisonment is the heaviest penalty which may be imposed if Rintelen is convicted.

The accused was Minister to Italy at the time of the Putsch but at the moment was in a Vienna hotel. The Nazis announced over a captured government radio Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss had resigned and Rintelen had taken his place. Rintelen failed to appear and latter was arrested.

Rintelen carefully avoided any direct connection with the Putchers, the prosecuting attorney declared, but he clearly showed his guilt by his behavior under the strain.

"The fact he is a Catholic and nevertheless attempted suicide while under arrest showed he was acutely conscious of his guilt," he said.

The former Minister ,escorted into the courtroom by policemen, was leaning heavily on his cane. His left arm—still paralyzed as an aftermath of a bullet wound— was hanging in a black sling.

CHINESE SOLDIERS REPORT SLAYING

State Missionary Killed By Communists And Wife Not Found

Sian, Shensi Province, China, March 2 (AP)—Slaying by communists of the Rev. S. C. Frenchan, missing inland mission worker, was reported by Chinese soldiers today and missionary searchers gave up hope,of finding his young wife, London girl, who set out a week ago on foot from Nankiang.

The .death of Frenchan, young Australian, was reported by troops from Nankiang. The reports were confirmed by two British missionaries who set out to search for Mrs. Frenchan.

The two Englishmen arrived at Fenghsien, Western Shensi, after a fruitless search in the jagged mountain areas of Central China. They had found no trace of the young wife, who was an expectant mother.

RE-ARREST YOUNG CANADIAN WHO CAUSED FINANCIAL SENSATION IN 1928

On a warrant issued in Toronto, Herbert John Nelles Neville has been arrested in Windsor on a charge of theft dating back to 1926. At that time Neville, a stock broker and son of a Georgetown minister, was prominent in international financial and social circles. During the period 1926-28, he purchased palatial homes in Toronto and Bobcaygeon, Ontario, fine furniture, motor launches, and lived, it has been revealed in an extravagant manner. He was described at the time as a young man "who talked millions and lived thousands". It is also reported that Scotland Yard had compiled one of the most remarkable dossiers ever written about any man at that office. While he flourished, it is stated he "lived like Croesus". The crash came in 1928 and all of Neville's fine belongings were sold at public auction to recoup loses of his clients. Neville was arrested again in Windsor as he descended from a Chicago train following his departure from Joliet penitentiary, where it is reported, he has spent the last five years. Layout shows Neville, inset, his former home and (LEFT) his daughter (from photo taken in 1928) who was left on a doorstep in Windsor, England, but who has since been returned to her mother, said to be residing in the United States.

HEPBURN SPEAKS FOR CANDIDATE

By-Election in Nipissing to be Held on Monday

NORTH BAY, Ont., March 2— (CP)—The people of Ontario have been shackled by the Gatineau contracts of the former administration, and the present administration is seeking a means of removing the shackles, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn told the electors of Nipissing riding at the final rally in behalf of the Liberal candidate, J. Harry Marceau.

"We are paying for power we don't need on that contract, and will continue to do so for the next 40 years unless some steps are taken to remedy the situation," the Premier declared here last night. "And I am able to tell you that the Cabinet now has such steps under consideration, and they will be announced in due time."

The money, Premier Hepburn declared, is going to subsidize Quebec Mills, with the result the Northern Ontario Paper Mills are now closed.

The Premier said he admitted there might have been some grounds for criticism of the Liquor Control Act, when the present beverage room regulations were introduced, but at present, he said, he believed it was operating to the satisfaction of all clear-thinking people.

TO INVESTIGATE KIDNAP REPORTS

German Consul General Told Four Men Plotted Crime

New York, March 2.—(AP)—Dr. Hans Borchers, German Consul General, is investigating reports from the Consul General in Boston which purport to give "additional information" about the Lindbergh kidnapping.

Reports from Boston were two men had told the Consul General there four persons plotted the kidnapping in that city. The Boston Post said a complete report had been sent to Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Berlin. The newspaper said no move would be made in behalf of Bruno Hauptmann, convicted of the kidnap-killing, until after thorough investigation.

"WES" LACKEY DIES

Kingston, Ont., March 2 (CP)—Wesley Lackey, former middle wing for Queen's University senior intercollegiate rugby team, graduating three years ago, died in Kingston General Hospital today following slight operation.

He was a native of Toronto and came to Queen's some eight years ago. For several years he was on the tricolor senior team and was noted as one of the most fearless line plungers in the intercollegiate.

Phantom Sniper Endangers Lives of Edmonton Citizens

Rifleman Has Fired Into Several Homes And Motor Cars

MAY FIND MANIAC

Bullet Passes Through Hair of Woman Walking Along Street

Edmonton, Mar. 2 (CP)—A phantom sniper who struck twice this week, the fifth and sixth times in six weeks, was the object of intensive search throughout the city today. Police sought a rifleman who has fired into two homes, 1 nto the city market building, into a car, past a woman's head as she walked on the street, and past a herder near the city limits.

Police said they probably would find, at the end of their search, someone with an unsound mind.

This week the sniper fired into the car of C. E. Lundy as he drove on 109 street and fired past the head of a woman as she walked Wednesday night on 102 avenue.

The woman told officers a bullet brushed by her head, actually touching her hair, and she heard the "zing" of the lead. She heard a noise in the lane as she walked by, and, as she turned her head, the bullet was fired, she said.

The sniper first struck Jan. 15 when he fired into a bedroom in the home of C. Tourigny, and on Jan. 23 he sent a bullet crashing through a window in the city market building.

H. Kirkwood, assistant caretaker, had just passed the window when the bullet shattered the glass.

Two nights later, two .22 rifle bullets crashed into a porchway at the home of Henry Hollinger. Then the sniper was inactive until Feb. 15 when a bullet screamed past John Isaac as he stood at a street corner.

FRANCE TO INVESTIGATE

Paris, March 2 (AP)—Marcel Regnier, Minister of the Interior, left for Algeria today to investigate reports Germany is attempting to fan Arab discontent resulting from the depression into an anti-French campaign.

Roebuck Praised For Contribution To House Debate

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced today the matter of Hydro Power purchase contracts from Quebec companies will be discussed today by the cabinet but he did not know whether a pronouncement would be made afterwards. Question of the illegality of the contracts, stressed by Attorney General A. W. Roebuck in the legislature yesterday has not yet been discussed by cabinet, the Premier said.

"Mr. Roebuck expressed his view as an eminent counsel," Mr. Hepburn continued, but he indicated the principle of cabinet solidarity and observance of Mr. Roebuck's advice as Attorney General would be kept in mind.

"I want to give Mr. Roebuck credit for the finest contribution made to a debate in the Provincial Legislature. I hear nothing but favorable comment from people all over the Province. They wanted to know the truth about Hydro and now they know it."

"Did you notice the bond market dropped?" he was asked.

"That was to be expected," Mr. Hepburn replied.

"We are more concerned about Hydro users than bondholders," he went on. "It is unfortunate so many of the bonds are held by innocent investors."

CYCLIST STRUCK BY HIT-RUN CAR

Hamilton Man Died on Way to The Hospital

Hamilton, Ont., March 2 (CP)—The body of Luke Itchuk of Hamilton, lay at the general hospital today while police sought the motorist who struck him down last night and left him to die on the street-car tracks.

The unconscious form of the injured man was found on the tracks by a motorist who halted his car just in time to avoid running over the prostrate body.

A bicycle lay where it had been hurled by the impact when Iltchuk had been struck. His injuries were so grave he died on being admitted to the hospital.

PROMOTER DIES

Windsor, Ont., March 2 (CP)—Fred W. Martin, promoter of the Windsor-Detroit Tunnel, died at the Grace Hospital last night. Mr. Martin had been ill for several months in the hospital which he had helped to build.

FOUR PERSONS DIE ON ONT. HIGHWAYS

Toll of Traffic Accidents Unusually Heavy in Past 24 Hours

(By the Canadian Press)

Four persons one a seven-year-old boy were dead today and eight persons were injured, two of them suffering serious hurts, as a result of mishaps on Ontario highways last night.

Dave Sabbath of Montreal, a Queen's University student, was killed when the automobile in which he was riding smashed into the side of a westbound Canadian National Railways flyer, at a crossing in Cobourg. A companion, Hyman Levine, also of Montreal, suffered a fractured skull and other injuries. The driver of the car, Alex. Grant, received a fracture of one arm and leg injuries.

At St. Davids, Ont., just north of Niagara Falls, John Laux, Buffalo cab driver, was killed almost instantly and five St. Catharines lacrosse players were injured when Laux' taxi in which they were riding sideswiped a truck driven by Henry Nelson, St. Catharines.

When seven-year-old Harold Higgins stepped out from between two parked cars directly in front of Emmerson Carroll's automobile on Chatham Street, he was killed almost instantly.

A motorist who did not stop was blamed for the death of Luke Iltchuk the victim was found unconscious lying across street-car tracks in Hamilton with the bicycle he was riding hurled to one side. He succumbed on admittance to hospital.

Belleville Man Is Badly Hurt

Serious head injuries were suffered by William Lucas, 35, of Belleville when his automobile swerved on the highway east of Cobourg and crashed into a Hydro pole. Examination indicated he might have a skull fracture.

Shakespeare Folios Are Offered For Sale

LONDON, March 2: — (AP) —A rare set of the first four folio editions of Shakespeare's plays, printed 300 years ago, were scheduled today to be put up for auction March fifth.

Last year a similar group of folios were sold to Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, Philadelphia collector, for $85,750.

The books up for auction are owned by the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The books are uniformly bound in blue leather with panelled sides.

McGILL PROFESSOR HONORED

Montreal, March 2 (CP)—Word was received here today from England of the selection of Dr. J. S. Foster, Professor of Physics at McGill University here, for election to the Royal Society of London, next month, the highest honor that can be conferred on a British physicist.

Jas. A. Roy Passes at 91; Brewer, Philanthropist And Sportsman Mourned

Proprietor of Well-Known Roy's Brewery For 45 Years

NATIVE OF BELLEVILLE

Noted Figure in City's Life For Three Generations

James Alexander Roy, native and lifelong citizen of Belleville and proprietor of the Roy brewery here for many years, died early today at his home, 245 Victoria Ave. Though he had been for some time confined to the house, his mind preserved all the keenness which had marked him throughout his long life.

"The grand old gentleman," as he was known in Belleville and 'Jimmy' Roy' as he was known to one and all, was in his ninety-first year. Every birthday he observed on the nineteenth day of December brought congratulations from far and near in recent years, so wide was the esteem for this fine character whose life was marked by industry, friendships and philanthropy.

Born on December 19th, 1844, on North Park Street, Belleville, in the old home just north of the old Albert College, James A. Roy lived all the days of his upright and charitable life in this city of his birth. He was proud of his Scottish ancestry in which the strains of Highlander and Lowlander mingled, his father, William Roy being a native of Perthshire and his mother, Jessie Helm Roy of Roxburghshire on the English border. Mr. Roy's parents were married in Belleville.

Place of Residence

After residence as a child on College Hill, he lived for a number of years in a white frame house on East Moira Street. There he lived for 45 years and in 1888 he removed to Hotel Street, now Victoria Ave.

Fountain of information as he was regarding Belleville's past, his death removes a landmark which linked the oldtime Belleville to the city of today with its many intervening changes. His knowledge was particularly accurate as it was built on first hand impressions and information, recollections of events and scenes of the long ago, recalled by a mind which never lost its interest and its zest in every human incident. As a man of over ninety years, the events of the sixties and seventies were particularly fresh and he loved nothing more than to find one for whom he could lift the curtain on the long-away past. He was a raconteur with a very impressive style and concrete, striking diction, so that his accounts of older days continued to live in the minds of his hearers. When he told of the past he always kept himself in the background—that is what made his company so pleasant though his personality shone thru' every word he said and every act he performed.

NOT TO DIE FOR 'MERCY MURDER'

Mother Given Freedom After Killing Imbecile Son

Manchester, England, March 2—(AP)—Mrs. May Brownhill, 62-year-old woman who was condemned to die for the "mercy murder" of her imbecile son, was released today from Strangeways Prison.

Mrs. Brownhill was sentenced December 1 to be hanged. A jury after five minutes deliberation found her guilty and recommended she be shown mercy. The Judge ignored the recommendation but the jury's suggestion was caught up by sympathetic persons from all over the British Isles.

George Lansbury, prominent Laborite, was one of those who was most insistent mercy should be shown in the case. Two days after sentence was passed the home office informed Lansbury there would be a reprieve.

The frail Leeds woman testified she gave her son Denis 100 sedative tablets and gas because she feared an operation she faced might be fatal and deprive the helpless son of her attention. She had nursed him for 30 years.

After sentence was passed it was learned the elderly woman would have to undergo another operation before she can be restored to health.

FRENCH SEIZE SMUGGLED GUNS

Arms Were Same as Used by Assassin of King Alexander

Lille, France, March 2 (AP) —Police today suspected an international band of smuggling guns into France after the seizure of a quantity of contraband arms including sub-machine guns on the Belgian frontier.

"Greatest importance" was attached to the seizure of nine sub-machine guns, a large automatic pistol, a repeating carbine and 4,300 cartridges, by customs officials at Baisieux.

It was pointed out the repeating guns were similar to the one used in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseille.

City and District News

TRANSIENT AVERAGE FOR MONTH IS TEN

An average of nearly ten transients an night slumbered in the cell block at the police station during the month of February as statistics show that 277 transients were afforded warm sleeping quarters by the local police during the 28 nights last month.

Further statistics, kept by the police department, show that on last night of the month Feb. 28th., 15 transients slept in warm bed at the police station, the largest number to be afforded a night's lodging on any one night, except on the 20th of February, when an equal number, fifteen, were also registered at the sergeant's desk. The fewest to put in an appearance in quest of warm sleeping quarters for the night put in an appearance on the night of Sunday February 10th., when only two weary travellers wended their way to the police station. On the following night, Monday, February 11th., only three put in an appearance, however. Generally speaking the number hovered slightly above the ten-mark to give an average of slightly below ten per night for the month.

HEAVIEST FOG OF SEASON SEEN

The heaviest fog of the season, which settled down over the district in a thick curtain of heavy fog early this morning brought almost a complete halt of traffic on roads and highways for hours. Scores of motor trucks and heavy transports crawled into the city with lights full on, and parked through the downtown section until the opaque mist had cleared. Just before noon today, although a thick haze still hung over the section, the heavy fog had cleared and resumption of ordinary traffic was noted.

CAPT A. S. QUICK PROMOTED TO MAJOR

Military district orders for this section today contains notice of the following promotions in the Argyl Light Infantry.

To be Major Paymaster, Captain A. S. Quick. To be Captain, Lt. A. B. Sprague.

JAMES WALDEN IS A DELGATE

Named as a delegate from this city, Mr. James Walden, president of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, left the city last evening for Toronto, where he will attend the annual convention of the Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans. The convention is being held at the Royal York Hotel.

CUSTOMS DOWN FROM YEAR AGO

Customs collections at the local port were fewer during the past month of February than during the same month one year ago. During February, 1935 a total of $38,893.11 was collected. This contrasts with a total of $63,526.29 for the month of February, 1934. During January, 1935, total collections reached $60,801.32.

POLICE COURT

Two intoxicants and seventeen transients occupied the cell block at the police station last night. The transients were allowed their freedom this morning but the 'drunks' were arraigned in the local police court this morning.

John "Curly" Scholes, an old offender in the annals of local police court, pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication, when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C.

"How long will it take you to get out of this count?" asked His Worship.

"One half hour", came back Scholes.

"Well you get going and if you ever show your nose back in this town, it's six months sure", stated His Worship. Last seen Scholes was headed eastward bare-headed. Another local resident was fined the usual "ten and costs" after pleading guilty to a charge of drunkenness.

The local police investigated a motor accident at the western city limits at midnight when a motor car, driven by Arnold Ridley, of this city, collided with an automobile driven in the opposite direction by C. F. Wessels, Trenton. Ridley was not in possession a driver's permit, when the police arrived on the scene and was held in custody. Both vehicles were damaged about the fenders.

Another motor accident happened on East updas St. at 11.00 a.m. today when two motor cars collided. The accident was attributed to icy pavements and was amicably settled between the parties concerned, after being investigated by local police. Minutes later a dog was run over by a motor car on Front St. The police department removed the injured canine to the local dog pound.

Fugitive LADY

JAMES A. ROY DIES AT AGE OF 91 YRS

Solidarity of Character

Mr. Roy gives one the impression of the solidarity of character of the old time gentleman of the days when this country was in the building process. He made a success of his business, he maintained his friendships though his wealth increased. He has secured a licence in 1860 to draw beer and he began the manufacture of beer in 1870. He continued the manufacture of beer until the year 1915. This plant was one of the most active in Belleville for 45 years. His reputation as a brewer (for he was a practical brewer) stood very high in the industry. The brewery was not only a local landmark but it was known from one end of the province to the other.

As a young man in 1865 Mr. Roy answered the call of his country at the time of the Fenian Raids, serving as an infantryman on the Niagara frontier when there was threat of Fenian invasion from the United States. Those days of nearly seventy years ago were still fresh in his memory up to the last, and he loved to tell incidents of camp life along the River Niagara when excitement was at its height.

Ardent Horseman

The late James Roy was an ardent horseman from his youngest days and even with the advent of the motor car, the deceased did not forsake his first love. He owned many standard-breds in his day, the last one being a Trampfast mare, that he purchased in the south. This animal hitched to an open buggy was a familiar sight on the downtown streets and when Mr. Roy became so ill as to be confined to his home, the mare enjoyed a life of ease in the stable and yard adjoining. He took keen delight in sitting at his window and admiring her beauty and when old age overtook her, he had her destroyed. The late Mr. Roy was a regular attendant at all race meetings in the district and his real enjoyment was to stand on the shady side of the barn and talk horse to anyone, who would listen. His friends were legion in this sport throughout the district, his high sense of honor and his thorough love for the horse made him a prime favorite.

He was a race judge at many meets and also a judge at fairs.

Mr. Roy in his younger days was also a sportsman and many trophies were won by him on the curling ice and bowling green. His purse was always open to aid any sporting project, providing the game was for the sake of sport. He had no use for the "chiseler" or those, who were trying to make a revenue from a sporting project. He was very fond of children and any day one could see him near some school ground watching them at play. He was their friend and many the odd nickel for a stick of gum or a candy bar was given without a word being said.

Gift of Machine Guns

Any worthy object received his support in the matter of finance, and during the war he had the interest of the soldiers at heart, many from this district who enlisted, being his personal friends. With the late Robert Weddell of Trenton, the first machine guns for the 21st. Battalion were donated by these two men, the gift being highly prized by the battalion, who so nobly acquitted themselves on the fields of Flanders. The guns were used with good effect on the Ypres salient in the early stages of the war.

His home was always open to his friends. It was always a delight to be entertained by the deceased, who could tell most interestingly many incidents in the early life of the city and the surrounding district. Generally before the conversation ended it turned to horse and then the deceased was in his element. His integrity was of the highest and it could be said of "Jimmy" Roy, that "his word was as good as his bond."

Was Never Married

The late Mr. Roy was never married. He was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and for many years was a member of the Sons of Scotland until some years ago on account of his advancing age.

Exemplar of Generosity

For years Mr. Roy had been a generous giver to local and general philanthropies. He was a staunch supporter of everything Scottish in character, including the Presbyterian Church, Scottish organizations, and felt peculiarly at home among his own kith and kin from the land of his parents. He loved everything in his native city. He was generous of old acquaintances who had known him in the far past, his gifts were a memento of happy friendships, which had lasted thruout life. Scarcely an appeal for help was made to him but found a ready response. His home was the residence of hospitality and friendship.

The younger generation knew the kindly gentleman, whom age could not wither in his love of humanity, young and old, nor could custom stale his infinite variety of appeal. He was the exemplar of true citizenship, of a warm human interest in every phase of passing human life and of the finer and manly virtues which make life what it is.

"Whosoever will preserve the spirit must also take care of the body to which the spirit is bound." —Albert Einstein.

Drama

"The Youngest" is Admirably Presented by Albert College Dramatic Club in Memorial Hall

Albert College Dramatic Club who have presented to Belleville audiences some of the finest plays of recent years added to their list of successes last evening with "The Youngest" by Philip Barry. Memorial Hall was crowded with visitors who were enthusiastic in their reception of the exceptionally well presented play. "The Youngest" is purely a psychological play, in which the development of a personality is dramatically unfolded and the players of last evening portrayed the various characters with delicacy and understanding, cleverly avoiding the slightest over-shading which would have spoiled the intention of the playwright.

The Story

"The Youngest" was the story of the Winslow family, and while their actions in the light of other eyes seemed needlessly cruel, there are probably many families today in which just such a process goes on/unawares, the family attitude being bolstered up by the conviction that what they are doing is for the best.

In "The Youngest" the personality and hopes of the youngest son are almost lost in the remodelling methods of the family who scarcely realize the extent of their cruelty. A literary aspirant in the ranks of the town's leading family prominent for generations in the business world, is neither understood nor encouraged and each in turn adds their own method of protesting against this unknown quantity in their midst. Witty jibes of clever tongues, the domination of his older brothers the wavering attitude of his mother had almost succeeded in ruining the youngest when the advest of a girl whose special mission is solving problems and who precipitates a crisis causes the boy to emerge as a distinct personality and a power in the family.

The scene is laid in the Winslow home and the charming stage setting gives the impression of wealth and taste. Against this very soothing background the members of the family at first appear cultured and likeable but the town's impression of a "most devoted family" is soon dispelled. The intimate family circle is soon revealed as a battleground, the weapons being clever and bitter tongues.

The youngest son Richard is a part requiring a fine touch and Jack McDonald was an admirable choice for the role. Endeavouring to follow his natural talent for writing he is more and more bewildered by the attitude of the family, but he never loses his gentleness and even when the realization of his own power through a defect in his father's will is made known to him, he recoils from hurting those who had never hesitated in tormenting him. Mr. McDonald cleverly builds up the character of the easy going son, gifted with rare insight and lovable nature.

Nellie J. Marakas was the delightful Nancy Blake who is inspired with noble ideas of assisting other people out of their difficulty. She made an appealing heroine and ammusingly plays on the susceptibilities of each brother when confronted with Richard who appears to be a little more assertive than she had planned adroitly changes the situation and Richard is once more "managed" but charmingly so.

In the household itself there is Mrs. Charlotte Winslow very capably portrayed by Helen B. Sulman who in her interpretation shows the mother of the family to be the distracted accomplice of her family's plan to remake the youngest and whose whole object is to have peace at any cost.

SHte , .t ,zsUrdyahmxIA

Oliver Winslow and Mark Winslow, elder brothers in the family are very much disliked characters before the evening is over and to the young men who took these parts go special praise for making their roles so realistic, without over-doing the effect. The role of the former is taken by Joe Clarke who shows the elder brother as heavy handed and dignified, and Alf. G. Morris splendidly portrayed Mark whose airs earn for him the title of "Lord Chesterfield."

The daughters of the household are experts in the family's favourite indoor sport of bullying Richard. They are Augusta Winslow Martin, Mildred Lloyd giving a fine bit of character delineation as the luxury loving elder daughter and Martha (Muff) Winslow played by Catharine Smith, the younger daughter who really could be nice but whose fondness for giving a witty and cutting rejoiner rather than the soft answer puts her definitely in the class of those against Richard. To these two young ladies fall most of the humor in the dialogue and they make the most of the brilliant repartee for which Philip Barry is celebrated.

And finally there is Alan Martin, Augusta's husband, whom Phil C. Lake impersonates. He is very little considered by the family but it is he who best appreciates Richard's position and capabilities. He is shown to be kindly and generous-hearted by the young actor taking the part and Alan jeopardises his own interests by advancing those of the present.

Bob Musk was very good in the minor role as James, the butler. The play was under the direction of Miss Jessie B. Tuite, director of Expression and Dramatics in Albert College and to her careful coaching and fine insight goes much of the credit for the evening's marked success. Between acts a delightful musical program was given which included songs by Mr. Harold W. Barrett and Mr. James Bankier and piano solos by Miss Helen Milligan. The visitors were welcomed to the College by Rev. Bert Howard in a very interesting address before the curtains parted. At the close of the play, Miss Jessie B. Tuite was presented with a basket of roses, as a tribute from the cast for her very capable direction of the play.

Obituary

MRS. CHARLES E. OSLAND

A very sad and unexpected death occurred on Wednesday, February 20, 1935, when Beatrice E. Liddell, youngest daughter of the late Andrew and Eliza Liddell, Belleville, and beloved wife of Charles E. Osland, Campbellcroft, passed away.

She was a very active member of the Zion East Methodist Church, and at the time of Church Union, transferring to the Garden Hill United Church. Her parents, four sisters and three brothers predeceased her, some years ago, with one surviving brother, Robert, in Detroit. Deceased was married to Charles E. Osland, nearly forty-nine years ago, and with this union there were three daughters and two son, Mrs. Fred Dixon, Mrs. Everett Zealand, of Campbellcroft, Percy C., of Belleville, and Everett L., of Toronto, Norma having predeceased her nearly 14 years ago.

The funeral which was very widely attended on Friday afternoon, was conducted by Rev. Franklin Banister, B.A., B.D., of Canton.

The pall bearers were,— Messrs. Percy Osland, Everette Osland, Fred Dixon, Everett Zealand, Chas. Wicks, Alfred Wicks.

The many beautiful floral tributes conveyed their messages of love and sympathy. Besides relatives and friends from the surrounding community, many were present from Toronto, Cobourg, Newtonville, Port Hope, Millbrook and Bailieboro.

She was laid to rest in the family plot, Providence Cemetery. —(Port Hope Guide).

MRS. WILLIAM J. KELLY

Madoc, March 2—(Special)—Mrs. Madd Guffin, beloved wife of William J. Kelly of Madoc, member of the undertaking firm of Tufts and Kelly, died at her home early today after a short but serious illness. She has only been ill for three days and her sudden demise will be a shock to a wide circle of friends. The late Mrs. Kelly was born in Madoc, 61 years ago being the daughter of the late Lewis D. Guffin and Clarrise Barrager and has resided in that community all her life. She was an active member of Trinity United Church and fraternally was a member of the Rebekah Lodge of that village. Left to mourn her loss is a husband, one daughter Eileen at home, one sister Mrs. Connell of Toronto and one brother in British Columbia. The funeral will be held on Monday.

Late Mrs. Rhoda Adeline Sine

The funeral of the late Mrs. Rhoda Adeline Sine took place from the home of her daughter Mrs. Harry R. Moorman, 8 Olive Street yesterday afternoon in the presence of many friends and immediate relatives. A wealth of floral tributes testified in a small measure the esteem in which the deceased was held. Rev. L. B. Naylor conducted the service in the home and also at the graveside, interment being made in Frankford cemetery. The bearers were G. F. Lent, George Sprackett, S. Bell, H. Hales, James Miller and L. Hicks.

LATE GERTRUDE SPURR

Madoc, March 2 (Special)— The funeral service for the late Mrs. Gertrude, wife of Archdeacon B. M. Spurr, who died Tuesday at 11.15 a.m. in the home on the grounds of the Reynold's Memorial Hospital at Glendale, West Virigina, were conducted on Friday morning at 10.30 o'clock in Trinity Episcopal Church at Moundsville, W.V.

Bishop W. L. Gravatt of Charleston, W.V., and Bishop R. E. L. Strider of Wheeling, W.V., officiated offering prayers at the residence of the assembled family, and at the church were assisted by Rev. R. W. Hibberd, rector of Trinity Church.

Interment took place at Mount Rose Cemetery, Moundsville. The death of Mrs. Spurr, who was in her fifty-third year, followed a lingering illness.

The late Mrs. Spurr was born in L'Amable in Hastings County on April 15th, 1882. Her parents were the late William M. Spurr and Elizabeth Webster, both of whom passed away about ten years ago. She was one of seven children, four of whom are still living. Mrs. T. L. Nickle, Madoc, Mrs. M. H. Ray, Belleview, Manitoba, Mrs. D. A. Owens of Campbellford and Mrs. Hugh MacIntyre of Pipestone, Manitoba; of the five sisters in the family, four were school-teachers before they were married. Three of the nieces of the late Mrs. Spurr graduated from the Reynold's Memorial Training School, Mrs. George O. Griffith, New York City, Mrs. Lewis D. Brown, Bethlehem, Pa., and Miss Dorothy M. Nickle, Laboratory Technician at the Verdun Protestant Hospital in Montreal, Quebec.

Mrs. Spurr attended the public school at Madoc and later studied at Albert College in Belleville. After going to West Virginia she took a post-graduate commercial course in the Elliott School at Wheeling. Later she was a member of the staff of the First National Bank until her marriage to Dr. Spurr. She was a communicant of the Episcopal Church, and has been most active in seeking the continued maintenance of the mountain settlement houses; the support of some missionary priests and the continuance in the Reynold's Memorial Hospital Training School for Nurses. She was beloved by all who knew her and leaves one daughter, Gertrude, Webster Spurr, her husband, numerous relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

GEORGE EDWARD BOULTER

Picton, Mar. 2. — A prominent figure for many years in the canning industry of Ontario, George Edward Boulter, was buried here today. The funeral service was held at his late residence on Centre street where he passed away Thursday night. Rev. David Wren officiated and interment was made in Glenwood cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. A. E. Calnan, Howard Leavens, W. H. Nettleton, R. B. Small, L. A. VanSkiver and C. A. Wright. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and floral tributes were many and beautiful.

Mr. Boulter was in his seventieth year. He was born in the township of Sophiasburg and spent all his life in Prince Edward county. His father was the late Wellington Boulter who started the first canning factory in central Ontario, in 1862. As a boy the deceased was associated with his father in this industry at Demorestville, Picton and Toronto. When the first Boulter factory was built in Picton, he became actively engaged in the business which employed about three hundred persons and packed forty-six different kinds of fruit and vegetables, which were sent to all parts of the world. After this factory was sold to the Dominion Canners, he was appointed manager, a position he held for some years.

Retiring from the canning industry, he was for a few years with a local bank as teller and accountant. He then re-entered the canning business, building a factory in Picton and selling a half interest to W. H. Benson. This plant was sold to Canadian Canners. Later, with H. S. Colliver, he built the Cherry Valley factory which he managed for several years before selling his interest to Howard Leavens.

For many years he was known the province over as a breeder of Percherons. He made several importations from France.

His record of public service included twelve years as a member of Picton Public School Board with one year as chairman, four years on Picton Collegiate Board. He was a member of Prince Edward Masonic Lodge and of Boulter Orange Lodge. Until union, he was a member of the Presbyterian Church, serving that congregation here as member of the session and as superintendent of the Sunday School. During his association with the United Church, he became a member of the Quarterly and Trustee Boards and treasurer of the Trust Board.

In politics he was a Conservative, serving for some years as secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward and later the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal-Conservative Associations.

Surviving are his wife, a son, Dr. Leland Boulter of Vancouver; a daughter, Mrs. William Rankin of Belleville, a brother, Dr. J. H. Boulter of Picton and three sisters, Mrs. E. M. Young, Mrs. Kerr Albertson of Picton and Miss Lillian Boulter, now in California.

ORDER OF EASTERNSTAR GIVE FINE PROGRAM

Amusing Skit, "Susie's Kitchen Band," Well Presented

The regular monthly meeting of Belleville Chapter, No. 55, O.E.S., was held last evening in the Oddfellows' Temple, Front St. Miss Irene Hallam, Worthy Matron presided. After the routine business had been dispatched the chapter was declared closed. The group of Mrs. Anna Boyd, Past Worthy Grand, Matron, gave a delightful musical skit entitled "Susie's Kitchen Band." The cast, attired in the conventional cooks' regalia with prosaic embellishments of culinary utensils, etc., aroused the laughter and interest of a large and appreciative audience. Mrs. Anna Boyd in the role of musical producer, wrote the story of the skit and beautiful solos apropos to the theme were delightfully rendered by the following guest soloists and members: Miss Peggy Burk, Miss Mary Carmichael, Mrs. Anna Boyd, Mr. Moynes, Mr. Clare Patterson, Mr. S. Hector and Master Douglas Browning. The choruses were sung with inimitable verve and the antics of the musical director, Mrs. Florence Varley, supplied the comedy highlights. Miss Margaret Williams, as the wee bride won the hearts and plaudits of the audience. Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, Past Matron, acted as pianist and during the intermission a humorous ditty was sung by Masters Walter and Douglas Turner. On behalf of the cast Mr. Harry Sager presented Mrs. Boyd with a gorgeous plant as a gesture of appreciation and in recognition of her indefatigable efforts in making the evening's performance a success. The recipient thanked her group most graciously for their kind gift. Mr. C. F. Wessels, Past Patron, expressed sincere appreciation of the chapter for the excellent evening's entertainment and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mrs. Boyd's group and all those participating. The members of "Susie's Kitchen Band" acted as hostesses for the evening and served delectable refreshments in the banquet hall at the close of their program.

Belleville Merchant Became Member of New York Exchange

John Muir Once Clothing Dealer as Young Man in This City

How John Muir, one time young Belleville clothing merchant, became one of the most interesting figures in the world of finance in New York is told in a story of his death which occurred some weeks ago in that city at the age of 87 years. Mr. Muir's wife, was a Belleville woman, Miss Mary E. Newbouks, who had lived at 216 George Street, this city. Since her early days the old house was taken down and the present structure at that site was erected. Mrs. Muir has been dead for eight years. Eight children survive Mr. Muir. He regularly visited Belleville and was last here about a year ago.

The article in question from the New York Times reads:

"John Muir, long a colorful Wall Street figure and one of the early leaders in popularizing securities investments among persons of small means, died of uremic poisoning at his home 41-41 147th St., Flushing, Queens, after a long illness. Mr. Muir was founder and senior partner of the New York Stock Exchange and investment securities house of John Muir and Co., 39 Broadway. His age was 87.

"Mr. Muir had a successful railroad career before becoming a Stock Exchange member in 1898 and founding his own firm in 1900. He at one period was engaged in extensive real estate investment operations here.

"He was of Scottish descent and regarded his aid of small investors as thrift-promoting. He was credited with making common the sale of securities in odd lots or any quantity less than 100 shares.

"His firm became a specialist in odd lots during the 1907 panic, many persons availed themselves of the new method and other firms took up the specialty. For some years the firm published The Odd Lot Review. Mr. Muir became known as the "Odd Lot King."

"He also started the partial-payment plan for buying securities in 1907, fter seven years of study. Before the United States entered the World War he advocated "baby," or small denomination bonds. The "baby bond' idea as well as the partial-payment plan was adopted by the United States Government in selling the wartime Liberty Bonds.

"Mr. Muir became chairman of the Baby Bond Committee of the Liberty Loan Organization of the Second Federal Reserve District. Through his firm he subscribed for $3,412,000 in Liberty bonds. Mr. Muir wrote four articles in connection with the loans.

Sold Exchange Seat in 1926

In 1918 Mr. Muir and Edwin H. Muir, his son, a member of the firm, were suspended from the Stock Exchange for a year on the ground that they had taken a man into partnership under an arrangement held by the governors to have nullified the rules of the Exchange in regard to commissions and partnership agreements. In a statement Mr. Muir said the action was unwarranted.

"On his return to the Exchange with his son he continued his activities. He sold his seat in 1926 for $150,000 but did not retire from business until about three years ago.

Born in Scarborough, near Toronto, Ont., on June 10, 1847, Mr. Muir was a son of Alexander and Adah Bell Muir, As a boy he sawed and split wood for scant earnings, excelled in his lessons and delighted in amateur dramatics.

"He took a job at 14 in a Hamilton wholesale house, joined at 18 the Hamilton Volunteers ready to face a Fenian invasion and, at 19, opened a clothing store at Belleville, Ontario. In 1869, "wearying of seeing one or two customers drift daily in and out of the store" he went to Chicago with $100 in his pocket. He had learned shorthand and became a stenographer for a firm for a short time before entering the employ of Allan Pinkerton, the private detective, as his secretary.

"He then went to Kansas City as stenographer for the Kansas Pacific Railway and became successively chief clerk, assistant general freight agent and general freight agent. He became later traffic manager of all the lines in Oregon and Washington, then controlled by Henry Villard, and finally of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

"Collis P. Huntington made Mr. Muir traffic manager of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, with headquarters here, in 1886. For a time he was president of a typewriter manufacturing company and later general manager of the Electric Motor Company and transportation manager of the General Electric Company.

"He later was in charge of the Atlantic Coast division of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, controlled by Mr. Huntington, and went to Europe, when he obtained more favorable rates for his line for carrying coffee to transatlantic companies. Not long after that Mr. Huntington called him into his office and said: "John, I'm going to give you a seat on the New York Stock Exchange."" He entered the Exchange the next year.

"In the Nineties he played poker with some of the famous men of the day, including John W. (Bet a Million) Gates and James Buchanan (Diamond Jim) Brady.

'Burial was in Beechwoods Cemetery, New Rochelle, N.Y. He formerly lived in New Rochelle."

Price of Horses Is Bright Spot Of Crop Report

Toronto, Mar. 2 (CP) — Brisker and increased demand for horses and all types of cattle in most sections of the province was the bright spot in the weekly crop report by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Reports from Ontario county said farm sales are bringing the best prices in more than three years and there is a keen demand for horses at about $125.00 avreage for good farm horses. Ordinary grade cows brought $35.00 to $48.00 with bred sows selling around $30.00.

Peterborough county reported active demand for good quality purebred shorthorn bulls of serviceable age with sales ranging from $60.00 to $100.00 depending on type and age. Milk cows are sought in Glengarry. An order was received from the United States for 115 good Holstein cows at prices varying up to $65.00. Cattle buying is fairly active in Prince Edward county.

In Huron county there is a brisk demand for horses and good prices are being realized. Farmers are in a more hopeful frame of mind regarding cattle prices, the report said. A recent sale in Grey county brought $40.00 to $45.00 for grade cows and more than $100.00 for horses.

LAW ON TOURISTS WILL BE RELAXED

Compulsory Repairs Made Abroad Are to be Free of Duty

Ottawa Mar. 2—(CP)—Customs restrictions affecting tourists will be somewhat relaxed, a statement issued by Hon. R. C. Matthews, Minister of National Revenue indicated.

A change of particular interest to Canadian motorists who travel abroad has been made in the regulations pertaining to tourists' automobiles. There have been instances of collection of duty and taxes from Canadians on their return after touring abroad, on compulsory repairs effected to their motor vehicles outside of Canada, either as the result of an accident, or of unforseem mechanical defects which developed during the tour. Hereafter, the returning tourist will be required to satisfy the collector as to the bona fides of his case and will be called upon to pay duty only on those repairs effected abroad which can not be regarded as compulsory.

Teacher Disciplined For Striking Boy

London, Ont., Mar. 2—Inspector J. C. Stothers was instructed by the local Board of Education to discipline as he deemed fit a London teacher who today, under provocation allegedly struck a 14-year-old student in the face and gashed his lip. The method and extent of the disciplining were left to the Inpector.

"While the teacher was considerably provoked, the Board cannot allow teachers, who are trying to teach children not to lose their tempers, to themselves lose control of their tempers," said Chairman C. C. Carothers.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY HEARS FINE ADDRESSES

Delegates Report Annual Convention in Toronto

Tweed, Mar. 2. — The annual meeting of the Tweed Horticultural Society was held in the Guild rooms on Monday, Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. to receive the report of the delegate to the Ontario Horticultural Societies convention which was held in Toronto on Feb. 21 and 22.

The president, Rev. R. R. Nicholson, who occupied the chair, expressed his pleasure at being able to welcome such a large audience as was in attendance. He referred to former meetings of a similar nature which had been held in the afternoon with a very small attendance. The increased attendance evidenced keen interest which betokened a good year for the society. Mr. Nicholson said that a wrong impression seems to be abroad as to the object of belonging to a Horticultural Society. Many people join solely or chiefly because of material benefits which they derive through options and reduced prices of supplies purchased through the society. It is true there are such benefits to be obtained but the main object should be service to the community. The true horticulturist receives abundant return in the satisfaction he gets from service well rendered without needing any selfish object.

At this point Mrs. Harry Coulter of Chapman, the delegate to Toronto, was called on for her report of the twenty-ninth annual convention held in the King Edward Hotel. Mrs. Coulter gave an excellent resume of the proceedings of this two-day gathering which attracted over four hundred registered delegates.

A summary of the address of Mr. John F. Clark was given in which splendid suggestions were offered for increasing membership and arousing interest in the work of local societies. Mrs. Coulter was highly complimented for her excellent report.

Mrs. M. Drinkwater, a former president of the local society, was also in attendance at the annual convention, though not a delegate. She gave some of her impressions, noting the increased interest throughout the province as manifested by district directors' reports.

Mr. Nicholson gave a splendid illustrated address on the beautifying of the home grounds.

There are three main classes of gardens — English, Italian and French. The English gardens are marked by open spaces and less formal arrangement. The Italian were formal with terraces, much statuary, urns and fountains. The French were also formal but not so much given to terraces. Large pools and statuary were used. The English gardens are vastly superior in the estimation of the speaker.

Slides were thrown on the screen showing garden plans. In planting pools, local water plants were recommended with a prominent place being given to the improved water lilies. Before any planting is done plans should be drawn of the garden. Foundation planting must not not be too crowded for best effect. Slides were shown illustrating tree planting which can be done to excellent advantage in the winter. The roots of a tree must not be crowded but must be given abundance of room.

Everyone was recommended to plant a perennial border, the width of which is determined by its length and the space which can be devoted to it. The bed must be carefully prepared, being dug to a depth of two or three feet and liberally enriched with well-rotted manure. Various kinds of plants suitable for the borders were suggested. Other slides were shown illustrating suitable types of plants for rockeries, for hiding unsightly buildings and for other purposes.

Mr. Nicholson's excellent address was greatly appreciated by the members of the society of whom nearly fifty (including friends) were present. The local organization is particularly fortunate in having an enthusiast like Mr. Nicholson living in Tweed and at the head of the society.

During the year a bird box competition will be held about May 1. Mr. John F. Clark will give an address on roses on June 5. Proceeds of the meeting amounted to nearly seven dollars.

Mrs. W. H. Richardson who has been seriously ill for some time was taken to Kingston general hospital in a critical condition on Wednesday afternoon. It is feared that an operation for appendicitis may be necessary. Her many friends trust she may experience a complete and speedy recovery.

MANY CATTLE ARE SHIPPED TO U.S.

Prices Have Advanced Well Over Dollar in Few Weeks

Winnipeg, Mar. 2 (CP)—Canadian cattle breeders today looked to the south as a market outlet. Large shipments of Canada's best cattle have been going to the United States since early in February, offsetting decreased exports to Great Britain.

Western Canada particularly is sharing in the cattle boom, created by the rise of prices in the United States to a point where it was profitable to export. Previously the mainstay of the industry was the United Kingdom market.

Drought conditions with consequent lack of feed in the United States necessitated the slaughter of 8,000,000 head of cattle. A scarcity developed. Prices at Chicago rose to levels at which Canadian producers could pay the 2½ cents per pound duty and still make a profit.

In the week ending Feb. 14, 1,367 head of cattle were shipped from Canada, the movement increasing to 4,157 head in the week ending Feb. 21 in the latter week, 1,153 head were exported from Manitoba; 1,138 from Saskatchewan, and 1,244 from Alberta. Ontario exported 570 head. Increase in United States prices has boosted Canadian values. A few weeks ago the ruling price on cattle in Winnipeg was approximately $4.75 per hundredweight, $6.50 now is being paid.

Only 4,781 head of cattle have been shipped to the United Kingdom so far this year, compared to 7,411 in the same period last year.

HEROIC SAILOR DISLIKES ROLE

Received Broken Leg When Rescuing Freighter Crew

Halifax, Mar. 2 (CP)—The trouble with being a hero, Kenneth Campbell says, is that too many broken legs go with it.

Kenneth, young Scottish seaman on the liner Ascania, was one of the oarsmen who rowed to the aid of the sinking freighter Usworth in a mid-Atlantic hurricane in December. A burly East Indian stoker, leaping 12 feet from the deck of the tossing freighter, landed squarely on his leg breaking it.

Today — more than two months later — doctors found the leg was not setting as well as they wanted, and yesterday they broke it again and straightened it out.

PERSONALITIES ENLIVEN DEBATE

Member Denies Calling Another a Half Baked Clergyman

Ottawa, Mar. 2 (CP)—A considerable argument developed in the House of Commons yesterday over whether George H. Spotton, Huron North Conservative, had called John J. Brown, Lisgar Progressive, a "half-baked clergyman". Mr. Brown is a United Church clergyman.

The argument arose during discussion of the Farm Loan Bill in which Mr. Brown interrupted Mr. Spotton who returned: "When the pastoral member for Lisgar gets through I will continue, Mr. Chairman. I have always found that many half-baked clergymen are poor listeners."

Mr. Brown demanded the remark be withdrawn but Mr. Spotton resisted the demand by saying:: "I neither said that the Hon. member for Lisgar was a clergyman nor that he was half-baked. But I did say I have known half-baked clergymen who were good speakers but poor listeners."

On the ruling of the chair the inference was Mr. Brown was a half-baked clergyman, Mr. Spotton replied: "If you think I made such a statement I shall withdraw it but I made no such accusation against the clergy."

Parliament Hill Hears

(By WILFRID EGGLESTON)

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

Speculation over the forthcoming election date is one of the most popular topics of conversation on Parliament Hill these days. Theories blossom one day and die the next. Today you hear that September has been decided upon. Tomorrow you will hear that Premier Bennett has determined upon an election at the earliest moment — late April or early May. By the following day the general opinion is that it will again be July, as it was in 1930. Plausible reasons are forthcoming for any and all of these dates.

If the election does come in April or May, it will make history in more than one respect. Since Confederation a general election has never been held in either of those months. But some election has been held in every other month of the year:

January	1874
February ....,	1887
March	1891
June	1882	1896
July	1872	1930
August	1867	1872
September	1867	1878	1911	1926
October	1908	1925
November	1900	1904
December	1917	1921

If precedents mean anything, January, March and November are the months which favor the Liberals; while the most striking Conservative victories have been achieved in July, August and September. Perhaps an astrologer would help fix a date for the prime minister.

One of the embarrassing moments in an editor's life is the advance publication of an item with circumstantial detail attached, when something unexpected occurs, and the event never happens. The managing editor of The Ottawa Citizen recently recalled the publication of an address by Nicholas Flood Davin, punctuated by 'Cheers' and 'Loud Applause' which had been given to the paper before he left for the west which had a 'release date' on it, and which was published, although at the time the wires to the west were down, and it was only learned some time afterward that the speech had never been delivered. George Ham used to tell a similar yarn about a poor fellow who was to be hung in some jail yard in the east, while George was 'wire editor' on a Winnipeg paper. The paper was prepared to do the hanging full justice, only unfortunately something went wrong with the wires during the night, and the account of the hanging did not come through as expected. George Ham, being a resourceful sort of fellow, and being familiar with the prison yard through previous reporting experience, sat down and wrote a brilliant 'clothes line dispatch' in which he hung the fellow with great gusto. Unhappily a few hours after the paper had appeared in the street, the wires resumed operation, and it was learned that a last minute reprieve had relieved the need of any hanging at all.

I happened to mention this incident to R. E. Gosnell, who was formerly a historian in British Columbia and later spent some years in the Parliamentary Press Gallery, and it reminded him of a still more remarkable event which I always felt should be saved in some way from oblivion. Perhaps the fact that this column appears on the same day as the annual dinner of the Parliamentary Press Gallery gives me license to include it in these personalities:

An Irish sheriff had under his charge a prisoner who was sentenced to die at noon on a certain fixed day. The sheriff, who was master of the local hunt, and had never missed an opening day of the season for forty years, observed, to his great concern, that the day on which the prisoner was to hang coincided with the opening day of the hunt.

The sheriff gave the matter a great deal of thought; and at first he came to the melancholy conclusion that it would be necessary to miss the hunt for once. Then a brilliant idea struck him, and he went to see the prisoner.

"Michael," he said, "would you do me a favor?"

The condemned man was surprised: "Here am I, a poor fellow sentenced to hang next Monday, and here you are, the sheriff of the county, and you come to me asking me a favor!" And then, curiosity getting the better of him, he asked: "What then might it be?"

"It's like this," said the sheriff. "Tis the opening day of the hunt next Monday, and as ye may know, I'm the master of the hunt as well as sheriff. I haven't missed the opening for forty years. Would it make much difference to you if instead of holding the execution at noon, we made it six o'clock in the morning?"

Michael was not overly enthusiastic over the suggestion, but the sheriff dilated on the fact that the sad moment would come sooner or later, and that in reality he was offering to do him a favor. "Ye'll have six hours less to be sitting here thinking about it," he said.

Finally Michael agreed that it made very little difference, and the hanging was advanced to six o'clock in the morning. Very much to his satisfaction, the sheriff found himself ready to mount his hunter and take a leading part in the day's sport, as usual, the unpleasant task behind him.

But just as he was putting foot in stirrup, a messenger came toward him, post hoste from the nearby castle. He carried a big envelope with a red seal. With one foot in thestirrup, one on the ground, the sheriff read the note. It was a reprieve for Michael!

"The sheriff jumped on his horse and never stopped till he reached the seaboard," R. E. Gosnell used to say, when he was telling the yarn. "And there's not the slighest doubt about the truth of it, because he made his way to Canada, and in time became sheriff of Chatham, Ontario."

Service Doors in Brain Cells Give Idea How They Work

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

(Associated Press Science Editor)

Ellensburg, Wash., Mar. 2 (AP)—Discovery of two chemical doors in brain cells, changing present ideas of how the mind works, was reported today. It shows how the cital energy of life gets into brain cells and in putting the energy to work the cells operate two incoming service doors instead of one.

The new ideas were described in a paper by Professor W. Burridge of the University of Lucknow, India, at the first American Congress for General Semantics at Washington State normal school.

He said he found this double mechanism first in a study of heart tissues, then in muscle, nerves and brain cells. He found it in the action of the colloids in all these living tissues.

Colloids are chemical substances. They are systems of droplets, films and bubbles. "Amorphous" is their scientific description: "Gooey", the popular one.

Professor Burridge said his experiments showed these colloids respond to energy in two ways. They may absorb it or they may take it up by a "change in colloidal aggregation", which means a structural change.

Humans derive this energy in two forms, the chemicals which the body extracts from food, drink and breathing, and radiation. Two forms of radiation, heat and electricity, are well known in the body. A third, ultra-violet light manufactured by the tissues themselves, is just coming into recognition.

When the brain goes into action, its cells pick up and use some energy. Taking this energy through two entrances means that it may be split up in an infinite variety of ways.

This variety is held to explain better than previous pictures of the make-up of the mind, why the brain responds in so many different ways to the same stimulus or to similar ones.

In theory, psychologists said, the mind is judging capacity and consciousness would be derived mainly through one energy door, that of absorption. Sensation would be the result of the structural change door.

Alcoholic drink is believed to speed the action of one of the energy intakes and slow down the other. It is proposed to study the new theory by observing effects of alcohol.

Pair of Prospectors Do Not Mind Hike

Northland, Ont., March 2—(CP)—Years and miles mean nothing to William Longbottom and John Large of this Algoma county village. Longbottom, discoverer of the Parkhill gold mine at Michipicoten, is nearing 60 and Large is 71, yet the pair hiked from here to Sault Ste. Marie and back this week, a distance of 25 miles, without feeling any ill effects. They took a day to travel each way.

CASTAWAY GETS FOOD

Sablanca, Morocca, March 2—(CP-Havas)—A Spanish sailor, clinging desperately since Thursday to a wave-washed rock 300 yards off the shore here, today was taken food by a French army aviator. Efforts to reach the castaway with a boat or by firing a line to him have been vain.

The Spaniard was the only survivor of the crew of the Spanish fishing bark Ursula which foundered with the rest of her crew of eight.

SOIL CARRIED OVER OCEAN

How strong is the urge to symbolism and how deep is the motive of sentiment was never more completely expressed than in the story which appeared in the newspapers of Friday telling how soil from the grave of one of the earliest trades unionists had been taken from Siloam Cemetery at London, Ontario, and was placed on the grave of the only Tolpuddle Martyr buried at Tolpuddle, England. The six farm laborers who in 1834 formed a union to resist an attempt to lower their wages were convicted of acts "injurious to trade and commerce and dangerous to the country's tranquility" and deported to Australia, later to win pardon, five of the six coming to Canada, one of them being George Loveless, who was buried at London. Last year soil of Tolpuddle had been sprinkled on the grave of Loveless.

It is always the personality of the individual who lies at rest which consecrates the soil. The soil of Todpuddle and of Siloam Cemetery at London would not have meant much to the trades unionists had it not been for the association with these pioneers.

It is the association with the holy, the saintly, the great, the beloved, the doers of good for the race, which consecrates the scene where they lived and labored or where they rest.

Waten was brought to Belleville a number of years ago from the sacred Jordan in Palestine and used in baptisms in this city. Men have had their ashes scattered over their farms. Flowers are dropped from planes on the waters where a ship has gone down.

It is the soul of the living or departed which sanctifies the place. It is this which sets apart shrines.

THE COURT OF JUSTICE

A recent court trial here was attended by hundreds of persons who were impressed with the method of Canadian court procedure. Many thousands of others though they did not attend yet felt the same impression of the sterling character of the Courts of Justice. Though at times the law must seem very severe, yet it has been built up through the centuries as the only means of the maintenance of society.

When the process of the courts begins, it is clear that the only aim is to get at the truth. There is no such thing possible as "railroading" an accused for safeguards are found at every step of the way. The judge on the bench is the personification of the idea and attribute of justice, he directs the trial and at times directs questions, answers to which tend to clarify possible misunderstandings. Between the defence and the prosecution and the observant judge, and the evidence of witnesses as they unfold their stories, the jury is able to obtain a fairly accurate notion of what is the truth. Counsel while doing their best for the crown and the defendant are bringing out the truth—there is no such thing as mere jockeying to get the better of one another for only the tried methods developed through centuries of practice are permitted.

The jury are impressed from start to finish with the importance of their duty to the state and to the defendant.

Steadily the machinery of the court unfolds the case. After a witness has testified for the crown, he is questioned by the defence counsel: when the crown case rests the defence assumes its full importance, tells its story, its witnesses are cross-examined, then comes rebuttal if any, then follow the addresses of the defence and crown counsel and finally the charge of the judge who after his summation places the entire question of the decision on facts on the shoulders of the jury after he has warned the members that they must take the interpretation of the law as he gives it. Then the jury takes all the facts into consideration and seriously endeavors to reach a verdict in accord with these facts. The innocent is safe-guarded.

There is a completeness in it all, there is a sense of a rounded-out investigation, which has not been allowed to trail down side-issues or avoid crucial situations.

When a court scene closes whatever the verdict there is a satisfaction that the trial is the best effort in the light of human judgment to get at the truth. In the recent trial the justice on the bench said that in such cases no trial was too costly, no trial too long and wearying in the effort to get at the truth.

The impression one gains of Canadian law is that it is impartial. Never does vindictiveness rear its head; were it possible for it to do so, it would soon shrink in shame before the impressiveness of the conduct of the court of law.

Justice is what is sought. Crown or defence would rather lose a case than have an injustice done. Witnesses may tell their story without fear or favor. They realize that this matter of giving evidence is serious business and that the truth is paramount and they give the accused the benefit of reasonable doubt.

Some may think that the spectators' presence would suggest entertainment but our courts are no place of entertainment and pleasure, they are for the collection and sifting of the facts. There is no three-ringed circus.

Dignity, thoroughness, impartiality, justice are all marks of a Canadian court of justice. Canadians should be proud of the fairness and reputation of their tribunals.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

On the ground that the Hauptmann verdict was based to so large an extent on circumstantial evidence, fears have been expressed concerning what might happen to an innocent person. Attorney-General Cummings has replied, in effect, that while it is true that circumstantial evidence of a certain sort may sometimes be misleading, so may the so-called direct evidence given by those who claim to have been eye-witnessss. It is not, he points out, primarily the type but the conclusiveness of the evidence which counts. Suppose three men, he says, see an animal pass on a light snow in the half-light of dawn. They might disagree regarding exactly what animal they had seen, but an expert, examining the footprints hours later, could tell whether the animal was a rabbit, opossum or fox. In this case the circumstantial is more reliable than the so-called direct evidence.

The rules of evidence have been developed through centuries of legal discussion, which has naturally taken into account the necessity of protecting the innocent. The general conclusion reached by this discussion was embodied by Justice Trenchard in his charge to the Hauptmann jury: "In order to justify the conviction of the defendant upon circumstantial evidence, it is necessary not only that all of the circumstances concur to show that he committed the crime charged but that they are inconsistent with any other rational conclusion."

We might well be concerned if the general conclusion of jurists on this matter had been the other way round, and circumstantial evidence were inadmissible. For, as Justice Trenchard also pointed out in his charge: "The crime of murder is not one which is always committed in the presence of witnesses and if not so committed it must be established by circumstantial evidence or not at all."

One legal authority, remarking that circumstantial evidence consists of a number of disconnected and independent facts which converge toward the fact in issue as a common centre, has suggested that it is in this respect "like a wire cable, composed of many small associated but independent wires. Wire cables are often used to sustain ponderous bridges over rivers." The circumstances, perhaps, need not always be numerous. One of the best things ever said on the subject came not from a lawyer but from Thoreau. "Some circumstantial evidence is very strong," he wrote, "as when you find a trout in the milk."—New York Times.

AGE OF LEISURE

The truth is that the strain and rush supposed to characterize modern life are largely voluntary. The tempo of the working day is needlessly kept up in the evening. Men and women rush about from force of habit and because they see others engaged in that ant-like activity. The great mass of men and women might, if they choose, live as leisurely as the Athenians of old. They need not even take the trouble to visit the Academy. They can hear the modern Socrates over the radio. And instead of painfully unrolling and deciphering manuscripts, they have printed newspapers, magazines in profusion. They are not compelled to play bridge or dance or go to the movies. If they prefer to meditate, there is nothing to hinder them. If we have no Socrates or Shakespeare or Gibbon today it is not for lack of leisure. If the number of serious readers and thinkers is comparatively small, it is not for lack of leisure. Perhaps it is larger than pessimists imagine. At all events leisure and privacy are just as much within our reach as within the reach of our ancestors.

It is not necessary to lecture these people who are so busy in their leisure hours. If they prefer dancing, bridge and the theatre to lonely musing, and they may be wise in following their inclinations. There is no moral obligation on anybody to read Gibbon or to try to write history. But as no one is to be blamed for amusing himself or herself innocently, neither is the age to be blamed for offering attractions which interfere with study and meditation.—London Advertiser.

The rays of happiness, like those of light, are colorless when unbroken.—Longfellow.

It's a doubting world; you even have to produce a certificate to prove that you were born.

JUST EIGHTEEN

He was just eighteen when he went away
And a mother's heart is torn,
While the places that knew him so blithe,
so gay,
Are lonely now and forlorn.

Before him, Life stretched forth
beckoning hands
(So much for a lad to do!)
All earth's unsailed seas, all untrodden lands,
Were waiting him, fair and new!

He would soon have found there was work for him,
And the dream of a woman's lips;
All youth's realm was his to the blue sky's rim,
And his hopes were like homing ships.

He was just eighteen and he never knew
In his brief years' golden span
That there can be dreams which do not come true,
Sometimes, in the life of a man.

He was just eighteen when he went away,
So his mother can clasp this joy:
There was not a shadow of care to stray
On the sunlit soul of her boy.

JAPAN HAS THE JITTERS, apparently—war jitters, which may lead to something unpleasant. Recently three citizens of the United States of America were arrested, bound with ropes and dragged through the streets of Tokio, charged with something or other, but evidently suspected of espionage. The prisoners claim an attempt was made to extort money from them, a fight resulting, in which the alleged extortionists escaped and the Americans were arrested and despitefully used, according to their account. They were the manager of the Corn Products Refining Company and two employees. War Jitters is also blamed for the seizure of a Yankee oil tanker which had the misfortune to run aground in Japanese waters, the charge being that the grounding was deliberate in order to get snap shots of Japanese fortifications. Just how many spies are spying in the United States taking pictures of the Mint, J. P. Morgan's Wall Street, the Washington Monument and the long range guns out Sandy Hook way, sighted to shoot everything but submarines, at fifteen miles less or more, has not yet been computed, but the fact remains that any foreigner may walk pretty nearly all over the United States and Canada and take all the pictures desired without being intefrered with. In fact if the Japs or others want Canadian pictures they will be supplied the same free of cost on application to any tourist agency or publicity bureau. For a foreigner to take any kind of a picture in Japan is to court a whole lot of trouble, even death.

"THE DISINHERITED", a story by Jo Pagano, recently publshed in a New York magazine, gives food for thought. The story is about a lad who left home during the depression to seek work elsewhere than in his home town where conditions were bad. He did not find work and was forced to join the great army of the unemployed, consisting of out-of-works, won't works, hoboes, "gay cats", plain tramps and others. Tramp life nauseated him and he returned home, only to find that things were worse than when he left. His return only placed an added burden on the family, as very little money was coming in. The lad surveyed the home situation and, much as he hated hobo life, refused to remain and be a burden so drifted out again to the "jungle"—to a life which led to criminality, and sorrow or hunger, cold and general misery. Promising material to be thrown upon the dump pile of human hopes.

SOLVING OF PUZZLES IS AID TO MIND

Puzzles Call Into Action Faculties Not Often Used

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., PH.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Puzzles are the vogue. Infact for a long, long time they have intrigued and facinated millions. Riddles and tests of knowledge likewise have held a high place as stunts of absorbing and pleasing interests.

What makes puzzles and similar devices so vital? Why does a person when shown one of them, immediately endeavor to test his skill?

In the first place, the ego in all humans plays an important role. So much do we want to stand well in our own eyes — not to mention the strong desire we all possess to be well thought of by our neighbors — that we never lose an opportunity to try to prove that we are as good as the next fellow, if not actually superior.

It is a characteristic human trait to strive for superlative superiorty. High performances in a special field and the achievement of ambition are the usual goals we seek. But even a little superiority, picked up here and there, helps a lot toward enhancing aur feelings of self-esteem. And that little puzzle accomplished while waiting for an appointment, or on the train going home, helps a lot to vitalize the vanity.

Besides, puzzles exercise mind processes, and that is stimulating, too. They make us use faculties which we do not ordinarily employ. They lend variety and color to thinking. They sharpen the wits. They challenge imagination and inventiveness. In short, they oil the brain machinery.

In the case where the desire for self-appraisment by means of tests amounts to a veritable passion, another and deeper mental mechanism must be taken into consideratoin. In these instances of chronic and compelling impulse to bolster the ego at every opportunity, the individual actually fears that his mind is not average or functioning as well as it might, and, consequently, he seeks repeated evidence to prove that he may be wrong.

This dread sense of mental inadequacy may be known and recognized by the individual himself. On the otherhand, he may not be conscious of it and he may realize only that the impulse to participate in tests is irresistible.

However, that is not the way puzzles should be approached. They should never be considered as equivalent to the mental tests used by psychologists to determine pathological states. Puzzles and other pastimes are intended solely as stimulating amusements that show how much one knows, rather than how little.

In a measure, all self-challenging procedures actually do test your fund of information and your memory, but they should not be taken too seriously, nor should one worry if he cannot solve a puzzle. Play around with all the tests you like. But keep it fun. Don't become too serious.

When an individual fails on a puzzle, however, he should be sure to look it up and find the solution. In this manner, the mind can be improved and stimulated.

As a matter of fact, it is astonishing to record how much one actually can acquire from such novelties undertaken during the daily spare time. Cross word puzzles, in particular, enlarge the vocabulary and develop a feeling for discrimination in words.

All the various puzzles have distinct values and advantages. If you are addicted them—good! The more, the merrier!

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Many persons believe that fish is a brain food; in other words, that the meat of fish somehow directly stimulates brain cells. This belief is entirely erroneous. Indeed, fish differs from meat very little in its chemical properties and nutritive values. However, every person might well develop the habit of eating fish twice, at least, each week.

Mr. N. B. Falkiner, barrister, passed away at his home "Ballyrickard", Commercial street, this morning in his 67th year. He came to Belleville when a young man in the year 1855 and had resided here continuously since then. He took an interest in municipal matters and in the year 1886 was elected an alderman from Murney ward and for some years represented that ward in the council. Mr. Falkiner was married in 1863 to Miss A. E. M. Murney, a daughter of the late Hon. Edmund Murney. The widow and one daughter survives. He was a veteran of 1866. Mr. Falkiner will be missed. He was generous and kind hearted, speaking kindly to all. He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church, West Bridge Street.

COMMUNITY CLUB OF MADOC HEARS REV. DR. YOUNG

Presbyterian Missionary to Far East Tells of Japan

PLAY IS GIVEN

Trinity United Church Ladies Provide An Enjoyable Program

MADOC, March 2—(Special)—On Thursday evening, about forty members of the Madoc Community Club gathered in the dining room of Blue's Hotel for their regular meeting. Following a sumptuous repast, the guest speaker, Dr. Young, Presbyterian Missionary, returned from Japan and Korea, gave a very interesting outline of "Impressions of the Far East".

Dr. Young first went to Japan some twenty-nine years ago. His first impression of Japan was a harbour covered with sampans with the natives trying to sell the visitors tangerines.

Dr. Young spent 21 years among the Koreans as it was in their country, that he was to do his work. He was most impressed with the efficiency of the Japanese. In Korea the bone of contention between China and Japan—the police methods, while brutal and ruthless, were very efficient.' The Far Easterners always tend toward militarism and at the present time the tendency of the younger generation of Koreans is to swing their feelings and influence toward Japan, the wielder of the big stick.

Korea Soon Pro-Japanese

The Japanese themselves believe that in time, the entire country of Korea will be pro-Japanese.

The Japanese language is being taught in all Korean schools. The Home Government of Japan is very autocratic and wield their influence with great force. They are behind the Emperor and the Country, to the core. There are no bandits or gangsters in Japan.

The army is modelled after that of Germany and the navy after that of Great Britain. The country is becoming very arrogant. They want Manchuria and will brook no interference in this matter. They believe themselves the Protectors of the Far East.

With this in view they will not stand for any equal power in Asia. They are constantly breaking down the Chinese power and causing the disintegration of her territories.

Russinan War Inevitable

War with Russia is inevitable. The result will be a toss-up. Both nations well equipped and well prepared for war. Vladivostok, a Russian terminal of Siberian Railway and a Russian port, is only four hours by air from Tokio and a constant menace to the security of the peace of mind of all Japanese. There is no serious threat of war with any Western nation.

The greatest danger to Europe and America is a commercial war in which Japan with her low scale of living holds an upper hand. Japanese agents have studied American and British production methods and as they themselves state have picked the brains of the Western World and are now underselling the foreigners in their own markets. The quality of their products is becoming better. They are very tricky and are unscrupulous in their commercial habits.

The Government exercises very careful supervision of manufacture. No product is exported without under-going a very rigorous examination.

Off Gold Standard

Japan went off the gold standard and stabilized their yen at 3 to a dollar instead of 2 to a dollar. At the same time they used the cry of depression to cut very heavily the salaries and wages of labour.

Factories are very heterogeneous and produce all types of commodities. General Japanese efficency, low scale of living—low wages and government backing have all tended to cheapen production.

The inherent weaknesses of the manifestation of the Christian religion and the lack of devoutness on the part of its adherents have tended to produce a waning effect on the progress of its influence among the Japs and the Koreans.

Mr. R. R. Casement moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, which was extended by the President of the Club, Jack Rutherford, and well responded to by the members.

Mr. Horace Reddick sang a solo, "Its Always Fair Weather", and was accompanied by Miss L. West.

Strike of the Ladies' Aid

On Thursday evening a very successful entertainment was presented by the Ladies' Aid of Trinity United Church in the Sunday School Rooms. The programme was divided into two parts. As a prelude to the main part, a two-act play, members of the Trinity choir presented a short musicale. A very pretty solo was rendered by Miss Norma Fair, entitled, "The Old Red School House" accompanied by Mrs. Leslie Ashley. Mrs. Fair wore a pink silk dress commonly worn by young ladies of olden days.

Two love songs of years ago were sung. The first by Mr. and Mrs. Archie Abbott, was "Down By the Old Mill Stream." The second was given by Mrs. Wesley Hulin, Mrs. Abbott and Mr. A. Abbott and was entitled, "Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet."

A very interesting and dramatic monologue was rendered by Miss Mary Bronson. This was the "Reveries of a Maiden in Church." Miss Bronson was dressed as a belle of the nineties and was trying very hard to catch the eye of all the eligible young men.

The musicale was brought to a close with Mrs. Wesley Hulin singing "A Basket of Old-Fashioned Roses."

Play Main Item

The main number on the program was a two-act play entitled "The Strike of the Ladies' Aid." The first scene opened in the living room of the home of Mrs. Cheerbody. It was a typical Ladies' Aid scene with all the Ladies' Aid diligently carrying on a quilting bee. This was accompanied by the usual amount of talk about local affairs.

After the work was done the hostess served a lunch of lemonade and cakes. She was assisted by Miss Prunella Prunes and Miss Cheery Blossom. A short musical program provided the entertainment. Mrs. Amelia Prunes played two numbers on the organ and Mrs. Takem Pills led the "Aid" in singing "Annie Laurie." The ladies were trying to raise funds to build a new Sunday School. The work was slow and laborious and the men-folk would give no help. So the Ladies' Aid decided to go on strike and refuse to cook their husband's meals until the men promised to lend their help to the movement. They disband and agree to report their success at the next regular meeting.

The second scene is the regular meeting place of the Ladies' Aid The president asks for the roll call which is responded to with a proverb. Then the various members all report their results, which is unanimously a failure. However, unknown to the ladies, the men held a meeting and after discussing the matter, agree to lend their financial and physical aid to building a new Sunday School.

The president says that is an ill-wind that blows nobody good, as Miss Cheery Blossom receives a proposal of marriage from one of the unfed men, whose sister refuses to get his meals. And as the men folk are brought to time the strike ends a success. The meeting is closed by singing the Ladies' Aid Ode.

Miss Norma Fair sweetly sang "In the Sweet Long Ago" in between the first and act scene. The play was well presented and merited the success it attained.

The Cast

Mrs. Cheerbody—Mrs. Huffman—the hostess, dressed in a gray costume with a black sequin cape.

Miss Sadie Razor—Mrs. Ambrose Smith—a biting old spinster always says catty things; with plaid cape, black silk gown and bonnet with nose veil.

Grandma—Mrs. Marsh Maybee—a quaint old lady, very hard of hearing, with her knitting; black gown, white silk shawl and white lace cap, sitting in her rocking chair.

Mrs. R. A. Croker—Mrs. Simeon Ashley—a depressing sort of woman always talking about people dying and about her husband, Simeon Sandfield.

Mrs. Takem Pills—Mrs. Hamm—a thin, sickly lady, with all the ailments known to doctors, continually talking about her physical troubles, dressed in black frilled silk gown with black bonnet to match.

Mrs. O. U. Sliver—Mrs. Adam Corrigal—a humorous stout lady, poking fun at Mrs. Takem Pills and always chiding Mrs. Croker for her gloom; dressed in black taffeta silk with white fichu, wore a paisley shawl.

Mrs. O. B. Proudfoot—Mrs. W. Broad—a poor woman who married money and is slinging on. Talks about the vulgar people and her French maid; stylishly dressed in blue and white silk crepe gown with white hat and willow plume.

Miss Cheery Blossom—Mrs. Arthur Parks—a spinster looking for a husband and in love with Sadie Razor's brother; dressed in cream white silk and a black bonnet.

Mrs. Claude D. Weather—Mrs. G. W. Rivers—mother of nine; far behind with her housework; dressed in black frilled gown with a white blouse and black hat.

Mrs. O. Gadabout—Mrs. Will Parks—always making calls, never at home to cook the meals; pink gown and white hat.

Mrs. W. Stirafus—Mrs. Carl Stockloser—a visitor of the Ladies' Aid; tells of her Ladies' Aid at home; advises the strike; dressed in a mauve Parisian gown.

Miss Carry Germs—Mrs. W. Lough—a music teacher; dressed in a black brocaded gown.

Mrs. Ima Whatnot—Mrs. Chris. Henderson—a housewife; with white gown, black beads and earrings, dolman cape, plumed bonnet.

Mrs. Amelia Prunes—Mrs. Ed Howell—the musical entertainer; wore a green crepe gown with black lace jacket.

Miss Prunella Prunes—Miss Helen Wellman—plays the piano, chews gum and knows everything.

The play was directed by Mrs. Leslie Ashley.

C. W. L. Party

On Wednesday night the ladies of the Catholic Women's League of Sacred Heart Church held a bridge, euchre and dance in their new social hall in the Cross block, over Dan Barry's store. The bridge prizes were won by Mrs. G. Walsh and Mr. Jack Rutherford, and the euchre prizes by Mrs. M. O'Connell and Mr. Francis Tobin. After a tasty lunch, the Madoc five-piece orchestra provided music for round and square dancing.

CROSSING CRASH KILLS STUDENT

David Sabbath, Montreal, Dies at Cobourg in Borrowed Car

Cobourg, March 2.—David Sabbath of Montreal, a student at Queen's University, was killed and three fellow-students were injured when an automobile in which they were riding collided with the westbound C.N.R. Montreal Flyer at the William street crossing here last night.

Hyman Levine also of Montreal, suffered a fracture of his skull and other injuries. He was taken to a hospital unconscious. Levine was riding in the back seat with Sabbath. His condition is serious.

Alex. Grant, driver of the automobile, incurred a fracture of one arm and leg injuries. William Goldberg, 177 Ducharme Street, Montreal, who was in the front seat with Grant, was unhurt.

The four students were on their way to Toronto for the week-end, in an auto borrowed from a Professor of Greek at Queen's Police reported that the automobile went under a subway and, the occupants, believing the approaching train would pass overhead, continued ahead, striking the fourth coach of the C. N. R. Flier which was passing on the track about fifty feet beyond.

The engineer of the train was Harry Smith of Belleville, and the conductor was Albert White, of the same city. The train was the first section of No. 15, from Montreal.

Government Extends Telegraph Lines Into Far North for Trappers Use

By JAMES MONTOGNES
Central Press Canadian Writer

Ottawa, March 2—Recently a trapper in remote northern British Columbia, was badly wounded. He needed a doctor's attention, but the nearest doctor was hundreds of miles distant.

He had gone out on his trap line, tripped and so badly hurt himself that he could not reach his cabin, some miles distant. He knew however that he could not remain where he was, and made for the highway of northern British Columbia, a single strand of telegraph and telephone line running from Hazelton to Atlin, about 450 miles.

With difficulty he reached it. Then he took his rifle, aimed at the single wire which passed through the bush, and severed it. Some hours later the line's repairman found the wounded trapper, took him to the nearest refuge cabin, tended him and repaired the line.

Not every wounded trapper or other person in distress along this remote line of communication notifies his need of medical attention in this way. If so, the line would soon be out of commission. Most of the few trappers, prospectors and Indians of the district if in need of help go to the nearest telephone refuge cabin, where a telephone summons them aid.

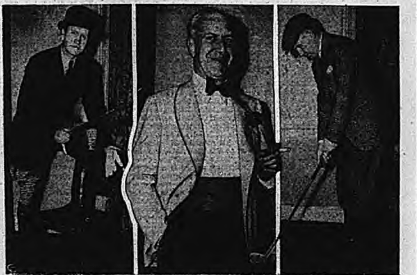
The telegraph and telephone wire which runs through northern British Columbia, from the most northern railway stop, Hazelton, to the short Yukon railway line at Whitehorse, is one of the lines of communication operated by the Dominion government to link remote parts of the Dominion with other means of communication. Another such line is operated along the north shore of the St. Lawrence river from Quebec city to Chateau bay opposite Belle Isle. Other lines include those connecting points on Anticosti Island, Magdalen Islands and Cape Breton Island with the mainland. In all the service operates in British Columbia, Gulf of St. Lawrence and Maritime Provinces more than 20,000 miles of line and cable through 756 offices.

Constantly Patrolled

Most remote is the northern British Columbia line running through practically unknown country, where the operators and repairmen live in cabins, spend their time on the line and on their own fur trap line, and have their supplies shipped in once a year by pack train. So remote is this line that the men seldom see another person from one pack train to the next. They are however in constant communication with stations along the line, and patrol the wire regularly, especially after heavy snowstorms. Snowslides in this mountainous bush region have wiped out whole sections of the line at times.

This and other lines remote sections have their heaviesttraffic in summer, but are kept open all year so that communication may be maintained in these regions where radio communication has not yet been installed or would be too costly to install. Along the St. Lawrence north shore route and on the Magdalen Islands, as an example, it costs very little to keep the communication open, as the operators have the equipment in their own home and are paid a small annual salary for tending it. Usually the wife is the operator while the husband patrols the line, and in this way they are free to make their living at fishing and trapping in addition to their telegraph work.

ALL THEY NEED NOW IS THE CHAM PAGNE



According to the tailors in conference at Merchant Tailors' Designers Association in Toronto, Canadian men will, or should wear some radically different styles this spring. There are, for instance, champagne suits with purple cummerbunds, wine colored velvet host jackets with catching silk facing, vest pockets that button, silk braided director suits — horror of horrors— pants without hip pockets, designed to delete lines. New designs, shown above, are: LEFT, conventional riding habit. CENTRE, the new champagne suit. RIGHT, our-and-four tweed golf suit, showing knicker slacks, a compromise between slacks and knickers.

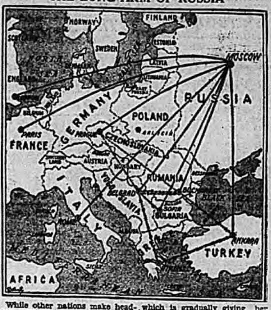
THE LONG ARM OF RUSSIA



While other nations make headlines with sensational pacts, treaties and diplomatic notes, Soviet Russia, in the person of Maxim Litvinoff, often referred to as No. 1 diplomat of Europe, goes about quietly setting up a chain of non-aggression of Europe and alliances which is gradually giving her a strong position on the continent. The map shows the direction of Moscow's moves which attempt to stem any military alliance against Russia, and which particularly are aimed at Germany, chief threat to Russia aside from Japan.

"C'EST LÀ GUERRE?"

The Italian troopship Gange, laden to its "shrouds" with fighting men of Italy, was photographed a few days ago, just before it turned its prow toward Africa, to carry its human freight to the dark continent under orders to proceed to an "undesignated destination"—i.e., a destination not officially noted to the world. The fact that Italy, at the moment of the ship's departure, was embroiled in diplomatic discord with Abyssinia probably had something to do with the military junket. That threats of war easily arouse men is shown in photo at TOP. The fervor of the Black Shirts depicts the spirit that was aroused in Italy by the Abyssinian incident.

Improving Face That is Too Fall

It Can Be Done by Arranging Coiffure Close to Head, Adjusting Makeup

(The Beauty Box)

Mona Barrie

She keeps her coiffure as close to the head as possible.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hair dress and makeup can do much to improve a face that is too full. Locks should be swept back neatly, the coiffure arranged as close to the head as possible, with a rather long line at the rear. If ears are small and pretty they should be revealed.

When rouge is used, let it highlight the cheek bones and eyelids.

New purple-red shades and mahogany tones are trying. It is sometimes necessary to make a complete change in the makeup scheme when these colors are worn. It is specially necessary to see that the lipstick doesn't start a color fight. A deeper tone of powder is a help.

Green is trying. Dark powder not so good with it, as is a lighter one. The skin should look delicate and transparent. That's the beauty law of 1935.

Can a woman change the contour of her lips by the manipulation of the rouge stick? Not much. All right for the lovely ladies of the silver screen, they can get away with anything. But in the strong light of day, carmine that meanders over onto the white skin is all too apparent.

The pointed lipstick is a treasure. It pencils a clearer outline than the ordinary product. Of course, the colors must be precisely right. How to get it so must be left to the decision of your mirror and the seeing eye.

Always alive to novelties, clever designers are concentrating on new bandeaux and hats for evening wear. One woman wears a bandeau formed of tiny birds in brilliant colorings, the wings making points.

Sweetness and light colorings mark many of the new resort suits. Pastel tones, with fox and wolf dyed to match, are being promoted. A charming suit is in banana yellow woolen. The neat simple suit is worn with a swagger topcoat collared with a huge double ruff of fox dyed exactly to tone.

A nice thought is to wear a flower-trimmed hat with a suit and match the flowers by a boutoniere. A suit of gray flannel has a red carnation which matches the carnations posed against the pinched crown of the gray felt hat worn with the suit.

Don't bother to open your bag and search for a mirror. Just see that you buy one of the new bags that use mirrors as trim. A bag of red calfskin has a double mirror of unbreakable glass set into the upper half of the bag.

At least one printed evening frock should be in every good wardrobe. A new and charming model is in pure dye silk crepe patterned in a Chinese design in yellow and absinthe. Epaulettes and the bow which extends from them, are in jade green velvet. There is a deep peplum which may be detached and worn as a cape.

A good friend is a new double-duty frock in black matelasse. It has a long tunic which, when removed, reveals a sleeveless dinner dress. The wide sleeves of the tunic are faced in white and there are white flowers posed close to the throat.

BAILIFFS FIND WOMAN ILL

Toronto, March 1 (CP)— When Bailiffs called at a Rebecca street house today to evict a foreign family, they found the mother of a number of children ill in bed. When members of the family objected to the eviction and threatened violence, the Bailiffs called police. One officer stood guard at the house to see there was no trouble.

Annual Commencement Exercises Held at Stirling High School

Stirling, March 2—Stirling theatre was packed to capacity on Wednesday evening, when in conjunction with their annual commencement exercises, the pupils of the high school presented a high class, laugh provoking operetta in such a striking manner that people are still talking about it. The lovely costumes, music, dancing, and fine acting of the man characters were greatly appreciated by one of the largest audiences seen in the theatre for some time.

Principal R. G. Lawlor, acting as chairman, gave the opening address of welcome. He then called on C. R. Bastedo, chairman of the Board of Education, who spoke briefly of the splendid work accomplished by the very capable teaching staff of Stirling high school. He then made the presentation of the General Proficincy prize, donated by Principal R. G. Lawlor to Gerald Sprentall. The following prizes were presented in their respective order.

1. Proficiency Prizes—

M. S. Agriculture II; donated by Dr. H. H. Alger: Francis Snowden.

M.S. Agriculture I; donated by F. T. Ward: Wendell Thompson.

M.S. English, donated by E. A. Luery: Phyllis Mitchell.

Boys' Intermediate champion: Jack Potter.

Boys' Junior champion: Carl Mumby.

Presented by Reeve of Sidney, Arthur Burke.

4. Profiency Medal: John Munro.

Presented by the Dono—J. B. Belshaw.

Mr. Belshaw also presented the special ribbon, donated by the Ontario Horticulture Society, for the best kept garden of the community, to Miss Olive Stewart and Miss Ella Sutherland for their fine work in the school garden. Two beautiful bouquets accompanied the special prize.

5. Scholarships, donated by the students: 10.00 each:

Form III.: Highest average on 5 subjects: Wendell Thompson.

Form II: Highest average on 7 subjects: Ralph Campbell.

Form I: Highest average on 7 subjects: Helen Morrow.

Presented by E. A. Luery.

6. Proficiency Prize: L.S. Penmanship: Mary Donohoe.

Presented by donor, C. N. Baker.

7. Field day shield: Form V.

Presented by H. Scollie.

In presenting this shield, Mr. Scollie mentioned that this particular group of students had won it for the past five years, thus establishing a record. Winning it five years ago as first form students, they have taken it every year since.

8. Stratchcona Medal for markmanship: Francis Snowden.

9. Thomas Ward Scout cup: Wellington Snowden.

10. Valedictorian Address: Donalda Richardson.

11. Hon. J. R. Cooke Scholarship, $50: Donalda Richardson.

Presented by Reeve W. C. West.

The valedictorian address which was prepared by Donalda Richardson, who was unable to be present, was read by Margaret Craig, who was second in standing to Miss Richardson. Miss Craig also accepted the Hon. J. R. Cooke Scholarship on behalf of her fellow student. Miss Richardson, besides winning the scholarship, has also won two others: The Carter Scholarship for the student entering Queen's University with the highest standing in matriculation examination, and the Bruce Scholarship.

Miss Calow at the piano.

The dancing was under the direction of Miss Mundy.

Designer and arranger of costumes, Miss Burch.

The scene was a Swiss garden in preparation for a celebration in honor of Johann Von Bimmer, (Jimmy Ward), who has also invented a new brand of cheese for his father's cheese factory, for which the town of Uppendown is famous. Jimmy Sherriff, (Harold Baker) typical wise cracking, young American lad enters as a man of mystery. He creates a great deal of suspicion with his interest in the new cheese formula, and a deal of discomfort to the native young men with his love making to the belles of the town. Invited by the Mayor, (Reg. Mathison) to remain for the party, he undertakes the tremendous task of aiding him in preparing his official address to be delivered at the party. Mayor Peter Schultzs' futile attempt to overcome his native dialect is a riot of laughter. Continuing through the play with an air of mystery surrounding, Jimmy Sherriff's slightest flirtations are taken seriously by the charming daughter of the Mayor, Trini (Hilda Mathison) and her friend, Frieda (Irene Tucker) who before his arrival were in love with Johann and Hans, (John Munro). Hans provides many laughs with awkward stumbling feet, especially in his novelty dance number, (Pick 'em up and lay 'em Down. Many beautiful songs and choruses wind their way through this very delightful operette. The beauty of the native Swiss costumes, a spectacle of color, was a treat in itself.

Jimmy Sherriff dispels the mystery in the last act, when he declares himself the son of a big American cheese maker interested only in the invention of Johann Bimmer, and offers to take him to America to work for a fabulous salary. The natives who love Johann so dearly are sorrowful, particularly Trini, who has realized her love for him, as he is almost persuaded to accept the offer. He declines at the last moment, and decides to remain with his true love, declaring that romance is more important.

To offer bouquets to the stars would be to include them all. Carefully chosen, they lived their parts, which in some instances were quite difficult. Careful and long rehearsals under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute, Miss Mundy, and Miss Burch resulted in the presentation of this fine production.

Mrs. Sid. Mason of Springbrook is spending a few days at the home of her son, Mr. George Mason.

Donald Cook, Florence Rice, Neil Hamilton in "Fugitive Lady" coming to the Capitol screen for two days starting Monday.

DETECTIVES SILENT

BOSTON, March 1.—(CP)—Government agents continued to maintain silence today in the face of published reports Lindbergh ransom money had come to light here. Neither would United States Department of Justice representatives comment on reports the German Consul General had received information the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby was planned here and a gang of at least four men was involved.

Only Child Has Hard Fight

"What would you like to be when you grow up, Willie " asked the fond and interested female relative.

"A cowboy, I bet," bellowed the boosting uncle.

Willie looked scornfully through his horn-rimmed spectacles.

"Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief," sing-songed the despised Cousin Harold.

"Willie wants to be an engineer," mother pushed things forward tactfully, "don't you, Willie He's so interested in trains and bridges."

Willie remained silent.

"Come, Willie, tell us," urged the interested female relative, "please."

"I think," said Willie, "I'll just be a neurotic like papa," and stalked from the room.

Some twenty odd years after the prevalence for the small family had been permanently established, we discovered the maladjusted child, the adolescent possessed of a neurosis, the young man barred from a normal life by a fixation.

Were there no neurotics in our grandmothers time? Of course, but not so many. To be sure a few chronic invalids created their own method for attracting attention, but for the most part children belonging to large families, there were hardly anything but, were too preoccupied in "holding their own" against their numerous brothers and sisters to worry about collecting a neurosis, or a fixation. Mothers had time to nurse their children if they were sick, but no time at all to worry them into sickness.

Many Babies Then

Babies arrived too quickly for even the first to become accustomed to the center of the stage. As for jealousy—it seldom had enough opportunity to become concentrated to acquire much power. If there was a favorite—the others banded together against him, enough of them always to find power, and consolation in each other's company.

But the only child of two doting parents, what chance has he to avoid complexes? The center of the world—or a concentrated rivalry for it. Oversupervised in his play and experiments, overindulged, overloved, and worried over, the only child is defeated before he starts, unless possessed of parents unusual in character, vision and understanding.

A child possessed of several brothers and sisters must fight for his place in the sun. He cannot win attention and praise, simply by being "a child" of his paretns, he must be something a little special. His mistakes, too, are not so apt to attract attention or be taken so seriously. Everybody's too busy, everybody's attention is divided.

For a child to adjust himself to a big family prepares him for world adjustment later on. He lives in a friendly world, but a world not pre-disposed in his favor alone. But in a small family no such lesson is learned, at least seldom. The child or the two children receive much more attention and interference than they must learn to content themselves with when they mature and leave home.

REFUNDING BILL PASSES

Ottawa, March 2—(CP)—A bill to give authority for refunding of Canadian National securities awaited only royal assent to become law.

The "Probability" is the refunding will take place, according to a statement of Senator Arthur Meighen in the Upper Chamber Thursday when the measure was given second and third readings. Interest saving will amount to $2,500,000.

FACES NEW TESTS

Bedridden for four years with a tropical illness, Edwina Booth has been confined in a darkened room, seriously ill, for the past two months, it was learned in Los Angeles. Miss Booth has on file in New York a suit for $1,000,000 against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Company, charging she became seriously and permanently ill from lack of medical care while starring in "Trader Horn", filmed in African wilds. The picture company has requested New York courts for an order that the actress submit to X-ray and blood tests.

Library Corner

"Crucibles" is a history of chemistry told in biographies, brilliantly written, full of interesting personalities and with the necessary scientific explanation worked in with as few repellent terms as possible. It is a work which laymen, students, and masters may read with the utmost enjoyment and profit. It has been highly recommended, having received the Francis Bacon award for the humanizing of knowledge.

Mr. Jaffe begins by showing how the chemical urge forced itself on deep thinking men. The story of the lives of the early search for the "philosopher's stone" and "the elixer of life" is contained in the book. The hopeless searching gave us the basis of our modern chemistry, but the lives of these men were hard and bitter.

Each life story is written in a simple and direct style. In this vivid story the great chemists who laboured to make chemistry understood by the masses seem to march before us, Priestly with his discovery of oxygen; Mosley giving to chemical research the law of atomic numbers; and Dalton who first presented to chemistry definite laws.

"Crucibles" is a most remarkable piece of work. It is a book well worth reading, one which we can highly recommend.

The experiment of planning the whole Economic and social life of a huge nation now being carried out in Soviet Russia is of interest to every thinking adult of today. Russia is certainly going somewhere, whether it be in the right direction or not, her progress is based on her Five Year Plans, the second of which is now under way.

"The Second Five Year Plan" gives, in surprising detail, what has been done under the first Plan, and what the second hopes to accomplish.

The book is, perhaps, too devoted to tables of facts to be interesting in style, but as a source of information, which it is obviously meant to be, it is excellent.

"To The North" by Jeannette Mirsky is the story of Arctic exploration from earliest times to the present.

In addition to a preface by Vilhjalmur Stefansson the book contains a complete story of the Amundsen-Ellsworth flight, the flight of the Norge and Wilkins crossing from Point Barrow to Spitzbergen. The tragedy of the ill-fated Italia is vividly told.

The book is profusely illustrated with scenes of the Arctic taken by the explorers as well as pictures of the explorers themselves.

Miss Mirsky's book resembles Well's "Outline of History" in that spotlights are not reserved exclusively for play on heroes of the author's nationality.

"Down The Ice" by Foster Hewitt was published to meet the demand for a book on ice-hockey that can be readily understood by both hockey players and hockey fans alike.

Foster Hewitt first became interested in radio whilst in Varsity in 1921, and attended the first radio exhibition in Detroit, where his enthusiasm was fired to become a sports broadcaster. He has broadcast more than one thousand sports events, and has enabled many thousands of hockey enthusiasts who have never seen a big-league game, to enjoy a match.

Undoubtedly all enthusiasts will appreciate the interesting chapters devoted to playing conditions in the early days of the game, and lesser known facts in connection with present day players. Young players will welcome the pages that have been written especially for their benefit.

Foster Hewitt, with his close contact with players, coaches, and hockey authorities, is probably better qualified to write on these subjects than any other person today. The Pen Club.

JUBILEE DATES

Ottawa, Mar. 2 (CP)—The Canada Gazette today carried a proclamation requesting special thanksgiving services in all Canadian churches May 5 and setting aside May 6, the 25th anniversary of King George's accession, as a "day of general thanksgiving and rejoicing on the occasion of our silver jubilee."

"Crying over nothing"

When a mild reproof brings a flood of tears . . . or a plucky child cries for a trifling hurt . . . take heed! Often such outbursts are little flags of warning!

One of several things may be to blame—acid stomach, flatulence . . . perhaps your child is catching cold. Or maybe it is constipation—a disorder so common that 90% of all children are affected by it.

Give your child Castoria

When a child is unusually "touchy" it is wise to give a laxative. But be sure to give a child's laxative . . . not an adult laxative that may upset digestion and cause griping pain.

Give Castoria! It is made especially for children. They love its pleasant taste. It is gentle, safe—yet effective and thorough.

The "standby" in 5,000,000 homes

In more than 5,000,000 homes, mothers of children of all ages—from babyhood to 11 years—give Castoria for constipation—and for all those little symptoms that point to incomplete elimination.

Next time you take your child to the doctor for a regular check-up, ask him about Castoria. He will tell you that it contains no harsh, irritating ingredients—only such ingredients as are mild, effective and suitable for children.

Buy the family-size bottle. It is more economical.

CHURCH TRAMP

Rev. Raymond Calkins, D.D., pastor of the First Congregational Church, Cambridge, recently interviewed by the Boston Transcript, said, among other things: "It seems to me that one of the most desperate aspects of contemporary life is to see people migrating from one church to another for the purpose of hearing what this or that minister will say. Those persons," he averred, "go to be entertained, not to worship."

The regrets of the Cambridge pastor are shared by many of our local preachers. Talking to one of these a few weeks ago, we expressed regret at not being better acquainted with the work of his mission. "It is impossible to make one's influence count," we said, "If one is sunning around visiting other churches," and in conclusion we said: "We do not believe in church tramps". His only comment was: "May your tribe increase."

City pastors are finding the spirit of competition more and more evident. Too great emphasis is being laid upon attracting crowds, which is all right in its place, but when one congregation is large at the expense of another the purpose of the Church has not been served. We are not here condemning the pastor who makes his service interesting for his people; but we are voicing disapproval of the men and women who call themselves church members and Christians, and who neglect to serve and support the church of which they are members.

There is an advertising slogan that reads: "It's the steady rain that soaks" in the church it is the steady contributor of service and money whose life counts most. One of the credentials in the Christian life is faithfulness. We contend that the Sunday School teacher or church member who is not faithful and loyal to his or her own church, need not expect to have any lasting influence upon the younger generation. Steady, conscientious church attendance has its uplifting effect upon fellow church members. There is in the church of which the writer is a member, a family whose influence is far-reaching; father and mother and three daughters, are seldom absent from services, and four out of five are choir members. Two daughters are Sunday school teachers; a third is a pupil. This record of faithfulness has been a great inspiration to us, and like the pastor mentioned earlier we say: "May their tribe increase." The churches of God need more resident members and fewer church tramps whose presence and influence never remain long enough to penetrate.

Dr. Calkins, whose words led to the subject of church tramps, declares that he never announces the subject of a sermon. No one knows what the subject is to be until he gets to the church. Further, he said: 'I am not sure that it ought to be the ideal of a preacher to see how many people he can get to church—to be actuated by figures and statistics."

The pastor's words give food for serious thought, for both pulpit and pew are responsible for the number of church tramps that are migrating from church to church. Congregation is not a Christian word; nor is it a Christian practice—is it responsible for the tramp? If so, it ought to be eliminated at once. Are the church tramps responsible for the competition? If so, they ought not to be catered to.—Toront Globe.

OBJECT LESSON

A remarkable picture of a young Los Angeles traffic violator, Miss Mary Reeves, as she gazed in horror at the lifeless body of an auto victim in the Los Angeles county morgue. She was one of many ordered as part of their sentence for traffic law infringment to tiptoe past the lifeless forms. This "mental torture" is believed by Municipal Judge Edward Brand to be a better punishment than fine.

AT THE BELLE

Laugh-Crammed Picture "Gilded Lily" Stars Colbert in Comedienne Lead

A gay, sprightly and light-spirited new comedy "The Gilded Lily", is now on the Belle screen with beautiful Claudette Colbert in the starring role and two handsome new leading men supporting her.

A bright and intelligent film — full of warm, human comedy touches, it presents Miss Colbert in her first singing and dancing role since the same lady scored her hit in "Torch Singer".

The plot of "The Gilded Lily" concerns a pair of amiable people whose principal diversion consists of sitting on a park bench and munching popcorn. But their blissful heaven is broken up when Claudette Colbert, the girl, falls in love with an English noble, Ray Milland, visiting the United States incognito.

When he walks out on her, her old boy-friend, Fred MacMurray, who is, incidentally, a reporter, turns press-agent and booms Miss Colbert into an overnight sensation as the girl who jilted a duke. In time she and Milland come together again in London. She has never completely recovered from her love for him, but his treatment finally opens her eyes. She realizes, suddenly, that she has been in love with MacMurray all the time and hurries back to the United States. In the final close-up we see this lovable pair happily munching popcorn on their favorite park bench.

Supporting the principal players in excellent casted and acted minor roles are C. Aubrey Smith, Luis Alberni, Edward Craven and Tom Dugan, who does a grand job in a bit role as a vagabond.

Wesley Ruggles is responsible for the sustained and clever direction that help to make the picture so distinctive.

Zane Grey Western

It is not often that an adventure romance of the wide open spaces boasts a cast of seasoned performers to compare with that of Zane Grey's "Rocky Mountain Mystery" the second feature attraction on the same program.

Headed by Randolph Scott, veteran of Zane Grey Paramount Pictures, and Ann Sheridan in the leading romantic roles the cast includes Charles "Chic" Sale, famous for his comedy characterizations on the stage and screen, Mrs. Leslie Carter famous stage star, George Marion, Sr; a stage and screen veteran.

Kathleen Burke, Florence Roberts, stage star with a quarter of a century of service to her credit, Willie Fung and James Eagles, jr.

Directed by Charles Barton, director of "Wagon Wheels", "Rocky Mountain Mystery" is a blend of romance, drama and mystery, centering about murders committed in one of the eerie, ghost mining towns of the West.

The popular Belle Latest News of the world will be exhibited on the same program.

"The Gilded Lily" will be presented daily at 2.40, 7.20 and 9.55. "The Rocky Mountain Mystery" will be presented daily at 3.45 and 8.30. The last complete show starts at 8.30 p. m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Fugitive Lady" A delightful, Romantic, Comedy Drama

A genuinely touching love story, set in a diadem of hilarious comedy and stirring dramatic thrills comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre Monday and Tuesday only under the title, "Fugitive Lady." This is the film in which Florence Rice, talented daughter of sports writer Grantland Rice, and Broadway favorite for years, makes her cinema debut. The event is an auspicious one and presents the lovely Miss Rice as a glorious new screen sensation.

That indefinable quality which makes screen audiences believe the story they are seeing—makes them feel they are personally absorbed in a moving bit of life—is the rare quality possessed by Miss Rice and transmitted to the screen in beautiful and effective acting.

As Ann Duncan, the orphaned girl who is making her own way in the world, Miss Rice becomes innocently involved with a smooth confidence man, played by handsome Donald Cook in his first role as a heavy. He escapes the police, letting her take the rap. Enroute to prison Ann is seriously hurt in a train wreck, her jail matron is killed, and through mistaken identity she is sent to the well-to-do home of Donald Brooks, played by charming Neil Hamilton, as his wife, who was killed in the wreck. But whimsical Donald gets a kick out of the situation, then gets a serious interest in his patient, and romance blossoms despite the girl's attempts to dissuade him because the police are still hunting her.

Burglars, entering the house in the disguise of hired caterers are interrupted robbing the safe by Ann, who comes face to face with her old deserter. Thus is her romance sent crashing to earth by the confidence man's exposure threats. Tense drama, comedy, and heart-aches fill the following scenes, enacted by Miss Rice and Hamilton with compelling power and sincerity.

William Demarest and Matt McHugh, former vaudeville headliners, get in a peck of hilarious troubles as accomplices of Cook. Clara Blandick, "acid comedienne" of fifty pictures in five years, in the role of "Donald's" sarcastic yet romance-hunting spinster aunt, provides many a comedy bit as well as delighting with her old fashioned horse sense philosophy.

"Fugitive Lady" is one of the year's most beautiful love stories, and a romantic melodrama of high class entertainment values.

Excellent Featurettes

"What This Country Needs", a clever Broadway Brevity; "Screen Snapshots", showing intimate glimpses of several well known movie stars at work and play; and an amusing and interesting Travelaugh "With Medbury in Ethiopia" comprise the short subjects, which will be shown at each performance in support of the feature attraction.

"Du Barry" Tea Plates Monday and Tuesday only.

Shows at 2.30; 7.15; 9.06.

Last Times Tonight

"Murder in the Clouds" exciting air thriller starring Ann Dvorak with Lyle Talbot, and "Ready for Love" co-featuring Ida Lupino and Richard Arlen.

LONDON TECS BACK ON TOP

London, Ont., March 2 (CP)—After an absence of more than a month, London Tecumsehs were back on the top spot of the International Hockey League today.

They moved onto the upper rung with Detroit Olympics last night when they defeated Syracuse Stars 4-1, and got out of a second place tie with Buffalo.

Three thousand five hundred fans watched the Londoners go to town. Jack Toupin and Eric Pettinger, former Regina playmaker, scored twice each for the winners with the Stars' lonesome goal coming from Dave Downie.

Jackie Forbes played his second game in the nets for London, whose regular goalie, Herb Stuart, is still out of action with an eye injury received last Sunday. He turned aside 32 shots.

Toupin opened scoring midway through the first period on a pass from Sammy Godin. Two minutes later Kenny laid Pettinger a nice pass for the second goal.

Downie took Jack Markle's pass in the second period for the Syracuse tally. Bill Brophy and Sammy Godin provided assists for Toupin to score his second goal in the third frame and Jimmy Arnott and Eddie Ouellette were Pettinger's helpers.

McCARTHY SAYS LITTLE ABOUT RUTH'S MOVE

Manager of Yankees Wishes 'Bam' Good Luck

BUFFALO, March 2.—Joe McCarthy, manager of New York Yankees, departed in high spirits last night for the ball team's training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., but he was still silent on the deal which sent Babe Ruth to Boston Braves.

"I wish Ruth all possible luck," said McCarthy, "and that's all I will say about the deal."

Pressed for an opinion whether the release of the Bambino weakened or allowed an opening to strengthen the Yanks, Marse Joe declared "the league standing at the end of the race will determine that."

McCarthy previously had said the Yanks should be no worse than last season, when they finished second.

The veteran manager believes Earl Coombs, who suffered a fractured skull when he crashed into a wall last season, and Bill Dickey, regular catcher, whose throwing hand was hurt, will both be ready for regular duty.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, March 2 (CP)— Gold stocks climbed into higher ground in today's short session of Toronto exchange, stimulated by another sharp rise in the price of metal in London.

Lake Shore sold at $58, a gain of 1.10 and other advances were 50 cents for Dome, Hollinger 30, Teck Hughes 20, Wright Hargreaves 15, and Bralorne 15. McIntyre added 50 cents. Hollinger touched $20 up 50.

Net gains of 8 to 15 cents were registered for San Antonio, Sheep Creek, Prospectors Airways, McKenzie, Beattie and Buffalo-Ankerite and smaller advances for Central Patricia, Howey, Siscoe, Reno, Pickle Crow, Sylvanite and McWatters.

Noranda closed at 35.25 up 25 cents. Mining Corporation and Falconbridge did a little better and in the silvers higher prices ruled for Nipissing, Bear, Castle and Premier.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Mar. 2 (CP)—The industrial share section of Toronto Exchange today continued to move listlessly. Only about 12,000 shares changed hands.

Buying was good in Abitibi at $1.30 for a small gain and Beauharnois closed ¼-point lower at 5. Other utilities were unchanged or lower. Bell Telephone and Consumers Gas took losses. Food shares were mainly unchanged with Westons appearing on the down side.

Brazilian traded at a gain of ⅛ and Nickel, C.P.R. and Ford "A" recorded recessions of ⅛ to ⅜. With exception of a gain of ⅛ for International Petroleum, the oils finished slightly off.

The few advances boarded involved Building Products, National Steel Car, Canadian General Electric Pref., Crows Nest and Harding Carpets.

BOY LOSES LIFE FALLING OFF ICE

LONDON, Ont., March 2—(CP)—Jimmie Hastings, nine-year-old London boy, died today after falling into the city waters of the Thames River. Firemen and police struggled with a pulmotor for three quarters of an hour in a vain attempt to save the boy's life.

Jimmie was pulled from the cold water at 10.30 o'clock this morning after being immersed for several minutes. With his brother Ted, 11, and Don and Stewart Phillips, he was playing on an ice cake at the foot of Richmond street when it broke up. Ted swam ashore and the Phillips boys were pulled from the river by passersby but it was several minutes before Jimmie was taken out.

MINING CAMP IS OUT FOR RECORD

Sturgeon River Company Hopes to Produce Within 18 Months

By LESLIE ROBERTS

Jellicoe, Ont., Mar. 2 (CP)—If the Sturgeon River gold camp, hurried into being last summer when spectacular discoveries were made, possesses one ambition above all others it is to reach out to production in the shortest possible time on record, in all the north's mining history.

Little Long Lac which marks the eastern gateway to the area is not part of the Sturgeon field, shattered all speed records in mine-making when its operators went from the grass roots to gold production in a matter of a year and a half. Sturgeon predicts Little Long Lac's fast timing may be defeated.

Already ambition underground programs are planned on the most important showing on the river. One company will carry its property down 500 feet as a first and immediate stage. Contracts have been let for the cutting of 3,000 cords of wood to feed boiler fires which will provide the power for sinking operations.

Equipment Purchased.

Equipment has been purchased for shaft-sinking and underground development. The winter road, running across country from the railroad to the river, is being shipshaped to provide safe transportation for heavy machinery. A special unloading platform is being built by Canadian National Railways to facilitate movement of the heavy mining plant.

Within a few days the first outfit for serious underground work will be on its way from the steel into the bush, marking the passing of the first phase of the camp's development — surface exploration — and the beginning of the mine making era.

On half a dozen major properties drilling campaigns are proceeding to check surface formations at depth. Throughout the newly-discovered field, development is advancing rapidly from the primary stages into the intermediate condition which lies between the prospect and the mine-in-the-making.

Local Market

Mild weather prevailing and road conditions being good had the effect of inducing many of our farmer friends to visit the city on Saturday. The market was one of the largest held here for some weeks, with an abundance of farm and garden produce offered for sale. Changes to note in prices were of a major nature. Whilst the hog market shows no change in prices, a weakening condition appears to be in the making. Dressed beef by the quarter showed a gain of one cent per pound over last week's prices.

The interior of the market was a busy place during the forenoon. Dressed poultry was offered for sale in considerable quantities as were eggs and butter with no change in price. Home-cooking was also prominent. In the fish line there was a decided increase in the price of mudcats, owing to their scarcity.

Quotations were as follows:

Egg Prices Decline During Past Week

Toronto, March 2— Eggs dipped further here yesterday, the day's losses extending to two cents per dozen for some grades. The week for eggs started off pretty well on Monday, extensive gains being marked up. Subsequent sharp declines, however, have more than offset the advance, with the result that quotations yesterday were below last week's final levels.

Opinion is that there will be no recovery in the market until supplies on hand are cleaned up. The brisk advance of last week brought eggs into the city that usually were labelled for Windsor, London, Montreal, etc., with the result that supplies have been more than ample to take care of consumer demand. The latter failed to keep up with the sharp price gains, thus also having a bearish effect on the market.

Butter, cheese, churning cream and poultry held fairly steady.

VERMILYEA STILL REMAINS CALM

Receives Spiritual Counsel From Salvation Army Adjutant

Harold W. Vermilyea's snobbish attitude toward death is still as evident as ever.

The county's chief prisoner, sentenced to hang in this city, on May 2nd next for the slaying of his aged mother here last October 4, is passing his remaining days in close confinement at the Hastings County Gaol, wise-cracking with his special guards, playing solitaire in his blankets, exercising for brief periods in the jail corridors and singing at times.

Vermilyea is sleeping easier for the past few nights. Instead of the plain bed of blankets on his latticed cot in the cell, the condemned man has been furnished a mattress by Governor G. H. French. Communication with the office of the Inspector of Prisons to determine the jail status of a condemned man, confirmed the action of the jail staff in providing the prisoner with special meals and other privileges.

Vermilyea will walk to the gallows with head held high, it is firmly believed by guards and jail staff. The same stoic calm that marked him all during the preliminary hearing and the stretched out days of the trial in the court house is still apparent. "Vermilyea is too proud to cause any fuss and will meet May 2nd as he has met every circumstance since the first day of his arrest," it was stated by one guard.

Adjutant A. W. Martin of the Salvation Army Citadel at Belleville will pay his first visit since the conviction of Vermilyea to the condemned man's cell in the presence of guards this afternoon. The "army" officer explained to the reporter today that he had not visited Vermilyea since the trial closed because he desired to meet the man who would have time to be in a more composed state than would be likely after the trying time of the past few weeks. "I would have visited him tomorrow, Sunday, that being the regular day, but I am not in the city tomorrow and so I shall go to see him this afternoon. Besides I shall hold myself in readiness to be able to go to him at any time when he wishes spiritual guidance."

Prior to the trial Mr. Martin has visited Vermilyea and during the trial sat at his side near the dock.

So far as can be learned there has been no decision as to an appeal by counsel in the Vermilyea case. The defence has twenty days from the time of conviction in which to enter appeal should such be decided upon.

FOUR YOUTHS IN JUVENILE COURT

Three Given Suspended Sentences And One Sent to School

Three sentences of two years suspended sentence and committal of a fourth person to an industrial school were meted out by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in Juvenile Court today.

Four local youths appeared before His Worship, two being charged with breaking and entering Walker's Hardware and Kellaway's Grocery, while the remaining two faced charges of robbing local charity boxes, all pleading guilty.

The parents or guardians of all the boys were present and His Worship meted out a severe lecture to all four lads and their parents. One of the boys, who had been previously in the local Juvenile Court on numerous charges, was committed to the industrial school at Alfred, Ontario. The remaining three were given a two years suspended sentence.

T. D. Ruston, local superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, was in court and reported that the one boy was "wayward", but had a high standing in his academic career. The boy's mother informed the court that she had no control over the lad and readily consented to his being committed to the industrial school.

Magistrate Butler called the remaining three boys in front of him and administered a severe lecture relating to the wayward path on which they were apparently launched. With tears in their eyes the boys promised the court to be of good behaviour in the future. It was the first offence for two of the four lads.

SUBMARINE AFIRE REACHES SHELTER

British Craft With Fire in Engine Room Now Safe

Valletta, Malta, March 2—(CP Cable via Reuters):—The big British submarine Oxley with a fire in her engine room succeeded in reaching shelter in the lee of Tunis Bay today. Apparently the fire, if not under control, had been kept to minimum proportions and there was no necessity of taking her crew off. The cruiser Despatch left here today to take charge of the Oxley and bring her to the Malta base.

ACCOUNT OF RACE TOLD IN LETTER

Geo. Pepper Says Officials Did Not Give Him Best of Argument

An interesting letter was received today by William Pepper, father of George Pepper, who made such a fine showing in the 200-mile motorcycle race held recently at Jacksonville, Florida. The youthful rider stated he got the well known "works" from the officials and was finally placed third in the standings. George states, that he lost four laps on account of a faulty gas line, and the loss of his gasoline tank cap but at that finished in front one lap ahead of the winner. The man that was placed second, the letter states was helped by his mechanic to start his machine, which is not allowed under the rules. At the conclusion of the race young Pepper was only 100 feet behind the winner but had he been given the laps, would have finished in front. A big argument ensued after the race and officials at first wanted to place him fifth but some of the judges disagreed and he was placed third. The letter further states, that Pepper will enter a dirt track race at Miami Florida on Sunday and he expects to win as the riders in that part have not had much experience in this class of racing.

Meets Campbell

The young rider, who has brought fame to this city has had the privilege of meeting Sir Malcolm Campbell and also has had the privilege of entering the pit and inspecting the Bluebird at close range, which privilege is not granted to many. "The car" he says "is closely guarded night and day." He has also met "Wild Bill" Cumming, who drove a Deisel motored car to a new record recently at Daytona Beach. During his sojourn in the south, George has met a few people from this section, who have showed him around the city, he seeing many points of interest, that would not be opened to him had it not been for these friends.

George Pepper, youthful Canadian motorcycle rider who placed third in the 200-mile race at Jacksonville Sunday, is here to set an official record for class C motorcycles.

Pepper, who hails from Belleville, Ontario, today had secured the official sanction of the American Motorcycle association, which has consented to pay his sanction fee, and was seeking the sanction of the A. A. A. and the service of its officials and electrical timing device. Ted Allen, secretary of the A. A. A. contest board, was expected to give a reply to Pepper's request.

Pepper will drive an English Norton stock cycle for the record, which is for motorcycles having a 30 cubic inch piston displacement. He said that at present there is no official record for this class. He declared his motorcycle was the fastest in the race at Jacksonville but that a leaking gasoline cap forced him to stop four times, losing two laps each stop. It has a speed capacity of about 90 miles an hour, Pepper said.

DEPUTATION TO MEET COMMISSION

Strike of Toronto Police Force Likely to be Averted

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—There is no fear of a strike of Toronto police officers, Mayor James Simpson announced today after a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners. The mayor said an amicable settlement was about to be reached and the strike is off.

Toronto, Mar. 2 (CP)—Toronto Police Commission went into an emergency meeting this morning in an effort to avert a threatened strike of the city's police officers

A deputation from the Police Association which voted to strike following cancellation by the Board of Control of the merit mark-bonus system waited to appear before the meeting. The deputation was authorized to bring up the subject of an eight-hour day and other grievances.

"If the worst comes to the worst" a board of arbitration would be called to settle the dispute, Mayor Jas Simpson said, adding should a strike occur he "would hesitate to call out the militia". He said he did not think there would be a strike.

Magistrate Frank Denton, K.C., Judge W. J. T. Lee and Mayor Simpson, commissioners, expressed themselves as "sympathetic" with the attitude of the Police Association.

Detective William Hutchinson, president of the Police Association, who yesterday announced police officers would strike tonight at midnight if their request was not granted, was confident a settlement could be arranged.

ENGLISH CUP

LONDON, March 2—(CP Cable)—Three strong favorites for the English Cup made their exit from the big Soccer Competition in the sixth round games played today.

Sheffield Wednesday blasted Arsenal's hopes, winning 2-1, Bolton Wanderers put out Everton at Liverpool by an identical score, while Burnley, making a great second-half recovery, nosed out Birmingham 3-2.

In a great battle between the two First Division Clubs, West Bromwich Albion defeated Preston North End by the only goal of the game.

The victories of Bolton Wanderers and Burnley were in the nature of surprises. Both clubs are in the Second Division, while their opponents are Senior League sides.

Sixty-five thousand crowded into the Everton rounds and a similar number passed through the turnstiles at Sheffield, where an early rain made the ground soft. Attendances at each of the other games were approximately 50,000.

London, March 2 (CP Cable)—Sixth round matches of the English Soccer Cup competition played today resulted as follows:

Everton 1; Bolton Wanderers 2.
West Bromwich Albion 1; Preston North End 0.

'BLUEBIRD' OUT FOR RECORD RUN

Beach in Condition For Sir Malcolm Campbell To Step on Gas

Daytona Beach Speedway, Fla., Mar. 2 (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell failed to hit 200 miles an hour on his south run down the beach today as he resumed his efforts to break his own 272.108 mile an hour automobile speed record. His time through the measured mile was 188.186 miles an hour.

Daytona Beach speedway, Fla., March 2—(AP)— Sir Malcolm Campbell decided beach conditions were ripe for a test run today and ordered his giant Bluebird racing car, holder of the present 272.108 mile an hour record, taken to the beach. Low tide, when the beach is widest, was at 11.27 a. m.

The night tides further smoothed the beach. His mechanics poured hot oil in the motor, flags were set along the course and the timing apparatus put up.

Although Sir Malcolm merely said he was taking the car out for a test run, an air of suppressed excitement gripped his entire party.

"I thing the governor's going to tread on it hard," said one of the mechanics.

Sir Malcolm made his 272.108 mile an hour record two years ago after saying he was merely going out for a "test" run.

The crowds gathered on the sands, the beach was given its final inspection as the sun came out brightly and burned off the haze.

"Pop" Meyers, president of the Indianapolis Speedway Corporation and referee of the speed trials, returned from a drive along the beach and said the sand was in condition for speeds up to 275 miles an hour, almost three above Sir Malcolm's present record.

POWER CONTRACTS ILLEGAL, OPINION HON. MR. ROEBUCK

Says They Are Illegal, Unenforceable And Void Ab Initio

RELIES ON B.N.A. ACT

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—In the British North America Act, the Extra-Provincial Corporations Act and the Act incorporating the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney-General, claims to have found justification for outlawing power purchase contracts the Commission negotiated with Quebec power companies—Beauharnois, Gatineau and MacLaren, Quebec.

Climaxing a nine-hour address on the Provincial Hydro situation, Mr. Roebuck declared in the Legislature yesterday the contracts are "illegal, unenforceable and void ab initio."

His words fell on a silent, expectant chamber, packed galleries and a press gallery watching hawk-like for an indication of Government policy.

"These contracts are iniquitous," Mr. Roebuck said. "They are strangleholds upon the people, whom we are sworn to represent. They will cramp the development of this province and may ruin its commercial structure."

Policy is Requested

Before Mr. Roebuck resumed his address in the throne speech debate, Col. W. H. Price (Cons. Toronto-Parkdale) demanded the Government announce its Hydro policy in order to prevent people gambling on the market and causing a scandal.

It would be known "soon enough" Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary and Acting Premier replied.

Mr. Roebuck made no recommendations to the Legislature. "It is not for me to make the decision," he said. "It is up to public opinion, to the Government of this Province, to the Opposition to join in some well-conceived scheme to right the wrong."

He found Section 92 of the British North America Act assigns to Provincial Legislatures jurisdiction over local workers and undertakings other than such:

"Lines of steam or other ships, railways, canals and telegraph and other works and undertakings connecting the province with any other or others of the provinces extending beyond the limits of the province."

Declares Contracts Illegal

Noting he had already pointed out the three companies were incorporated by Quebec Charter and the Hydro Commission by the Ontario Legislature, he said the contracts are illegal because they "involve the construction of works and undertakings, which connect one province with another or extend beyond the limits of a province.

Also, he said, the Act incorporating the Hydro Commission gave it power to purchase electrical energy "delivered within the province and not from without."

Further he contended, the Quebec Companies are under an additional disability because not one has taken out an extra-provincial license and while a company carrying on business in Ontario remains unlicensed it shall not, according to the Extra-Provincial Corporations Act, be capable of maintaining any court action in Ontario regarding a contract.

Before discussing the legal aspects, Mr. Roebuck has outlined the Beauharnois and MacLaren contracts and the Chats Falls power project.

The commission has under contract for delivery before the end of 1938, 8,000,000 horsepower. Additional facilities are required for this and construction costs amount to $16,000,000.

Expenditure of that sum would involve annual carrying charges of $1,500,000. He added to this the $9,525,000 the Commission must pay yearly for Quebec Power and estimated the annual deficit of the Niagara System would reach $8,580,623 by 1938.

Mr. Roebuck attacked the Chats Falls project, which was developed jointly with the Ottawa Valley Power Company. The Commission contracted to pay $15 a horsepower and R. T. Jeffrey, Chief Municipal Engineer of the Commission, reported to him the cost of this power was $6.86.

The Beauharnois agreement in 1929 was signed when "the Stock Market crash with its stop, look and listen warning" was already a month past, he declared, and suggested the early negotiations took place without record in the commission files.

The MacLaren deal was irregular, he said, because it proceeded without prior authority by Order-in-Council and without formal resolution of the Commission.

Say Present System of Egg Grading Unfair to Producers

Matter is Brought to Attention of Chambers of Commerce

SUGGEST SOLUTION

The annual meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will be held on Tuesday evening, March 26th. The directors have been fortunate in securing as guest speaker at the meeting Mr. D. Leo Dolan of Ottawa. Mr. Dolan, who is an interesting and entertaining speaker, is Director of the Canadian Travel Bureau which is operated in connection with the Canadian National Railways.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Directors of the Chamber on Thursday the present system of egg grading was given considerable consideration. The matter was brought to the attention of the directors by the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce and the co-operation of the Belleville Chamber was asked in rectifying the present system which the Peterboro Chamber states is very unsatisfactory. The Retail Merchants' Committee of the Peterboro Chamber has made a thorough study of the egg grading matter and has made specific recommendations to the directors. In the letter to the Belleville Chamber the Peterboro Chamber Directors state as follows: "The Directorate of our Chamber approve of this recommendation of the Retail Merchants' Committee and desire to pass it along to the different Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade in the Province of Ontario to get a cross section of their views on the matter, and when these are received to incorporate the best features of the opinions expressed when it will then be presented to the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa for their consideration. It is a question of vital importance to the largest single class of merchants in the province, namely the grocers, and we feel that the different Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce would be doing something worth while for a large percentage of members of our different Boards of Trade."

The defects in the present egg grading system and the recommendations improvement which the Peterboro Chamber requested the Belleville Chamber to consider are as follows:

System Inadequate

(1) That it is impossible to get two or more Inspectors to give the same grading on any one lot of eggs, in fact there are known instances where the one Inspector gave two different gradings on the same crate of eggs in one day.

(2) That the present egg-grading Law lends itself to the unscrupulous buyer as a means to defraud the small shipper or producer—as witness the drop in grading or quality when the market is falling or shows signs of weakness.

(3) That a strict interpretation of the By-Law is a very grave injustice to the producer as for example; wholesale quotations Jan. 7th, were as follows: Grade A large .24c per doz. Grade A medium .18c per doz. The quality in both grades is the same and the difference in weight may be only 1-2 oz.—in any case it cannot be more than 2 ozs. In other words he is being penalized 25% for what may be as little as 2% in food value and we doubt if there is any difference in the cost of production.

(4) That owing to the small volume of eggs passing through his hands it is impossible for the small producer or buyer to become sufficiently expert, or to maintain an expert to handle this part of the business, thereby leaving himself open to prosecution, and the producer at the mercy of the unscrupulous buyer.

Recommendations Suggested

After consulting with a number of farmers and small Producers, also smal lMerchants; we would suggest the following:

(1) That eggs be bought and sold by weight only.

(2) That they be graded in three classes Fresh—Storage—3rd Grade, for such eggs as cracked, dirty and blood spots—fit only for manufacturing purposes.

(3) That they be candled before a light to determine such defects as cracks, dirt, blood spots, and condition of freshness.

(4) That the merchant be allowed to buy eggs ungraded; as this would give him a chance to grade them at a time when business was slack instead of having to do so on a Saturday during rush hours, thereby, having to hire extra help thus adding to the cost which the consumer must pay in the end. Or the other alternative of paying part at the time of receipt and having the producer call again some days later for the balance of his pay. The small Merchant usually knows the people he is dealing with, and knows the quality of the eggs before hand, except for such defects as may occur in handling.

(5) That the merchant be prosecuted for offering for sale eggs unfit for human consumption, or for offering for sale storage eggs as fresh eggs or 3rd grade eggs as any other grade.

We believe that buying and selling of eggs by weight would give the producers an opportunity to know if they are getting a square deal, and the consumer would have at least one method of checking the value received for his money. At present there is not one consumer in a hundred that knows one grade from another.

We believe that the present egg regulations are so cluttered by grades and definitions of quality, and leaves so much to the judgment of each individual grader as to render it useless, a humbug, and a detriment to business and a dangerous opportunity to dishonest buyers to defraud the producer out of his just returns."

C. of C. in Accord

The Directors of the Belleville Chamber expressed entire agreement with the Peterboro Chamber in this matter and co-operation will be given towards improving the present egg grading system.

Mr. R. J. S. Dewar, County Registrar was a guest at the meeting and in acknowledging the welcome of the Directors, he congratulated them upon the excellent course of lectures given under the auspices of the Chamber this year.

The following directors were present: Messrs J. B. Boyce, President; E. P. Bernstein, W. C. Springer, E. V. Illsey, W. H. Morton, Leo. B. Riggs, Mackenzie Robertson and the Secretary-Manager, J. O. Herity.

ONLY 35 INSANE OF 235 KILLERS

British Pathologist Says Secrecy Too Great to be Borne

By THOMAS T .CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London Mar. 2—(CP(—Of 255 muderers who came under his observation only 35 were insane or mentally defective. This is the conclusion of Dr. W. Norwood East, a prison commissioner, who has submitted his deductions to the Medico-Legal Society.

Dr. East tabulated 188 murders committed by sane persons thus:

Due to quarrels, 46.

Due to jealousy, 46.

Inspired by pecuniary gain, 32.

Prompted by revenge, 31.

Due to desire to be rid of an inconvenient person 15.

Due to suicide pacts, 10.

Arising from attempts to avoid arrest, eight.

Some murderers appeared to commit crime largely to obtain for a brief space the spotlight of publicity. Of 300 homicides at Broadmoor prison, 62 were melancholics. It was common for the sane murderer to feign insanity and for the insane murderer to pretend to be sane.

Sir Bernard Spilsbury, the noted pathologist, agrees with Dr. East that murderers found the burden of secrecy too heavy to be borne. The sane murderer would have the crime on his mind from the time of its committal, would be continually turning it over, constructing his defence, and seeking self-justification until he would come to believe his own story.

BLACK BEAR FINDS SELF BIG GAME

Today Creature No Longer Fugitive From Law

Halifax, March 2—(CP)—The black bear doesn't know it yet, but he's big game in Nova Scotia now. Yesterday he was a fugitive with a price on his head; they claimed he killed game animals.

But after hearing the case for and against the black bear, the Nova Scotia Fish and Game Protective Association decided by formal resolution he was not a bounty creature but full-fledged game.

Otto Schierbeck, former Chief Forest Ranger for Nova Scotia, told the Association's annual meeting he had no evidence of black bears killing game though he had heard of their raiding sheep herds.

DID NOT SEE WIG WAG

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Mar. 1—(CP)—Two men narrowly escaped from death when their auto crashed

THREE RESIDENTS PLEAD GUILTY TO THEFTS OF COAL

Local Fuel Company Has Suffered Heavy Losses

PENALTY ASKED

Two men and one woman, all local residents, pleaded guilty to the theft of coal from the Canadian Fuels Limited when arranged before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., today. The two men were remanded in custody while the woman in question was allowed her liberty, all three having their cases enlarged for one week.

Robert Johnson, Walter Kellar and Mrs. Snowley Rushlow were the three arrested by local police on Feb. 24th last after being apprehended while stealing coal from the yards of the Canadian Fuels Limited situated on South Front St. The trio all admitted their part in the theft.

"Coal thieving has been going on for quite some time and at a tremendous loss to the company. These people are not stealing this coal for their own benefit, but it is being sold for a profit", stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., in summing up the case. "We have tried leniency in such cases before. I ask for a more severe penalty this time," added Mr. Donnan. All three charged denied they were stealing the coal for re-sale, stating that they were on relief and needed the coal for home consumption.

"There have been too many complaints relating to coal thefts in Belleville and I'll have to remand these two men, in custody, for one week. The woman, due to the fact she has a large family and was only used as a look-out in the matter, will be allowed her liberty for the time being but must appear for sentence next Friday, added His Worship in conclusion.

The Poice Court room was filled to capacity with men, women and children, some even being forced to sit on the floor, no persons being allowed to stand. The hallway outside was jammed with interested spectators as well.

Annoyed by Attention Given to Quintuplets

Windsor, Mar. 2—(CP)— When the plight of thousands of other children in Ontario is considered the care and attention given by the Province to the Dionne quintuplets is "criminal" in the opinion of Duncan B. Hind, former Deputy-Reeve of Sandwich.

"The quintuplets are taking up too much of the government's time while tens of thousands of children of their same age are not receiving the care they are entitled to," declared Mr. Hind in an address before the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Study Club.

Ten Million Loan Favored For Fishing

Ottawa, Mar. 2—(CP)— William Duff, Antigonish Liberal, will ask the government to establish a $10,000,000 lending fund for persons engaged in the fishing industry, he revealed in notice of motion before the House of Commons Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The resolution, seconded by Peter Venoit (Lib. Gloucester) would ask the government to make the money available to fishermen to assist them in obtaining supplies and equipment. It would also be distributed in the form of bonuses for shipbuilding and fish catch.

SAAR'S RETURN IS CELEBRATED

Hitler Joins in Exultation as Hymns of Victory Are Sung

Saarbruecken, Germany, March 2—(CP-Havas)—The Saar basin taken from Germany by the Versailles Treaty 16 years ago, was officially returned to the fatherland today in a frenzy of enthusiasm which reached a thunderous climax with the sudden arrival of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

The Nazi dictator flew from Berlin to share in the ceremonies carrying out the decision of the Saarlanders expressed in last month's plebiscite provided for when the Saar was placed under League of Nations and French rule in 1919.

Packed throngs, their jubilation undampened by downpours of rain, greeted the Chancellor with repeated "Heils" and the Nazi salute as he passed through the streets in an automobile enroute to the city hall.

Fortune Won In 3 Minutes

Monte Carlo, March 2—(AP)—Edward Robson, an Englishman, established something of a tradition today for good fortune in last minute whirls at the roulette wheel.

A year ago today Robson gave the wheel a final play just before he left the Casino to catch his train for London. He won 400,000 francs.

As train time approached today, Robson, having lost all his funds, borrowed a small sum from a friend. He placed it on No. 17. The number came up three times running.

With only 10 minutes to catch his train Robson dashed off richer by 300,000 francs (approximately $19,800).

PHILPOTT RETURNS

Toronto, Mar. 2—Captain Elmore Philpott, one-time leader of the C. C. F. Party in Ontario, who broke away from the Liberal Party two years ago and then severed his connections with the Canadian Commonwealth Federation last summer, has found grounds for renewed confidence in the Liberal group. In a statement issued last night, he announces his return to the Liberal camp.

HOPELESS INVALID RECEIVES AWARD

Bedridden For 24 Years Walter Dykes Blessing to Community

Salisburg, Md., March 2—(CP)—Walter Dykes, paralytic victim who has lain in bed for 24 years will receive Sunday the 1934 Salisbury award, an honor conferred annually on the citizen who has made the most unselfish contribution toward the betterment of community life.

The certificate will bear this inscription:

"Although hopelessly invalided and confined to his bed for the past 24 years, his spirit has never been broken; although in constant pain, he never has lost his smile of greeting for those who visit him.

"The trustees feel that his optimism, courage, endurance faith and tolerance endeared him to the heart of all who meet him and is a great contribution to the community in which he resides."

VENOIT ANGERED AT ARREST THREAT

Former Post Master General Causes Real Stir in The House

Ottawa, March 2 (CP)—Parliamentary privileges which include immunity from arrest and the right to say anything a member likes on the floor of parliament are rarely called upon but last night they were suddenly recalled in a dramatic incident, when Hon. Peter Veniot, former Postmaster General, declared he would "use force" if an attempt was made to arrest him.

It turned out the threatened arrest was not particularly imminent but Mr. Veniot complained of remarks made by a Montreal lawyer who he claimed, charged him with contempt of court. A couple of weeks ago Mr. Veniot made a speech in the House charging the Royal Canadian Mounted Police with "third degree" methods. It was this the Montreal lawyer referred to and as the word was passed on to Mr. Veniot he got the impression a writ was about to be issued against him.

The episode enlivened an otherwise calm session in the House of Commons devoted to farm debts and estimates. Mr. Veniot was promptly assured by members of the government, that they had heard of no instructions to proceed against him and that his parliamentary privilege was unquestioned. Liberal and Conservative members gathered round him, when the sitting ended to learn more about the threat against privileges of parliament.

"Remember Peter, you are over 40,'" one was heard to say as the 72-year-old statesman told what he would do to any police officer, who attempted to arrest him.

Amendments to the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act received their second reading to the tune of general approval and a good deal of talk about the plight of tillers of the soil.

Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, said the Act was working well and proving of great benefit to farmers. Hundreds of settlers had been affected under it and many more were brought about without invoking its provisions because it was on the statute books.

The problem of farm debts was not simple, in the opinion of W. J. Loucke (Cons. Rosetown). He thought something more than the measures contemplated by the government were needed if agriculture in Western Canada was to be saved. He suggested a Dominion-wide moratorium on interest charges and a reduction of rates to four of five present. If money was available he believed practically all farm debts in Canada could be settled at 50 cents on the dollar.

MAGEDOMAS TAKE ROUND HANDILY

Oshawa 'Chevies' Trounced 16-3 by Brockville on Own Ice

OSHAWA, March 2. — Oshawa seniors were eliminated from further competition in the O.H.A. senior "B" race when they forced to absorb a 16-to-3 defeat at the hands of Jess Spring's Brockville Magedomas at the arena here on Friday night. It was the worst defeat an Oshawa team has suffered on local ice in years.

Although the visitors won by a wide margin, they were not 13 goals better on the night's play. Down three goals on the round at the start, Bill Hancock's charges were forced to open up in the early stages of the game, with the result they left the Oshawa net uncovered continually and allowed the Brockville crew to coast in on Daniels unmolested. Spring trotted out a fast-skating and smooth-working machine that knew what to do every minute they were on the ice, and on their display here tonight should go far in their quest of an O.H.A. title. The visitors' two front lines were composed of a mixture of seasoned veterans and fast, brilliant younger members. They made life miserable for the Oshawa defence as they continually pierced the centre of the Oshawa rear guard or sped around the defence at high speed.

The Magedomas outscored the locals 4 to 2 in the first frame 3 to 0 in the second and made a rout of it in the final frame, when, with Oshawa playing five men up continually, they rapped home another nine goals to make it a rout.

Price and Sherry, who performed on the defence for the visitors, was about the sweetest looking pair of rear guardsmen that have appeared on Oshawa ice this year. They blocked perfectly, handed out crushing body checks and were a continual threat on the offensive.

Although they were beaten by a large margin the first string line played smart hockey, their lightning-like passing plays carrying them in on Tice on numerous occasions, but that worthy guardian rose to spectacular heights to rob the Oshawa snipers.

MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS SWING INTO ACTION ON TRAINING CAMP FRONT

Thud of big league bats against baseballs is heard again throughout the south as major league ball clubs settled down to the business of getting into shape for the long schedule ahead. Various camps all over the south see the big-timers and those seeking berths in the major loops doing their stuff. Early views of the training campaign are given above. TOP, Bill Terry, first baseman and manager of the New York Giants takes time out at Miami Beach to talk things over with the Big Four of his hurling corps. LEFT TO RIGHT, they are Hal Schumacher, Fred Fitzsimmons, Carl Hubbell, Leroy Parmalee and Terry. LOWER, Pittsburg Pirates with Swift batting them out and Aubrey "YoYo" Epps catching at San Bernardino, Calif. Watching with critical eyes from behind the screen are Catcher adden and Manager Pie Traynor. RIGHT, Walter Johnson, old fire-ball pitcher, is first on the training field as usual as he leads his Cleveland Indians toward another campaign. They train at New Orleans.

110 NOMINATED FOR THE DERBY

Chance Sun Leading Two Year Old is Favorite

(By S. V. Stiles)

Louisville, Ky., March 2 (AP) — Chance Sun, the outstanding two-year-old of 1934, and a score of other leading stake winners as juveniles are among 110 thoroughbreds nominated today for a try May 4 at the United States greatest horse race.

The list is somewhat smaller than in recent years but it contains every one of the three-year-olds that has been conceded a chance to become the 1935 Kentucky Derby winner.

Chance Sun, which topped the list last year with $83,985 winnings, will be the sole dependence this year of Joseph E. Widener to win the $40,000 added Kentucky classic. He rules as winter book favorite and recently was quoted at 6 to 1.

Among other outstanding contestants are Psychic Bid, Plat Eye, Try Sympathy, St. Bernard, Wise Prince, Sailor Beware, Brannon, Omaha, Blackbirder, Boxthorn, Vicaress, Eposs, Commonwealth, Polish Beau, Special Agent, Sound Advice, Roman Soldier, Pitter Pat, Gallant Prince, Good Flavour, and the Calumet Farm's great filly, Nellie Flag.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Les Shiels, coach of the local B.C.I. and V.S. senior interscholastic hockey team, announced today, that the Tweed High School had won the playoff with Marmora High School for the championship of the Trnet Valley group of the C.O.S.S.A. and would now meet the B.C.I. pucksters in the first inter-group play-off in Belleville on Monday night. Judging from the results of the Marmora--Tweed play-off squabble it would have been just as well had the Tweed squad been allowed their group title without a committee room argument, as the Tweed kids showed their superiority throughout the season. At any rate the C.O.S.S.A. play-downs start in Belleville on Monday night with the return game being scheduled for later in the week, goals to count on the round. The local "coliegians" will be further strengthened on Monday as "Stew" McElrath is expected to turn out with the Shiels-coached clan. It is understood, that the Tweed squad is composed of a number of the vanquished Tweed junior O.H.A. team and come to town highly heralded.

Congratulations are in order for Johnnie Wing of Gananoque, who was elected captain of the Queen's football team for 1935. Wing has been seen in Belleville on various occasions, first with the Gananoque junior hockey team, then last year with the Queen's juniors and again during the Belleville Centennial, when he accompanied the Gananoque Canoe Club to town when they gave an aquatic demonstration and paddling performance off Victoria Park. Wing is also Dominion singles paddling champion in the junior ranks. He is a fine hockey player and a gentleman of the first school. Congratulations are being offered Johnnie Wing from all parts of Eastern Ontario upon his being elected to the honorary position of captain of the Queen's football team for 1935.

Harry Moore, editor of the Trenton Courier Advocate who occasionally takes it upon himself to lower his dignity and witness the odd city league game in Belleville following which he usually bursts forth with the odd sport editorial comment, informs us that we are "all wet" as to there being any possibility of the winner of the Trenton Town League entering into the proposed Belleville post-season play-off. What Mr. Moore says may all be quite true, but nevertheless a little birdie tells us that providing the Trenton entry in the Belleville city loop, manages to down the Alemites, there will be a post season series of some kind in which the winner of the Trenton Town League will play a paramount part. (You're welcome Harry).

Unless all signs fail in a drought the local city leaguers will resume activities on Tuesday night, weather permitting. The two finalists, Trenton and the Alemites, will have been idle for one full week, when they take to the ice. Incidentally the "Lubricants" took the Trenton lads into camp to the tune of 4 to 2 in their regular scheduled league game, but the Smith-Day-led aggregation feel that they have hit their stride and can spot Stan Hagerman's band of pucksters about a goal per period and beat them to the wire. Of course this gives the Morgan-Covert-Ethier trio a big laugh with the result, that a merry three game series can be looked for before the champions of the local city league are awarded the Rowerome trophy. Doubtless it will be a torrid series with plenty of action throughout.

Had the Deacon A.C. basketball team not written to the O.B.A. relative to when and where they would play in the first round of the provincial junior O.B.A. play-downs early this week, doubtless the local hoopsters would have been left out in the cold, as arrangements and draws for the provincial play-downs had already been made, but the Deacons, champions of the junior group of the E.O.B.A., had been completely ignored, or forgotten. At any rate the Deacons received word yesterday that a subsequent draw had brought them into competition with the Elizabeth Park squad, commonly known as the "Lizzies," who won the Toronto and District junior title by eliminating Broadview "Y" in the city finals. Last year the Broadview "Y" squad eliminated the Deacons in a hectic two game struggle, but the locals have another year's experience under their belts now and should go far in the provincial play-downs this season. Incidentally the first game of the Provincial junior cage play-downs is being staged in Toronto tonight, when the Deacon A.C. of Belleville meet the "Lizzies" with the return game being scheduled in Belleville next week.

Press dispatches say that Bill Sherry, ex-Belleville puckster, was one of the gleaming lights and one of the stars of the night when the Brockville Magedomas downed the Oshawa "Chevies," 16 to 3 and won the first round in the O.H.A. senior "B" series at Oshawa last night. Stories coming out of Oshawa also say that the winners were not 13 goals better on the night's play, which can be readily understood as the "Chevies" have some smart pucksters on their roster. Incidentally Les Tice kicked out the proverbial million to star in the Brockville net. "Won't you bring back those wonderful days."

Montreal Wheelers, who haven't been quite able to win the Big Four football title in the last two season's, haven't had much encouraging news of late. First Huck Welch's firm moved to him to Hamilton—into an enemy camp. Then Pete Jotkus decided to turn professional with Canadiens hockey team and probably will leave the gridiron for the ice right in the midst of the football campaign next fall.

NEW CONTENDERS THREATEN WOOD

Harmsworth Trophy Will Be Challenged in 1936

Detroit, March 2.—The Harmsworth Trophy, bronze symbol of international speed boat supremacy, remains in the United States for another year without a challenge, but 1936 may find England, Italy and a new crop of American racers seeking the famous plaque.

Gar Wood, who has beaten every Harmsworth challenger since 1920, is the present holder of the trophy, but J. Lee Barrett, secretary of the Yachtsman's Association of America, said he expected a revival of "formidable competition" next year.

As the deadline passed last night, Barrett said no one challenged Wood for the trophy he won in 1920 when he defeated Sir Mackay Edgar's Maple Leaf.

TOUGH WEEKEND FOR THE AMERKS

If They Lose They Will Be Out of Playoffs

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans bear the heavy load in the National Hockey League's week-end campaigning which should just about end any hopes Joe Simpson's team still retain to beat the Habitants out of the third playoff position in the International Division.

Even if Canadiens win tonight in St. Louis from Eagles and follow it up with a victory Sunday from Hawks in Chicago and Amerks lose both their games the New Yorkers will still have a mathematical chance. But it will be of the slimest sort, a single point that can be wiped out by their losing another game or Canadiens picking up two points.

Americans play tonight in Toronto against Leafs who have never beaten them by more than a goal this season. The Leafs have won three games from the Simpson men, lost one and tied one. Toronto will be without Hec Kilrea, who has a cut leg, breaking up the combination with Frankie Finnigan and Bill Thoms that has been working so well. Sunday they play in Detroit against Red Wings.

Montrealers will watch possible opposing teams in the playoffs tonight, when Boston Bruins meet Maroons there. Lionel Conacher, the star Maroons defenceman who has been out of action for several games, will be back in the lineup.

LONDOS SUSPENDED

NEW YORK, March 2.—Jim Londos, generally recognized as the heavy-weight wrestling champion of the world, yesterday was suspended indefinitely by the New York State Athletic Commission. The suspension was in line with the recent action of the California commission, which set Londos down for failure to go through with a match on the coast last Wednesday.

TWEED SCHOOL IN THE FINALS

Defeat Marmora in Sudden Death Game by 5-3

Madoc, Mar. 2—(Special)—On Thursday night Tweed High School Hockey team earned the right to represent the northern group in the Interscholastic play-downs by defeating Marmora High School in a sudden death game at the Madoc arena by the score of 5-3. Tweed and Marmora held first and second place respectfully, in the group standing.

The game was fast and clean but the Tweed team appeared better coached with more system. Marmora lacked team work and were very much inclined to play shinny. The score is no indication of the play as the Tweed team were much superior. Lummon and Joe Courneyea were the Tweed stand-outs while Smith turned in a good game for Marmora.

"BAND BESTED IN BATHING BOUT"

Pedro Candiotti, matchless Argentine swimmer, using many variations of the crawl stroke, startled the followers of water sport by swimming the almost unbelievable distance of 258 miles in 87½ hours in Parona river recently. Argentina immediately claimed a world's record.

His objective 299 miles away, Pedro Candiotti, heavily plastered with grease, plunged into the river one forenoon at Santa Fe to start the longest marathon swim ever attempted by a human.

Spectators at the start tersely remarked, "they'll drag him out tonight", or "he won't last till morning". Turning a deaf ear to these vauntings, Pedro started stroking it up, hour after hour, mile after mile. It seemed endless, but like a machine those mighty muscled arms and corded steel legs kept going.

After 200 miles of swimming, floating and feeding, Candiotti started to tire, so his handlers hired a band to play lively music But the band which at first played in tempestuous tempo became weaker as Pedro relentlessly kept digging in; weaker tones drifted to puffs, then to whiffs, and finally gasps as the band gave up. Pedro found that "music hath its charm" and so he gave up, but not until he reached Zarate, only 41 miles from his objective, Buenos Aires.

CANADA'S DERBY ENTRIES TRAIN

Two Toronto Horses Work-out at Lexington Track

Lexington, Ky., March 2.—(CP)—Canada's entries in the Kentucky Derby are well into their spring training here. Daily the kinks are being rounded out of Shoeless Joe and Direct Hit, owned by Conny Smythe, Toronto race horse owner and hockey manager.

Only short breezings have been the training schedule to date but when they limber up, Trainer Emerson Davis has given notice of lengthening the distance and applying stricter methods. Not until he stated, would the pair's derby strength be reckoned.

During their short racing campaign last fall neither showed enough brilliance to be classed among the years' best two-year-olds. Now, after their layoff, Davis believes they are steadier and surer afoot with still more than two months to prime them for the derby.

Shoeless Joe, by Black Servant out of Barefoot, favored by his owner over a fast track, failed to win a purse last year. In his major race of the year, the Pimlico Futurity, he finished well back. Running in Toronto, however, over a fast track he finished a head behind Brannon, another Derby entrant.

Direct Hit, out of Display-Broom Market, displayed more running power and in seven starts ranked in the money four. Only one was a victory, coming over a sloppy track at Jamaica in a three-quarter mile dash.

No thought has been given by the hockey mentor to entering either in the preakness which follows the derby. Decision in this regard has been left until they display what class they have in store. Neither has Smythe decided on shipping the pair to Canada for the summer racing season. "That also depends on what's what," Smythe has stated.

Who May be Who in 1935

Farm Boy From Iowa May Fall Heir to Mantle of Ruth

22-year-old farm boy from Iowa may change the destiny of the Cleveland Indians from frustrated runner-up to pennant winner. The young man is Harold Arthur Trojovsky, slugging first baseman, whose name appears in the box scores as Hal Trosky.

Great First Year

The 1934 season was Trosky's first year in the majors. And he did far better than Lou Gehrig or Jimmy Foxx as a first-year man. He played in every game, made 206 hits for an average of .330, was second to Gehrig and Foxx with 35 home-runs and second to Gehrig by driving in 142 runs (12 more than Foxx). He was fourth in the American League in two-base hits, and seventh in triples.

In one game he made three home runs. In four successive games, played in three days, he hit five more.

Ed Barrow of the Yankees, one of the keenest judges of ball players in the majors predicts that Trosky will develop into one of the greatest batsmen of all time. Cleveland fans nominate him Babe Ruth's successor.

Just as the Yankees were swayed by Ruth—"as Ruth goes, so go the Yankees"—the Indian show signs of catching the winning spirit of the big first baseman.

Sisters Help Him Learn

If Trosky, as a boy, hadn't had two sisters who liked to play ball themselves he might have been a champion hog caller or corn shucker. After the farm work was done, Hal and his sisters used to play ball until night settled over their farm home at Norway, Ia.

It was because Hal developed into a good catcher that he got a chance to go to high school an opportunity denied the older Trojovskys. Papa Trojovsky liked baseball and the high school team needed a catcher. The youngster was duly proselyted and subsidized.

After catching a while, young Trosky decided pitching must be pretty soft. He piched for the high school team and for independent teams on Sundays.

In 1931, Cyril Slapnicka, Indian scout, was tipped off that a farm boy at Norway, Ia., could hit like Lajoine. He investigated Trosky's Bohemian-French father, a fan himself, consented to let the boy go to Cedar Rapids for a trial. After watching him play, Clapnicka advised Hal to switch from a right-handed batter to left, and to quit pitching and become an outfielder.

HAL TROSKY

Trosky switched, found he could bat better left handed, but failed to break into the Cedar Rapids line-up because of "inexperience".

Slapnicka moved him to Dubuque, then to Quincy in the Three Eye, then to Burlington. In 1932 he was placed in the hands of Steve O'Neill at Toledo, and Steve decided he was a first baseman.

O'Neill former Indian catcher, used to take Trosky to the park every morning and work him for hours. He improved slowly. Finally in 1933 Steve announced he was ready, still a little crude in fielding, but a young man who would hit in any league. Trosky more than fulfilled O'Neill's promise.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Faith had never felt freer or happier than in the next few days. Mr. Rider's loud, outspoken approval of her had had its effect on Hunter. He seemed, somehow, less aloof less guarded when he was with her, which was all too seldom. For the other women claimed him as an old playmate they had no intention of relinquishing. And since husbands were very casually handed about in this group, Faith couldn't object. The younger women—Beatrice Dawtrey, Nina Olcott, were quite decent to her, in spite of Mrs. Duane Smith's continued antagonism. Yet Mrs. Duane Smith needn't have worried. Faith avoided de Markoff's attempts to corner her. She wasn't going to risk annoying Hunter.

So when, one evening toward the end of the week, the Countess announced that she had invited the owners of neighboring chateaux to a reception that Saturday night, Faith looked forward to her first big smart party. And there seemed nothing to cloud her pleasure.

She could never afterward remember whether the impromptu Fashion Show was her suggestion. She was keyed up, exhilarated by the brilliant gathering. And what girl wouldn't have thrilled at the sight.

Outside in the warm August night lanterns illuminated the great cobbled courtyards where cars instead of coaches rolled up to the red-carpeted entrance. The Countess had flung open the formal reception rooms. Hundreds of candles twinkled on priceless tapestries, old portraits, the dulled gilt and flowered brocade of furniture, among which moved jewelled dowagers and eagle-beaked old gentlemen with fierce white mustaches and decorations. There were some of the best looking men, too, whom Faith had ever seen. And the women were lovely, with the same birdlike vivacity that distinguished Madame de Luze. An orchestra sent down from Paris played at the end of one of the salons.

The question of charades arose between a few of the women of the house party grouped beside Madame de Luze. Faith eagerly took up the more original idea of entertaining the other guests by staging a Fashion Show before supper.

"And you can wear my things," she cried. "I've got a whole trunk full of divine new models."

She got no warning from her hostess' thinned eyebrow or Mrs. Duane Smith's short laugh. They were all looking at her now.

Beatrice Dawtrey became very animated. "It sounds too amusing, Mrs. Barclay! Much more fun than wearing one's own old rags."

Faith hesitated a moment. Their eyes were like little barbed hooks. Baiting her.

Madame de Luze gave the faintest shrug of her fine shoulders. But now Mrs. Olcott chimed in with a drawl: "After all, if Mrs. Barclay has so many new models, why not let us show them for her?"

Faith, launched on her generous impulse, couldn't stop. "If you come up to my room, you can have whatever you want," she offered, hoping that they wouldn't take her at her word. For she was beginning to feel that somewhere, somehow, she had committed a terrible blunder.

BAD NEWS

CHAPTER NINETEEN

In the cleared space of one of the Countess de Luze' salons, Faith modelled the last and most beautiful gown of the impromptu Fashion Show—a white brocade shot with dull gold that moulded the long lines of her slim body and blended in with the shimmering lights of her pale skin and hair.

If it hadn't been for Mrs. Duane Smith's final refusal to appear in what she called "borrowed plumes" and Madame de Luze, who had joined her other guests under the murmured pretext of her duties as hostess, Faith would have considered that she had made a success of it all. She had worked hard enough, pinning, adjusting her gowns on the volunteer mannequins; teaching them how best to show off the models. She really had not had time to worry about the matters of tact or etiquette. But somewhere in the back of her mind there rapped Sacha de Markoff's warning on these women. "You must not be too nice to them," he had said. "Let them do you favors." Well, apparently they thought they were doing her a favor in using her wardrobe. And still the sense persisted in Faith that something was very wrong.

If she had made a mistake, it couldn't now be helped. Under her directions they had self-consciously paraded, making it quite plain to their friends in the audience, though that this wasn't a familiar pastime.

At Faith's last entrance the orchestra softly played a Viennese waltz, to which, in the white and gold brocade, she seemed to float into the room. She had modelled professionallly in the precarious New York days when she looked for an advancement in any job. Now it all came back to her: the way to carry herself, the walk tippling and mincing, the pause and turn with a swanlike lift of her arms.

She was conscious of the banked black and white tenseness of the men, the jewels and masklike faces of women seated in small gilt chairs Fragments of French drifted, from which she detached the words—"Belle— charmante — ravissante." They could not help, then, thinking her beautiful, charming, ravishihg. Radiant in her triumph, she bowed and smiled and ran lightly back to the improvised dressing room. Behind her, released voices and laughter rose, with the scrape of chairs and gay music.

Mrs. Duane-Smith and the Countess de Luze, their backs to the dressing-room door, were standing among Faith's gowns which were crumpled and strewn about on the floor where the other women had carelessly thrown them.

"You never should have allowed it, Therese," Mrs. Duane-Smith was saying in a hard, angry way. "The idea of her expecting us to show off her clothes for her. So ostentatious and vulgar."

So that was what they thought! Faith quivered back behind the long curtain that screened the door. She dreaded the older woman's answer, which came with the fine imprint of a seal.

"She was far too professional," said Madame de Luze.

Faith didn't wait to hear any more. She tiptoed down the deserted hall and then ran through damp cheerless corridors hunting for some place to hide, like a wounded animal.

They had never really accepted, never liked her. They were ready at the first excuse to cast her down. They knew perfectly well she hadn't meant to offend them by suggesting that they wear her things. Of course they had gowns of their own, just as expensive, just as beautiful. She had only tried to be friendly—

Head down, Faith didn't see de Markoff until he was almost upon her.

"I have been looking for you everywhere," he exclaimed. "You were adorable, delicious—"

"Don't tell me that," Faith cried, trying to pass him. "It was awful!"

The Count caught her by the arm and led her into a small, lamplit room which the Countess used as an office for the management of her estate.

"Now, what is it, little dove?" His voice was soothing, his gay, dashing manner softened to tenderness.

"Everything," Faith answered, with a little sob. "Oh, I hate them all—those catty women. Especially your Mrs. Duane-Smith. She——"

"Is not my Mrs. Duane-Smith," de Markoff lightly interrupted, opening his silver-crested cigarette case. "You are a very foolish child to allow these jealous women to hurt you so," he went on, as if he knew the unkind things they were saying.

Faith twisted the lace wisp of her handkerchief between her slim fingers and sank into a chair by a desk in the small, businesslike room.

The Russian drew her gently to her feet. "You will come back with me—yes?" he coaxed. "You will not give them the satisfaction of knowing that you have crept off like a whipped child."

Faith looked at him gratefully. She felt better already. "You are a dear," she said. "I'll try——" She stopped short.

Madame de Luze stood in the door, glancing from one to the other with a severe expression. "There are plenty of more appropriate places in the chateau for a tete-a-tete," she said coldly.

The color rushed to Faith's cheeks and angry words trembled on her lips, but de Markoff saved her from making the situation worse. He drew Madame de Luze into the room and no woman on earth could have resisted his smile

"I am very glad you found us, my dear Therese," he said. "I have been scolding this foolish child, who thinks she has offended you. You will tell her, I hope that she has committed no crime." With a reassuring smile to Faith, he left the two women.

Madame de Luze had always been so very kind. Faith went quickly up to her. "I wish you'd tell me what I did so wrong," she said.

The French woman stood a moment, tapping her small, exquisite foot on the old parquet floor. "It is most unfortunate," she murmured At Faith's restless movement, she turned, with a softer expression.

"You are too impulsive, my dear," she said. "It is not for me, but others do not understand——"

"I won't ever be again," Faith cried earnestly. "And I'll take your advice——"

The Countess smiled faintly, putting her hand on Faith's arm. "You are a sweet girl. But you have made Hunter very angry with you tonight." Her voice was serious. "Men like Hunter do not wish their wives to be conspicuous. With the other women it was just play, but you——"

"I know," Faith admitted. "I acted like a professional model. I heard what you said to Mrs. Duane-Smith in the dressing room. Oh, dear, how can I make it all right with Hunter?"

Madame de Luze walked away from Faith. "I'm sorry this happened to-night. There is something else, Faith —" She hesitated and with a little shrug of her shoulders went on: "Mr. and Mrs. Stevens landed Thursday. They have just arrived here with some friends of mine. I cannot refuse to put them up for the week-end."

Faith stood frozen in her beautiful white brocade. That was the cable then that Hunter had received last week, and he had never told her!

Madame de Luze took her by the arm. "Come now, ma cherie," she said. "You promised to take my advice did you not? Therefore, you will come back with me and join my guests. The young people are dancing. You will be gay and charming and show Gertrude Stevens that you are not afraid of competition. I do not, myself, care for her type," the Countess added, wrinkling her thin nostrils.

So Madame de Luze, and probably everyone else knew about Hunter and Gertrude, Faith bitterly reflected. But they couldn't know what was back of it all—why Philip had forced Hunter to marry Faith, and the consequent depths of Gertrude's hate.

"I'll do as you say," Faith consented with sudden light in her grey eyes. She had expected Gertrude to turn up some day, hadn't she? Well, here was the duel she had steeled and prepared herself for.

No one seemed to have noticed her absence. No one paid any attention to her as she paused on the edge of the dance floor. Madame de Luze caught up by her duties as hostess, lingered behind.

Then Faith saw them—Gertrude and Hunter dancing together. Gertrude was almost as tall as Hunter, superb in her carriage with a rich creaminess of skin set off by the sweep and curve of her black hair as black as Hunter's and the strong crimson of her full lips. Long earrings glistened in her ears. Hunter was smiling at her, his dark blue eyes narrowed as he moved with slow gliding steps.

With a sharp shrill of fear Faith realized once more the other woman's beauty and sophistication.

"I shouldn't have known you," someone said at her elbow. With a start Faith turned to find Philip Stevens staring at her. If she had changed, the change in him was even more marked.

"Why, Mr. Stevens—" she faltered.

"You wouldn't have recognized me. Say it—" he helped her out with gloomy satisfaction. "Let's go somewhere and talk."

Faith followed him to one of the smaller reception rooms off the panelled banquet hall where a buffet supper was being served.

"Wait a moment. I need a drink."

Faith sat motionless on a stiff upholstered sofa watching him cross the room. Philip Stevens walked like an old man. He looked like a collapsed red balloon. His fleshy face had folded in purplish bags, his hands twitched as he came back with two glasses of champaigne.

"I didn't want to come here," he said. "But the wild man's tamed. Gertrude's going to get an eyeful when she sees you," he added with wry humor.

Faith leaned forward and put her hand on his knee. "She's hurt you a lot, hasn't she, Mr. Stevens?"

"Philip to you," he corrected, gulping down his wine. "If I choose to be a damn fool, it's my own fault. By George, I can't get over it—girl, you're a raving beauty!"

"It hasn't done me much good," Faith confessed in a low voice.

"Not going so well—eh?' Philip beckoned to one of the footmen and helped himself to another glass of champagne. "Tell you the truth, I'd sort of counted on finding you two cooing like honeymoon doves," he said heavily. "I might have known Hunter would never settle down."

"I'm mad about him," Faith said slowy, "and now it's going to be harder than ever."

De Markoff had come into the room. He was looking across at her,

A ghost of the old savage flame brightened Philips bloodshot eyes. "If she starts anything, by Gad, I'll divorce her. Drag her through the mud," he muttered. "She's made my life a hell."

Ska, the vulture, still circled above the ape-man. The grim bird of evil aroused Tarzan to renewed determination until, finally, he dropped exhausted. He realized his great strength was waning. The depressing silence settled upon him.

It was a horrible place. But at length he made his way down the canyon and started toward the opposite cliff that he must scale. If this was to be his end, he determined to die still fighting.

He would fight the fates until the last throb of his savage heart. Slowly he dragged his weakened body upward, again and again slipping back. Only the merest chance kept him from falling to the canyon floor. He was weak and gasping.

At last he pulled himself over the top, too spent to rise or even move a few inches from the perilous edge of the chasm. It was then that he heard the flap of dismal wings close above him. The vulture was waiting for him to die.

GERMAN RE-ARMING THREATS PEACE—MACDONALD

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

St. Louis, March 4 (CP)— Mrs. Alma Casey, 31, refused to eat fish for 25 years because when she was six years old a fish bone had lodged in her throat. Physicians removed it.

Chicago, March 4 (CP)— An automobile whizzed past Edwin Barash, 18.

The youth turned his head quickly to see it, got a crink in his neck, stumbled and struck his head on the sidewalk.

He was taken to a hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain.

St. Louis, March 4 (CP)—Mitzi has a distaste for fire-arms so she routed a robber who threatened harm Sunday to her mistress Mrs. M. F. Eckert.

Mrs. Eckert answered a knock on the door of her home to be confronted by a shabbily dressed man who pointed a revolver at her and demanded money.

Mitzi, 12-pound toy bull terrier, leaped on the intruder and forced him to flee. A policeman, seeking the reason for Mitzi's ferocity, found her friendly until he pointed his revolver at her, then he beat a hasty retreat as the small terrier raged upon him.

Ketchikan, Alaska, March 4 — (CP)—Ketchikan residents are wondering where winter has been.

The weatherman's summary for February shows no snow. Lowest temperature, 28 above. Highest temperature, 54 above and mean temperature, 40.5 degrees. The latter mark shattered the previous "warm winter" record of 38.4 degrees set in February, 1934.

Chicago, March 4 (CP)— The road to a man's heart may be through his stomach, but Mrs. Bessie Pick doesn't think it leads to the altar.

The succulent repasts she prepared for John L. Sandstrom, she told a Circuit Court jury, won his praise but not his hand. He married someone else.

She alleged Sandstrom who boarded at her house and was extravagant in praise of her culinary exploits should pay $25,000 to mend her wounded heart but the jurors couldn't make up their minds and were dismissed.

Melbourne, March 4 (CP)—An Australian missed his false teeth near the Yarra River. He dived into the water to look for them. The police had some difficulty hauling him out again on the end of a rope.

He found the teeth in one of his many pockets after he had been returned safely to the shore.

WOMAN'S VIGOR AMAZES DOCTOR

Works Seven Years in Pain For Money For Operation

Kingstree, S.C., Mar. 4.—Venkra Fulton was ill. Pains had been shooting through her body. Miserably, she walked into Dr. E. T. Kelley's office here.

"You need an operation," he said and added, after her question: "$75."

Venkra Fulton mumbled her thanks and walked from the office. She had no money.

She was strong and young and she could work, but the pains wracked her. She needed an operation; she needed money. But she saw no money in sight.

So she went back to her cooking and scrubbing, minding children, sweeping yards; washing clothes. Sometimes the pain became almost unbearable. She would stop, gasp for breath, and pick up her broom again—or bend once more over the wash tub.

But she kept a shoe box and into this she dropped her earnings.

Then, the other day, she picked up her shoe box and came back to see Dr. Kelley.

"I'm ready for my operation," she said simply. Dr. Kelley didn't remember.

"You examined me once," said Venkra Fulton slowly. "It was seven years ago."

Dr. Kelley swallowed; ordered the woman put to bed in a sanitorium; and put the shoe box in his safe.

The box, containing the $75, will be given Venkra Fulton when she is able to walk out again.

MAY CONTEST RIDING

Ottawa, March 4— (CP) —Mrs. George Black, wife of the former Speaker of the House of Commons, said today she would consider running for office in her husband's constituency, Yukon, if she received a nomination.

She said so far she had received no invitation to contest the seat.

THEATRE MURDER AERIAL SUICIDE IN WEEKEND TOLL

Roxy Theatre Manager of Toronto Slugged by Gunmen

TWO GIRLS KILLED

Car Leaves Road as Party Return From Basketball Game

OLIVER HOLMES ILL

(By The Canadian Press)

A burlesque theatre murder, an aerial suicide and highway accidents left Ontario's week-end toll of sudden deaths at eight today.

Abner Abraham Appleby, manager of the Roxy Theatre, Toronto's only burlesque showhouse, was found dead with two bullet wounds in his head, before the vault in his theatre office late Sunday. The slayer or slayers, still at large early today, had scooped nearly $400 from the safe before making their getaway, police found.

Despondency over a recent illness was believed to have caused James C. Grant to leap from an aeroplane as it hovered at a height of 500 feet above a Toronto airport. The 22-year-old son of a Nanaimo bank manager was taking a refresher flight with an instructor when he leaped from the plane.

Three fatalities occurred on highways near Galt, Ont. Norma M. Rodden, 23, and Barbara Hunter, 23, died, when the car in which they were returning to Toronto from a basketball game left the road. Two young men, also riding in the car, escaped with minor injuries. Mabel Sharpe, 15, was struck down by a truck as she walked along the highway with her cousin.

Archie Peterman of Galt was held on a charge of manslaughter following the girl's death. He was allegedly the driver of the truck.

Arnold Robinson of Shetland, near Sarnia, died when struck on the highway near that city. William Fisher was arrested but released on bail following the fatality.

Paul Emile Duhamel, 35-year-old printer, was found dead early Sunday morning in his home at Ottawa. Death was attributed to injuries suffered in a fall downstairs.

Children playing on the banks of the Grand River, near Paris, Ont., found the body of William Martin, 72, lying half-submerged in the stream. Authorities attributed death to a skull fracture, suffered when the aged man slipped and fell.

STAGGERS ASHORE AFTER BREAKING THROUGH ICE

Almost Frozen But is Able to Make Shore Before Search Party

Brockville, Ont., March 4 (CP) — Gerald Stacey, while crossing the St. Lawrence from Morristown, New York, plunged through the ice several times. He was almost frozen as he staggered to the shore last night.

Steacy was driven to the open water in a motor truck with some companions. He was left there, while the others made the crossing in a sledge boat. On the return voyage, he was found missing and when the party located a hole in the ice, it was immediately thought he had plunged through and drowned.

Two Brockville police officers together with two of Steacy's brothers formed a search party and roping themselves together, made their way across the ice. When they reached Morristown, they found Steacy had staggered ashore ahead of them.

MOTOR TRAFFIC IN WEST SNOWBOUND

Travellers Forced to Spend Night Huddled in Cars

Regina, March 4 (CP)—Southern Saskatchewan today was pulling itself out of a week-end blizzard that held motor traffic snowbound and forced many travellers to spend Saturday night huddled in cars and depots.

Horse drawn sleigh, trains and even a plane were pressed into service to get the travellers into the city from outside points where they were held by snow-blocked highways.

At a gasoline service station about a mile south of the city, 12 bus passengers spent Saturday night. The women passengers in the small station and the men and driver in the bus.

Further south on the same road, fifty motorists spent part of the night crowded into the service station at Rowatt, six miles south of here. Thirty-one of them boarded a Canadian National Railways freight train and rode into the city on a flat car.

POLICE SEARCH FOR BOY

Toronto, March 4—(CP)—Toronto police were asked today to search for 11-year-old Norman Kelley, who disappeared on Saturday from his home in St. Catharines. The boy, accompanied by a man, was seen boarding a freight train in St. Catharines Saturday night. He was wearing a dark leather coat, black and orange toque and brown corduroy trousers.

GRIPPED IN ICE FLOE

North Sydney, N. S., March 4—(CP)—Trapped in Arctic drift ice, the passenger-laden Newfoundland steamer Kyle was held in tightly jammed floes today several miles off the cape Breton coast.

Gripped immovable by the heavy ice in Cabot Strait, the Kyle could neither advance toward North Sydney nor put back into the strait and indications were she would have to await a shift in the wind before freeing herself.

Prince's Bag Pipe Composition Played by Local Pipe Major

"To One of Scotland's Famous Pipers, Albert "Clan" Johnstone" is the writing on a piece of music which Pipe Major Albert Johnstone, Dundas Street, received today on which was copied the score of "Mallorca" written by His Royal Highness the Prince Wales, and which the Prince played on the pipes at the Caledonian Club games in London. This is a slow march for bagpipes for use on ceremonial occasion.

According to a note on the music sheet, the march is now being practised by the pipe band of the Scots Guards.

Who sent the paper to Mr. Johnstone, he does not know. "They knew me as Albert 'Clan' Johnstone over there", remarked the pipe major.

Though the music was received only today, it was not many minutes before Belleville's pipe major had skirled it out on the pipes. "It is simple music but it is melodious" remarked Mr. Johnstone. "The Prince can play the pipes well. The bands all over the Old Country are playing this composition.

Delicate Operation Performed Child Has Misplaced Stomach

Surgeon Finds it Necessary to Complete Operation

Fall River, Mass., March 4—Ten-year-old Alyce Jane McHenry's inverted stomach and other misplaced organs were put in their normal positions in an operation of more than two hours' duration at the Truesdale Hospital today.

The whole replacement at once was a surprise. Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, native of Rawdon, Que., said when the situation became apparent in all details on the operating table it was so grave the entire proceeding had to be gone through at once.

He had anticipated the process might be slow, time and gravitation letting the misplaced organs slide down gradually to the abdomen.

Alyce was a "good patient", that is she appeared to stand the operation well.

Her stomach, upside down, tucked up under her shoulder, was only part of the misplaced abdominal organs.

It was in her left chest cavity along with all but two feet of her intestines, also her spleen and her appendix. Her liver was not misplaced.

Whether the operation is a "success" Dr. Truesdale said will depend entirely on her recovery.

Alyce sang "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" as she went into the operating room with her mother, Mrs. Louella McHenry of Omaha, Neb., and her aunt, Mrs. Loren Nelson of Omaha.

Dr. Truesdale, head of the hospital which bears his name, had the assistance of three other surgeons. She smiled at them all when they greeted her prior to the operation. She had slept so soundly nurses had to awaken her for the attentions of the surgeons.

Wrong London Says Official

London, Ont., March 4 (CP) — Shortly after eight o'clock this morning, a telephone at the local Court House rang and long distance asked if Mr. Ferguson were there.

"We have no one named Ferguson around here," a courthouse official replied. "What Ferguson is it?"

"The Commissioner," long distance came back.

"You don't mean G. Howard Ferguson?"

"Yes. We were told we might get him at the London courthouse through his secretary, Mr. Grant," the operator persisted.

"I guess you've got the wrong London, the High Commissioner isn't here, you had better try the Tower of London over in England," the local official came back.

The long distance call came from Toronto.

Cancer Appeal Letter is Read

At St. Michael's Church yesterday at all the Masses a letter was read from the Cardinal Archbishop of Quebec referring to the fact that His Majesty the King desired that upon the occasion of the King's Silver Jubilee a fund be created for cancer research to combat the dread disease which seems to be on the increase. In this letter an appeal was made inviting all who can to send a dollar or more to Lady Bessborough for this fund in order to correspond to the desire of His Majesty and to aid in combatting the dread disease of cancer.

At both morning and evening services at St. Thomas' Church, the rector, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne made reference to the wishes of His Majesty the King regarding the cancer research fund and at John Street United Church, Rev. Robert Hall drew the attention of the congregation to this worthy cause.

MAY CHANGE TIME TO BUY LICENCES

Minister of Highways Favors Resolution Put Forward

Windsor, Mar. 4—(CP)—A proposal that the time for issuance of motor-car licenses in Ontario be changed from the beginning of the year to sometime in June or July has been favorably received by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, it was learned here today.

The suggestion was submitted by E. W. Lancaster, President of the Essex County Automobile Club, at the annual meeting of the Ontario Motor League in Toronto last week. It is claimed a majority of the motorists, as a result of their Christmas buying, are hard-pressed for cash after the New Year and any money, they have goes toward the purchase of fuel and winter clothing. Because of this they lay-up their cars and the resultant decrease in the use of gasoline means a loss of money to the government.

TORNADO KILLS ONE

Forney, Tex., March 4—(AP)—A tornado ripped through this farming community just before dawn today and roared away to the north, leaving one reported death, several injured and property damage mounting into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A negro farmer was killed. Seven large buildings were wrecked here and about 100 homes were damaged. Two large cotton warehouses, containing 1,000 bales of cotton, were ripped to pieces.

LOST SINCE THURSDAY

Meagre Report Says Plane Forced Down in Jungle

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, March 4 (AP)—Lady Young, lost since last Thursday on a flight over the jungles, was reported today to have been found alive by searchers.

Major Sir Hubert Young, the governor of Northern Rhodesia and husband of the lost woman, had directed searching parties ever since her disappearance.

Fragmentary reports said Dr. J. Kerby, government physician, who accompanied her on the flight had also been found alive.

Lady Young and Dr. Kerby were said to have been discovered in Southern Rhodesia and it was further reported that neither was hurt.

A note from Lady Young was received by a native commissioner saying their plane had crashed at Gokwe in the midst of a lonely area in Southern Rhodesia.

It said they were both unhurt and were walking to the commissioner's camp.

PRAJADHIPOK OF SIAM ABDICATES

King Would Not Modify Demand to Have Full Control

Cranleigh, England, March 4—(AP)—Prajadhipok of Siam, until a short time ago one of the few remaining monarchs, is plain Prince Sukhodaya today, one of England's country gentleman.

The little sovereign, who would not brook his parliament's determination to modify his power of life and death over his 10,000,000 subjects formally abdicated from his throne last Saturday. Prajadhipok named no successor. It was explained Siamese laws provide for the present contingency.

Eleven-year-old Prince Ananda, the former king's nephew, now studying at Lausanne, Switzerland, generally was expected to become Siam's sovereign.

(A London Daily Mail dispatch from Lausanne said Prince Ananda had been formally tendered the throne.)

AGED SISTERS FOUND DEAD IN THEIR HOME

Discovered by Catholic Priest making Pastoral Visit

St. Thomas, Ont. March 4 (CP) Bodies of two aged sisters were found today by Rev Father E. White, when he forced his way into the home of Mrs. Margaret McNamara after finding the outside doors locked and the lights burning.

The Priest making a visit to give Holy Communion to Mrs. McNamara seriously ill discovered the widow dead by the side of her bed and the body of her sister Miss Mary Furlong with whom she lived lying just outside the bedroom door.

It was believed Miss Furlong attending her sick sister had been stricken with a heart attack to which she was subject and died almost instantly. Mrs. McNamara attempting to assist her sister collapsed as she arose from her bed and died during the night it was believed.

Coroner Dr. Irwin decided the deaths were due to natural causes and said an inquest was unnessary.

ROBBERS AT KINGSTON

Kingston, Ont., March 4 (CP) — Burglars secured an entrance to the home of Elmer Davis of the firm of Davis and Sons, tanners, while members of the family were absent during the week-end and stole jewelry valued around $200. Entrance was secured by breaking in a door.

More Money to be Spent On 3 Defence Forces, White Paper Declares

Assurance of Peace From German Leaders Given

NAVIES FIRST LINE

Possibility of Air Attack Grows Year by Year Says Premier

London, March 4 (CP)—Re-armament by Germany endangered peace, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald declared in a statement given today when the army estimates were presented in Parliament.

After reference to Germany's re-armament the statement proceeded: "This re-armament, if continued at the present rate unabated and uncontrolled, will aggravate the existing anxieties of the neighbors of Germany and consequently produce a situation where peace will be in peril.

"His Majesty's Government have noted the welcome declarations of leaders in Germany that they desire peace. They cannot, however, fail to recognize not only the forces but the spirit in which the population and especially the youth of the country are being organized, lend color to and substantiate the general feeling of insecurity which has already been incontestably generated.

Armaments Grow Everywhere

"Nor is this increase in armaments confined to Germany. All over the world, in Russia, Japan, the United States and elsewhere, armaments are being added to. We could not afford to overlook all these increases and so have had to begin to meet our deficiencies.

"But we have been anxious not to make provisions for necessary defence merge into a race in armaments strength."

Should peace be broken, the navy as always will be the first line of defence, for the maintenance of essential sea communications. The age of present British capital ships makes it necessary to commence their replacement at an early date, the white paper added. But the extent of new construction will be subject to any agreement reached for the expected naval conference in the near future.

Possible Air Attacks

The range of territory on the continent of Europe from which air attacks could be successfully launched against Britain "is constantly extending and will continue to extend," it said in dealing with aerial defence. For these reasons the importance of the integrity of certain territories on the other side of the Channel and the North Sea, which for centuries has been and still remains a vital interest of this country from a naval point of view, looms larger than ever when air defence is also taken into consideration.

London, March 4 (CP Cable)—Additional expenditure on armaments of the three defence forces "can no longer be safely postponed," Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald said in an official statement submitted to Parliament today.

Higher Army Estimates

The warning followed introduction of increased army estimates for the coming fiscal year, which totalled $217,750,000, close to $20,000,000 higher than last year.

The Prime Minister's statement was issued in the form of an official "white paper." It explained why the navy, army and air force estimates alike will be increased.

"Peace is the principle aim of British foreign policy," the Prime Minister's statement declared. "The National Government intend to forward this object, not only by the methods adopted in past years — support to the League of Nations, security agreements, international understandings and international regulations of armaments—but by any other means that may be available.

"Notwithstanding their confidence in the ultimate triumph of peaceful methods, in the present troubled state of the world they (the government) realize, that armaments cannot be dispensed with. They are required to preserve peace, to maintain security and to deter aggression.

PROPERTY OWNERS NOW REGISTERED

Up to date a total of 65 unemployed property owners of this city have been registered and listed for work at the office of the city engineer. Wherever possible this type of citizen is being given the preference for odd jobs at which men are needed by the various civic departments.

ROBIN IS SEEN ON DUNDAS STREET

The first spring robin—or perhaps is was one of last year's flock, left behind in the fall—was observed in the city on Sunday afternoon twittering in the branches of a maple tree on Dundas Street east, near Burnham.

CITY WORKMEN CHOP CHANNELS

City workmen engaged by the department of public works were busy today throughout the down-town section in chipping away the ice and frozen snow from the curbs and in cutting channels along the curbs for the water to run away. Considerable difficulty on the part of pedestrians was experienced on Saturday in negotiating sections of the sidewalk in the business district when the melting ice covered the walks with water in some cases inches in depth. The sudden thaw on Saturday was held to be responsible for the difficulty experienced.

OVERCOAT IS RETURNED TO JAIL

What is termed as "the height of nerve" was put into practice by a transient, one John "Curly" Scholes, on Saturday Scholes, it was disclosed by local authorities today, received a suspended sentence after pleading guilty to an L.C.A. charge on Saturday. Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., gave the accused man one half hour to shake the dust of the city from his heels.

Scholes had been on remand in the local county jail from Thursday to Saturday. When he was taken from the local jail Scholes, who is an old offender and "knows the ropes" at the Court House, picked up the best looking overcoat in the establishment when leaving. Later gaol officials informed the city police of the incident and Scholes was located and the coat returned to its proper place at the jail.

FEW CALLS MADE AT RELIEF OFFICE

Although a mild contagion of influenza has swept the city during the past week or so, making its presence felt in factories, offices and business houses, the disease is getting little official recognition at the local Central Relief Bureau. It was stated today, that the demand for first aid remedies for colds and influenza by indigent applicants had shown but a slight increase. The medicines listed at the office are of the simple, household type.

Little increase in the number of relief applicants during the past few weeks has been noted, it was reported today.

SOON READY TO POUR CEMENT

Crib Work For New Dock is Nearly Completed

With the wooden crib-work, which has been in process of construction for the past several weeks now being completed, it is expected that the first of the cement work for the new dock extension on the local harbour front will be commenced the first of next week, it was stated today by Mr. Geo. F. Ostrom, chairman of the local Board of Harbor Commissioners.

The huge cribs, which run at right angles from the present government dock to a point opposite the end of south Church street have now been sunk and filled with hundreds of truckloads of stone and gravel ballast. Although built independently, one at a time, when sunk to the botton of the harbor, the top beams of the cribs fitted perfectly flush with the neighboring ones. This fine placement of the cribs was made possible only through very careful and thorough checking and measuring of the contour of the harbor bottom. The bottom of the cribs then matched that of the bottom of the harbor within a fraction of an inch.

Special arrangements to heat the cement, while being mixed and poured are being made by Mr. Romeo LaRacque, engineer in charge, who has been employed by the local Harbor Board on the recommendation of the Dominion government. The cement work will be poured into wooden and steel form, building the next dock extension up to the level of the present one.

"We expect to have the greater part of the york finished by June" stated chairman Geo. F. Ostrom today. "From now on speed is one of the necessary things connected with the work. We have to race not only against time, but the spring floods, the breaking up of the ice in the bay, and many other factors. We are being helped in this by having excellent and efficient workmen.

Boy Singer of Wales Pleases Many Hundreds

SLIGHT, not tall for his age, fair, these words describe but imperfectly the appearance of Dewi Jones, the greatest boy singer of Wales as he appeared at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening to sing during the service, and to give a program at the close of evening worship before a large congregation increased by reason of many hearers coming from other churches.

HIS slightness, his fairness and his medium height do not tell all of this remarkable boy, who has just touched his twelfth birthday and possesses with all that one of the greatest boy voices ever heard. With the great organ of the church behind him, Dewi looked small, as the mighty power of this instrument pealed out the opening bars of "Where'er You Walk" from Handel's "Semele", it seemed as if he could not fill that vast edifice with golden notes, and with that plaintiveness which is so characteristic of a boy's singing. But as he began to sing, the whole church was bathed in silence but for the golden liquid sounds which he poured out, like a bird in rapture. From then on to the end of the evening, when he sang the "Prayer Perfect" the most exquisite numbers were sung into the ears of the people.

THOUGH his voice filled this large edifice from the floor to the arched roof, never did he strain his voice. To hear a child singing and straining the voice is pitiful but Dewi had learned the value of reserve of force and energy. He cannot but go a long way in the field of his chosen art.

HE sang two numbers during the evening worship "Where'er You Walk" and "Only a Little Way,' by Francis Martin.

AT the close of the service hundreds of worshippers from other churches entered and the large church on the ground floor and the gallery swinging about three sides of the sacred building. was comfortably filled. About nine hundred persons in all heard the last program. A collection was taken at this time the entire proceeds going to the young singer.

HIS first number was the famous "Angels, Ever Bright and Fair," by Handel, in which his command of articulation, his fine phrasing, his rich full tones and the singing quality of his voice were given finest opportunity. He turned to "David of the White Rock," sung in his native Welsh and in that some consider he showed his voice quality at its best. In "Daddy" however he struck the added strain of sentiment and of the heart which made this one of the most popular and highly praised numbers. No adult could sing that song as Dewi Jones sang it, only childhood which worships parenthood and to whom father and mother are the greatest facts in the universe could so express itself. No finer outpouring of heart in song was ever heard in Belleville.

WITH a wisdom which one might not expect in a mere boy of just twelve, Dewi chose his compositions and as a result the total impression of his work was one of greater satisfaction than could be had even in the presence of many great adult masters some of whom seemingly do not know how to select their programs for their audience. Dewi Jones, the boy singer, knows. So his next number "Come Unto Him" from the "Messiah" of Handel pleased as only a Handel number can please. It was apt, and the singing was nobly done. Last was sung "Prayer Perfect" still following out that charm of proper selection of program. Herein he brought to a perfect climax the perfect program, rendered in a perfect manner by a perfect artist who is but a boy.

FROM this little singer who at the age of three in his native Wales made his first appearance in public and who took part in a Welsh festival as a soloist before seven thousand in an audience at the age of seven and who won over two hundred awards by his public performances, from that boy who has come to Montreal to live, and has sung before the Canadian broadcast network under the C.R.C., and who is the only boy in the world to have put on a half hour broadcast alone, had come a never-to-be-forgotten hour of song.

PROFESSOR Hunt, organist of Bridge Street, furnished the young soloist the best accompaniment and must have encouraged the singer by the excellence of the organ work.

REV. Dr. James Semple, at whose home Dewi was a guest, brought the audience and the artist into very close grips by his comment on the numbers and by one little revelation, the revelation which shows Dewi is a real boy like all boys of twelve and under, who think in millions and in romance, for the pastor related how Dewi in the artlessness and sincerity and curiosity of boyhood wanted to know if there was many millionaires in Dr. Semple's congregation.

NINE hundred worshippers and auditors of his numbers love music more than they ever did for the exquisite performance of Dewi Jones, the boy who is by some called the greatest of all boy singers of the globe.

POLICE COURT

Three traffic cases resulted in the fattening of the city's coffers somewhat today when a total of over $25.00 was collected in police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C.

One local motorist was assessed the minimum fine under the act, of ten dollars and costs after he had pleaded guilty to driving a motor car when not in possession of an individual operator's licence. A Prince Edward County driver paid "ten" without costs after pleading guilty to driving an automobile with defective brakes. A third case under the H.T.A. found the accused, a local youth, receive a one year's suspended sentence, and all right to drive a motor vehicle cancelled for that period.

HOME ECONOMICS COURSE IS CLOSED

Banquet at Wallbridge Concludes Successful Venture

The three-months' course in Agriculture and Home Economics held at Wallbridge was concluded on Thursday evening with a banquet and dance. The students of the course entertained their parents on this occasion and all thoroughly enjoyed the event. The Wallbridge Women's Institute under the direction of Mrs. Laurence Ketcheson catered and they are to be congratulated for their work.

Reeve Arthur L. Burke ably acted as toastmaster. He called on members of the council and residents of the district including E. S. Denyes, county clerk; W. H. Nobes, township clerk; Miss Edna Ketcheson and Col. Roscoe Vanderwater for a few remarks. All expressed their enjoyment on the occasion and complimented Mr. Jos. Wilson, Agricultural Representative, on the success of the course.

Mr. J. O. Herity of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, was guest speaker of the occasion and his address on the life of Abraham Lincoln was received with keen interest. The address was especially enlightening and interesting due to the intimate knowledge of the speaker of the life of Abraham Lincoln.

The program during the evening was assisted with special musical numbers by Mrs. Vanderwater and the members of the class and by Mr. G. E. Evans, soloist, assisted by Miss Doris Ketcheson

At the close of the banquet proficiency prizes and certificates were presented by the staff as follows:

General proficiency in Household Science—Florence Hearns.

Proficiency in Cooking — Doris Ketcheson.

Proficiency in Nursing—Peggy Ketcheson.

Proficiency in Sewing—Ella Phillips.

General proficiency in Agriculture—Wilfred McKeown.

Proficiency in Livestock Judging—Hudson Ketcheson, Wilmot Shortt

Proficiency in Classes—Wilfred McKeown; Grant Millar.

Certificates of Merit were won as follows:

I. Course in Home Economics — Evelyn Bush; Ruby Curtis; Dorothy Paul; Dorothy Utman; Ethel McDonald; Reta Sheridan; Lenora Stapley; Florence Hearns; Margaret Ketcheson; Doris Ketcheson; Irene Wallis; Pauline Hadley; Flossie McMurter; Helen Lane; Ella Phillips.

II. Course in Agriculture —Wilfred McKeown; Colon Donald; Hudson Ketcheson; Wilbert Reilly; Grant Nicholson; Leon Wilson; Otis Hardie; Malcolm Sine; Earl Phillips; Don Bleecker; Grant Millar; Allan McDonald; Sam Chisholm; Clifford McKeown; Kenneth Kingston.

The program closed with a dance and Doris Ketcheson and Chas. Allen of Stirling, supplied the music.

MRS. YEOMANS DIES IN TORONTO

Widow of Former Coroner and Health Officer Well-Known Here

Mrs. Gertrude M. Yeomans, widow of Dr. Horace A. Yeomans, who was former health officer for Belleville and at one time coroner, died on Saturday afternoon shortly after five o'clock at her home 63 De-Lisle Avenue, Toronto. Her death was quite sudden, though she had been a semi-invalid since a year ago last May through a heart affection. Recently she had a very severe attack but while it was known that she would not ultimately recover, it was not expected that her death was so near.

In her passing Belleville mourns one of the most charming and popular of women. Born in Napanee, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Richardson, she married Dr. Yeomans and they resided for a number of years in Deseronto. Later they and their family came to Belleville to live and made their home on Pinnacle Street where Dr. Yeomans conducted his medical practice.

Mrs. Yeomans took a special interest in all philanthropic endeavours in the city. She was also associated with the women's departments of Bridge Street United Church and was a member of the Women's Missionary Society of the Church.

On the opening of the war, two of her sons enlisted, Horace "Pat" and Frederick "Ted" and served with the light artillery in France and Belgium, the former giving his life at the front. Mrs. Yeomans had entered wholeheartedly into the work of the Canadian Red Cross at Belleville, and much of its success was due to her devotion to the work which the women of this city undertook at that time in the way of making and sending comforts to the men.

Referring to her association with this organization, Miss Anna Hurley, Secretary of the Red Cross who was also Secretary during the war, today paid tribute to Mrs. Yeomans' work at that time. "She was a splendid and zealous worker," said Miss Hurley, "and was very active all during the war. Mrs. Yeomans was second vice-president of the Belleville branch and was also convener of the knitting circles in the city from whom sox were sent overseas and to the distributing points in London."

She was an active member of Argyle Chapter, I.O.D.E. and a life member of that organization. On the death of her husband late in the year 1921 she continued her residence in Belleville, later moving from the residence on Pinnacle Street which was removed and making her home at one time on West Bridge Street and again on East Bridge Street. A little over eight years ago she removed to Toronto with her family and there she since resided, though paying frequent visits to this city to relatives and friends. In Toronto she was a member of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church.

The late Mrs. Yeomans was possessed of a radiant personality and she carried her cheery smile into every phase of life with which she came in contact. She was a leader in the city's social life.

Mrs. Yeomans was the last member of her family, two brothers, Fred Richardson and George Richardson and a sister Mrs. Ida Foster having predeceased her. She is survived by three daughters, Miss Nina A. Yeomans of Toronto and New York, Mary (Mrs. Fred C. Donald) of Montreal and Miss Clara at home and one son Frederick L. Yeomans of Chicago and four grandchildren. One son Asa died several years ago.

The funeral will take place from Toronto by motor to Belleville Cemetery. It is expected that a number of Belleville friends will meet the cortege at the cemetery gates and attend the last rites.

Feeling tribute to the passing of Mrs. Yeomans was paid by the Rev. Dr. James Semple on Sunday at Bridge Street United Church.

CAR IS DRIVEN DOWN SIDEWALK

Collides With Parked Car And Pedestrians Scatter

Considerable excitement drew the attention of hundreds of shoppers and down-town citizens on Saturday night, when an automobile, being driven by W. H. Drew, Sulphide, proceeded south on Front St. not on the paved portion of the street, but on the sidewalk. Pedestrians fled before the oncoming car, jumping into doorways and seeking shelter wherever possible. Later the wayward motor vehicle came to a stop as it collided with a parked automobile in front of McFee's jewellery store.

Upon investigation by local police it was discovered, that Mr. Drew had parked his car in front of Shaw's store on the west side of Front St. About 10.00 p.m., when he returned for his car and started it, the vehicle bounded forward striking the front of Shaw's store and damaging the new baseboard. Due to wet icy conditions alongside the curb, Mr. Drew was unable to back his automobile into the street, later turning the car south and proceeding down the street on the sidewalk. Unsuspecting citizens and pedestrians made way for the car, but unfortunately it collided with a parked car, the property of Henry Huyck, Brighton, in front of McFee's store. Local police fully investigated, the street was jammed with curious lookers-on and the parties concerned adjourned to the police station, where the matter was finally settled to the mutual satisfaction of all implicated. No person was injured.

Police News

Minor investigations and the usual police assistance constituted the activities of the local police department over the week end. First 20 transients slumbered in warm surroundings in the cell block over the week end, five on Saturday night and 15 on Sunday night.

On Sunday afternoon the department investigated and terminated a air gun shooting fray on Pine St. Following a complaint and upon the arrival of the police it was discovered, that two local youths were firing air gun ammunition at a sign on Pine St. Judging that such procedure was rather dangerous the officer confiscated the air guns.

While riding his bicycle near the intersection of North Front and East Moira Sts. late Saturday night, Donald Ciceri, 326 Foster Ave. was knocked to the pavement when his "bike" was struck by a motor car driven by James B. Peck, Rednersville. The brakes on the Peck car were found to be defective.

Early today the police ascertained a local milk dealer in possession of other dealers' milk bottles. The matter was not presented in police court, although the bottles were immediately confiscated. The matter demands further investigation, police stated later.

Allan Burton, Toronto, complained to the authorities that robbers had stolen his automobile on Saturday night. Later the motor car was found abandoned on Station St. According to Mr. Burton he had parked his car at the upper end of Front St., later returning to find it missing. The disappearance of the motor vehicle is attributed to the work of joy riders.

Cleopatra Reported Buried in Paris

Paris, Mar. 4.—Cleopatra is buried in Paris, says Mme. Myriam Harry, French historian and biographer of Egypt's Queen—and Napoleon Bonaparte is responsible.

Egyptologists accompanied the Little Corporal when he invaded Egypt, according to Mme. Harry, and Rene le Gentil, French Journalist. They found the Queen's tomb, dug up her mummy, and brought it back to Paris, where they buried it with other mummies in the garden of the French National Library, it is asserted.

Obituary

LATE CARMAN GAY
(Contributed)

Despite the very severe weather Springbrook United Church was filled to the doors on Wednesday afternoon Feb. 27th. as relatives and friends gathered to pay their deepest respect to a member of the primary class of the Sunday School.

The pastor Rev. H. W. Foley chose his comforting text from Zechariah 8th. chapter, 5th. verse "The Streets of the City shall be Full of Boys and Girls Playing in the Streets Therof."

The choir rendered "Sometime We'll Understand." During the service Miss Jeanne Robinson sang "There's a Friend for Little Children" with Miss Carman Sine as hymns were "My God and Father While I Stray" and "Safe In The Arms of Jesus"

The bearers were—Reg. Morgan, Lorne Bateman, Harry Bateman, Wendal Thompson, Garnet Forsythe, J. D. Forsythe.

The flower bearers were classmates in the Sunday School,—Joe Thompson, Roy Lough, Delbert Mumby, Waldon Ketcheson, Roy Thompson, Maurice Austin.

Deceased was the youngest child child of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Gay and was 5 years and 10 months and 24 days old. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his sorrowing parents two sisters Audrey and Marjorie. Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket and were;

Pillow—Family; Sheafs—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bartlett; Selma Bartlett; Mr. and Mrs. John For- ehyst dj9wm sythe and family; Pupils and teacher of Springbrook School; Springbrook United Church and Sunday School; Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. J. Ketcheson; Little Miss Francis White, Bouquet of Primroses; Mrs. F. Fenn.

MRS. MINNIE DENYES

After being ill for some time Mrs. Minnie Denyes, widow of the late J. J. Denyes, passed away on Sunday at her late home 74 Catherine Street, city. Deceased, who was in her 69th year, was born in the Township of Thurlow, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Casey. Of late years Mrs. Denyes had resided in the city where she was well-known and much respected.

She was a member of Holloway Street Church and in early life took an active part in church work. Her passing will be regretted by her many friends. Mr. Denyes predeceased her some years ago. Two sons, Percy C. of Campbellford and Otha R. of this city survive, also a brother, H. Casey, of Thurlow, and five sisters, Mrs. G. Sills and Mrs. P. Floyd, Toronto, Mrs. L. Ward, Halloway, Miss Annie Casey, of Chicago, and Miss May Casey of this city.

LATE MRS. LOUISE PASCOE

Very largely attended, the funeral of Mrs. Isabella Louise McRea Pascoe was held from her late residence, 55 Alexander street on Saturday afternoon.

Service in the flower filled home was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street Church, after which interment was made in the Belleville Cemetery.

Bearers were: William Leslie, E. A. Singer, E. Cooley, R. H. Ketcheson, John Cook and F. S. Deacon.

Mrs Rebecca Caldwell

Many relatives and friends were on Sunday morning in attendance at the obsequies at the late Mrs. Rebecca Caldwell of Thurlow Township at Bethel United Church an impressive service was conducted previous to which a short service by the Rev. J. F. Everson at 10.30, was conducted at the home. At the church Mr. Joe Gow rendered a solo entitled "A City Four Square"

Floral tributes were evidence of deceased many friends.

At Jones Cemetry the interment took place. Bearers were A. Casey, G. Dickie, F. Thrasher, E. Sayes, W. Ketcheson.

ADAM COWIE

Adam Cowie, resident of this district for many years, died in Thurlow township Sunday evening after a lengthy illness. He was born in Kingston, 73 years ago. The funeral will be held on Tuesday and interment in Belleville cemetery.

INSTITUTE EQUIPS KITCHEN IN HALL

Splendid Gift is Made to Stirling Community Hall

Stirling March—2 The Stirling Woman's Institute held their annual open meeting in the community hall on Thursday evening Feb 28. The meeting was opened with with the Institute ode, followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. L. Rodgers then gave a brief address of welcome to the friends and visitors. After the reading of the minutes and the business portion of the meeting were complete, the newly decorated kitchen and its equipment was given over by the Institute to the community with the exception of the cupbards containing the dishes. Short address by Reeve West , Councillor Thomas Cranston, and Mr. J. E. Odonnell were given, expressing the appreciation of the town for this splendid gift.

Mrs. R. H. Williams and Mrs. Lovabond were in charge of the remainder of the program. Scout master Tom Ward gave a talk on the subject of (Scouting) which was followed by a piano solo by Gearld Sprentall. Orchestra numbers were given by R. Duffin, (trumpet) Reg. Mathison, (violin) Gerald Sprentall, (piano) Reg. Mathson then gave a violin solo, and Ray Williams a selecton on the guitar.

The topic for the evening was ably dealt with by Mr. H. Lovabond who spoke on (Community activities) speaking at length on the various organizations that contribute to community welfare. Mr. Reg. Mathison gave another violin solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. H. Williams. A very amusing one act play was staged at this time, entitled, (Uncle Hiarm's cold).

Following the play, a dainty lunch was served by the ladies, and the remainder of the evening spent in card playing. The special door prize was won by Mr. C. P. Linn. The prizes for cards were: Highest lady, Mrs. L. Munro. Consolation prize, Mrs. T. Francis. Highest gentleman, Hiram Rodgers. Consolation prize, Reg. Mathison.

Miss Roma Mumby of Bonarlaw spent a few days this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spry.

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter, where a suprise party was held in honor of Miss Geneva Wright, bride te be. The large gathering joined heartily in the community singing led by Art Duncan, who acted as the master of ceremonies, with Mrs. Pyear at the piano. A very fine solo by Miss Betty Conely, "I Love you Dearly", was followed by the playing of the wedding march, as the characters taking part in a very amusing mock wedding, marched to their places for the ceremony. Mr. Jack Potter was the blushing young bride, and Miss Jennie Dainard, the groom. Art Duncan took the part of the preacher. After the laughter subsided, Miss Nina Carlyle delighted all with a solo. Telegrams with kinds of congratulations to the honored guests caused a riot of laughter. The gathering was then brought to order, and the following address was read by Miss Nina Carlyle.

Dear Geneva, —

Having learned of your intended departure from our midst to a new state, "the married state," we, a few of your friends have gathered here to spend a social evening with you. We desire you to know upon leaving us, that we shall miss your genial disposition and kindly manner in your assocation with us.

We regret having to sever our relations with you, but want you to feel that we shall still be your friends. The making of new homes is the way of the world, and we, one and all, join in wishing you the highest measure of sucess, happiness, and prosperity in those things which go to make 'life, death and the vast forever, one grand sweet song".

As a symbol of our appreciation of your moral integrity. and a remembrance of those who wish you all the best; we ask you to accept these gifts. As .often as you use them we hope you will find pleasure in remembering your old friends.

Gladys Pyear. Nina .Carlyle
Helen Pyear Grant Potter.

The large number of beautiful and useful gifts were placed in baskets in front .of Miss Wright. and after the task of opening them, all was complete. She made a fitting response to the address, giving all present an invitation to visit her when she becomes established in her new home.

Lunch was served by the ladies, and after dancing continued until well after midnight.

ABNER APPELBY THEATRE MANAGER SHOT IN OFFICE

$400 From Safe Taken And Victim Shot Twice in Head

KNEW THEATRE LAYOUT

Police Believe Two Guns Were Used in The Murder

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—Detectives today worked on the theory that the murderer of Abraham Appleby knew the business habits of the diminutive 54-year-old proprietor of the Roxy burlesque and movie show, and also was familiar with the layout of the theatre building on Queen Street west, where the crime was committed.

Appleby was found lying on the floor of his office over the theatre yesterday. He had been shot twice through the head. From the safe beside which he was lying, $378 in bills had been stolen. Seventy-five dollars in silver had been ignored. In the dead man's pockets were $52.37 overlooked by the killer, and on his necktie was a stick-pin valued at $200. Also left behind.

Appleby left his home about 11 a.m. yesterday and went to his office to check over Saturday's box-office receipts and prepare them for deposit in a bank today.

Police believe the murderer might have waited outside Appleby's office until he opened the door, followed him in, and then held him up, finally shooting him to reduce the chances of identification if he were caught.

Break Door Down

The Roxy Theatre, last stronghold of burlesque in Toronto, and situated on the fringe of the city's Chinatown, had been rented to the Chinese Free Masons for a performance Sunday of their play, "Revolution."

George P. Wong, one of the club officials, called at the theatre yesterday to arrange the props. The place was locked. An arrangement had been made with Appleby to be there. After a wait of more than an hour, Wong went to Appleby's home to get the key.

A son-in-law, Murray Letovski, returned with Wong, and the two of them tried to get in. A ladder was obtained, placed against the window of Appleby's office, and Wong climbed up. He saw the man's body on the floor, smashed a window and entered. He opened the door for Letovski.

The police were notified. A fingerprint expert made a careful examination of the office. Dr. Thos. Belt, pathologist of the Toronto General Hospital, removed the two bullets from Appleby's skull. Although both bullets were mushroomed, it was thought possible that they were of different calibre, and indication that more than one revolver was used in the murder.

The Chinese play went on last evening in the theatre, while police and other authorities investigated the murder upstairs.

BATTLE TIME IN NORTHERN FIELDS

Strive to Get Machinery in Before Snow is Gone

By LESLIE ROBERTS

Jellicoe, Ont., March 4 (CP)—Mine-makers of the Sturgeon River gold fields are fighting a battle against time. Striving to get heavy machinery from Jellicoe to the scene of mining operations before the snow is gone. This is one place in Canada, where spring doesn't need to hurry along.

Construction of a summer road lining Jellicoe and the active mining area 15 miles away looms as the result of conferences between leading citizens. It was intimated, that the Ontario Government will lend all possible financial and engineering aid to such a project.

Preliminary cruising of such a route is to be undertaken immediately. But if mine-making is to go on without delay, heavy machinery will have to be on the scene before warm weather arrives. A summer road could not be brought through until mid summer at the earliest.

Today the race is on to transport the machinery and heavy equipment, while snow provides a means. Once the snow begins to go heavy haulage will cease until a gravel highway is completed.

Wild Saarlanders Begin Government

Saarbruecken, Germany, March 2 (AP)—Nazi Germany settled down to the huge task of fulfilling promises to new countrymen in the Saar Basin today as the Saarlanders, wild with joy at Adolf Hitler's surprise visit, emerged from the beer halls to a new day.

Simultaneously Hitlerism refurnished its International outlook with a view to the impending visit of Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, to discuss with the Reichsfuehrer the Franco-British proposals for European peace.

BY-ELECTION IN NIPISSING TODAY

Caused by Death of Theodore Legault in The Summer

North Bay, Ont., March 4—(CP)—The electorate of Nipissing trooped to the ballot boxes today to elect a member to the Ontario Legislature and fill the vacancy created by the death of the late Theodore Legault, Liberal.

There is no Conservative candidate and voting has narrowed down to a straight fight between J. Harry Marceau, Liberal, and E. S. Lawrence, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidate.

The by-election is the fourth sinme Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn led his Liberal party to an overwhelming victory in the Ontario general elections last June 19. With his Minister of Lands and Forests, Hon. Peter Heenan ,the Premier has been working for the cause of Mr. Marceau and was confident of another Liberal victory.

If this should be the case it would be the fourth straight win for the Liberal party.

Present standing in the Ontario House is: Liberals 66; Liberal-Progressives 3; Conservatives 17; C. C. F. 1; Intepenoent 1; U.F.O. 1.

Famine Conditions Reported in Hankow

Hankow, Hupeh, China, March 2—(AP)—Famine conditions similar to those wrecking havoc among the populace of Anhwei were reported today to be developing in a wide area north of here.

As in the case of Anhwei the cause is last summer's drought. The present crops already have been consumed, so necessary was food to the people of the area.

GREEK CABINET RESIGNS IN BODY

Expected The Same Premier Will be Asked to Form Cabinet

Budapest, Hungary, March 4—(AP)—The cabinet of Premier Julius Goemboes resigned today.

Premier Goemboes submitted the resignation of his cabinet to Admiral Nicholas Horthy, the Regent, with the explanation it had been decided upon unanimously at a special session of the government lasting all morning.

The Regent did not immediately name the Premier's success but it was generally expected Goemboes would be entrusted with formation of another government.

PREMIER BENNETT TO TAKE HOLIDAY

Need of Rest After His Arduous Duties in The House

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)—Parliament today will resume consideration of government business; but some doubt exists as to just when the prime minister can take over full direction of its activities. It now develops that Mr. Bennett is much in need of rest after an attack of influenza. Run down after a long period of hard work, he may go south for a while. If this is decided on he will probably come back to the house for a few days before leaving for the enforced holiday.

While the House has business on hand, and can always fall back on estimates if the order paper clears up, the Prime Minister's indisposition may delay to some extent the introduction and advancement of items in his reform program. On the order paper stands notice of important legislation for establishing a Canadian grain board. This resolution has yet to be explained to the house. It was to be taken up this week. The eight-hour day bill, and that providing for a day of rest in seven, were also to be introduced.

If it should be necessary for Mr. Bennett to go away soon, other ministers may be entrusted with the reform legislation. Unemployment relief is another matter that will become increasingly urgent as the fiscal year draws near to its close with the end of this month. On March 31, agreements with the provinces under which the Dominion pays a proportion of relief costs will expire.

Committees of the House will resume work. Most of them do not get into action until Tuesday.

MEDICAL CARE

Medical care in these days is causing deliberation and discussion as the very practical cases of sick and weak on relief aid comes before governments. The problem is not one of one nation only but of every nation because the stress is worldwide.

People in Ontario and in the towns and cities of Ontario, know what a problem it has been. In proof that the United States has exactly the same issue for settlement or decision, one has but to quote from the New Yorke Times. The quoted words of Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of Cornell University, sound very much like the statement of Canadians on this very important matter. Dr. Farrand had said:

"The mass of the American people are receiving inadequate medical care. That care is available and must be had. The costs cannot be budgeted by the individual citizen but can be met when distributed over large groups. The methods of distributon can be modified to meet local or special conditions. Successful application will benefit both the people who are served and the professions who give the service."

The Times goes on to comment:

"As to the inadequacy it has been shown that even in a normal time half the population receives 'no medical care whatever.' A still larger proportion has no dental care. And the situation has become 'steadily worse' during the depression. This is simply because the people cannot pay for it. For this the medical profession is not responsible. In every community of the country the doctor has carried the load of unpaid service—and 'too often without recognition of any sort.' His lot has reached a crisis. Even in 1929 one-third of all American physicians had net incomes of less than $2,500 and one-half of less than $3,800. Of private general physicians more would be found in the $1,000-$2,000 range of income than in any higher bracket. The problam to be solved is that of the poor and economically middle-class patient and of the average doctor, dentist and nurse. And it is increasingly difficult.

"But it is estimated that the people already pay nearly enough in any normal year with 'totally unsatisfactory results', Today we are spending $30 per capita a year with 'totally unsatisfactory resluts,' whereas an expenditure of $36 per capita a year would meet the demands of 'reasonable standards'—assuming that there was a 'reasonable distribution' over the entire country (for which there are nearly enough qualified physicians). It would seem that in normal times, at least, the people can afford to pay for the kind of medical service which modern science of medicine and nursing regards as desirable. But how is adequate medical care to be assured with something like adequate compensation to the doctors and nurses?

"The answer is health insurance on a wide scale. But in determining upon the plan there must be full cooperation between the medical and dental professions and the public. Any system that would tend to lower the quality of these professions "would carry the seeds of ultimate failure." The control of procedures and standards must remain in the hands of the professions, and the relations between patient and physician must be safeguarded. And there is no reason, ascording to this highest authority, why a system of insurance should not be devised that would work to the good of both physician and patient. This is a matter of prime concern to every individual and therefore to organized society—and to the medical profession."

WORTHY MEMORIAL

The King George Silver Jubilee Cancer Fund for Canada is to be the Canadian memorial of the celebration of the completion of twenty-five years since His Majesty's accession to the throne in 1910. This foundation comes as a result of the King's inspiration. No storied monuments of marble nor of granite will be built to commemorate the event, but a monument more enduring in that it will help to save lives and perhaps bring about a solution of the cancer mystery with which many laboratories are wrestling.

The plan is to have Canadians subscribe to the fund which will be administered in perpetuity for the Dominion by a board of seven Canadian trustees. It will have the two great objects which face research in medicine in all fields. Alleviation of suffering and through discovery finding a probable means of eradication or elimination of the disease which is dreaded by mankind. The campaign for the raising of funds has already been inaugurated by His Excellency the Governor General.

No nobler memorial to the gracious Monarch and his Queen at the time of their anniversary could be established. As the King and the Queen continue to rule over the wide expanse of the Empire, they can take more than ordinary interest in the progress of the Canadian research, which is so noble.

It is hoped that Canadians everywhere finding in it a living something, the aim of will contribute to this purpose. Countess Bessborough will acknowledge all contributions received at Government House, before their transference to the trustees.

CARPET-WEAVING SYMBOLISM

Colors are symbolic to the Oriental, particularly to those who weave colors into carpets. The Moslem believes that red is the color expressive of joy and uses it a great deal for carpets that are to be connected with marriage. Blue symbolizes the air in Persia. Green is a sacred color to Moslems as it is symbol of immortality. The Arabs in their carpet making never use a pattern but carry the design, no matter how intricate, in their heads.—Los Angeles Times.

EXPECTS 621 TO DIE

As the years take their toll on the Canadian veterans of the Great War, more and more die each year. During 1935 the Canadian government estimates that 621 former soldiers will be buried under the auspices of the Last Post Fund. To give each veteran a respectable funeral, the government has set aside $60,000 as this year's grant to the fund.

The last five years have been hard ones for many of the veterans. Out of work their scant resources have soon dwindled. When sickness strikes their sapped strength, the vitality to withstand the attack is gone.

It is a tragedy that 20 years after the war began that provision must be made to bury 621 old soldiers who are without funds. No one is opposed to granting the money, but everyone regrets that conditions make such a fund necessary.—Sudbury Star.

A ROSE WITHOUT A THORN?

The Walrus who talked about cabbages would be surprised if he were to pay a visit to Cornell University today. The cabbage he knew is no longer—at Cornell. There they have gone in for something in the nature of an aristocratic cabbage, from which the old familiar scent has been eliminated, but which otherwise retains its succulent qualities.

For long generations the homely cabbage has been one of the stock foods of the Anglo-Saxon. "Corned beef and cabbage" is a term that has become a part of the English vocabulary everywhere. And in all directions—from the basement of the stuffy apartment house to the open-air kitchen of the habitant, from the ultra-hygienic culinary department of the expensive restaurant to the lowly gas-stove of the kitchenette, the odour of boiled cabbage has floated upon the air, giving due and emphatic notice of the forthcoming meal.

But henceforth we—or Cornell—will be deprived of this signal. It may have been pungent, but it was often highly welcome. We shall not now know beforehand that there is cabbage for dinner. By that much of anticipation our pleasures therein will be cut down. It may appear as a welcome thing to some people that the cabbage has become a deodorised aristocrat, but we fancy the great majority will miss that rich and penetrating smell and find the cabbage that smelleth not a little less attractive than that which gave forth is aroma without restraint and without stint.—Montreal Star.

CENT-A-MILE-ECHOES

These cent-a-mile excursions on the railways are popular and probably they pay. At least, they induce many people to travel by railway, although they have become used to travelling almost altogether by car and have forgotten that rail travel still has advantages. The most popular of these excursions are the ones to Toronto and many small-town dwellers have been taking them regularly. And all kinds of stories might be told about them.

For instance, the Walkerton Herald-Times tells of an old man living retired in that town who decided to make the trip to Toronto, though he had not been there for twenty (or was it thirty years. The new station amazed him, but when he got out and tried to cross the corners near the station, the heavy traffic scared him. So what did he do? He went back to the station and spent the rest of the day in the building, returning home, tired out, on the afternoon train.

Up in Chesley, the station agent thinks many of the people have suddenly discovered long-lost relatives in Agincourt. Some of the excursions are not to Toronto but to stations east of that city, and on such excursions, the tickets are good for a day longer (Friday to Monday). As a result there is an unprecedented demand for tickets to Agincourt, the first station east of Toronto for which tickets are good. It is suspected, hwever, that most of these travellers never get beyond Toronto. The tickets cost them thirty cents more but they're good for an extra day, and they are far, far cheaper than the regular fare from Chesley. However, the officials are catching on. Last week, there was another evxcursion to points east of Toronto, but the nearest one was sixty cents east of the metropolis.—Fergus News-Record.

Happiness is not the end of life, character is.—Beecher.

HERITAGE

Unchartered sea and trackless waste,
Our staunch and stern forefathers faced,
Midst famine, flood and savage foe
They struggled on for weal or woe.

We dwell today in plenteous ease?
We eat the fruit of orchard trees
That grow upon the fertile land
They cleared with only axe and hand
In sweat and strain and constant fear
Of hostile hosts that hovered near,
We till the soil they drained and cleared;
Enjoy the edifice they reared
To law and order, truth and right—
Reap rich rewards gained by their fight
Against oppresson, graft and greed,
Our heritage we take, nor heed
The blood and brawn that bought us free
And gained us life and liberty.
Too prone to drift, and dream and play,
And miss the challenge of our day;
Nor yet those heavy hardships heed,
Long borne of builders of our breed.

Their courage, industry and zeal
Still cry to us in mute appeal
Across the year..."OH, WHAT HAVE YE PREPARED FOR YOUR POSTERITY?"
—George A. Wright, Brockville.

NEW YORK HAS A NEW NIGHT HOT SPOT, "The Versailles", which is doing a swell business with swells and would-be swells. Whether there will be any treaty making there or no, or ghosts of the guillotine, we know not, but this we can say, perhaps from experience, that there will be headaches galore, and perhaps a few heartaches, for women in all their beauty, attired in a brief handkerchief or two, emerge from their furry robes in those hot spots, and boy! do they look like somepin! I'll tell the world a mouthful.

CANADIAN DISTILLER advertises in New York papers that he has over eleven million gallons of good rye whiskey which has been laying around idle in wood for several years and asks New York thirsts to drink it up. What a swell bathing pool filler that would make, and what a chance to souse a bunch of soaks therein and see that they got enough of the brew for once in their lives. One duck would be sufficient we're thinking, to turn those sons of doting mothers back to real appetites for milk, long since forgotten.

THE WIFE'S BIRTHDAY is an important anniversary not to be overlooked on pain of "a fate worse than death". The Germans have a way for it. In Berlin telephone patrons may ring up Central to be reminded of the date of the wife's birthday, or they can arrange to be reminded, days later, of an appointment, or of income tax payments or anything else. In England you can ring up and find out what the weather is to be like, you can ask the exchange to remind you of an appointment, you can arrange to be wakened at a fixed hour, or by calling the exchange you can arrange to have a boy come to take your dog out for a walk, or the baby in the perambulator, at sixpence a mile. In Canada Central used to tell you the correct time—now Central won't take time even to do that—in fact as far as information goes Central is a bit of a clam in Canada.

DR. TOWNSEND, OF CALIFORNIA, has a nice profitable racket, getting members for his club which purposes to reform the social structure by retiring all workers at sixty, men and women, paying them two hundred dollars a month thereafter providing the two hundred is spent every month. He figures with a large leisure class spending two hundred dollars every month business is bound to be good. Then the young folks would all move into the jobs vacated by the sixty-year-olds and there would be no unemployment.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, Ontario,
March 4, 1935

To The Editor:

The Oldest Mason

The late James A. Roy who died Saturday, the 2nd instant, was not only the oldest Free Mason in the City at the time of his death, but was also at that time the senior member of the Craft in Belleville, having been made a Free Mason at a date prior to any other living Free Mason at the time of his death.

He was initiated in the old brick lodge room on the west side of John Street, that stood where the home of Mr. Clifford White is now erected. Mr. Roy was born in December 1845, and remembers the old Margaret Simpson frame tavern that stood on the south east corner of Front and Dundas streets in which the Masonic Lodge at one time held its meetings.

This frame tavern had an outside stairway leading to the upper storey in which the lodge room was situated, and it replaced the log tavern that was destroyed in 1812, the log tavern having contained the first Masonic Lodge room in this part of the province.

The Lodge received a dispensation to commence in 1801 and in 1803 received a Warrant. It was first known as Thurlow Lodge and in 1812 became known as Moira Lodge.

Yours truly.
W. C. Mikel

SAYS TROMBONE PLAYERS DIZZY

Chicago, March 4—To trombone players life is no snap.

Recalling his own early trombone lessons, saying that playing the instrument sometimes made a man dizzy, Judge Desort decided to give Joe Lear a chance to pay up before taking any further action against him.

Lear's wife, Lydia, complained Joe was behind in the $25 a week he promised to pay pending settlement of her divorce case.

BELL TELEPHONE FLIES ENSIGN

The blue and white design of the Bell Telephone Company is being flown today from the staff of the local exchange building on Pinnacle Street in commemoration of the 88th anniversary of the birth of Alexander Graham Bell, March 3rd, 1847.

Born at Edinburgh, Scotland, in a modest flat near Charlotte Square, Bell came to Canada with his parents in 1870, and four years later invented the telephone at Brantford.

BUY NOW! AND MAKE WORK

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 4 (CP)—Confused by the unsettled currency situation, traders avoided the industrial share market today and volume showed a considerable slump. The weak buying demand resulted also in mild recessions generally.

Practically all interlisted issues were on the down side early this afternoon, Nickel, Ford "A", C.P.R., Brazilian and the Distillery and Oil stocks recording losses of ⅛ to ⅝. Walkers common at 29 was down ⅝.

Brewing Corporation stocks were sold active, the preferred at a loss of more than a point and the common at a drop of ½. Canada Bud and Canada Malting also worked lower. Lower prices ruled in the steels and foods.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 4 (CP) — Profit-taking on a large scale set in soon after the opening and prices were pared down all along the line. Hollinger dropped from a morning high of 20.25 to 18.50 before digging in and it later recovered to 18.75, off 1.30 net. The other big producers held better, losses being limited to $1.00.

The jump of nearly two shillings in the price of bar gold in London today was partly discounted by the fall of Sterling and the bullish demonstration was somewhat dampened. By early afternoon the golds were off 3 to 15 cents among the cheap issues with a few exceptions. McWatters continued its advance, helped, it is understood by the heavy short interest in the stock.

Silver and Base Metal issues developed few changes. Nipissing gained some ground and Eldorado lost a few cents.

BOND MARKET

Toronto, March 4 (CP) — Toronto bond market was more orderly today following its gyrations of Friday and Saturday when frightened holders dumped some of the Quebec utility shares on the report Ontario would try to cancel the Gatineau power contract. Prices at noon today were just about on a level with Saturday's closing quotations and there had been no dips or rallies during the morning.

Bond dealers report holders have now adopted a waiting attitude rather than sell at the present prices which are, in the case of the Gatineau issues, down about ten points from those ruling early last week. Beauharnois and McLaren-Quebec issues took almost similar losses.

High grade issues were inclined also to await developments in the utility situation. Trading was decidedly slow with prices showing no changes from Saturday.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Mar. 4 (AP)—While financial markets were not particularly excited today over further unsettlement in British and European currencies, most traders found the side lines much to their liking and prices were inclined to sag.

With London gold being marked up to a new record high, and Sterling consequently slumping nearly 5 cents at one time, enthusiasm for stocks was notably cool.

Among Canadian stocks, aside from heaviness in Dome and McIntyre, shares of International Nickel and Canadian Pacific receded fractionally. On the curb, Lake Shore and Hiram Walker were a bit easy. Dominion Government 4s yielded ½ of a point. Canadian funds were off ⅝ of a cent at 99.25 cents.

There were a few soft spots in the general list. Johns-Manville dropped two points and issues down around a point or so included Spiegel-May-Stern, Cuban-American Sugar Preferred, Dome, McIntyre Porcupine, U. S. Smelting and Cerro de Pasco.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Mar. 4 (CP) — Weighty steers and butchers were the only grades of the cattle division of the Toronto livestock market to show steadiness at the opening today. All other grades were unsettled. Calves opened steady but no price was established on hogs, sheep or lambs.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion livestock branch were: Cattle, 3,330; calves, 250; hogs, 510; sheep and lambs, 1,160.

A few choice heavy steers sold at $6.75 to $7.25 while good cows brought $4.00 to $4.25 with a few tops at $4.50.

The calf division opened at $8.00 to $8.50 for choice with common down to $5.00.

ROADS TURN ICY, TRAFFIC CRAWLS

Conditions Throughout Province Are Much The Same

Ice-glazed roads, with deep rivulets of running water cutting channels in the slippery ruts created a hazardous condition for motor traffic through this section over the week end and almost caused a halt to transportation in the rural districts. Even on the highways traffic had slowed to a crawl during the afternoon on Saturday. Again on Sunday, with a warm sun shining and the thaw still in evidence, travel by car and bus was carried on with considerable difficulty. This afternoon the roads became glassy with snow turning to rain which froze as it fell.

In the city on Sunday, although sections of sidewalk were covered with water the bright sunshine lured a record crowd to the outdoors. In the downtown section of the city a real pre-Easter parade. Officials of the Belleville General Hospital reported the Sunday attendance of visitors the largest of any single day of the year.

(By the Canadian Press)

Motor traffic was demoralized in Southern Ontario today following rain which froze as fast as it fell.

From Hamilton bus services to Toronto, Galt, Dundas, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, N.Y., and Brantford, were suspended until roads are sanded. Motor traffic barely crawled in the city and pedestrians found their footing treacherous. Scores of trucks and cars were sliding together in a mass on the mountain roadways.

Power interruptions were frequent but of only short duration at Brantford. Heavy rain which froze with sinking temperatures made travel hazardous. Similar road conditions existed at St. Catharines.

Trucks remained stationary in the vicinity of Galt, waiting for sanding operations to permit travel. There were numerous minor accidents.

Rain fell early this morning at Stratford and roads and pavements were covered with glare ice as temperatures dropped sharply. A number of transport companies cancelled deliveries for the day.

Driving conditions at Kitchener were termed the "worst of the winter." Travel was possible on some streets but few were venturing on country roads.

Forecasts called for strong easterly winds with sleet turning to rain.

No serious accidents were reported at Sarnia but automobiles skidded on the glazed road surfaces.

Northern Development Department branches at North Bay and Huntsville reported all highways in good condition today. Main roads leading from North Bay were all fit for travel.

Mrs. Roosevelt Earns $36,000 by Radio Talks for Charity

Washington, March 4—(AP)—The wife of President Roosevelt disclosed today that she had turned into philanthropy from her commercial radio broadcasts alone almost half as much money as the Government paid Mr. Roosevelt for a year's work.

Answering questions put to her as a review of two years plentifully filled with activities no wife of a United States President ever did before, she gave an itemized account of $36,000 paid the Friends' Service Committee for her radio talks between May 14 and Dec. 31, 1934. Mr. Roosevelt's salary is $75,000.

SERUM IS TRANSPORTED TO DETROIT BY PLANE

Twelve Hours Must Elapse Before Effect Is Noticed

Detroit, Mar. 4 (AP)—A 12-hour watch was posted at the hospital bedside of eight-year-old Ronald Osnos today to await the reaction of a serum brought by plane from Montreal by Dr. Everett G. D. Murray Sunday night in an effort to save the child's life.

Dr. Murray, member of the Department of Bacteriology at McGill University, was flown from Montreal to Detroit in a high speed transport plane chartered by the boy's father, Max, the youngster was stricken nearly two weeks ago by what hospital authorities said was a baffling blood disorder. Hospital doctors, however, refused to disclose the nature of the disease.

12 HEAD CATTLE BURNED IN FIRE

Hard Luck Appears to be Dogging Footsteps of Vancamp

Lindsay, Ont., March 4 (CP)—Hard luck appears to be dogging the footsteps of Stanford VanCamp of Blackstock. His barn was destroyed by fire last Monday. Mr. VanCamp was able to save his stock.

In order to keep his animals in a warm place he made arrangements to have them stabled in the barn on the farm recently purchased by Cecil Hyde.

Thursday evening fire destroyed this barn and with it a great deal of Mr. Van Camp's stock. He moved his cattle and other animals there in the afternoon and the fire started in the evening.

Twelve of his cattle were burned along with two horses and all his implements except a binder and a cultivator. Thirty pigs belonging to him were also destroyed in the fire as were four cattle belonging to Mr. Hyde.

EMBARK FOR CRETE TO FIGHT REBELS

Greek Fleet Called Out in Effort to Crush Revolution

Budapest, March 4—(CP Havas)—Shortly after presenting the resignation of his government Premier Julius Goemboes today succeeded in forming a new cabinet. The re-shuffling changed only three ministers. The new cabinet will be presented to Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, tomorrow.

The government crisis resulted from dissatisfaction with a regens regulation which prohibited all political meetings and demonstrations in Hungary in view of the imminence of international political negotiations affecting Central Europe.

Athens, March 4—(AP)—The Greek fleet prepared today to embark upon an expedition to Crete to wage a fight to the finish with the rebels, who have taken possession of the entire island.

Naval vessels were ordered to make ready to put to set after wireless messages had been intercepted indicating the insurgents might flee to Italian territory. The radio station at Votanikos reported it had heard the wireless station at Canea, Crete, attempting to communicate with an Italian station at Rhodes.

A semi-official message said the town of Seres had been wrested from the rebels but the insurgents still held possession of Kabala in the Province of Drama.

Seven battleships partially disabled by mutineers, who fled from the Salamis arsenal were hurriedly repaired overnight and were to be ready today to go into action in defence of the government of Premier Panayoti Tsaldris. It was widely rumored the government fleet would go forth at once to force a naval engagement with the four ships still in the hands of the rebels.

Body of Prehistoric Beast Is Found in Ice of Arctic

Moscow, March 4—(CP-Havas)—A mammoth carcass, perfectly-preserved by the natural icebox of Siberia's frozen wastes, has been found in the ice near the mouth of the Siberian River, the Academy of Science reported today.

The academy plans to send an expedition to study the remains of the great shaggy beast, extinct for centuries and known chiefly by fossil remains. Though completely preserved specimens are rare, they are not unknown, several others having been found in the ice of Arctic glaciers, where the continuous bitter cold has preserved them in perfect condition through the centuries since their death.

MORE MONEY TO BE SPENT ON ARMS

maments as a part of our peace policy has brought them below the level required for the fulfillment of these objects, especially in view of the uncertainty of the international situation and an increase in armaments in all parts of the world."

The statement outlined international pacts since the Great War in which the nations have sought to preserve peace.

"Hitherto," it proceeded, "in spite of many setbacks, public opinion in this country has tended to assume nothing was required for the maintenance of peace except existing international political machinery and that older methods of defence—navies, armies and air forces—no longer are required.

"The force of world events, however, has shown this assumption is premature. That we have far to go before we can find complete security without having in the background the means of defending ourselves against attack.

"In the deliberate judgment of the government," says an accompanying official memorandum, "the time has now arrived when action should be taken to bring our military preparations more up-to-date."

Memorandum

The explanatory memorandum declares:

"The installation and improvement of coast defences at home and abroad and the necessary expansion of anti-aircraft defences are matters of pressing importance. Moreover the mobile forces of the regular and territorial armies require more modern arms and equipment; the program of mechanization calls for acceleration; reserves of stores and ammunition need to be augmented; modern methods of transport and communication have to be advanced for military purposes."

Between 1922 and 1932, the army estimates showed a generally progressive decline from $310,000,000 to $182,440,000. Then they started on upward course. In 1934 they stood at $198,000,000. For 1935 they totalled $217,750,000, an actual increase of $19,750,000.

Regular Army.

The total number of men of all ranks on the establishment of the regular army in 1935 will be 152,200 against 149,500 last year.

"The strength of the army reserve at the beginning of the financial year," the memorandum adds, "should be about 111,500 and should rise to about 113,000 by the end of the year. Recruiting for the supplementary reserve has been rather disappointing but it is hoped its strength will rise from about 20,600 at the beginning to approximately 22,000 at the end of the year."

The strength of the territorial army exclusive of the permanent staff on Jan. 1 was 7,030 officers and 123,450 other ranks.

During the coming year advances will be made in mechanization. Mechanization of horse artillery and field artillery and conversion of light artillery brigades into army field brigades which will be re-armed with 4.5 howitzers and 18-pounders, will continue.

Considerable progress will be made in provision of light tanks of the latest type.

"FALSE" GOLD FORMULA PROVED TRUE

Because he claimed he could produce more gold from the earth than by any method now in use, M. Dunikowski (RIGHT) was sentenced to prison for two years in France because his claims were said to have been false. Now a French chemist, Albert Bonn (LEFT) expert to French law courts, took over the work Dunikowski was doing and proved the formula successful. The Polish chemist has been released as a result. Dunikowski's formula is for use on ore-bearing earth.

At Cannifton United Church Parsonage on Saturday evening, a quiet wedding took place when Miss Myrtle Archibald, daughter of Mrs. Archibald and the late John Archibald, of Cannifton, became the bride of Mr. Ray Lockyer of Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Merrick. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to eastern points and on their return will reside at 67 Station Street.

TREVERTON—EMERSON

Plainfield, March 4.—A quiet wedding was solemnized by the Rev. J. P. Everson, at the Plainfield United Church Parsonage at noon Saturday, when Hazel Leona Emerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson Emerson, of Thurlow Township, became the bride of Charles Finkle Treverton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Franklin Treverton, also of Thurlow. The young couple were unattended and after a honeymoon trip to Montreal and other eastern points will reside on the groom's farm in Thurlow.

Took Wreath of Flowers After The Return Run

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 4 — Sir Malcolm Campbell has taken considerable beating on Daytona's sands in the past couple of days. But one jolt he got came before Bluebird was in motion.

"Just as I was about to step into the car for a south run," he said with a grin today, "a man approached me solemnly and said:

"Sir Malcolmn we've a wreath to give you." I turned and saw a closed car that looked extraordinarily like a hearse. Nearby was a cluster of flowers.

"A what?" I asked him.

"'A wreath'" he said. "'Do you want it now'?"

"No thanks," he said "I prefer it when I return."

It turned out to be the good luck offering of a local florists' association.

Her Loyalist Ancestors

People in this country have given too little thought, not to mention too little veneration, to their ancestors, especially when those ancestors happened to be the gallant souls who gave up comforts to face the impenetrable forests of a new land that they might continue to live under the British flag. (Having no United Empire Loyalist blood in our veins we can praise them without stint). So we felt it was a particularly good idea for Mrs. Derwyn Owen to tell the U.E.L. luncheon party assembled in her honor at the University Women's Club on Saturday the story of her distaff side. Mrs. Owen, holding a lovely presentation nosegay, and flanked by Loyalist blood (the chairwoman, Mrs. J. A. Harvey, Mrs. A. S. Foster with a Stoney Creek battlefield to boast about; Mrs. George Henry and Mrs. George Shaw, each with her own ancestral history), traced that story from 1767 and an officer in the army in the then British colonies, through the move into New Brunswick at the time of the Revolutionary War (with residence first in Saint John and later in Maugerville), through the romance of the long journey by canoe down the Saint John River, the trip on the Riviere du Loup and up the St. Lawrence, undertaken by Isabella Elizabeth and her five children, when the husband and father, Dr. Gamble, joined Governor Simcoe at Niagara and on to intermarriage with the Geddes family and the day when a daughter of this marriage went with her father to the Carrying Place and the missionary there, the Reverend John Grier, afterwards rector of St. Thomas Church, Belleville, remarked to himself; "Please God that lady will be my wife." "And that," said Mrs. Owen, "is how I got my Loyalist ancestors for the Rev. John Grier was my grandfather and that's his youngest daughter over there," she ended, pointing to her aunt, Miss Isabel Grier, one of the luncheon guests.—Bride Broder in the Mail and Empire.

Does the Hard Winter Sap Your Vitality?

Do You Find Yourself Weak, Draggy, Pepless?

A BLOOD test would probably show that your precious, vitalizing and energy-producing haemoglobin has been thinned down until it is from 10% to 25% or more below normal. Possibly the effects of winter ills have also lowered your blood count. This condition, common in Winter and Spring, can be soon made right by treatment with a remedy that is prepared to increase haemoglobin and to build up the blood count. Such a remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which was thoroughly tested at a clinic of 40 run-down, below-par, thin-blooded people held in a large Canadian city.

What Blood Tests Of 40 People Showed

These 40 men and women were given blood tests before taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and again after taking the remedy for about a month.

Thirty-eight of the 40 people—a 95% record—showed increases in haemoglobin of from 10% to 22% in the short test period—positive proof of the blood-enriching and revitalizing powers of this world-famous remedy. Every patient whose blood count was below normal had it materially increased—positive proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to aid in forming new red blood cells.

This Authoritative Test Proves the Value of This Remedy For Increasing Strength and Energy

Complete records of this scientific test are on file, and are most convincing to those persons who want scientific proof of the progress made. But most important to you is the fact that all of these persons greatly increased their vigor, vitality and strength in from four to five weeks. At the end of the test they had the pep that makes life a joy. They had the strength to tackle their work with the vim that gets things done. They had the desire to step out and go places and have a good time. They again knew what it was to enjoy health. You can just as surely banish your case of chronic fatigue—just as surely revitalize your blood with new red cells and enrich it with energy-producing haemoglobin—by taking, for a few weeks, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (so called because coated with pink sugar). Your druggist has this clinically-tested remedy—50 cents a package.

MEMBERS OF MOOSE VISIT TRENTON LODGE

Norman G Heyd Regional Director Heard in Address

The members of the Belleville Lodge 1004 and Belleville Chapter 435 of the Loyal Order of the Moose and their friends visited Trenton Lodge on Thursday evening, February 28th, where they were entertained by the Trenton Lodge, on the occasion of the visit to Trenton of Brother Norman G. Heyd, Regional Director of Canada who was accompanied by Brother Joseph Jackson.

Brother Coutts of Trenton Lodge introduced Brother Heyd and Brother Jackson and welcomed the large number of members and friends.

Brother Heyd gave an inspiring address pointing out the services of the Fraternity and the benefits to be gained from it. With the assistance of Brother Jackson he showed colored slides of Mooseheart, the Child City, while he gave short explanatory remarks of each scene.

Mr. Clare Patterson of Belleville gave two vocal solos that were enjoyed, and Mr. James Lazenby gave an amusing impersonation.

The carpet ball game was won by the Belleville members.

At the close of the program refreshments were served and cards and dancing provided.

HARD TIME SOCIAL HELD AT FOXBORO

Under the auspices of the W.M.S. of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church a hard time social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Peacock of the Fifth of Sidney on Friday.

About seventy-five people were present and took part in community singing and old time games. The musical part of the programme consisted of solos by Mrs. L Gowsell, Miss Nellie Bell, Miss Verna Peacock, Mr. Grant Longwell and Mr. J. Christie.

Mrs. John Jacques won a table bouquet, donated by Mrs. Richard Townsend for the woman wearing the most suitable costume. The prize for the women's comic costume, a cup and saucer given by Mrs. Clem Ketcheson, was won by Mrs. H. Longwell. Other prizes, the gifts of Mrs. G. N. McCullough, President of the W.M.S. were won by Mrs. J. Gowsell, Miss Eleanor Johnson, Miss Verna Peacock and Miss Catherine Moore.

Among the men Mr. Colin Donald won a pair of socks, donated by Mr. R. B. Hamilton for suitable costume, and Mr. J. Longwell took the prize for comic costume, the gift of Mr. G. D. McCullough.

A lunch that showed no trace of hard times was served, and it was decided to hold a somewhat similar night under the auspices of the newly formed Young People's Society next month at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Longwell.

Faculty and Students Work in Fields In Radical College Being Investigated

Youthful President Draws Fire by Organizing

By JULIUS C. EDELSTEIN
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Lucien Koch, 27-year-old president of Commonwealth college.

Faculty members and students at Commonwealth college work together in the fields.

There is recreation at Commonwealth when the work is done. Informally dressed, these two students keep up on their music.

Mena, Ark., March 4—Almost any place in the United States would be a less astonishing setting for a "radical" college than the wild and rustic Ozarks, a region in which many inhabitants are popularly supposed to be ignorant of the fact that the civil war has ended.

Yet, set in these wooded highlands, 10 miles from the nearest village, 100 miles from the nearest trolley car line, there is an institution of higher learning, Commonwealth college which is at the present time under investigation by the Arkansas state legislature as an alleged hotbed of communism, free love and atheism.

Central Figure

Central figure in the investigation is Lucien Koch, 27-year-old president of the college, who has been accused of being a Communist agitator on account of his organizing activities among the share croppers and tenant farmers of the Arkansas hinterlands. Much in the news, Koch has twice been jailed in recent weeks on charges of anarchy and inciting to riot in connection with his organization activities.

Koch's college has been variously described by outsiders as a veritable Gomorrah of sin and sensation, and on the other hand as one of the most interesting and valuable experiments now going on.

Commonwealth college originally was founded in 1923 at Leesville, La., as an institution at which both youths and adults could earn their own maintenance while studying post-war and social problems. College prerequisities were not required, although an alertness to and interest in sociology and economics were demanded of students and faculty members. Founders of the college, headed by Dr. Edward Zeuch, visioned a school where workers, farmers, college men and faculty members could work and study together in one communal gathering, earning their right to teach and to study by the toil of their own hands, each according to his own fitness.

Not Entirely "Perfect"

It has not worked out so beautifully as all that; but the actuality is in that general direction. In 1925 the school moved to Mena, Ark., and rented some ramshackle buildings.

Since location at Mena (10 miles out of town) Commonwealth college has acquired 350 acres of fertile but unbroken soil in a district where one may walk all day without seeing a human habitation. Students and faculty members have worked together and have constructed, with no outside assistance, school buildings, sanitation systems, dormitories and recreation halls. They have broken the soil and tilled the land. In the classrooms, the relation between faculty and students is that of fellow searchers toward a common goal, with the teacher being the leader of the search. There are few lectures, most of the classwork being in the form of discussion.

Work For Maintenance

But both students and faculty members are required to work for their maintenance; the students, 20 hours a week; faculty members, 15 hours a week. And in this work, the organization is like that in any industrial plant. The most efficient and skilled worker, be he student or faculty member, is the foreman. The others assigned to that task, including faculty members, are his subordinates and subject to orders and disciplinary action.

Valued at $30,000

The college is valued now at $30,000. Most of this represnt the labors of students and faculty members of the past. The college is Communistic in so far as both students and faculty members have a voice in the administration of affairs. The faculty, however, retains the controlling voice.

Nobody, least of all Lucien Koch, seeks to disguise the fact that there are Communists among the students and faculty members of Commonwealth. But there are also, according to President Koch, Socialists, Democrats and Single Taxers. Every view is represented. The course of instruction is aimed at providing a leadership in working class movements, Koch declares, but not in the name of any single faction or political party.

Koch himself insists that he is no Communist and he is borne out by former associates at the University of Wisconsin where Koch taught economics.

Writer's Description

Koch, who looks like a two-headed country youth, is a likable chap, despite the charges that are being made against him. He looks younger than his 27 years, but has an astonishing breadth of experience. At Commonwealth, in addition to being the president, he is the foreman of the carpenter crew. During his annual lecture tours he hitch-hikes a large part of the way to save money.

Koch himself, has several times been abducted and beaten up by angry vigilante committee who objected to his organization activities.

Approximately one-third of students and faculty members are women. Some of the students come to Commonwealth with their wives and work and study together. There is some ground for suspicion that moral laws in this wild and woolly region are not always strictly remembered. But the college, itself, keeps a weather eye peeled for moral infractions and invokes immediate disciplinary measures when offenders are caught.

ROSLIN W. M. S.

Wednesday evening the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Roslin, entertained the sister societies of the Anglican and the United Churches.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. Dr. Young, home on furlough from Japan. Dr. Young told a most interesting story of his twenty-nine years work among the Koreans and of the rapid growth of the Christian Church. At present Dr. Young oversees the work of sixty-three Korean congregations mostly situated in the slums of the larger cities of Japan.

Later in the evening Dr. Young spoke of the threat Japan is making for the commercial supremacy of the world. In his opinion only a drastic reduction in the costs of production will allow the western nations to compete with Japan.

At the end of the meeting an excellent lunch was served by the ladies of St. Andrew's Church.

PLEASANT VIEW W.M.S.

Pleasant View W.M.S. of Stone Church met Feb. 20 at the home of the President, Mrs. Jas. Detlor. This meeting was in the form of a dinner and quilting. Our hostess served a delicious dinner after which a quilt was done and a business meeting held. After singing a hymn all joined in the Lord's prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. Lloyd. A splendid letter from Mrs. Ferguson of Belleville was read and all felt they were benefitted by the different way of applying Temperance to every day lives. Next a letter about the 9th annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial. It was decided to send no delegate but as many go as possible and invite some other auxiliary to give a report.

A letter from Mrs. M. Denton, Belleville about the special day of prayer. Meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. W. Holmes.

ENGLISH RECRUIT IS UNDER ARREST

Will be Questioned on "Chopped Body" Murder Mystery

London, March 4 (AP)—A 27-year-old English recruit in the French Foreign Legion was under arrest today at Dunkirk, France, for questioning in connection with England's third "chopped body" murder mystery.

The recruit, arrested as he was about to leave for Africa, was identified only as "Patterson." Negotiations were instituted at once for his return to England. Although authorities saw the possibility of complications since the man was understood already to have completed formalities of his enlistment in France's famous foreign contingent.

The arrest was the outcome of Scotland Yard's investigation of the circumstances surrounding the discovery of a pair of dismembered legs in a railway coach at Waterloo station.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Fugitive Lady"

A dramatic and Exciting Portrayal of Confused Identities!

"Fugitive Lady," showing at the Capitol Theatre Monday and Tuesday only, presents to the public a lovely and talented new screen star, Florence Rice, charming young daughter of Grantland Rice, noted sports writer. She comes to the screen after three times a Broadway hit, each of her three plays having run throughout the season.

Miss Rice in her initial motion picture has the added advantage of playing opposite handsome Neil Hamilton, one of the screen's most popular stars for a dozen years, and Donald Cook.

Donald Cook, who plays the polite crook who involves the innocent girl in unwitting crime, is seen in his first role of screen "heavy." He commented during the shooting that he liked the role the best of any he has done in his four years on the screen, chiefly because it calls for difficult portrayal and for aggressive action.

Clara Blandick, noted for her "acid comedy" roles which she has given in fifty pictures in five years, provides most of the delightful comedy of "Fugitive Lady" as Hamilton's spinster, sarcastic aunt who not only tries to hurry along the young romance, but constantly amuses by her own romantic search.

Thrills derive from the high speed race between Cook and Miss Rice in a fast roadster with motor cops along the country roads of beautiful San Fernando Valley. The second thrill comes with the sequence showing a passenger train, carrying Miss Rice, speeding down the rails in the night to crash head on into a slow moving freight train.

The story concerns Ann Duncan, who becomes engaged to Jack Howard, only to find out on the eve of their wedding that he is a thief, and she is arrested as an accomplice. She is tried and found guilty. She is on her way to San Quentin when the train is wrecked and the police matron killed. Another casualty is an adventuress, who is on her way to force her rich husband's family to pay her plenty to leave him without a scandal. This girl had given Ann a letter to read and when her unconscious body is found she is clutching this letter. The police, believing the real Anne to be dead, leave her free to take refuge from the law. She does this in a most satisfactory and romantic manner which works out happily for all concerned.

Added Attractions

"What This Country Needs," an unusual and entertaining Broadway Brevity; "With Medbury in Ethiopia," an interesting travelaugh and a new and up-to-date episode of Screen Snapshots showing popular movie favorites at work and play, will be shown at each performance preceding the feature presentation.

"Du Barry" Fruit Dishes today and Tuesday. Shows at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.05.

"Charlie Chan in Paris."

Warner Oland in Most Ingenious of "Charlie Chan" Series

Hailed as the most engrossing and ingenious to date of the famous "Charlie Chan" films, the latest of the series, "Charlie Chan in Paris" once more starring Warner Oland, will arrive at the Belle Tomorrow (Tuesday) for two days, matinee daily.

Preview audiences have already viewed "Charlie Chan in Paris," both in Hollywood and New York and without exception they have recorded their enthusiasm for this story of a phantom killer who terrorized the gayest city in the world.

Arriving in Paris, Charlie Chan is plunged into the dangerous shadows of the most baffling mystery he has ever encountered. The French authorities are frustrated. No one but Charlie is able to find the trail. In the course of his investigation, a beautiful apache dancer is knifed to death and another lovely girl, an heiress, is charged with still another murder. But in the end Chan proves her innocence.

"Charlie Chan in Paris" was authored by Phillip MacDonald, the same brilliant young writer who supplied the script of "Charlie Chan in London," following the death of Earl Derr Biggers, creator of the wily Chinese sleuth.

Fox Films has surrounded Oland with a cast of unusual range and talent in this latest of his "Chan" stories. Mary Brian plays the banker's daughter, charged with murder. Thomas Beck, Fox "discovery," recently brought to Hollywood from the Broadway stage, is seen opposite here. Other players assigned to important roles are Erik Rhodes, Minor Watson, John Miljan, Murray Kinnell, John Qualen, Dorothy Appleby, Keye Luke, Henry Kolker and Perry Ivins.

"Right to Live" Romantic

"The Right to Live," a Warner Bros. picture which is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program, deals with a most daring and unusual theme in which a beautiful young woman is confronted by the problem of whether she has the right to live her own life, to love and be happy, or to remain with her hopelessly crippled husband.

In the picture the girl falls in love with her husband's brother, after the husband has been crippled by a terrific airplane crash, and is torn between her desire for love and the gaities of life and her feeling of duty toward the man she married. The story based on the "Sacred Flame," by Somerset Maugham, author of "The Painted Veil," and "Of Human Bondage," is filled with intense emotional situations between the secret lovers and a startling dramatic climax in which the wife is accused of murdering her bedridden husband, and co-stars George Brent and lovely Josephine Hutchison, Colin Clive, Peggy Wood and Henrientta Crosman and C. Aubrey Smith.

GENERAL CHIANG KAI SHEK

Reported agreement on a treaty between Japan and China followed conference of high Japanese military authorities with General Chiang Kai Shek, above, acting for the Nanking government. The rumored proposal will have to be ratified by the Kuomintang (Chinese group of rulers) and the privy council in Tokio supreme Japanese executives. The understanding was said to assure Japanese credits to China to assist the Nanking regime in its financial difficulties, and complete cessation of anti-Japanese agitation in China. The effectiveness of such an agreement is doubtful, as large sections of China do not recognize the Kai Shek government and remain strongly anti-Japanese.

Jimmie Walker Financially Embarrassed

Threatened by trouble with police regulations and hailed into court in London by creditors, dapper James J. Walker, RIGHT, former mayor of New York, announced that he was without means and that the expenses of his second honeymoon trip had been paid by his second wife, the former Canadian actress, Betty Compton, LEFT. Mrs. Janet Walker (inset), at Miami Beach, Fla., said she "still has a great deal of affection and admiration for Jimmy and will do whatever she can to help him." He is expected to return to United States later this year.

Leafs Need Two Wins to Cinch First Place in Canadian Section After Shutout Over Amerks

Americans Lose Chance of Playoff by Double Defeat

RANGERS THIRD

Boston And Hawks Now Tied For Top in American Loop

(BY A. E. FULFORD)

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Even a night's idleness is apt to relieve a National Hockey League American divison team of the leadership. New York Rangers have discovered things are so tight in the stretch drive that it is no stunt for a third place-team to reach the top in an evening's battling and drop the leaders down two rungs.

It happened, that way over the week-end, when Chicago won a game and hurled the idle Rangers into first place accompanied by Boston Bruins, who tied Montreal Maroons 2-2 Saturday night, Chicago defeated Canadiens 3-0 Sunday. The New Yorkers are now in the third spot but only a point behind the leaders.

Two weeks before the season's end New York Americans saw their last hopes of making a playoff position die out. They lost 6-0 to Leafs in Toronto Saturday and followed it up with a 3-1 defeat by Red Wings in Detroit Sunday.

Even if Amerks won their six remaining games Montreal Canadiens would have to pick up only four points in eight games to beat them out.

The Habitants improved their standing Saturday night by winning 3-2 from Eagles in St. Louis and could well afford the loss last night in Chicago.

In that affair Lorne Chabot, who has played with Toronto, Canadiens and Hawks in the last three seasons got his eighth shutout of the season against his old teammates. It brought him into a tie in shutouts with Alex Connell of Maroons and Tiny Thompson. Boston. However he has the best goals-against record in the league.

Goalies Shine

It was a night for the goalies to shine, Wilf Cude giving a brilliant exhibition for Canadiens in the opposite end of the rink. On the three shots that beat him he had little chance.

Chicago scored one goal in each period. Tommy Cook tallying in the first, Paul Thompson in the second and Alex Levinsky in the third.

Three goals were scored in the overtime session of the Canadiens game at St. Louis after the regular time ended with a 1-1 tie. Cude gave a marvellous performance stopping 54 shots in all and got most of the credit for the Habitant win.

Both the early goals came in the second, when Vernon Ayres tallied for St. Louis and Pete Lepine playing with a twisted ankle tied it up.

After the scoreless third Nels Crutchfield put Canadiens ahead in overtime from a gang attack and Aurel Joliat followed it up a few minutes later with another. Joe Lamb scored the second St. Louis goal.

Tiny Thompson and Alex Connel the rival goalies both worked hard in the Boston game at Montreal. Boston had an edge with brilliant defensive work by Eddie Shore and Babe Siebert and the Maroon attack showed the result of the grind they have gone through lately.

Maroons from Behind

The Montrealers came from behind twice to tie it up, Baldy Northcott doing it the first time in the second after Red Beattie had opened the scoring in the first frame. Charlie Sands put Boston ahead in the third and Gus Marker gave Maroons the tie with a pretty solo effort that carried him from behind his own goal to the Boston cage.

Saturday's win from Americans left Toronto with only two victories necessary to give them a sure hold on first place. They are seven points ahead and each team has five games to play. It also gave the Leafs their series with the New Yorkers with four wins, a loss and a tie.

Charlie Conacher led the Toronto marksmen with two goals and Harvey Jackson, Bill Thoms and Pep Kelly each had a goal and an assist. Buzz Boll scored the other Leaf marker.

The shutout was the seventh for George Hainsworth. He had to stop only 22 shots to get it but some of these were dangerous.

Roy Worters in the Americans goal made only 17 stops in the Detroit game and Normie Smith blocked only 21. Eddie Wiseman opened the scoring in the first. Larry Aurie had it 2-0 for the Wings in the second and Normie Himes gave the Amerks their only goal in that session. Ebbie Goodfellow got the third Detroit count in the last minute of the game.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Coach George Laughlin's Deacon A.C. junior hoopsters ran into a snag in Toronto on Saturday night when the fast Elizabeth Park "Lizzies" trounced the locals 42 to 26, thus assuring the Queen City aggregation of a 16 point lead for the return game here, likely Saturday. Whether the Deacons became stage frightened or not we cannot say, not being present, but rumors from the scene of activity state that the locals were far below form As a matter of fact the "Lizzies" had heard of the prowess of the Deacons and opened rather cautiously, but the locals failed to live up to pre-game announcements with the result that soon the home quintette sensed the situation and the slaughter was on. Sixteen points may seem like an obstacle, but once a team of cagers start to combine properly it will not take long to even matters up. The locals' shooting and passing was far below par on Saturday, but they all feel that another story will be told after the return game. The "Lizzies" are a well coached team can be expected when these two and the season's tit-bit of basketball squads face each other in Belleville.

The weatherman smiled on the interscholastic pucksters and a stiff breeze dried up the ice at the Arena sufficiently to assure a fairly good ice surface for tonight's Tweed at B.C.I. and V.S. semi-final game. The Tweed squad boast of four ex-junior O. A. H. players who received their primary training with Sam Curry's vanquished Tweed juniors. At any rate Coach Shiels is taking no chances and is trotting out the very best team possible as the visitors are known to have a heavy scoring front line. The winner of this series will continue in quest of the provincial interscholastic hockey championship. Besides the game tonight, the public will be permitted to skate for one hour following the match.

The first time that professional hockey players performed in England was during the war when a team was assembled from the 227th Battalion. Goldie Prodger, former London Tecumseh manager, was one of the players. Goldie keeps the puck used in that game as a souvenir.

Walter Gerow's Napanee juniors met with disaster on Saturday night at the hands of the Peterboro juniors, when the latter stepped into Gibbardville and downed the Gerow-Gibbard-Wilson 8 to 1. With a seven goal lead to their credit the Buckland-coached Peterboro crew take to the ice at home tonight at which time the Napanee kids face elimination in defeat. The first game, played at Napanee on Saturday night, is reputed to be one of the cleanest games played in that town this season, four minor penalties being meted out by referee Joe Smith The Napanee kids may be seen at a much better advantage on the larger Peterboro arena's playing surface, as they always play a better brand of hockey on a larger arena than that band-box at Napanee. Incidently the Magedomas of Brockville now meet the Chatham seniors in the senior "B" O.H.A. finals. The first game will be played at the Island Town on Wednesday with the return game in Chatham on Friday. A possible third game will be arranged later.

Toronto Maple Leafs would rather face New York Rangers in the National League finals than either Boston or Chicago. The Leafs believe they can hang it on the Blueshirts any old time. It's a matter of hitting the Rangers hard, they say, and slowing 'em up.

Weather permitting the city league finals will swing into action at the Arena on Tuesday night with the Alemite and the Trenton teams as the chief attraction. Both teams have had a full week's rest and should be "on the bit" for the final game. Incidently President Harry Rollins will not be present for the series, he undergoing a serious operation at the Belleville General Hospital today. Prexy Rollins announced beforehand, however, that the matter of whether the finals should be the best two out of three games or two games, goals to count. The managers of the two competing teams must agree upon this question before the first game starts tomorrow night. Considerable feeling has been aroused over this series and a hectic battle can be expected, regardless as to whether one, two, three or a dozen games are played. Before leaving for the hospital, President Rollins suggested that neutral officials, from the city be appointed to all posts during this series.

Reputedly the four most promising tennis players in Canada, Carole Deacon and Eleanor Young of Vancouver and Bob Murray and Laird Watt of Montreal, won't be back from their trip to Wimbledon and English tournaments in time to take part in the canadian championships here in July. Officials expect Don Budge, sensational California youngster, to enter.

Relating to the recent announcement that "Bud" Murray, ex-Peterboro-Toronto infielder, would accompany the Toronto Maple Leafs south, the Peterboro Sport Scribe has to say:

"This Bud Murray, the Toronto youngster who will be given a chance to show whether he is ripe enough for near major company at the Toronto camp in a few weeks, is a modest youth. He doesn't claim to be a world beater but he does say that he will make Manager Boone take more than a casual look at him. The tall lanky youth has everything in his favour, even a baseball background, as he is a nephew of the late James J. McCaffrey who was president of the Toronto club for many years. He is a firstbaseman and, according to Knotty Lee who had him on his club at Peterborough last summer is a George McQuinn in the making."

TEST RUNS OFF TILL BEACH BETTER

Sir Malcolm Campbell Hits 270 M.P.H. Over Rough Sands

(By Edward J. Neill)

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 4—(AP)—The prince of speed put his foot down all the way today, not on the throttle of hard pressed old Bluebird, but flat on continuance of record runs on Daytona's sands until the beach definitely improves.

That may possibly be today—on the low tide at 1.07 p.m. (E.S.T.)—or it might be 25 years from now, but hot or cold, high water or low, the big blue thundering dragon stays in the garage until there is no danger of Sir Malcolm Campbell's head getting torn away by the wind.

The slim Englishman, who will stand just so much of anything, including behind-the-hand heckling of local officials who insist on telling him, what he's doing wrong, and swivel chair athletes, who hold their hats at 20 miles an hour, raced once down the beach yesterday. He hit 270 miles an hour, a shade under the record, but for the second straight day he was in trouble all the way.

Saturday when he ran 205 miles an hour, shooting for his two year old record of 272.108 the cowling broke loose on both sides of his motor and he nearly was gassed by fumes, that poured into his cockpit. Yesterday, the beach was so rough half the time his head was bounced about the level of his windshield, the pressure nearly scalping him. His goggles were driven down over his nose and mouth, also choking him. He skidded after a bump and swerved badly after another; his tires were cut, and the thread was torn completely from one of them. Even so, a return run north, which he refused to make under the conditions would have returned him a new record if he could have clipped .17 seconds of his southward time through the measured mile.

So today Sir Malcolm, smiling gently to all but very firm, called a halt.

NAPANEE LOSES FIRST GAME 8-1

Peterboro Too Much For Gibbards in The Playoff

Napanee, March 4.—Peterboro Colts gained a stranglehold on their second-round O.H.A. junior "B" play-offs when they toned down Napanee Gibbards with a one-sided 8 to 1 win in the first contest of the two-game, goals to count series played here Saturady night. The teams will meet again Monday night in Peterboro. The Colts were a heavier and more experienced array than Napanee and were full measure for the win, although they did not have as much of the play as the score would indicate.

Napanee were out-lucked at least four times around the visitors' net as Clarke dived or did the splits to make remarkable saves. The visitors showed their resourcefulness in the second period when, with two men off, Williamson for a trip and Clarke for arguing a decision, they held off the locals' ganging attack although Clarke was without his stick for forty seconds when it was knocked behind the net. Vitarelli displayed some effective poke checking at centre that broke up a number of Napanee rushes, although Clarke in goal was the locals' real stumbling block. His display was the best seen here this year.

It was a wide-open game all the way through with the fast pace being maintained right into dying minutes. Referee Joe Smith called five penalties, two to A. Clarke and one to Williamson, Richardson and Murphy; the players at no time showing a tendency to rough it up.

Hodge Opens Scoring

Hodge opened the scoring for Peterboro after about three minutes of play when he made a perfect pass out from the corner that caught Curry's stick and glanced just inside of the post. Both teams checked closely, rush after rush being broken up near the blue lines. The visitors' second line came on near the end of the period and Archibald, flanked by Kingdon and Coughlin, worked their way in close for the former to tap in the double pass to make it 2 to 0 in favor of the Petes at the end of the first period.

The middle session produced the fastest and best hockey of the night. The locals made a bold stand and Cude Clarke's phenomenal net minding prevented at least three Napanee goals. "Honey" Tompkins and the Jackson brothers were getting around the Petes' defence for shots but Clarke managed to get in the way. Burton added to the visitors' total when he slapped Vitarelli's pass in after nearly fifteen minutes of play. Hodge lifted a long one from the blue line three minutes later that Murphy deflected into his own net.

The Petes had two men cut off at one time in this period but Napanee could not get the puck past Clarke even when he was forced to play without his stick for over half a minute with the action all around the visitors' net. Williamson got the fifth Peterboro goal soon after the third period started and then "Honey" Tompkins gave the Napanee rooters their first chance to yell when he took C. Jackson's pass and beat Clarke from close in. The goal was long overdue and was a fine combination effort.

Peterboro—Goal. C. Clarke; defence, Jopling and Williamson; centre, Vitarelli; wings, Hodge and Burton; subs., Coughlin, Kingdon, Archibald and A. Clarke.

Napanee—Goal, Curry; defence, Richardson and Murphy; centre, C. Jackson; wings, W. Jackson and Tompkins; subs., Evans, Leary, G. Curry.

TWO HURT NEAR NAPANEE

Napanee, March 4 (Special) — While proceeding westerly on foot on the King's Highway, one-half mile west of Napanee, Fred Young and Arthur Rosendale of Deseronto were hit by a motor car, alleged to have been driven by J. J. Horrigan of Marysville. Young and Rosendale received bad cuts and bruises, mostly head injuries, and were taken to the office of Dr. Hall, Napanee, by Horrigan, who later conveyed the young men home. The accident was investigated, but Horrigan was not held.

STRUCK BY CAR

Windsor, Ont., March 4 (CP) — G. W. Casgrain, third and only surviving son of the late Senator C. W. Casgrain of Windsor, is in a critical condition in hospital in Detroit today, the result of being struck by a street car. It was believed he was suffering from a fractured skull.

CURLING

Toronto, March 4 (CP) — Vanguard of a curling brigade, that will make new history for the records of Macdonald Brier competition, Western and Eastern Canada entrants arrived here today.

From the Far West, Bobby Alexander brought his Calgary curling club rink to represent Alberta in the Canadian curling classic. He will lead his men into round-robin play tomorrow after the draw has been held.

Saskatchewan is represented by the Nutana Curling Club quartette skipped by J. S. Black. It is a Saskatoon entry.

Roy T. Pritchard, veteran skip from Killarney, takes the place of Leo Johnson of Winnipeg, who last year led his Strathcona rink to a Tankard victory.

The Sault Ste. Marie Curling Club represent Northern Ontario and the colors of Ontario proper are carried by Gordon Campbell's Hamilton curlers from the Thistle Club. They were runners up to Johnson for the Tankard last year.

The Mayflower Curling Club entry skipped by Charles W. Durant carries the hopes of Nova Scotia. From New Brunswick Nick Thibodeau brought his Bathurst Curling Club quartette to vie for the major honors and Quebec is represented by W. G. McGerrigle's rink from Ormstown.

Tecs Hold Lead After Weekend Games Tied With Detroit

(By the Canadian Press)

The play-off stage beckoned teams in the International Hockey League to day but even after week-end tussles the entries were closely bunched in front and the outcome was far from decided.

Buffalo Bisons had every opportunity to go ahead of the pack but lost both their week-end games and failed to budge from second place tie with Cleveland.

Falcons moved ahead by defeating Buffalo 6-1. Saturday night. Then Sunday the Herd dropped a 3-1 decision to Syracuse. Two wins would have put Buffalo in front.

Detroit Olympics tied for the lead with London Tecumsehs, also had an opportunity to take over leadership alone but Windsor Bulldogs rattled in two third period goals Saturday and produced a 3-3 tie.

Tomorrow Syracuse could get into second place with another victory over Buffalo or Cleveland could join the league leaders by defeating Detroit Olympics.

ONE GOAL LEAD FOR GLEN ROSS IN RURAL FINALS

Defeats Zion's Hill 1-0 in Exciting Game at Stirling

Stirling—The splendid efforts of the surprising Glen Ross team and a little help from "Lady Luck" carried them one step closer to the Rural League championship on Friday night March 1, when they trounced Zion's Hill by a score of 1-0, in the first game of the finals.

Moving up from third position, Glen Ross realized their greatest ambition when they handed Zions their first defeat of the season. Having all their games throughout the season Zions are looked upon as the logical favorites to take the series and the (silverware). But anything can happen in play-off games. Three elements had a share in blocking their way to victory on Friday, the Glen Ross Team, Lady Luck, and Hagerman in the Glen Ross nets. This boy is a standout for his team, not graceful or confident in his clearing, perhaps, but always manages to get in front of them, whether in close or well out he saves many sure goals. The rink was well filled with spectators, and the game was fast and thrilling. Glen Ross go into the final game with a one goal lead.

From the face off, Parks and Townsend started at a sizzling speed in order to establish an early lead, and their tricky plays fooled everybody but Hagerman a number of times. Townsend dropped one in the mouth of the goal, and as Parks rolled into the net Hagerman batted it away. Glen Ross became a little more cautious and their checking was better, but Zions still maintained a slight edge in the play. Townsend drew the first penalty, and Glen Ross got into their stride. With Brooks, Scott, and G. Fraser, they put on a ganging play that resulted in the only counter of the game. Brooks passed to Fraser, who in turn passed to Scott. Scott made no mistake, catching the corner of the net for a well earned goal. It was a pretty play, and Scott, whose goal in the last game, pulled his team out of the hole, received much applause. Play was pretty even until Brown got the gate for tripping, and the period ended with Zions all around the Glen Ross net trying to even it up. Score, 1-0, for Glen Ross. Penalties—Townsend and Brown.

.. .. .. Second period. .. .. ..

Just after the face-off, Townsend took a trip to the cooler for tripping, and up went Glen Ross on another attempt to score, Armstrong got right in on Seeley, but Seeley caught the puck and tossed it to the corner. Parks raced away and it looked like a tie breaking rush when Pyear tripped him and received a penalty. Brown followed, giving Zions a chance with Glen Ross two men short, but Hagerman saved the day, turning away shot after shot. Both teams were at full strength again. A moment later Parks took a walk for tripping, and the period ended with Zions pressing hard, and having a distinct edge on the play. Score, 1-0, for Glen Ross. Penalties—Townsend, Pyear, Brown, Parks.

.... Last Period ....

Play was fairly even for the first ten minutes of the last period, featured by sparkling individual rushes by Brooks, Fraser and Brown for Glen Ross, and Parks, Caverly and Chapelle for Zions. Both goalies had their hands full.

'Lizzies' Surprise Deacons With Swift Passing Attack Winning Cage Game by 42-26

Had Better of Play For 50 Minutes of Contest

REAL SMART GAME

Return Game to be Played Here This Week

Bob Abate's "Lizzies" swarmed around the Belleville "Deacons" like so many bees on Saturday night in Toronto registering a stinging 42-26 defeat and sending the bewildered "Deacons" back to Belleville just sixteen points further away from the Junior O.A.B.A. title.

For forty minutes the fighting Queen City squad outplayed their rivals. Their quick passing, their terrific offensive, and their fighting hearts carried them to victory.

The "Deacons" just couldn't get going. Their passes weren't clicking, their shots were off line and they were checked off their feet by the fast playground squad.

Cole gave the Deacons a two point lead in the first five seconds of play with a pretty basket from centre floor, but Himel evened the count ten seconds later. For the remainder of the first half the "Lizzies" outplayed their tall opponents, passing the ball under their arms over their heads and between their legs with such dexterity that the famous "Deacon" defence was penetrated repeatedly for sure baskets. Twice Albert Faulkner, the Deacon Captain called time out in an effort to throw the "Lizzies" of their stride, but the red jackets weren't the least perturbed, if anything they were refreshed by these rest periods and half time saw them leading 22-11.

Second Half

In the second half the "Deacons" came back fighting. Baskets by Cole, Faulkner and Martin gave the "Lizzie" supporters something to think about and for five minutes the Belleville squad seemed to have shaken out of it, but, once again the red jackets swarmed down the floor and their powerful offensive game, was just too much for their taller rivals.

Edwards the spear head of the "Lizzie" attack and the star of the game flashed through for two quick baskets and Faulkner called time out for the third time. Cowain looped one in from just outside the free throw line and both squads set a dizzy pace, bringing the crowd to their feet again and again with their thrilling passing attacks, which saw the ball go from basket to basket in a few breath-taking seconds. The game ended with "Deacons" pressing strongly and Coach Bob Abate, beseeching his squad to give him just a few more points to take to Belleville.

Edwards the star centre player of the "Lizzies" led the scoring with thirteen points. As a point man he has few peers and if Cole plays the game he is capable of in Belleville it will be a treat to watch two of Canada's best junior point men battle it out.

Mandel and Abrahams with twelve and ten points followed close on Edward's heels for scoring honors and played good basketball throughout the game.

There were no outstanding players on the night's play for Belleville, but just wait till "Deacons" play the return game on their own floor. It will be another story and Coach George Laughlin and sponsor Mr. Fred Deacon Sr., have every right to expect their boys to come through here and go on to the provincial finals.

Playoff Berths Depend on Result of Games Tonight

Brighton And Wooler Assured Places in Playoffs

Trenton, Mar. 4 (Special)—Brighton meet Carrying Place with High School battling with the tail-end Co-operative Workers in a double-header, that will complete the schedule of the Trenton and District Hockey League on Friday night, when they defeated the Benedict-Proctor 4-3. Smithfield and the Airport Tigers battled ten minutes overtime to a 4-4 tie to end the season on equal terms with six points each. Neither could make the playoff position.

It will not be able to tell just who will enter the semi-finals until after tonight's games. If Carrying Place take Brighton and the High School win, then the Benedict-Proctor will be out. If Brighton win, they will be tied with Wooler for the top rung, with Benedict-Proctor and High School in third and fourth positions.

The first game started like a scoring bee after Wilson scored for the Tigers and Niddery netted a counter for Smithfield in the first two minutes of play. Barlow put the Tigers in the lead, when he took Moore's pass backward, after Moore had carried the puck in, he passed to Barlow, who beat Ireland. The Minaker-led boys from Smithfield had the better of the play for the remainder of the period but they could not beat Frenchy Richardson, the peer of the league's net minders. "Whip" Lemoire went through on Richardson but he saved. Barlow went in on Ireland but Pete Hansen tripped him to save an almost sure counter. Moore, Wilson and Barlow combined with Moore scoring after he picked Wilson's rebound off the boards. Richardson had tough luck on the next one, when he passed the rubber to Niddery after he had cleared Corbett's shot. Niddery drilled it back to score. Russell Teale evened the count just before the close of the second period, when he scored from a mix-up in front of the Tiger net. Sky Thompson, playing his first game in two weeks after he injured his ankle, put Smithfield in the lead on a beautiful solo effort. He went right through again but Richardson saved. Before the final bell Pafford, elongated rear guardsman for the Tigers, scored after accepting Barlow's pass. Smithfield showed more condition in the overtime but could not get the extra counter although Grant was through to hit the post and Thompson worked his way through alone to miss the net. Smithfield were only successful in winning one game although they always gave their rivals plenty of action. They had the league record for tie games with four.

Wilson, Moore and Barlow bore the brunt of the offensive with Richardson starring between the posts. Lemoire and Thompson afforded a fine line of defence for Smithfield with Niddery, Corbett, the Hansens and the Teales playing well on the forward line.

Tigers—Goal, Richardson; defence Taylor and Pafford; centre, Wilson; wings, Moore and Barlow; subs, Graham, Reid, York.

Smithfield—Goal, Ireland; defence Thompson and Lemoire; centre, Corbett; wings, Niddery and P. Hansen; subs, Russ Teale, Ross Teale, Bedal, H. Hansen, Grant.

Referee Gord Bowen.

Carrying Place 4 Benedict-Proctor 3

It was a case of too much Norm Johnson again when the Benedict-Proctor lost a 4-3 decision to the Carrying Place in the second game of the double-header. The boys from across the canal led four to one until the third when they were kept from the scoring column, while the silver-platers netted a pair. The Carrying Place were satisfied to place long shots on Cotterell in the opener, while the Benedicts forced the play. Bob Cotterell in the net played the best game of the season when he turned down several hard drives from the opposition. John Anderson opened the scoring when he checked Bill Miller at the blue line and rushed in on Cotterell to score. Stan Cotterell evened the score seconds later. He carried the puck in, passed to Mattis who missed, but Cotterell grabbed the rebound and beat Lamore. Bob Cotterell again rose to the occasion, when he turned away Johnson and Willie several times after they combined to get through the entire Benedict team. Norm Johnson finally got through to count and put the Carrying Place in the lead as the period closed.

Willie and Johnson went through at the opening of the second but missed the net. Jimmie Dolan, former junior O.H.A. star sailed in alone to put his team up 3-1. Twenty seconds before the second stanza closed, Norm Johnson counted again. Sim Mattis scored in the third to put renewed vigor in his teammates. They checked hard and combined several times but could not get the rubber in the net. Stan Cotterell grabbed a loose puck from a scramble in center ice and raced in to end the scoring. Carrying Place checked hard while the silver-platers played five men up trying to get the equalizer before the final bell.

The Carrying Place have a hard battle tonight, when they finish the schedule against the fast travelling Brighton sextette who are still smarting after the 6-0 drubbing they received from the league leading Wooler squad last week. A win for Brighton place them back on the top rung with Wooler. Stars could not be picked during the game with the exception of Bob Cotterell in the Benedict net and Norm Johnson on the Carrying Place forward line. Norm has been out of the game for the past ten days after injuring his knee at Belleville, while playing with the Imperials in the first game with Grills' A. C.

Carrying Place—Goal, Lamore; defence, Allore and Pearson; centre Johnson; wings, Willie and Anderson; subs, Hicks, Ferguson, Juby, Dolan, Herrington.

Benedict-Proctor—Goal, B. Cotterell; defence, Parks and Beale; centre, Blakely; wings, Wallace and Harvey; subs, Mattis, Miller, Vandevoort, S. Cotterell.

Referee, Ross Burtt.

Sills sifted through for Zions several times, with Townsend right behind him. With ten minutes left, Zions showed superiority in every respect, n a last final effort to even the score. Townsend lost a great chance when he missed the open net from four feet out. Zions tried every system they knew, but couldn't beat Hagerman. Parks and Chapelle rolled one right to the line, but Hagerman fell on it. Ketcheson received a penalty for tripping, and the game ended, with Glen Ross shooting it down the ice, hanging on desperately to their slim margin. Zions were much the better team in the last period, but the breaks were with Glen Ross, who go into the final game on Tuesday night with one goal to play on.

Penalties, Ketcheson.

Dizzy Great, But His Work is in Vain if Paul Falls Down

PAUL DEAN

Paul Dean is the great Dizzy Dean's kid brother, stooge and right-hand man. It's a tough job.

He has to live up to Dizzy's boasts. Cast into the background by virtue of his famous brother's prowess and patter, he literally has to carry the hod. If Paul doesn't win, the act falls down. If Paul doesn't win, Dizzy's oratory and efforts go to waste. It's a spot.

Paul is a more serious young man than the irrepressible Dizzy, but he has to go through life wearing the nickname "Daffy" because he is Dizzy's brother. Dizzy gets more than twice as much money, but any number of baseball experts will tell you that Paul is just as good a pitcher, and that in time may become a greater pitcher than Dizzy.

His Work Cut Out

Suppose Dizzy should have a bad year! It's not impossible. Paul would have to rise to heroic heights to sustain the family name. He would have to become the family's No. 1 flinger and win the games his brother couldn't, or the Cardinals would go nowhere.

The great deeds of both young men last season and during the world series are common knowledge. To brush up a bit; Dizzy won two games in the series and lost one, while Paul won two and lost none. Dizzy won 30 games and lost seven during the season, marked by a great garrison finish in which he worked every other day. Paul won 19 and lost 11, and he, too, pitched every other day during that last blistering stretch drive.

Paul's importance to the Cardinal case is emphasized by the fact that if he had lost three of the games he won, the New York Giants would have won the flag.

Paul started indifferently as a pitcher last year, in his first season as a big leaguer. Finally, on May 11, Manager Frisch decided to find out just what the youngster had and sent him to the box, out of turn, against Carl Hubbell of the Giants.

It was that day Paul proved himself a major leaguer. He pitched to Giants' weaknesses all afternoon and scored a 3- to-2 victory. It was the acid test.

Hurls No-Hitter

From that day on, he gained confidence. The high point was reached in Broadway, Sept. 21, when Dizzy and Paul pitched a double-header against the Dodgers. In the first game Dizzy allowed three hits, scoring a shutout. Paul followed Dizzy to the slab and pitched a no-hit game, almost a perfect game. The only man to reach first base was Koenecke, who walked in the first inning. After that Paul took the Dodgers in order.

Only Christy Mathewson, George Davis, Jeff Tesreau and Nick Maddox had pitched no-hitters in their first years in the big show. Paul joined that immortal group.

Paul will be 22 years old Aug. 14. He is two and a half years younger than his brother, who was born Jan. 16, 1911. Both are native Oklahomans, claimed proudly by Holdenville.

Farley Shorts Under Ban!

Ross Somerville's First Duty as Captain of R.C.G.A. Team to Old Country is Disposal of Famous Garments — Association's International Movement Causes Furore Amongst Youngsters and Old-Timers—Team Expected to Stand up Under English Opposition.

By FRED JACKSON

(Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

News that the good old Royal Canadian Golf Association has definitely committed itself to a policy of internationalism is causing quite a bit of furore in the best of our golfing circles.

'Tis reported that more than one budding aspirant for championship honors is mourning that he didn't start playing the royal and ancient game soon enough while many of our old-timers are earnestly regretting the fact that they started playing altogether too soon. All-expense tours of the British Isles as conducted by the R.C.G.A. have now eclipsed even the most famous of Cook's jaunts as favored pastimes.

With the ambassadors slated to lay down a barrage of Canadian hooks and slices to say nothing of missed putts and our own particular brand of national golfing alibis on the reverred precincts of St. Anne's, England, early in May, little time can be lost preparing for the invasion.

As captain of the team, Ross Somerville, the plodding Scot from London who shunting Johnny Goodman to the sidelines in the United States amateur two years ago, will have plenty to worry about. Still, even with all the responsibility on his sturdy shoulders, one isn't shooting far off the target with a remark that "Sandy" will probably lead his mates on the field as well as off it.

But to get back to Somerville's responsibilities.

His first task would be to ensure that these lads of our familiarize themselves with English customs and habits so that there will be no possible chance of criticism.

Just imagine the embarrassment of us stay-at-homes if a dispatch was to come back telling how Phil Farley, the Cedar Brook kid, preferred a glass of buttermilk to a cup of tea during the afternoon refreshment session or if—by any chance—he shocked the natives by smacking a drive off the first tee decked out in the famous (or is it infamous?) Farley shorts.

The more we think of those shorts the more impressed we are that Sandy should take hold of our Phil firmly and in the best parental fashion and gently hint that for the sake of Canada the Farley knees should remain hidden from the admiring gazes of English femmes.

Should Do Something

We should go even further than that. If by any chance "Fidgety" Phil would have no part of leaving the shorts in moth balls at his Cedar Brook locker room, Mr. and Mrs. Farley should step into the picture. The latter might even tell her pride and joy that the shorts should be thoroughly cleaned before being exposed to the changeable English climate. After securing the pants she could then hint to the cleaners that some time next year would be soon enough to get the job finished.

Mrs. Farley might do even more. She could discreetly toss them into some waste and hoist the entire shooting match into the furnace during a spring-cleaning session.

The point is, Mrs. Farley, we don't care what you do, but please do something.

May Have a Winner

Getting away from short pants and drinking tea, and moving into serious discussion of the trip, one feels that a hand or two might easily be given the men who put the trip across. Too often governing bodies are accused of taking all the money that comes in and doing little with it outside of financing a few joy-rides for themselves. Here we have something different and it is refreshing to say the least.

From observation of England's Walker Cup players as they have performed over there in exhibition matches, the skill at the command of Somerville, Hoblitzel, Farley, Taylor, Innes and the un-named three, should be enough to keep the Canadian colors flying for a round or two.

Of course we realize that England's Walker Cup teams of the past have never represented all the cream in England's amateur coffee but comparison between them and the Canadian team is a pretty fair line to work with. Who knows but what one of the Somerville class of '35 may win the British amateur. Stranger and more unlikely things have happened, despite the fact that the odds are against it.

Major Loop Would Benefit By Assisting Weak Clubs

FRANK FREDRICKSON

Princeton Hockey Coach

Frank Fredrickson

The National Hockey League might well be likened to the proverbial chain. In one sense, it is no stronger than its weakest link.

It is my observation over a long period that a one-sided circuit is poor business. That is to say, one or two clubs who dominate all their rivals aren't doing the league or themselves any good.

Customers love keen competition and an even race. As soon as one outfit establishes a one-sided margin, public interest falls off. It is the same in all branches of sport.

Professional hockey is a show business, first, last and always. It is good business sense to divide strength and make for an even race. In that respect the National Hockey League chieftains have considerable to learn. Take the present race. St. Louis and the Amerks, lacking talent and the ability to make an even fight, are playing to poor houses. If they should be forced out of the league, the whole outfit suffers. I am not a Communist, but I believe in certain Communistic policies where hockey or any other professional enterprise is concerned.

Why don't the stronger clubs help out their weak sisters? It may be great stuff for them to dominate all rivals during one campaign, but they suffer in the end. In other words, the league is the thing. One club is incidental compared to the good of the whole.

The Americans, with Joe Simpson as manager, have potentially strong talent, but they are hampered by inside interference. Given a manager with complete power, they would be a factor in the Stanley Cup race. Their trouble is within themselves, and not a matter for league worry. But St. Louis is something else again. The Eagles, probably will be forced to retire before another season opens if their present financial state is not improved. It's a perfect spot for the other clubs to help. Naturally, by giving talent to St. Louis, the other clubs might take a few lickings, themselves. What difference? In the long run everybody would prosper. Clubs that now play to a baker's dozen when St. Louis is in town would triple their attendance figures in no time at all.

Joe Simpson

Professional hockey, in some respects, has grown faster than the men behind it. This is only natural, and no reflection on the bosses. They are catching up in leaps and bounds, and no doubt will handle their high-paying toy in the best approved manner as time goes by. Within the hockey chiefs, it's obviously a case of live and learn.

MEMBERS WONDER OVER NEXT MOVE

Power Purchase Contracts to be Discussed in Cabinet

Toronto, March 4—(CP)—There was but one question in the minds of Ontario's legislators as they resumed the session at Queen's park today. They wondered what the government would do about the power purchase contracts negotiated by the former Hydro-Electric Power Commission with Quebec companies.

Climaxing what is believed the longest speech in the legislature's history—three days of sustained effort—Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney-General, declared on Friday these contracts with three Quebec companies — Beauharnois, Gatineau and MacLaren Quebec are "illegal, unenforceable and void ab initio".

Mr. Roebuck, after a nine-hour review of the Hydro situation in the province, expressed this as his own opinion. He made no recommendations as to future action but left the matter with the government.

If the session today finishes in time the cabinet will discuss the question and there may be an announcement afterwards, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn indicated over the week-end.

The throne speech debate was scheduled to continue today, when Mr. Roebuck adjourned the debate late Friday he indicated he might have more to say today. If not, the next speaker is Col. W. H. Price (Cons. Toronto-Parkdale).

"THIMBLE TEA" WELL ATTENDED

West Huntingdon March—4 On Friday afternoon some twenty-five ladies of the community on an invitation from Mrs. Merriam met at the Parsonage for a "Thimble Tea".

The gathering was under the auspices of the Woman's Association of the United Church. Considerable wor was done and plans made for the future activities of the society which included the hearing of the play "Wild Ginger" by the Fuller Young People and a banquet in honor of the hockey team.

The president Mrs. Peter McInroy called the meeting to order.

Mrs. Geo. Post sang a solo "Father Lead Me".

Mrs. Thomas Elliott read "The Ladies' Aid."

Mrs. R. J Merriam explained the constitution of the society.

A tasty lunch was served by the hostess and an enjoyable hour spent in conservation.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. McInroy.

On Friday evening the Young People's Community met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Carr. About thirty guests were present. The president Miss Evelyn McInro; called the meeting to order. With Georgie Putman presiding at the organ, "Stand UP, Stand Up for Jesus," was sung.

Eva Merriam and Mr. Phil Carr led in prayer. A hymn was sung. Romans 10 chap. was read by Rupert Merriam, Mrs. Merriam read a very interesting paper on the life of David Livingstone. Harold Thompson gave a violin solo. Ruby Merriam gave a paper on "Why I am returning Africa."

A hymn was sung.

During the business session with Miss Evelyn McInroy presiding.

Mrs. Phil Carr and Eva Merriam then put on three very interesting and entertaining contests as follows Art Gallery; Acting Proverbs and new resolutions. Eva Merriam moved a vote of appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Carr for the delightful evening they had at their home. Ruby Bray seconded the motion.

A very hearty lunch was served by the hostess. Everyone came away feeling that it was the best meeting of the session.

'LAWRENCE OF ARABIA' RETIRES ARMY LIFE

Has Served Ten Years In Royal Air Force

London, March 1 (AP)—The dashing "Lawrence of Arabia" rode into retirement, not on a prancing white steed, but patiently on a bicycle to a humble cottage on the lonely heathland near Blandford, Dorsetshire.

The once-romantic figure, in private life T. E. Shaw, yesterday cycled off from Bridlington at the end of a 10-year enlistment as an aircraftsman of the Royal Air Force on a 300-mile trip with a military knapsack slung over his shoulders.

His discharge from the R.A.F. was not effective until March 11 but he was granted a 10-day leave. Shaw who gained fame by leading Arabs against the Turks during the war, said he hoped to find peace and quiet in his little cottage.

TEMPTATION TOO GREAT

Hamilton, Ont., March 2— The sight of a jar of jam in a store window after he had not eaten all day was the explanation given by George Summers, 45, when he was apprehended early today after a milk bottle hurtle through the window of a groceteria. He was remanded one week for investigation.

BUILDS OWN LAKE TO FISH

Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 4—Dennis Scivally, road engineer, has no quarrel with progress— until it interferes with his fishing.

Asserting population encroachments are virtually ruining the better fishing holes in the state, Scivally inserted an advertisement in a newspaper seeking to buy five or ten acres of land.

"I'm going to build my own lake," he said. "Then I'll have some place to fish."

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Faith glanced at de Markoff. He stood against the wall, his arms crossed, his blue eyes on hers as if waiting a signal. How would Hunter like it if she and de Markoff—?

Philip, sunk in his brooding, seemed to have forgotten her. She touched him on the shoulder, whispering, "I haven't given up yet, you know. There are ways I haven't tried—"

Her smile at de Markoff over Philip's head was a dazzling summons which the young count lost no time in obeying.

"May I have the honor of a dance, Madame?" he murmured bending before her.

"With pleasure," Faith said softly, taking his arm. "You and I, Sacha, are going to dance, drink, and be merry."

FAITH CHANGES TACTICS

CHAPTER TWENTY

It was Sunday, the last day of the houseparty. Faith and the Count de Markoff sat in one of the big windows overlooking the pink roofed little village of de Luze.

De Markoff played with the narrow green sash of Faith's organdie his look caressing her as she sat slimly, erectly, her back against the dark window seat.

"Your eyes are not grey, they are green, little dove," he said. "I do not know why you have been so nice to me since last night, but your hair is like moonshine on young leaves."

"You should have been a poet, Sacha." Faith stirred restlessly. She was very unhappy. Nothing had gone as she had hoped. She had danced and flirted with de Markoff until the end of the party last night, and Hunter hadn't seemed to care. And Gertrude had pretended not to notice any change in the shy little nobody Hunter had married against his will.

This afternoon they had gone off together, Gertrude and Hunter, in his racing car. Faith's thoughts followed them, speeding over the white roads along the poplar lined river, past chateaux on the low hills.

Suddenly as if her thoughts had summoned him back, Hunter came in the big hall dotted with furniture like small islands. He looked at Faith and de Markoff silhouetted in the window, and turned his dark handsome head away. Behind him Gertrude in a loose white coat, stood with a glint of cynical amusement in her brilliant eyes.

"You seem to be enjoying your stay abroad," she drawled. "Hunter tells me he misses New York.

Faith rose and stepped forward. She looked very young and pale in the dark stretch of hall hung with banners. "But Hunter left, didn't he?" she answered. "So apparently New York had to come to him."

Hunter frowned as de Markoff pleasantly interrupted— "I, for one, prefer to live in France. The ladies are so charming."

Madame de Luze, birdlike with her high crested coiffure pulled over her thin brows, peered in at the stiff group. She went over to Faith, resting her hand on the girl's arm.

"Have you had your tea?" she said in a high animated voice. "Faith, ma cherie, will you ring? —Sacha, do get me my cigarettes from the library —Has anyone seen Allan Dawtrey or Tony Dexter? And where is Mr. Stevens?" Her eyes warned, restrained Faith. "Poor Mr. Stevens had a headache after lunch."

CHAPTER 21

There was no escape, no way of stopping the advance on Faith's table of the sleek, flat-hipped young man she feared and loathed.

"Why, hello Faith!" Roger stood beside her now, an ingratiating smile on his sensuous lips. Conscious that he was dressed in the pink of fashion, that his English like his clothes had been studied, and that Faith dared not snub him.

"Oh, how do you do," Faith murmured faintly.

The Count de Markoff had arisen with a military stiffness, and the Countess de Luze was inspecting the newcomer with open interest.

Roger slightly shifted his gaze to include the Frenchwoman, with obvious admiration.

"Ask your friend to join us, ma cherie," Madame de Luze suggested, looking up with animation at the young man.

Roger needed no further invitation. He borrowed a chair from an adjoining table, and Faith was forced into introductions, which she performed with evident reluctance.

Neither Roger nor Madame de Luze seemed to notice her confusion. But the big blond Russian had taken the other man's measure and his stare had the snap in it of a Cossack whip.

The atmosphere of the cabaret had thickened with the arrival of lively parties exchanging salutes and sallies in the muddle of jazz and velvet-throated, dusky singers. Everyone seemed to know everyone else.

"Will you dance, Countess?" Roger wasn't wasting any time. There was an eagerness about his sallow good looks that some women might consider attractive. Madame de Luze was apparently amused by him.

"But certainly." As she moved away under his expert guidance, Roger flashed Faith a triumphant glance.

"Who is the bounder?" de Markoff scowled after them, tugging at his mustache.

"I don't know him very well," Faith evaded. Her worried grey eyes followed Therese de Luze and the man she knew to be an unscrupulous parasite. "I shouldn't have thought," she said, "that Therese would tolerate that sort of person."

De Markoff gave a short laugh. "You've only seen one half of Therese, angel," he said. "She is obliged to be very discreet, but at moments—like so many charming women——" His gesture completed a picture that filled Faith with dismay.

The Russian looked down at Faith, his full, handsome features set in a savage expression. "If the fellow annoys you, I'll thrash him to death."

And he would, too, Faith didn't doubt. "Oh, no," she cried in alarm. Roger's venom was stored in the back-ground of his mean little mind and she mustn't risk releasing it. To this fear was now added de Markoff's burning gaze that warned her she was playing with fire.

Madame de Luze and Roger came back to the table. "Ma chere, he dances divinely." The Countess was positively girlish. "We will have a tango later—yes?" she said gaily to Roger, who turned to Faith.

"Will you try this?"

Faith was about to refuse, but he added quickly, meaningly: "Do you remember the time I taught you the tango?" and she rose at once, with the sickening vision of a tawdry apartment in Greenwich village and poor Anges' hating face.

Roger was a remarkable dancer. He held Faith lightly, his long, narrow feet picking out patterns that he followed with a sinuous grace of shoulder as he steered her in and out among couples jerking and swaying to a Blues.

"Your friend is fascinating," he said presently in an elaborate society manner.

Faith didn't answer. She had turned her head so that she wouldn't have to look at him.

"We are travelling high," he murmured. "Titles and the finest pearls I've ever seen. They're real, aren't they?" His voice had sharpened as he guided Faith to a corner of the floor, where he kept her with shortened steps that brought them almost to a standstill.

"The titles or the pearls?" Faith tried to jest, but her heart sank. She didn't need to see his eyes to guess the greedy lights in them. "Where is—your friend?" She changed the subject.

"The widow? Oh, I'm not with her any more." There was a grating discontent to Roger's voice that increased Faith's distress. "I'm looking around," he added, bending his shiny head to glance at Faith. "I called you up several times, but you were away."

There was a pause when the orchestra stopped, and Roger joined in the applause. His arm went around her again to a new tune.

There was no use beating about the bush any longer. Faith said in a low, desperate voice: "Will you sail back to New York if I pay your passage?"

Roger thought this over, then shook his head. "Nothing doing," he said emphatically. "I like your swell friends too much."

Faith faltered in her step. "What do you mean?" Through an open space among the dancers she saw Madame de Luze and de Markoff scanning the couples, as if in search of her.

"I've got ambitions, too, Baby," Roger murmured in her ear. "I was sure playing in luck when I met you tonight."

Faith's face had gone white. "I'll do everything in my power to keep you away from my friends," she said with spirit.

"Yeah?" he sneered, his careful English forgotten. "Well, I may not need you, at that, Beautiful. But you'd better be pals with me." He held her a shade closer, and with an easy, swaying motion, he edged her back toward their table.

Madame, de Luze pointed up at them. Roger slid into a chair beside her as de Markoff rose with a click of his heels and his little military bow.

"May I have the pleasure?" He towered over Faith.

Thankfully she slid into his arms, slim and pale in her green tulle gown that held her like a flower. The rhythm of a waltz soothed her jangled nerves. Back at the table, Roger's head was very close to Madame de Luze. But surely, Faith thought, Therese could take care of herself.

De Markoff was angry. They circled the room in silence before he spoke. "You have spoiled my evening", he said heavily.

"I'm sorry. Let's go home, Sacha." The light and noise drummed in Faith's head. She drooped with weariness.

But when she found out that Roger had planned to see Madame de Luze home, she was very firm. "We're Sacha's guests tonight, Therese," she reminded the older woman. "I don't think it would be very kind of you to go off with someone else."

Before Baby Came

WOMEN who dread motherhood or who suffer from backache or weakening drains can be helped by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Mrs. George Schrumm of 128 Stoney Rd., Woodstock, Ont., says: "My strength was almost gone before the birth of my little girl, I couldn't sleep, did not care to eat and nervous headaches upset me terribly. Two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthened me so that I suffered no more weakness. I continued thru this period in the best of health."

All druggists. New size, tablets 50 cts, liquid $1.00. Large size, tabs. or liquid, $1.35.

Roger took his disappointment easily—too easily. He whispered to Madame de Luze as he escorted her to Faith's car, and Faith didn't like the sly triumph of his parting smile.

"This Monsieur Welsh is a delightful young man, and dances far better than any professional." The Countess took one of de Markoff's Russian cigarettes and settled back in the car. "I have asked him to tea tomorrow."

"You are old enough to know better, Therese." De Markoff was in the mood to be brutal.

"You are hardly qualified to criticize me, Sacha," Madame de Luze answered haughtily.

Faith caught the flash that passed between them as of intimates who knew a great deal about one another. It made her realize how very little she, herself, knew of their private lives. She looked out at the crisp stars of the October night. They were skimming up the rue du Bac. Madame de Luze lived in the conservative old rue de Varennes.

"I don't think you should see him, Therese," Faith said in a troubled voice. "I don't know him very well, but I wouldn't trust him."

"Indeed?" The Countess peered rather oddly from her corner in the car. "I understood from him that you had known him rather well."

Roger had been clever. Anything Faith said now Madame de Luze would attribute to jealousy. To go deeper would be to dig up the whole sordid story, and Faith didn't feel equal to that sacrifice. So she changed the subject to the houses she and Therese were to look at the following day.

When they had left Madame de Luze at her door, however, Faith's worry returned in full force. De Markoff was watching her.

Suddenly he seized both of Faith's hands, pouring forth wild, passionate words to which she listened in a daze. His little dove, his little white soul. Waking or dreaming, her image was before him. Did she not know that he worshipped the ground she walked on? That her beauty drove him to distraction?

"Goloubka—Ya tebyalublu—little dove—I love you—my little darling." His rich, throaty voice pleaded in Russian, in English. He broke down, almost sobbing when Faith drew away her hand, sadly shaking her head.

The tempest that shook him shook Faith with its reverberations. When later she crept into her room, she thought she heard the door of Hunter's room open, and casting her pride aside, she would have run to him for strength and comfort. But almost at once there was the soft click of a door shutting, as if he had guessed her need, and was closing his door in her face.

Little Benny's Note Book

LITTLE BENNY .. ..

After supper ma said to pop, Really Willyum it's simply awful how the money goes like ships that pass in the nite. It's here today and gone tomorrow and often even gone today. I've been thinking, Willyum, it mite be a good ideer if I kept an account book with a complete record of every penny I spend for household expenses, what do you think, Willyum? she said.

Nollege is power, pop said. If you have the nollege of where every penny goes you mite achieve the power of blocking a few avenues of escape, he said, and ma said, I've been harboring the ideer for several days, in fact I've already gone to the extreme of stopping in at the stationary store and pricing account books, and the cheepest thing they could show me was a doller and 25 cents. I meen the cheepest thing that I could take any pleasure in using and that would act as any kind of an incentive to write in. So just think, Willyum, that would be an exter additional liability of a doller and 25 cents at the very beginning. You could hardly call that a glowing start, could you Willyum? ma said.

I can proberly dig up an old ledger for you down at the office with ony a few notations in it, and you can tear out those pages and start in with a cleen sweep and not one cent of overhead expense for the bookkeeping department, pop said, and ma said, That would be lovely, and now that's settled and there's just one other gnawing doubt in my mind's eye. I meen I mite find it just too depressing to see those black and white expense items piling up like ghostly shadows of the passed and getting longer and deeper day by day. After all Willyum I think I'd prefer the single isolated shock at the end of each week when I realise with a sudden pang that the money is all gone, and then let hope spring eternal as usual at the beginning of the following week, ma said.

Yee gods it's a woman's world, pop said.

And he got behind the sporting page and stayed there.

With his remaining strength Tarzan turned himself over on his back. He saw Ska wheel quickly upward. With this sight the ape-man's mind cleared for a while. "Is the end so near as that?" he thought: "Does Ska know I am near gone?"

"Even he dares to come down and perch upon my carcass!" And even then a grim smile touched those swollen lips as into the savage mind came a sudden thought—the cunning of a wild beast at bay. Tarzan closed his eyes.

He threw a forearm across his eyes to protect them from Ska's powerful beak. Then he lay very still and waited. It was restful there and Tarzan was dog-tired. He feared he might sleep and something told him he would never awaken.

So he concentrated all his remaining powers upon the one thought of remaining awake. Not a muscle moved. To Ska, circling above, it became evident that the end had come. The man was dead. His long vigil was about to be rewarded!

Blackwell, Okla., March 5 (CP)—The newly wedded Floyd Ackersons are prospecting with a can opener. Friends presented them with many tins of fruit and vegetables at a prenuptial shower, but thoughtfully removed the labels from every can.

Iaegar, W. Va., March 5 (CP)—The yardmaster saw the locomotive snaking down the tracks where no engine ought to be. He yelled. Then came a burst of steam as the locomotive jumped the tracks. An hour later, Robert Parson, 19, negro, was arrested. He was arraigned on a charge of stealing an engine.

Crookston, Minn., March 5 (CP)—Ice-coated highways didn't keep two farmers near Fosston, about 50 miles southeast of here, from taking their cream to market yesterday.

Starting out in their car, they found travel so hazardous they returned home, put on their ice skates and flashed down the glass-like highway into town, carrying the cream cans.

North Andover, Mass., March 5 (CP)—One of two brothers, believed to be the only twin Roman Catholic priests in the country, died here last night.

He was Rev. Michael J. Buckley, pastor of St. Michael's church here for the past seven years.

The surviving twin is the Rev. Patrick J. Buckley, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Cambridge.

New York, March 5 (CP)—Mrs. Helen Hayes, 81, died Monday.

Her son, Charles, 58, a retired letter carrier, was so stricken by grief and shock the care of a doctor was needed.

Last night Hayes went for a walk. He met patrolman John Holden, a friend, told him of the death of his mother and said "I don't care to live anymore."

Then he returned home. Friends prevailed on him to lie down. He remained in his room so long they became alarmed.

They found him dead, a victim of his grief, they said.

Baltimore, March 5 (CP)—Secret Service Agents here picked up a counterfeit $2 bill yesterday that had been in circulation for approximately 70 years. They pronounced it a poor counterfeit at that.

Agents think it has been resting in a trunk for a number of years.

Kamloops, B.C., March 5 (CP)—The score was even today between the Canadian government and Joseph Landry—one of the Dominion's unsung patriots.

He is in his 85th year now but 50 years ago he served in the second Riel Rebellion. Thirty years later he lopped off three decades from his age, deceived an army doctor, and served his country again. This time it was for two years in France.

Recently the government caught up with Landry and decorated him for his services in the Riel insurrection with a medal.

Today the grizzled old warrior is one of the proudest residents of the British Columbia Provincial Home here. He pays his board regularly and proudly displays his medal.

Landry was born near the City of Quebec, Sept. 21, 1850.

BOND ISSUE

Hon. Mr. Nixon Challenged by Macaulay on New Act

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—The Conservative opposition in the Ontario Legislative has rushed to the defence of the former Hydro-Electric Power Commission, attacked in a three-day speech last week by Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck, and opened its case by charging Mr. Roebuck did not produce all the pertinent documents in the case.

Leading off the opposition offensive yesterday, Col. W. H. Price (Cons. Toronto-Parkdale) declared Mr. Roebuck did not refer to a letter Sir Adam Beck wrote regarding Quebec Power in 1924 and the Attorney-General did not produce minutes of a special Commission meeting in 1929, when certain power purchases were endorsed.

Col. Price charged the government with attempting to "inflame public opinion" against the power purchase contracts and with attempting to drag out the debate last week without allowing a reply to Mr. Roebuck's charges.

The former Attorney-General planned to continue his address today and produce additional reports from F. A. Gaby, former chief engineer of the Commission, regarding estimates of possible power shortages and other Hydro matters.

"Why didn't the Attorney General bring that letter to the attention of the House?" Col. Price asked as he read Sir Adam's letter to Gordon Gale, representing Canadian Pacific Railway interests in Que-

NIPISSING ELECTS LIBERAL MEMBER

J. Harry Marceau Wins by Over 5,000 in By-Election

North Bay, Ont., March 5 (CP)—The place in the Ontario Legislative Assembly left vacant by the sudden death of Theodore Legault in January will be taken by another member of the Liberal party. Late returns confirmed the victory of J. Harry Marceau in the Nipissing by-election.

Returns late last night from 87 of 103 polls gave Mr. Marceau 8,094 votes, and Mr. E. J. Lawrence, Co-operative Commonwealth candidate 3,892 votes. Mr. Marceau's majority increased to more than 5,000, it was reported unofficially, upon receipt of figures from three more subdivisions last night.

The city of North Bay voted for the C.C.F. candidate, giving him 2,797 votes to Mr. Marceau's 2,504.

The vote in the last Nipissing Provincial election was as follows: Theodore Legault, Liberal 12,149; C. R. Harrison, Conservative, 6,038. Liberal majority was 6,111.

New party standing in the legislature will be: Liberals 67; Liberal-Progressives, three; Conservatives, 17; C.C.F., one; U.F.O., one; and Independent, one.

MAGISTRATE RAISES ANTE ON ASSAILANT

Sudbury, Ont., March 5 (CP)—Jack Carter, Montreal, struck a police officer here and said he didn't care if he did get 30 days for it. "It'll be worth it," he said.

But the magistrate raised the ante and gave him two months' imprisonment in city police court this morning on a charge of assaulting a police officer.

"You couldn't make it three?" inquired Carter.

"No," said the magistrate and the bidding was over.

LOOKOUT TAKES STAND

Buffalo, N.Y., March 5 (AP)—Findley McLeod, lookout on the freighter Edward E. Loomis when that vessel collided with the W. C. Young Conservatives Favor Early Riding Nomination At Enthusiastic Meeting

R. D. Arnott, President, in Chair at Organization Meeting

MANY SPEAKERS

All Express Faith in Premier Bennet And New Policy

At a meeting which taxed the capacity of the spacious Front Street clubrooms to hold the record attendance, members of the Belleville Young Canada Club at their first open assembly held last evening completed preliminary arrangements for the immediate organization of the club in various wards throughout the city.

As the first step toward this end, ward chairmen will be named at special meetings of the wards to be held evenings during the present and coming week on specified dates. Foster Ward will meet on Wednesday, March 6; Samson, Baldwin and Ketcheson Wards will meet on Friday, March 8, Bleecker and Coleman on Monday, March 11, and Murney Ward on Wednesday, March 13. Following this the executive of the various wards will then be formed.

The meeting last evening also went on record as unanimously favoring the holding of a convention of Conservatives of the riding at the earliest possible date to name a candidate to represent South Hastings at the coming Federal election. A standing vote was taken following the motion advanced by Mr. Wilbur Countryman, and seconded by Mr. Arthur Hill.

Perth, Ont., March 5.—Dr. W. J. Hobson, and Rupert Mackler appeared before Judge F. W. Wilson and were released on $5,000 bail each. Dr. Hobson was charged with an attempted illegal operation. Mackler was charged with aiding and counselling the same offence. No date has been set for trial.

STRATFORD TAX RATE

Stratford, Ont., March 5 (CP)—Stratford's tax rate for 1935 was set at 39 mills for public school supporters and 40.2 mills for separate school supporters by the city council last night. Last year's rate for public school supporters was 37 mills. The separate school rate last year was 37.9.

DEPUTY SPEAKER ARMANDLAVERGNE DIES AT AGE OF 55

Injury to Back 15 Years Ago Followed by Operations

COLD CONTRACTED

Ottawa, Mar. 5—(CP)—Deputy Speaker Armand Renaud LaVergne of the House of Commons died in the hospital today. He was 55 years old.

Mr. LaVergne had been in indifferent health for some time. About 15 years ago while on a hunting party in his native Province of Quebec, he suffered an injury to his back which necessitated several delicate operations on his spine.

On his way from Quebec in January to take over his duties as Deputy Speaker of the House on the opening of Parliament, Mr. LaVergne contracted a cold and was confined to his apartment here for nearly a month. His doctor and nurse were in constant attendance. Three weeks ago he was removed to the hospital with a fatal attack of pneumonia.

Personality Dynamic

His condition prevented the Deputy Speaker attending any sittings of the House this season. In previous sessions he was obliged on a number of occasions to absent himself from the Commons on accunt of his poor health and frequent rumors arose he would resign his post.

Of a dynamic personality and with a marked gift as an orator, Mr. LaVergne has fought political battles in his Province as a Liberal, later a Nationalist and finally as a Conservative. He first entered the House of Commons at a by-election in 1904.

He was re-elected in the 1904 General Election, resigned his seat in 1908 when he was elected to the Quebec Legislature. In the Dominion General Elections of 1917, 1921, 1925 and 1926, Mr. LaVergne was defeated but was elected as a Conservative for Montmagny, Que., in the General Election of 1930.

PROFITEERING IN SUPPLYING FOOD TO CAMPS, CLAIM

Public Preyed Upon by Purveyors of Meat Claimed

POTATOES EXHIBITED

Arrangement Act Also in Committee Stage in House

Ottawa, March 5—(CP)—Charges of profiteering in supplying food to unemployment relief camps in British Columbia were aired in the House of Commons last night as general discussion of the camps drew a variety of complaints about their operation. It was Thomas Reid, liberal member for New Westminster, who alleged the public purse was being preyed upon by purveyors of meat and vegetables to the camps and who secured assurance of full investigation from Hon. Grote Stirling, Minister of National Defence.

Mr. Reid said the camps would not buy from farmers in the vicinity, who had to sell their potatoes for $5 a ton. They were then shipped to Vancouver and potatoes from a Vancouver dealer shipped to the camps at a cost of $24 a ton to the government. Further, he claimed, the potatoes supplied were poor. He sent a few samples across the floor to the minister and said a government grader in Vancouver had declared them low grade and almost valuless.

It was time hanging-posts were brought into use again, said Mr. Reid. In earlier days men had been hanged for stealing sheep and there was good reason for hanging men, who profiteered at the expense of the public in time of distress.

Mr. Stirling said he had visited

COW AND POULTRY BURNED IN FIRE

Barn Owned by Edward Wynne of Prince Edward Destroyed

Mountain View, Mar 5 (Special)—Fire destroyed a small barn and its contents, the property of Arthur Wynne, farmer, at Centre, Prince Edward County, last evening. The family had retired when a neighbour boy, Asel Townsend, awakened them at eleven o'clock, telling them that the barn was afire. The roof and sides of the barn had already fallen in at this time. Besides the building itself, a cow, a large number of hens and a quantity of feed were destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. At five o'clock, Mr. Wynne had visited the barns, and everything was apparently all right. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

RELIEF FIGURES ANNOUNCED

Ottawa, March 5.—In January, 249,577 heads of families with 890,835 dependents were on direct relief, Labor Minister W. A. Gordon said in the House of Commons. They included persons on partial relief.

In addition to these 43,278 individual cases were granted direct relief.

NOTED SAIL MAKER DEAD

Cowes, England, March 5.—Thomas White Ratsey, head of the famous sail making firm which has outfitted most of the America's Cup defenders, died today at the age of 83. Ratsey was a personal friend of King George, himself a keen yachtsman, and of all other leading yachtsmen here and abroad.

30 INJURED IN BUS CRASH

Melrose, Mass., March 5.—More than 30 persons were injured as a crowded Lowell-to-Boston bus was in collision with an automobile near the Malden-Melrose line. Thirteen persons were hurt so severely that they had to be removed to the Melrose Hospital in police ambulances and automobiles.

Discharge Treasury Officials

Toronto, March 5.—(CP)—Three officials have been dismissed from the Ontario Treasury Department, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced today. Two of them were found to have irregularities in their accounts and the third was dismissed "for another reason". The Premier declined to divulge the names of the officials.

NATHAN BRINDIS

Meet the employer who refused to allow any employee to take a wage cut! He is Nathan Brindis, principal owner of a shoe company at Lawrence, Mass. When 800 men and women from his factory gathered in a Lawrence hall to vote on a voluntary wage cut, Brindis took the platform. He was cheered like a conquering hero when he said he didn't wish them to take a cut and told them he probably could raise wages by July.

ROADSIDESSTREWN AFTERSLEETSTORM

All Forms of Travel Perilous Due to The Glare Ice

By The Canadian Press

Northern Ontario roadsides were strewn with stalled and wrecked automobiles today, an aftermath of one of the worst sleet storms in history. Streets and sidewalks of towns and cities were also covered with glare ice and all forms of travel were perilous.

Rain continued to fall in Southern Ontario and with freezing temperatures existing, traffic was demoralized in certain centres. Walter Heldman of Waterloo gave a practical demonstration of conditions when yesterday he skated over the four-mile road stretch from Kitchener to Breslau in 20 minutes.

Strong easterly to southerly winds with occasional rain today, with dropping temperatures tomorrow, were the probabilities for the south. Considerably colder weather is also forecast for the north, with sleet and snow.

On the road between Sudbury and Frood Mine, more than a dozen automobiles of miners driving to and from shift this morning, skidded off the highway on hills or going around curves.

Motorists experience difficulty negotiating streets of North Bay as rain froze as fast as it fell. There were no serious accidents reported.

Highways in the vicinity of Galt were in a dangerous condition due to steady rainfall. There has been little change in the level of the Grand River.

Milder weather at Sault Ste. Marie softened up ice, making travel less hazardous than last night.

GAME REPORT MADE

Kitchener, Ont., March 5 (CP)—Announcement of importance to Ontario hunters was forthcoming today when N. Asmussen, Liberal member for North Waterloo, said the Ontario Game Laws would be amended this year to make it legal for hunters to use dogs in deer hunting.

PROFESSOR HONORED

Toronto, March 5.—Word was received here that Prof. Etienne Gilson director of medieval studies at St. Michael's College, had been given a chair in the College de France, one of the highest honors awarded by the French Government for scholasticism, following which he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

KINGSTON CITIZEN DEAD

Kingston, Ont. March 5—Samuel R. Bailey, one of the veteran citizens of the city, died here following a long illness. Mr. Bailey, who was almost 80 years of age, was for many years a prominent broom manufacturer. He was for years an alderman, retiring from municipal life about 20 years ago. He was one of the leading enthusiasts of curling in this district.

REV. WM. H. DAW ORDERED DEPOSED FROM MINISTRY

Defrocking Sequel to Trial Heard by Church Court

CEASES TO BE PRIEST

Anglican Bishop Hands Down Judgment on Church Discipline

Hamilton, Ont., March 5—(CP)—Rev. W. H. Daw, Rector of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, was deposed from the Ministry of the Church of England in Canada and his name ordered removed from the list of the clergy of the Diocese of Niagara in a judgment handed down today by His Lordship, Rt. Rev. L. W. D. Broughall, Bishop of Niagara.

The official judgment of the Bishop reads as follows:

"Pursuant to the annexed reasons, my judgment is as follows:

"That the name of the Reverend William Henry Daw be removed from the list of clergy of the Diocese of Niagara and that he stands deposed from the ministry of the Church of England in Canada."

In effect it is understood the sentence means the Rev. Daw is defrocked and is no longer a priest of the Church of England. The charges against him four in number were heard before an ecclesiastical court composed of His Lordship Bishop presiding with Very Rev. C. E. Riley, Dean of the Diocese and Judge George C. Thomson, Chancellor of the Diocese, as assessors Jan. 18.

Grounds of Judgment

The reasons for judgment appended to the official announcement were as follows:

The Court of the Diocese of Niagara sat Friday, January 18, 1935, in the Parish Hall of Christ's Church Cathedral, Hamilton, to hear evidence on the following charges, that were alleged against the Rev. W. H. Daw, B.A.

"1. That you are officiating in the Diocese of Niagara without the license of the Bishop.

"2. That you are holding services in another clergyman's parish without such clergyman's consent.

"3. That you have violated the laws of canonical obedience made by you on your ordination as deacon and priest, to the Bishop of Niagara and his successors.

"4. That you are guilty of schism, or separating yourself from the communion of the church.

T. H. Simpson, K.C., appeared for the complainant; Orville Walsh, K.C., appeared for the respondent.

The Bishop of Niagara presided and had as his assessors His Honour, G. C. Thomson, Chancellor of the Diocese of Niagara and the Very Rev C. E. Riley, D.D., Dean of Niagara.

Mr. Daw is a son of the Rev. Samuel Daw, of Hamilton, once rector Christ Church, Belleville.

JUBILEE MEDALS TO BE PRESENTED

Will be in Recognition of Distinguished Public Services

Ottawa, March 5.—(CP)—King George is anxious the silver jubilee of his accession to the throne May 6 be celebrated in towns and hamlets as well as in large centres, it was announced today. Lieutenant-Governors as representatives of the King will present medals in Provincial capitals but in the other municipalities mayors will act in that capacity and in smaller places Reeves will officiate. Hon. C. H Cahan, Secretary of State issued a statement today in this connection.

"By the King's command medals will be struck at the Royal Mint to commemmorate this Silver Jubilee, and a number of these medals will be distributed by the King to his subjects throughout Canada in recognition of faithful and distinguished public services," the statement said. "It is proposed each medal so awarded will be accompanied by a letter from Buckingham palace, written to each recipient by the King's command.

SPRING SIGNS APPEAR

Kingsville, Ont., March 5.—(CP) Signs of Spring—running sap and a robin. The sap yesterday dripped freely from maple trees which had been trimmed recently. The robin was vouched for by four members of the Canadian Legion who had visited the yard of Alex Cascadden.

Increase of $5,950,409 to Bring Total to $36,093,657.05

GALLONAGE SALES UP

49.1 Per Cent Increase in Beer Sales Since Sale in Hotels

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—Increase of 19.8 percent in sale of liquor and beer in Ontario during the fiscal year Oct. 31, 1933, to Oct. 31, 1934, was noted today in the report of the Liquor Control Board, released by E. C. Odette, Liquor Control Commissioner, and tabled in the Legislature.

Total sales for the 1933-34 period were $36,093,657.05 compared with $30,143,247.26 the previous year, an increase of $5,950,409.

Sales from liquor stores increased from $18,673,045.86 in 1932-33 to $18,979,821.80 last year.

Beer sales showed an increase from $11,470,201 to $17,113,835 last year, an increase of 49.1 percent.

Gallonage sale of domestic spirits increased from 551,195 gallons in 1932-33 to 608,532 in 1933-34, an increase of 57,337 gallons. A decrease was noted, however, in imported spirits. Their sales fell from 262,975 gallons in 1932-33 to 223,645 last year.

Domestic Wine Down

There were 123,659 less gallons of domestic wine sold in the stores last year, compared with 1932-33 but sale of foreign wines increased by 5,658 gallons.

Sales of domestic beers in liquor stores jumped from 742,448 to 954,691 last year, an increase of 212,243 gallons. Gallonage sale of imported beer fell from 24,390 gallons in 1932-33 to 22,344 in 1933-34.

In the sale of beer from breweries and brewers' warehouses the total increased from 6,724,222 gallons in 1932-33 to 10,936,751 gallons last year, an increase of 4,212,529 gallons or 62.6 percent.

Profits Near $6,000,000

Total profit of $5,943,802 was reported on the year's operations.

Payments to the Provincial Treasurer amounted to $5,600,000 of this amount, the commissionar said $2,500,000 had been paid since he took office.

Expenses of the administration amounted to $2,242,651 compared with $2,306,758 the preceding year.

From July 24 to Oct. 31, 1934 the following beer sale authorities were issued:

1055 Standard Hotels

Standard hotels, 1055; clubs 173; steamship companies two and railways one.

Also 41 hotels and three clubs had their authorities cancelled.

During the year the Dominion received for customs and excise duties, excise taxes and sales taxes on alcoholic beverages purchased by the board of $5,001,798. In addition there was indirectly paid to the Dominion government for malt duties, excise and sale taxe on domestic beer, sold in Ontario, an amount exceeding $2,500,000. Dominion taxation on native wines sold from Ontario wineries direct to consum-

BAND PROGRAM IN PARISH HOUSE

Under the auspices of the Parish Guild of St. Thomas' Church, a band concert was given in the Parish House last evening by the Argyll Light Infantry Band directed by Lieut. Ross Hunter, through the kind permission of the Commanding Officer. The audience enjoyed a well arranged program played with fine musicianship by this band which enjoys an enviable reputation for the excellence of its performance. A variety of numbers was presented and the audience was most appreciative of the splendid concert.

ROADS DANGEROUS FOR MOTOR TRAVEL

Incoming roads and highways presented dangerous and hazardous traffic facilities during the past 24 hours and slowed motor traffic up considerably. Subsequent rains today, however, materially assisted the traction and travel was slightly speeded up by noon. Motor buses and transports arrived in town long behind schedule all night, while other motorists reported travel rather dangerous at points along the main highways, although continued rains had considerably softened the sleet and ice that covered the roadways. No major motor accidents were reported on adjacent highways. Despite the fact, that walking on local streets was rather difficult last night and this morning, no serious accidents due to persons falling were reported to local police, although a number of citizens received slight shocks, when they slipped and fell on the local ice-covered streets.

NORTH HASTINGS BOARD IS NAMED

At a meeting of the North Hastings Board of Trade held in Bancroft on Friday evening last, the following were elected to office for the current year:

Hon. Presidents—Hon. Dr. Faulkner and Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P.; President G. W. Jones; Vice-Presidents, T. McAlpine and E. L. Reid; Secretary-Treasurer, R. H. Dewar; Recording Secretary, H. M. Price; Membership Committee — Scott Vader; R. H. Dewar; John Carlisle; Thos. McAlpine; Geo. Brown; Dan Goodwin.

Meetings of the Board will be held on the first Friday of each month in the future, beginning on April first.

TONS OF SAND SPREAD ON STREET

Working against the almost hopeless odds throughout the day and far into the night, city workmen were on the job yesterday in an attempt to relieve an unparalleled condition of iciness on city streets and roads by sprinkling tons of sand from the busy trucks. Soon after yesterday's rain had turned to sleet, freezing on the roads and walks as it fell, employees were at work of sanding the busiest and slipperiest intersections in the downtown district. Cars slithered and slipped helplessly and traffic came almost to an abrupt standstill during the late afternoon. Pedestrians, also helpless on the glazed surface of the walks were helped on their way by thoughtful householders strewing the contents of their ash pans on the ice. During the night, several huge trucks were forced to stop over in the city while Gananoque was reported by the drivers to be a second collecting point for the transports unable to continue.

SHIFT OF WORKERS ON STREETS TODAY

A change in shift of workers made today by the department of public works placed twenty new men on the task of chipping the ice free from the downtown curbs and shovelling wider channels in the ice of the gutters to allow free passage to the catch basins for the melting water. Busy cars and trucks churned the shovelled snow into a deep and dirty mass of slush in the downtown section as a constant drizzle of rain continued unabated up to a late hour today.

CITY LOOP GAME WILL BE PLAYED

According to information given out by Robt. Redner, manager of the Belleville Arena, at 2.00 p. m. today, there was no water on the ice surface in the Arena. "We are quite prepared to take care of the first game of the city league finals tonight", stated Manager Redner over the telephone. Other city league officials stated, that the Alemite-Trenton play-off game would be played tonight as advertised.

ONLY ONE HYDRANT REPORTED FROZEN

In direct contrast to the numerous frozen hydrants and scores of frozen and ruptured water services and mains last year due to the extreme weather, this year so far only one frozen hydrant was reported by the local department of water works. This hydrant was found frost-bound in the downtown section during one cold day some weeks ago.

A thorough canvass of all of the 304 hydrants in the city's system just completed by the department reveals that the system is in excellent shape this year. During the winter a daily test of all important hydrants has been carried on by the department.

MEMBERS OF MOOSE TOLD OF PROGRESS

At the regular meeting of the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge No. 1004 held on Monday evening, the guest speaker was Stewart Slater, Supreme Auditor of Canada. In an interesting address, he told of the activities of different lodges in Canada, stating every lodge and chapter had been able to meet their financial obligations and progressing favorably and in most lodges membership increased by 50 per cent.

The local lodge was complimented on the progress made during the past twelve months. A membership campaign was inaugurated with a committee composed of Tom Gill, J. Lasenby and A. Dutton in charge. At the conclusion an interesting program and refreshments were enjoyed.

STATES BUSINESS ON THE UPGRADE

Better business conditions for manufacturers of this country and in the United States during the coming year were forecast by Mr. D. D. Pierson, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of Aurora, Illinois. Mr. Pierson has been spending several days in this city during which time he has made a personal inspection of conditions in the local Stephens-Adamson plant. Optimistic over conditions as he found them, and expressing himself well satisfied, Mr. Pierson voiced the belief that business was definitely on the upgrade.

MANY FISH ON BAY FROM CARS

A new wrinkle in ice fishing has been introduced in this district. During the past few cold days several citizens, equipped with regular fishing tackle have been driving their cars far out on the ice of the Bay of Quinte, where after chopping holes in the thick surface, have been angling comfortably, while seated on the running boards of their machines. When too cold to fish in comfort they retire to the interior of the car, heated by a pailful of red hot stones.

LARGE NUMBER OF PARASITES RECEIVED

Well over 5,000,000 tiny buzzing insects, which will be used by Canada during the coming summer to combat the ravages of the destructive kind, quartered at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory on east Dundas Street are being added to by other regular shipments being received here weekly from points abroad. The consignments of helpful parasites arriving for the most part from the Farnham Royal laboratories, Surrey, England, and collected from Central European points are being carefully housed and acclimatized for the summer's work just ahead. The latter shipments consist of the Spruce Sawfly and parasites of destructive timber insects.

JAMES WALDEN IS NOW ON EXECUTIVE

A signal honor was conferred upon Mr. James Walden, president of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada. Named as a delegate from this city to attend the annual convention of the Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans, held in Toronto on Saturday, President Walden was named Third Vice-President of the parent association. The convention was reported one of the most successful on record.

Action Taken by Council in Ontario Shore Gas Dispute

Committee Appointed to Adjust Matter in Dispute

"In view of the fact, that the Ontario Shore Gas Co., is many months in default of principal under the mortgage and in addition to interest and taxes and the unfavorable response of the solicitor of this company to our demand for payment of such arrears, that a committee composed of Aldermen Wills, Barlow and Arnott be authorized to consult with the City Solicitor and take such action as is deemed advisable" was unanimously passed by the City Council at their regular meeting on Monday evening after being proposed by Alderman William R. McCreary. Alderman Wills informed the council, that the committee appointed would take no action until they reported to the council but they wished to be free to carry on negotiation and other business with the Ontario Shore Gas Company in order to effect a settlement. Alderman McCreary expressed himself, that in his opinion an early settlement should be made and dispossession proceedings under the mortgage be started unless more favorable action was forthcoming from the company.

There was little business transacted at the meeting last evening. In the absence of Mayor George O. Tice through illness, Alderman Harry Hill capably filled the chair and conducted the meeting speedily to a conclusion. Those present were Aldermen Hill, Wills, McCreary, Thompson, Foley, Safe, Cushing, Barlow, Guthridge, Harvey and Marshall with Alderman Guthridge in the chair. In the committee of the whole a recommendation respecting the calling of tenders for the supplying of gas for city business was withdrawn, the amendment of Ald. McCreary prevailing.

Ball Club Given Grant

A letter from Raymond Carr, president of the Senior Baseball Club in the city requesting a grant of $300.00 created considerable discussion among the members and on motion a grant of $200.00 was made. In the letter to the council, Mr. Carr explained the baseball situation in Belleville and later, when asked to address the council, elaborated on this letter and at the conclusion the council was in hearty accord with the proposal and wished Mr. Carr success in his effort to revive senior baseball to its former standing in this city.

The letter from Mr. Carr to the council stated, that the club would be willing to pay back the grant this year, but money was needed at present to start the machinery, and Alderman Barlow opened the discussion with the question "has any grant of previous years to the ball club been paid back?" and he received a negative answer. "I think this council should do as well for the ball club this year as has been done in previous years," said Alderman Barlow. "I have seen many of the communications received by Mr. Carr and I know he is putting a lot of effort into this project to give the sport lovers a real team and also laying a solid foundation for years to come and I move that a grant of $200.00 be given."

Alderman Harvey favored the proposition of having the auditor look over the books, as outlined in the letter tabled and was in favor of the grant being made. Alderman McCreary stated, that he had

SPRING TRAINING OF A.L.I. TO START

Uniforms Will be Issued in The Near Future

At a regular monthly meeting of the officers of the Argyll Light Infantry held Monday evening in their quarters at the armouries considerable business in regard to recruiting for Spring training was transacted. Col. E. A. Geen presided.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening of next week uniforms will be issued and on Monday night the 18th inst. training will start.

The battalion will go into camp for three or four days early in June, the place of camp not being decided.

During training a program of sports will be provided. Certain sports have taken place every Wednesday evening for some time past.

The shooting gallery located in the basement of the armouries has been a busy place of late with many practising at target shooting and competition among several military units has aroused considerable enthusiasm.

President S. Johnson presided over a monthly meeting of the Sergeants Mess on Monday evening. The business was of a routine nature. Refreshments were served at the close.

Mail Helps to Lighten Hours As They Drag in Prison Cell

Vermilyea Strives to Keep Health in Best Condition

The dragging hours of Harold W. Vermilyea, sentenced to die in this city on Thursday, May 2nd., next, are being lightened a little lately by the reading of mail received with his other personal correspondence almost daily. Since sentence of death was pronounced, letters to the condemned man have been received in some volume, it was stated. After being perused and censored by the jail officials they are read to the prisoner.

Vermilyea, only fifty-seven days away from death, unless special intervention is made, is careful of his diet. Fresh fruits lately have formed a major portion of his regular meals and are eaten with the same appetite displayed since his incarceration. Through careful regulation of his diet with regard to calories, proteins and vitamins, he is able to avoid the use of laxatives and medicines usually needed by the confined. The same fare as that given the other prisoners in the jail is provided with the fruit, fresh milk and other minor luxuries.

Quartered in the same double cell in the south wing of the building he has used since his first day at the jail, Vermilyea alternates his time in the closely confining cell with daily exercise periods in the 38-foot corridor of the cell block. Daily he goes through an extended routine of vigorous calisthenics under the watchful eyes of his special guards. When confined in the cell during the remainder of the time he spends hours playing solitaire — his favorite game — singing some favorite song and attempting conversation with his guards. But conversation is not encouraged during the day or even the night, through which he rests and sleeps undisturbed.

"Vermilyea so far has been a model prisoner", Governor of the Gaol, G. H. French is quick to state. "Even since sentence of death was pronounced, there seems little change in his attitude toward confinement. Although he does ask for things sometimes that he knows we can't give him, the guards get along well with him and there has been absolutely no trouble since he came here".

Police News

Owing to difficult travelling facilities only five transients moved into town last night and stopped at the local police station for the night. Wet, cold and shivering the five weary travellers were given a warm place in which to sleep in the cell-block.

Charged with intoxication, Murdock Taylor of this city, was taken into custody last night. Taylor, it is alleged by police was causing a disturbance at the upper end of the main street, where he was molesting a local business man.

A local motorist found himself charged with operating a motor car without first obtaining an individual operator's licence. The matter will be fully aired in Friday's police court. Numerous summons have been issued to local poll tax delinquents with instructions that the tax must be paid before March 18th under the full penalty of the city by-law.

STORY OF ROCKIES TOLD IN PICTURES

Rev. Bert Howard Speaks at John Street Church Hall

Beauties of the Rocky Mountain district were brought vividly to mind last evening when an audience at John Street United Church Hall followed with keen enjoyment an illustrated lecture by Rev. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College. The program was under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the College.

Last evening's audience was taken on an imaginary and delightful trip, leaving from Albert College. Splendid views of the college were shown, and the most unusual, causing much comment, was a picture taken from the tower, of Graham Hall (the boys' residence) against a background of the city's spires and roofs. Seventy-five pictures, beautifully tinted, were shown of the grandeurs of the Rockies from Edmonton to Banff, the northern section of the United States and back to Edmonton. Interesting pictures were shown of the animals in that district. Mr. Howard also had a group of slides of the lake region in Killarney and the rare beauty of this charming spot was faithfully presented in the colored slides.

A very interesting touch to the program was given by a chorus of young men of Albert College, who sang Irish songs, and the views of Erin were shown and who also rendered a group of hymns as Mr. Howard described the familiar scene in tourist camps in the Rockies as numbers of people gathered to sing together.

The speaker was introduced by the pastor of the church, Rev. Robert Hall, who also expressed the appreciation of the audience for the very enjoyable evening.

Y'S MEN'S DEBATE DECLARED DRAW

Luncheon Concluded by Delightful Bridge Party

A debate followed by a bridge party, constituted the activities of the local Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting held in the Y.M.C.A last evening. Y's man Newton Thompson occupied the chair, when the "red group" put on the programme and the usual educational period followed.

A debate— "whether the average young man who has a collegiate or academic education and his mind well formed, is in a better position to find happiness than the young man of the same social standing who has not such a high standard of education, but just an ordinary public school training and no further information than from those around him," brought forth many excellent points on behalf of both the affirmative and negative. After considerable discussion and judgment on the part of the judges, the debate was declared a draw. The judges were Y's men Geo. Pauley, Joe Shortt and Russ McKenzie; Bert Houston led the affirmative into debate, while the negative argument was captained by Vern Weir. The usual songs and musicals, with Alec Gordon presiding at the piano were also enjoyed.

Following the regular meeting the members were requested to repair to the auditorium, where a two-hour bridge game followed, the married men's wives being invited to take part. The bridge party resulted in a delightful evening being spent, which was followed by refreshments being served at the mid-night hour.

During the club meeting it was announced that the annual Y's Men's Ladies' Night, would be held on March 25th, while a monster rummage sale on March 30th., both to be preceded by the Y's Men's annual St. Patrick's dance on March eighteenth.

DEAD IN SOUTH AFRICA ARE REMEMBERED

Bloemfontein, South Africa, March 5.—The entire Canadian delegation to the fifth Imperial Press Conference, including wives of the visitors on Monday went to the War Memorial here commemorating Canadians who lost their lives in the Boer War. They were accompanied by Major J. J. Astor, chairman of the conference, and Lady Violet Astor, for a moving ceremony.

E Norman Smith of the Ottawa Journal, chairman of the Canadian delegation, standing in front of the monument said: "We honor the proud memory of those young Canadians who, 35 years ago, heard the call from the Motherland and responded to it without question, laying down their lives on the veldt."

Obituary

LATE EDGAR EDWARD KETCHESON

(Contributed)

The village of Frankford lost one of its leading citizens in the sudden passing away on Wednesday, Feb. 27th. of Edgar Edward Ketcheson in his 42nd. year. The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ketcheson he was born in Sidney Township and at an early age went to Toronto. At the age of nineteen he enlisted in the 20th. Battalion, proceeding to France in 1915. In 1916 he was badly wounded and was invalided home, the first man to return to this vicinity from the Front. After regaining his health, he was appointed Postmaster, which position he held until his death. He took a keen interest in the affairs of the community, having held the position of Town Clerk for a number of years, and being one of those instrumental in the Incorporation of the village. He always had at heart the welfare of those men with whom he had served overseas and was an active member of the D.S.C.R. He held the rank of captain in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment for some time but was forced to resign his commission on account of his war disabilities. For sixteen years he held the position of President of Frankford Library Board and was a Past Master of Frank Lodge, No. 127, A.F. and A.M. Probably his greatest interest was in the work of his Church. For sixteen years he had been Warden of Trinity Anglican Church and was besides, president of the Laymen's Association of the Deanery of Hastings and Prince Edward, and Lay Delegate to the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario. On both sides of his family the parents were of United Empire Loyalist stock.

The funeral, of a semi-military character, arranged through the courtesy of Col. R. Vanderwater, a great friend of the family, and in co-operation with Col. A. V. Yates (H. and P. E. Regiment), was held from his late residence, "Ingleside" to Trinity Church, on Friday, March 1st. As a mark of esteem every place of business in the village was closed and citizens in all walks of life were present to pay their last respects. Ex-service men were present from all points of the two counties including Belleville, Trenton, Madoc and Stirling, with the returned men of Frankford acting as floral bearers. The parade was in charge of Major S. Young, with firing party provided by the H. and P. E. Regiment under the direction of S. M. Almey, M.C., D.C.M., and Band Major S. Lockyer acting as Bugler.

The active pall bearers were as follows: Col. R. Vanderwater D.S.O., Lt. Col. A. V. Yates, M.C. (H. and P. E. Regt.); Col. H. H. Alger, M.D.; Major C. F. Walt, Major B. C. Donnan, Capt. E. Matthews, Lt. H. J. Madill, Lt. J. Inrig. The Honorary Bearers were His Honor Judge McLean (Hon. Lt.-Col. H. and P. E. Regt.), Col. W. G. Ketcheson, Col. A. E. Cline, D.S.O.; Major E. A. Adams, M.C.; Lt.-Col. W. R. Riordan, D.S.O.; Major H. D. Graham and Capt. L. D. Foster.

After a brief service in the house taken by the Rev. A. S. McConnell, rector of the parish, the funeral party left the home, the flag-draped casket with sword and hat, being carried through a guard of ex-service men, with Sergt. G. Johnston carrying the medals of the deceased soldier. At the entrance to the church they were met by the following clergy in attendance: The Right Rev. John Lyons, M.A., D.D., Bishop of the Diocese; Canan W. G. Swayne, L. Th.; Rev. A. B. Caldwell, R.D.; Rev. B. F. Byers, M.A.; Rev. and Major T. H. H. Hall, Rev. and Capt. F. A. Smith; Rev. W. G. H. Swayne; Rev. J. M. Brownlees, Rev. and Major A. B. Payne.

The ceremony was carried out with all the dignity and reverence of the beautiful Church of England Burial Service. Proceeded up the aisle by the choir and clergy to the words of the opening sentences taken by Rev. A. B. Payne, the great mass of people filled the church to overflowing. The choir was in charge of Mrs. H. H. Alger, organist of St. John's Church, Stirling, and was composed of members of the choirs of both churches. The special hymns used at the service were "How Bright Those Glorious Spirits Shine", "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me" and "My Faith Looks up to Thee." The Psalm was taken by Rural Dean Caldwell, the special lesson by Rev. B. F. Byers, while the Rev. T. H. H. Hall acted as Bishop's Chaplain.

Taking as his text the words "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," the Rev. A. S. McConnell under very difficult circumstances owing to his close contact with the family, outlined, in brief, the way of life and the task that lies before us. In reviewing the busy life of the late Mr. Ketcheson, he said that he had packed more into the past twenty years than most men had done in a whole lifetime. He upheld him as an example for all to follow; a soldier, a citizen, and a churchman. He offered the comfort of the Christian Church to those in bereavement, reminding them that through hope, faith and knowledge we can leave all things in the hands of a merciful God. In closing his address, he left, as an epitaph a few words from the pen of that beloved chaplain of the Canadian Forces, Ven. Archdeacon Scott, written in Franc in 1915: "In honour chivalrous; in duty valorous; in all things, noble; to the heart's core, clean."

The Lord Bishop of the Diocese added to the remarks of the rector of the parish, in a few well chosen words of comfort to the bereaved and eulogy of the one who had passed on. He emphasized in particular, the character of the work he had done for his parish and diocese, and remarked upon the wonderful respect in which he was held by all who knew him.

To the quiet music of the Nunc Dimittis the funeral cortege left the church and proceeded to Frankford cemetery with the firing party and ex-service men marching in the procession. The committal was conducted by the Rev. A. S. McConnell after which the firing party fired three volleys over the grave and with the sad notes of the Last Post and Reveille ringing in the air, Frankford paid a final tribute to their best loved citizens.

Those left to mourn are the widow, the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ketcheson, one brother, Walter in Trenton, and two sisters, Mrs. W. M. McLaren of Frankford, and Mrs. P. VanAllen, Trent Road, Belleville.

Among the many floral tributes received the following: Large Cross of white flowers from his widow; Father and Mother; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. McLaren and family; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Ketcheson and family; Mr. and Mrs. VanAllen; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Miller; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. McRostie and Eleanor; Mr. and Mrs. Bleeker Ketcheson, Doris and George; Edward Ketcheson and family; Mr. and Mrs. Yateman, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. H. Turley and Miss Ostrum; Mrs. A. McLaren; Trinity Church, Frankford; St. John's Church, Stirling; Laymen's Association, Deanery of Hastings and Prince Edward; St. George's Men's Club, Trenton; Rev. B. F. and Mrs. Byers; Post Office Staff; Bay of Quinte Postmasters; Frankford Village; Returned Men of Frankford; Frank Lodge, 127, A. F. and A.M.; Library Board of Frankford; Girl Guides Company of Frankford; Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Hewton, Glen Miller; Col. R. and Mrs. Vanderwater; Dr. McMullen and family; Mr. and Mrs. L. McCauley and Mrs. J. C. McCauley; Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnston; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Burkitt and Mrs. May Frost; Mr. and Mrs. G. Dickson; Mr. C. P. and Jos. Rose; North American Life (Central Ontario Branch); Mrs. G. L. Bonter, Trenton; Mrs. J. N. Kidd, Trenton; Miss B. Armstrong, Trenton.

Among those present from out of the district were Mr. and Mrs. S. Bonner of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McMurray and Son, Gilmour, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wade, Brighton; Mrs. Harry Wickett, Stirling; Mrs. H. Yateman, Trenton.

Great credit is due to Mr. Fred Windover for the excellent way in which the funeral arrangements were carried out.

LATE JAMES ROY

Simply, as he had lived, but marked with all the due solemnity and impressiveness accorded one dear to the hearts of the residents of the city in which he had lived, carried on his marked philanthropic work, and finally died, the funeral of the late James Alexander Roy, who passed away at his late residence, 245 Victoria Avenue, early Saturday morning, was held from the home on Monday afternoon.

Hundreds of old friends of the deceased who had known Mr. James Roy so well gathered at the home during the day to pay their last respects to the aged and lovable resident. Scores of cars were also parked before the home, ready to follow the funeral cortege through the ice-covered streets to the Belleville Cemetery where interment was made in the Roy family plot.

Service for the dead was conducted in the home by the Rev. W. J. Walker, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and close friend of the deceased man. Mr. James Roy had been the oldest parishioner of St. Andrew's church, and a regular attendant up to the time of his death. The late Mr. James Roy's father was buried in a small plot directly facing this church.

Funeral services in the home were simple, in keeping with the wishes of Mr. Roy himself. Following the reading of the regular burial service, the Rev. Mr. Walker spoke extemporaneously to the bowed-head gathering.

"The gathering here signifies the respect we all held 'Jimmy' Roy; we are just 'Jimmy' Roy's boys," said Mr. Walker.

"God gave him, to the last moment almost, that alertness of mind that he possessed, and a mind that was always used by him to the advantage of others of the city in which he lived and where he had won a place in the hearts of every one who knew him. But even though James Roy has gone, we do not sorrow. We are glad. He has entered into that divine atmosphere of all those who have gone before him; those who knew him and loved him so well." Thus spoke Mr. Walker who had been constantly in attendance at the bedside of Mr. Roy until the time of his death.

Following the reading of the service and the address by the Rev. Mr. Walker, scores of former friends filed slowly through the flower-banked room to view the deceased so quietly in repose in the massive casket. Hundreds of wreaths, sprays and baskets of flowers which filled the room displayed in small measure the esteem in which the late Mr. Roy was held.

Present at the last rites were business and professional men of all ranks of the city. Also present were members of the various service clubs, officials of the city, the Belleville Agricultural Society, members of the local Ministerial Association and others.

Scores of cars made up the funeral procession which travelled slowly over the icy streets to the Belleville cemetery, where the Rev. W. J. Walker, still maintaining the simple solemnity of the service in respect to the wishes of the deceased consigned the body to the grave in the Roy family plot.

Bearers who were all close friends of the deceased were: Messrs. Arthur McGie, H. McKay, Alfred Gillen, E. V. Illsey, W. A. Parker and W. H. Bottum.

Long Life and Security

THE Metropolitan Life Insurance Company began publishing "Health Hints" for its policyholders in 1871 and ever since has carried on its efforts toward better health.

The Company cooperated with government officials in a campaign against a threatened cholera epidemic in 1892 and thus began its cooperative work with public health organizations.

In further developing its activities in the field of health, the Metropolitan organized its Welfare Division in 1909 and, at about the same time, a nation-wide nursing service was established for Industrial policyholders.

Subsequent health records demonstrate the value of these services.

During all these years the Company has worked shoulder to shoulder with national, provincial and local health organizations to stamp out preventable disease.

New low mortality figures were recorded in 1934 for practically all of the diseases against which public health forces have directed special preventive efforts — notably typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, infant mortality and maternal mortality. During this year the good record of previous years continued to obtain among Metropolitan policyholders.

LENT

Lent is at hand and throughout the Christian world there will be a deepening of religious feeling at this period of the year. There is evident a growing observance of Lent.

These six weeks just ahead cover in our religious world that period of those six weeks which ended with Gethsemane and Calvary and the empty tomb. These forty days are the days of the greatest interest from the standpoint of the church as they are the culmination of the life of the Master.

Whatever self-sacrifice is endured is for the purpose of stimulating the soul or for the purpose of helping others. Time spent in meditation the church feels is not lost time as it means a strengthened personality. The thinking of noble thoughts and the carrying out of them are just as essential in the other forty-six weeks of the year though naturally less stress is laid on them during the rest of the year. But a time of emphasis is necessary.

Lent is a time which brings the world face to face with the stark facts of life as they are presented in the life of Jesus. Lent is a period for pondering over the perplexities and problems of life, it provides a time for their possible solution as no other time of the year does.

The New Outlook in a Lenten editorial expresses on behalf of the United Church the spirit in which the period should be observed, speaking in these words,—

"We couldn't imagine a better time than the Lenten period for Christian people to ask themselves some rather stern and realistic questions as to how the plans and purposes and ideals of Jesus, which came to their full revelation in those last six weeks, are really working out in the world of today, the world which He came to bless and to redeem. If He were to spend these six weeks with us how would He think we were getting on with living the truth which He came to proclaim and establishing the society of which He so often spoke as the Kingdom of God?"

The purpose of Lent is peculiarly directed to the individual. When the individual is regenerated society is regenerated. The study of self and the study of society at this time are both essential.

The world can well halt, not in well-doing but in its rush for pleasure, in the self-satisfaction and the self-indulgence. Restraints wisely placed will harm no one. All persons are at almost all times too indulgent of themselves.

The Lenten season itself is a symbol of the time so essential to every person to get away from the pressing cares to study life in meditation. Life then no doubt will take on richer values than when everything is enjoyed as it comes along. It is a time to realize the cost of blessingh.

LUMBERING IMPROVES

The lumbering industry is looking upward. Canadian lumberjacks will be kept at work until after the spring drive.

In those parts of Ontario where lumbering is still known, the industry's progress means a great development. Belleville used to know the value of this as drives of logs were brought down the Moira. Those in their thirties and older realize the huge jams which used to come down the stream and can recall the raft of logs which were towed down the bay by boats. It is a long time since the river was such a hive of industry, since the lumbermen with their peavey and canthook walked up and down the banks or went out into the river to break a jam.

Chatham Daily News refers to the development signs:—

"For some years there has been a slump in lumbering operations, many competent workmen, dependent upon the bush for their livelihood, being thrown out of employment and unable to get a job. The cut has been curtailed, adversely affecting other industries, materially reducing working staffs and resulting in hardship and distress.

"But so far as the lumbermen are concerned, the situation is beginning to look more promising. Dispatches are to the effect that there is more work for the expert axemen and for others who are efficient at any of the many tasks carried on in the bush camp. And it is particularly interesting to note that Canadian workmen are being given the preference. The lumber companies are picking their men.

"There is no bushman in the world, the United States not excluded, who can handle an axe or saw like a Canadian-born woodsman, be he English-speaking or French habitant. Nor can men of any other nationality, when all is said and done, compare with Johnny Canuck as a roller, logger, swamper, sawyer, teamster, on the skidway, on the drive, carrying on at the dozen and one jobs that go to make the day's work in a lumber camp.

"The Canadian bushman goes about his task, whatever it may be methodically and dexterously. He knows his job and does it well whereas foreign workmen, taken by and all, have little knowledge of what uses an axe may be put, or of the business end of a cross-cut saw. Nor do they learn the use of these implements readily. To be an expert axeman—to learn the tricks of the trade—one must be brought up in the business from boyhood.

"Lumber companies are not actuated in this policy of employing Canadian axemen in preference to those of any other nationality by sentimental reasons, but purely by business considerations. They know that, man for man, there is no better workman, no more efficient woods mechanic than the Canadian lumberjack."

A "BETTER TIMES" BAROMETER

Few "business barometers" exist which more accurately indicate changes either for the better or the worse in industrialized countries than the periodic statements of car-loadings, showing as they naturally do whether there is a rising, falling or stationary demand for the thousand-and-one things that get themselves carried over railways, whether bound eventually to the nearest distributor and consumer or half way around the world.

One of the most depressing things about the last few years has been the disappointing behaviour of car-loadings in Canada as indicating the eagerly-awaited signs of better business. The definite upswing that is now taking place is therefore very welcome. An improvement of more than ten per cent over the same fortnight last year is certainly ground for reasonable jubilation, particularly as it is not due to an abnormal spurt in one or two basic and bulky commodities but is widely spread a large part of the Canadian business field. It is particularly encouraging that of the various classifications of the report "miscellaneous" accounts for nearly five thousand cars. In other words general manufactures and businesses of all kinds are demanding more and more rolling rolling stock to get their products to market, surely a happy index of better times, not merely "just around the corner," but actually upon us.—Montreal Star.

THEY MADE MASTERS

A grandson of the man who painted "The Angelus" has been sent to jail in France for selling forged pictures under famous names. Corot, Manet, Monet and Picasso are among the imitations he placed on the market. It is not stated whether a sense of piety restrained him from producing false Millets. To prison with him went the man who actually executed the spurious work of art.

To this man, a certain Cazot, his employer Millet was something less than generous in his remarks after sentence was pronounced. The forgeries, said Millet, were produced for England and the United States, where people know nothing about pictures anyhow. Actually in such instances of forgery a certain admiration goes out to the technician who can turn out passable imitations of famous masters. But Millet's accomplice must go to jail with the feeling that his forgeries were not only illegal but a poor job.—New York Times.

MIDWINTER DUST STORMS

Agricultural areas in many of the middle western United States have just experienced an unusual outbreak of the elements, in the form of a tornado carrying snow and dust at the same time. It was particularly severe in Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming, continuing on into Texas.

Reports of this midwinter climatic disturbance, indicate that the wind at several places attained a velocity of sixty miles an hour and carried dust in such quantities that it was almost pitch dark at noon, and artificial lights had to be utilized on the streets and in the houses. In some places dust drifts were three feet high and the mixture of snow and sand was not only unendurable, by those exposed to it outside, but there was a certain amount of penetration into buildings, constituting one of the most distressing experiences that even those who are accustomed to summer dust storms had ever endured.

One of the discouraging features of this phenomenon is that it tends to show that there is not much likelihood of the climatic conditions that produce soil drifting having passed in the west. During the last three or four years that condition has been exceptional in its severity both in Canada and the United States, and much damage has been caused over a tremendous agricultural area. It had been hoped that the cycle of dry seasons that so greatly accentuates the dust menace, had passed, but this unusual winter storm gives little ground for hope that the series of dry seasons has come to an end. It seems definitely established that very extensive work in the way of reforestation and other measures for the conservation of moisture will have to be undertaken in the prairie regions of both Canada and the United States before this detriment to successful farming can be overcome.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Happiness is like a sunbeam, which the least shadow intercepts, while adversity is often as the rain of spring.—Chinese Proverb.

ON GRANDMOTHER'S BED

No, I cannot be clever,
I cannot be gay;
I must live my life in
My own strange way.

While the others are dancing,
With laughter and shout,
I creep up to the attic
To think things out.

On my Grandmother Quentin's
Four-poster bed
I sit and ponder
Till dawn glows red.

Now with long years wasted,
Hopes of fame all fled
Here I sit, brimmed with rapture
On grandmother's bed!

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS make good reading. Night and day the world is combed for readable and interesting news by perfectly organized news gathering machines. Specialists in news-gathering in every land and every language are busy putting into words the important happenings of their respective spheres while news camera men are just as busy recording outstanding news events in pictures. There is scarce a spot on this terrestrial ball which can isolate itself to such an extent that important things can happen without the outside newspaper reading world knowing all about it within a short time. Recent oddities of the news include an account of a boy afloat upon a drifting ice floe away up near Chesterfield Inlet, within the Arctic Circle. Fifty below zero weather and not much hope for the boy, shrouded by the dense fog which only the north can produce. For two days a searching party looked in vain for the lad, then sadly returned to the settlement and the tiny church of the missionary where prayers were offered for the soul of the lad. While the service was in progress the lad walked in the church. The current which had carried him away, reversed and brought him back again. This story was brought out by Bishop Alfred Turquetil, known as "Bishop of the Arctic", who is the spiritual ruler of the largest Roman Catholic diocese in the world. The story related above has to do with an Eskimo settlement ministered to by the "Bishop of the Arctic", who says that the greatest obstacle to the acceptance of Christianity by the Eskimo is the example and influence of white men. Hard drinking, hard living sailors of the whaling fleet with a contempt for the natives taught the Eskimos the worst vices of the white man, also trickery and dishonesty in return for the fine furs which the Eskimos gave for next to nothing, a handful beads, or at most a trade gun more dangerous to the one behind it than whatever was in front of it. Bishop Turquetil has spent twenty-five years among the Eskimos, and is a wonderful influence for good among them.

CALLING ALL CRACKER BARREL ORATORS—Corner grocery orator of a village near Brantford made the Front Page all across the land and a suspended sentence in local police court on condition that he curb his oratory when the villagers gather 'round the big baseburner o' nights and try and see how close they can come to the box of sawdust with their expectoration. The cracker barrel orator had got away with his stuff all winter, being tolerated for the sake of peace, but when he branched off into slurring remarks about the Royal Family he struck a snag of large dimensions. The name of the village was Scotland, and when the orator became Communistic and anti-royalty up rose a mighty Scot and smote that talkative cuss so hard that the speech left him for the time. The next act is staged in the local police court where the Squire hands out verbal soothing syrup and advises all hands to forgive and forget while on suspended sentence for assault and battery, abusive language, and a few other fractures of the "statools" made and provided herein and therein against the peace and quiet of the community, s'help us.

FEARS CAUSED OVER NATURE OF HERIDITY

'Never Let Disease Scare You" Doctor Advises

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph. D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1935
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Laws of heredity cannot, and should not, be ignored; yet many people get into chronic states of fear because they misinterpret or misunderstand heredity.

When we scientificaly weigh the transmission from parents to offspring of disease, peculiarities, or other traits, we figure it out in terms of what is known as the "Mendelian Hypothesis" — the Mendelian law of inheritance.

This dates from 1865, when a monk, named Gregor Mendel, made certain observations on the colors resulting from the cross fertilizat- of ordinary garden peas. This momentous contribution to science remained unknown for thirty-five years until the report was discovered simultaneously by several botanists.

Mendel's work at once put the subject of heredity upon a sound, rational and almost mathematical basis. Since, therefore, heredity transmission of disease is not a hit-and-miss affair, it should reassure you about your ancestors.

Although scientists are applying the principles of Mendel to many traits and diseases, only a few—color of the eyes, and Huntington's chorea — have been thoroughly worked out.

Epilepsy and insanity have heredity influence, but specific prophesies about them cannot be made. Tuberculosis is not heredity. If we inherit anything at all of these dread conditions we merely inherit a tendency toward development—not the disease itself. That, of course, is something quite different from inheriting a disease and being doomed to develop it, no matter what you do to circumvent its coming.

No matter what your heredity may show, you can fight and counteract a tendency quite easily. Collect all the data you can; consult an expert, but, in any case, apply Mendel's theory. That often clears up doubts

Never become alarmed, no matter to what your father, mother uncles, aunts or grandparents were subject. Never let disease scare you. Don't let heredity frighten you.

Adopt a scientific point of view, try to discover whether the known laws of heredity — and they are very few — really apply. And then, even if they do, proceed scientifically, with the help of doctors, to counteract whattver pernicious influences may seem to have existed in the germ plasm.

But be sure you don't swing the pendulum the other way. Don't make heredity an excuse for a do-nothing policy. Don't substitute fear with indifference!

There are many, for instance, who allow themselves to overindulge in alcohol — following the lines of least resistance, perhaps — simply because some member of the family is reported to have been an alcoholic. Using heredity in such a way — as an excuse — is far worse than finding it a source of fright.

People often go through life fearing that a particularly dread distase will descend upon them because somebody in the family suffered from it a generation or two ago. The fear of insanity is the commonest of the torturing dreads, that of contracting tuberculosis or developing cancer would compete for second place. And there are other disorders which hang over many persons like the proverbial "sword of Damocles".

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Eggs are among the best general foods that exist. This is because they contain protein, fats, minerals and vitamins. A diet composed solely of eggs, however, would be inadequate — eggs are deficient in sugars and starches. Great care should always be taken to ascertain that fresh eggs are used because one that is not fresh may readily make a person sick.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 Years Ago.

MARCH 5, 1915.

Mr. Henry Kerr of Albert St., picked on Sunday last a little English flower in full bloom.

The Fifteenth and Forty-ninth Regiments of this city have received word from Ottawa to continue recruiting.

Yesterday afternoon it came to the ears of the authorities of this city that a number of foreigners who have been employed at Point Anne were about to leave the city owing to the fact that the Cement Works were about to close down for some weeks. These foreigners comprised Hungarians, Austrians and others who were formerly residents of countries at war with Great Britain and other allies. It was also ascertained that these foreigners had never registered in the country and as far as was known are not in sympathy with Great Britain in the present titanic struggle. The result was that a detachment of the military force in this city, in company with Sergeant Harman and Officers Donovan and Thompson of the Police Department at an early hour this morning visited the G.T.R. Station and apprehended ten men and one woman about to leave the city. They were taken in charge and escorted to the police staton where they were detained nominally on the charge of leaving the country without the proper passports.

Mr. Addison Vandervoort has received two postcards from his son, Milton Vandervoort, in France. No stamps were available. They were dated February 12 on the way north.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Kerr have returned to the city from their honeymoon.

Mr. Cecil F. Armistead, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Armistead, who has been in the office of the Dominion Express Company here, has been promoted to the office of that company in Montreal.

Miss Kincaid, of Hazzard's, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. McMechan Sinclair Street.

There seems to be no doubt that the proposed Old Boys' Re-union will be a huge success. A meeting was held last night with the following officers elected. Hon. President, Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Hon. Vice Presidents, Messrs H. Corby, ex-M.P., J. M. Hurley, ex-M.P., T. Ritchie, W. G. Northrup, M.P., E. Gus Porter, M.P.; C. M. Stork and Mayor Sulman. President—Wm. Johnson; Hon. Secretary, A. McGinnis; Hon. Treasurer, J. W. Johnson. Alderman Wm. Panter was named as chairman of the executive committee. Other chairmen of committees were: Reception, Col. Ponton; Transportation, R. J. Graham; Entertainment, Dr. Yeomans; Advertisement, A. McGie, Decoration, W. B. Deacon, Information and accommodation, C. Bogart; Parade, J. J. B. Flint.

The various committee heads went into convention last night and further arrangements will soon be announced relating to Belleville's coming Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 to be held next summer.

Opposition to a summer carnival being held under civic auspices was voiced on this date, the contention being made by one of the newspapers that the council if it had money to spare might make a larger contribution to the Belleville Fall Fair.

Plans were going forward for the welcome in honor of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who had been chosen Premier of the Dominion. The committee in charge of the program reported wide interest in the demonstration in honor of Belleville's distinguished son, on his homecoming.

Wires from Toronto told of the final summary of the loss in the eight hundred thousand dollar fire which a day or two before swept away the business buildings at the southwest corner of Yonge and Queen Streets, destroying the seven storey Robert Simpson building, the Jamieson building many stores and Knox Presbyterian Church.

H. F. Ketcheson, chairman of the committee appointed for the purpose presented Charles Herring, past president of Lydford Lodge, Sons of England, with a past president's jewel on behalf of the members.

Miss Gordon, superintendent of the General Hospital at Belleville announced the plan for a series of eight lectures which she would deliver on nursing.

The Onward (Methodist Church official journal) pays tribute to Sir Mackenzie Bowell as a noted member of the Methodist Church and expressed the wish that he would take time to visit the international conference at Chattonooga in June.

Division Court is in Session, Judge Fraleck occupying the bench.

A deputation consisting of Mayor Dunnet, City Solicitor Henderson and Ald. Biggar will leave for Toronto tonight to press the government for an appropriation to extend the Belleville and North Hastings railway to Bancroft.

Last night fire damaged the old meat market building on the market square to the extent of $1,500. Mr. Stephen Haight, who occupied the ground floor at the west end of the buiding was out of the city and consequently it has not been ascertained what damage he sustained.

The special committee appointed by the council to receive information upon the proposed new ferry met at the Mayor's office last night. Ald. J. W. Johnson, Tickell, Pope, Macoun and Diamond were present. The Rathbun Company offered to build a boat 135 feet long, 28 ft beam and speed of 12 miles per hour for $14,000. After considerable discussion it was agreed to submit the bylaw to the people authorizing the issuing of debentures for $14,000.

World Drawn On for Steel 75 Kinds Used in Automobile

Col. Frank Chappel Tells Rotarians Amazing Story of Motor

Living in an age where there are so many wonderful things folks are apt to take the most wonderful for granted and fail to enquire into the processes and materials necessary to produce these wonders. For instance the automobile is a wonderful creation but few not connected with the making of motor cars take the trouble to find out just what goes into the making of an automobile.

Belleville Rotarians know more now about the making of automobiles than they did before the interesting address of Col. Frank Chappel before the club Monday.

Col. Chappel is a research engineer engaged in the automotive industry at Oshawa where a large engineering staff is constantly engaged seeking ways and means to make improvements in the modern automobile. He illustrated the importance of the industry to Canada in the employment given not only in the place of final manufacture but in the manufacture of materials in many places in Canada which go into the making of a modern motor car, besides the mines and forests which contribute their share.

Help Belleville

For instance the firm which the speaker is connected spent $50,000 in Belleville for materials last year. Considering all the auto firms doing business in Canada the money spent for materials runs into large figures and gives employment in many communities.

The magnitude of the motor car industry is illustrated by the fact, said the speaker, that his firm alone, spent over seven million dollars last year on services such as telephone, telegraph, customs, etc., outside altogether of wages or any direct work upon motor cars.

There are 4,500 major parts in the average car which sells at from $800 to $1,000, which means much work for the purchasing department to keep an adequate supply on hand for daily use.

Thirty Cents a Pound

The speaker illustrated what a wonderful creation the automobile is and how cheap in proportion to its services by comparing it on a pound basis with a suit of clothes, a party dress, a pair of boots, and a cigar lighter, a combination which represents utility, precision and luxury. Boiled down to the least common denominator the suit of clothes costs $7.50 a pound, the boots, $3.50 per pound, evening dress, $50, and cigar lighter $10 per pound. Applying the same rule to the motor car it is found that the car costs just thirty cents er pound to the buyer, demonstrating the great value represented by an automobile.

World Drawn On

There are seventy-five kinds of steel in the modern motor car, coming into Canada in semi-manufactured form from many distant places also lead and zinc, copper, tin, boxite, cryolite, fabrics, leather, rubber, plate glass, and other materials from many lands. For instance tin comes from the Straits Settlements and Cornwall in England; Boxite from British Guiana, Cryolite from Greenland, and a particular kind of leather from Australia. This leather is used in car interiors for export trade mainly to England, India and Australia, and herein is a strange fact, for the hides are shipped from Australia, tanned in England, shipped to Canada, finished here and placed in automobiles which are then shipped to Australia where the hides came from in the first place. These cars are not sold in Canada.

As an example of the advance in motor car making the speaker mentioned the fact that a few years ago tires that would do 800 or 1,000 miles were considered good. Recently a friend of the speaker came in from a trip of 37,000 miles with only one puncture and asked if the tire firm wouldn't consider that a good advertising story. He was told that the tire manufacturers expected the tires to give that service which wasn't unusual.

Reduce Cost of Living

If as much applied effort were given to other items entering into the daily budget of the average family as is given to the automobile to bring down costs and increase service there would be no more talk about the high costs of living, said the speaker, referring to his statement that, reduced to a weight basis, the modern automobile sold for about thirty cents a pound when a woman's party dress witn little front and less back cost at least fifty dollars a pound.

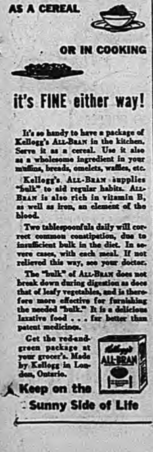
How engineering research had lowered the cost of automobiles and accessories was illustrated in various ways by the speaker, who contended that efficient progress demanded modern transportation facilities as provided by the automobile. His address was a peep behind the scenes of automobile making of great interest to Belleville Rotarians.

Past President J. O. Herity introduced the speaker and Padre Payne expressed the appreciation of the members.

Mussolini and Menelik

A three-minute talk upon war scares past and present by Rotarian Archie Cameron was very interesting and packed much valauble information into small compass, featuring the present warlike preparations of Italy against Abqssinia, the land of Ethiopia, mentioned in the Bible. The present King Haile Silassie is said to be a descendant of the Queen of Sheba who went out of her way to court King Solomon, who already had a thousand wives, and could hardly take on any more on account of the depression or what have you. However he accepted the royal visitor's gifts and entertained her in truly oriental style.

Rotarian Tom Ruston acted as Sergeant-at-arms, Sandy Burrows, song leader and Leo Riggs at the piano. President Jamieson Bone occupied the chair.



AS A CEREAL

OR IN COOKING

it's FINE either way!

It's so handy to have a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the kitchen. Serve it as a cereal. Use it also as a wholesome ingredient in your muffins, breads, omelets, waffles, etc.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also rich in vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct common constipation, due to insufficient bulk in the diet. In severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" of ALL-BRAN does not break down during digestion as does that of leafy vegetables, and is therefore more effective for furnishing the needed "bulk." It is a delicious laxative food . . . far better than patent medicines.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

QUINTE SKATERS DISPLAY ABILITY

Give Performance For Parents at Curling Club Rink

The Quinte Skating Club rooms at the Curling Club building were filled to capacity Friday evening, when parents were invited to observe the progress made in the art of figure skating during the season. After a brief programme of group and individual numbers by skaters in costume, the entire group enjoyed skating for a couple of hours. Messrs. Lorne Ridley, Bill Parker, Ed. Gartley, Jimmie Bone, Chris Lewis and Joe Shortt among others demonstrated their ability to still "cut the corners."

The ladies committee, Misses Davies, Lioence, Barlow, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Wilbur served a delightful luncheon.

Large number of hockey players and skaters enjoy the use of rink.

J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Ki-Y Hockey League reported as follows:

Bantam series (boys under 12 years), 4 teams, 40 registered players participating. Series won by "Y Preps A team".

Midget series — (boys under 15 years)—9 teams, 100 registered players—36 games played with 720 participating. Won by O.S.D.

Juvenile series—(boys under 18 years) 5 team, 60 registered players —10 matches played, 200 boys participating. Won by Roughriders.

Summary—18 teams, 200 different players, 59 matches or games played.—A total of 1160 boys in action.

Junior series—(boys under 20 years)—being played on arena, 4 teams playing with 48 registered players.

Ki-Y committee, Merle Wickett, Geo. Lee, Bill Cook, Frank Folwell, Joe Imlah and J. E. Shortt, secretary treasurer.

Stan Wilbur reported a successful season in the development of the youthful skaters with all bills and accounts paid to date. The parents were extended a hearty welcome and thanked for their interest in youth and the delightful art and pastime of skating.

Mr. Gartley replied on behalf of the parents.

THREE MONTHS FOR FRAUD

London, Ont., March 5—(CP)—William Taylor today was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail for receiving city relief, amounting to $19.50, by fraud and misrepresentation. The case was heard by Magistrate T. W. Scandrett last week when the Magistrate reserved his judgment until today.

Taylor it is alleged secured the relief during a period when he earned $135 in wages.

Tariffs, Unemployment, Farming

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—It is with much interest that I have read from time to time the letters in your paper on great problems of the day, such as Canada's National Railroad Policy and our Farm and Unemployment Problems. This man, La Rue, seems to think he has a solution for our railroad crisis and one cannot but be impressed by his earnestness though we don't agree with his ideas. He claims if we will use our own road (meaning the C.N.R., I presume) that the problem will be solved. So, Mr. Editor, I'd like to ask which is our own road. Is not the C.P.R. the foster-child of the Conservative Government of Canada and has it not been built and maintained by grants and loans reaching hundreds of millions of dollars and did not they have a tract of land given them a mile wide on each side of the roadbed all though the west, so might not we justly claim it to be our own road? And then again, suppose this man La Rue to be a grocer in Belleville depending on 100 railroad families for his business and you, sir, were a truck owner paying tremendous license fees to operate your trucks or a huge franchise to carry passengers over certain roads and a gas tax that would amount to 2 cents per mile for the larger transports and that I was a grocer in a C.P.R. terminal depending on its employees for my business and some other old gentleman had his life savings invested in C.P.R. stock, then in all fairness to all concerned may I ask which then is our own road?

So, Mr. Editor, when we see the condition of the world today due to the program of narrow nationalism carried on by the different nations we cannot help but marvel at the "God bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more" attitude of some of our people on such questions. Now the railroads have lost the short-hauling of passengers and lighter packet freight to the trucks and that's as it should be as it gives work to a greater number of men and the service is cheaper and more efficient. But that is one of the places our railroads have fallen down, for if some of our $60,000 officials had had any small amount of ability or efficiency in the capacity of their office they would have foreseen the advent of the truck and would have put out these trucks, transports, and coach lines as auxiliary services to their trunk lines instead of allowing the franchise to go to private individuals.

Another mistake of the present railroad policy is the scale of wages paid to employees who are getting today better than war-time prices. When the war broke out the cost of living advanced 100 per cent. and wages went up accordingly and rightly so and these prices held till 1930 when the slump came and then living dropped back to almost a pre-war level, at least on eatables and clothing which represent a major part of our physical needs. But not so with wages on the railroads. First came a 10 per cent. cut and then the second ten per cent. proposed cut was settled at 5 per cent. and now on the first of last January three per cent. of that five per cent. has been restored and on the first of May the other two per cent. is to be restored, so the pay they are receiving today represents much more buying power than it did in war time or any time since. But far be it from me to be envious or covetous of any man's remuneration for service so long as it does not place unjust burdens upon already overburdened and under-paid people and that is just what this does.

The last yearly report of the C. N.R. that I saw in your paper about a year ago showed a deficit of 57 million dollars and about 75 per cent. of the total cost of operation went for salaries, so a raise in pay at this time with the C.N.R. going behind a million dollars a week just means so much more national debt to be met by more taxation that always reaches the underdog most and hardest. So why the raise now? I answer, an election in the offing. Cheap politics; and I ask, Mr. Editor, why should the nationalization of a public utility such as our railroads or the Hydro Electric make of them a political football? Is it because we have too many cheap skate politicians and not statesmen? Now, sir, would it not have been better to of placed these railroad employees on half time at this splendid wage and given all the old hands a living rather than have half of them dressed in fine linen, feasting sumptuously every day while the other half lay at the rich man's gate covered with sores with only the dog licks for comfort?

Then again, Mr. Editor, I read with a great deal of satisfaction a letter by one Raymond Thompson, a youth of Prince Edward County and a son of the soil and I reverently thanked my God that our young men are seeing visions while our old men are dreaming dreams. My dear boy sure we are monarchs in our own right but don't forget that when our forefathers were driven out of Eden and told to earn their bread by the sweat of their brows tilling the soil that they might eat of its herbs and fruits ,that the ground was curried and that Grits and Tories were to grow in their fields to torment them. Now when a boy at home under his father's roof feels and writes like this boy has what about our thousands of young men started on farms with a wife and small family burdened with debts and taxes watching their investment slowly but surely slipping away from them? Is it any wonder their shoulders are stooped and their step is draggy? Oh, yes, he can apply to the Farmers' Creditor Arrangement Act for an adjustment of his debts and his friends and neighbors that have advanced him loans and the local store keeper that has carried his accounts. The bank manager that took a chance on his red-blooded Canadian manhood rather than on his assets, the doctor that soothed his family pains, the tax collector that gave him extended time, will have to stand the loss and his very soul rebels from such a measure. All he wants is a fighting chance. Will he work 8 hours a day? Yes, two shifts of it gladly.

Our young friend thinks the governments should do something but the more they have muddled in our affairs the worse off we have been. What good is the above mentioned act? The man that deserves help most is too proud and honorable to ask for it, while the spendthrift and the misfit soon take advantage of those things. 16,000 had applied up to the new year.

Our friend thinks we should produce a better type of bacon hog but did not the mass buying probe prove that about 90 per cent. of our hogs were bacon type and made Wiltshire sides and was it not revealed that our bacon in England was handled by a hog ring who were depressing the price of Canadian bacon and robbing Canadian farmers of millions of dollars and then when our choicest show hogs were bought at the fairs and processed and shipped to England what happened? Why the price had been set for the week and it brought no better price than our poorest bacon.

The Hon. Robert Weir said the other day at Ottawa that the Imperial Trade Agreements and Bennett's tariff policy had had a cash value exceeding $80,000,000 in the past two years in hog raising and dairying alone. Now I can understand how difficult it must of been to keep England from placing restrictions on our farm produce entering their markets when we had erected unsurmountable barriers against their goods coming here, but why look for credit for saving an industry that their policy had so seriously jeopardized? When, if ever, was not the British market open to our products? In the past two years we have shipped 191,232,300 pounds of bacon to England and the present price is 68-73 shillings per 112 lbs., and if the average price for the two years equalled 80 shillings per 112 pounds this amount would bring about 34½ million dollars and about half of that would reach the farmers, or $17,250,000. Then what has our cheese brought for the past two years and how our exports have fallen off, cut in two? What have our politicians to crow about? What put our hogs up to the present price?

Nothing our Government has done.

Absolutely nothing. The first raise came when the United States went off the Gold Standard and that advanced the pound sterling and our hogs jumped from 4 to 6 cents over night and the next raise came when the British parliament fixed the price of hogs between their farmers and the packers for six months in advance from time to time and so the only light we have is due to the actions of the United States and British Parliaments and not our own.

What would have been the result if Canada had gone off the Gold Standard when England did? What would it have mean to the farmers? Millions of dollars, and we represent 47 per cent. of the people of this country, but no, we were led as lambs to the slaughter by the money changers and as sheep were dumb before their shearers. Mr. Thompson feels we should wait upon our members and tell them what we want. What about the 3,000 farmers that went to Ottawa and never were granted an interview? Why should not Tummon or Weese or Dr. Embury know our needs and look after them? Is not that what we elected them for and are paying them for? What did any of them say when the Dominion Farm Loan Bill was receiving its reading? Nothing that I saw, but when the flag question was up for discussion Tummon took the stage. No, we don't need nor want any other flag but the British flag, nor do we want our markets in England jeopardized by high tariff policies and that is just what is happening. In Lloyd George's N.R.A. for England he says "If Britain had the same percentage of her workers on the land as either Germany or the United States there would be no unemployment in this island." Further, he says: "But the Dominions sternly protest their industries and the purchasing power of the colonies has not been developed to anything like the extept to which it might have been." So when England starts a landward movement our hog business will go like our wheat business has gone and our dairy business as well. Our wheat customers of a few years ago now have wheat for export and ours is rotting in the elevators. Only for the advanced hog prices of the last year or two most of our farmers would have been on the road. What of our cheese business? Many of our factories will not open next year. Has anybody heard of Dr. Embury since he was elected five years ago and what of King and his associates or has the little spark of life after the 1930 elections been crushed out of the Hepburn comedy drama? No, my boy, you can look for no succor from any of these and the more they shout their policies from the house tops and the more they make promises and break them the more confused the people become until it isn't any wonder people today are asking Pilot's question of our Lord: "What is truth?" And as the question comes to us that Peter asked his Master, "To whom shall we go, Lord", and, I, like this lad's idea of (we must organize), and that brings to my mind an organization that I read of in this paper the other day that had declared its policy at Ottawa and one clause still stands out in my mind, "Adequate minimum income for farmers as a first charge on his production." And, sir, when I read that I was so filled with hope and promise that I went in my closet and shut the door and like Daniel, with my window open, and facing eastward I knelt and quoted, "And all Israel shall be saved, as it is written. There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer." No, I don't know anything about this organization, but I think they are called the Common Clod Farmers (C.C.F.) but this policy would be a panacea for all our ills for when the farmer had money to spend the unemployment would be healed. Why, sir, there isn't enough goods in Belleville to last us a week if we had some money. We haven't bought anything scarcely for five years and our buildings need repairing and our fences and machinery are worn out and need replacing. But you say where is the money to come from for this adequate wage without being a charge on our national treasury? Why bring that up? What about the million dollars' a week charge on the national treasury to keep the railroad employees living in luxury to say nothing about the last 50 million loan to the C.P.R. to be repaid when profits warrant it? What about the millions spent for unemployment with the situation still growing worse? No, the government must not waste anything on the farmers; if they advance him a loan it's to be at 6 per cent. and money they had borrowed at 4 per cent. The 2 per cent. profit will pay for administering the Act and guard against possible losses. Sir, there isn't a farmer from Dan to Bersheba who is making even 4 per cent. on his investment. And what about the skyscraper tariffs which have allowed big business to amass huge profits at the expense of the common people who are groaning an travailing in their misery, as shown by the mass buying probe. And these tariffs were to cure the unemployment in three days and look at what has happened. The farmer has been beggared, the labor class ruined, our railroads ruined, the national debt climbing beyond all bounds and the morale of our people broken. No, Mr. Thompson, I don't believe in free trade either but reasonable protection is one thing and prohibitory tariffs is another altogether. And now we are to have Social Reform.

This country is sick from drinking water infested with tariff germs, so as a cure-all we will paint the pumps. Well Nero fiddled while Rome burned.

And now, Mr. Editor, I will close this epistle to the Children in Bondage. Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper.

Yours truly,
SIDE HILL SAM.

PROFITEERING IN SUPPLYING FOOD

many of the camps before and since taking over the department. He found they compared very well with camps he had lived and worked in many years ago in British Columbia. As to charges of profiteering he promised full investigation. Some investigation had already been made. In buying supplies it was difficult to be sure of continuity if all purchases were made from farmers in districts adjoining camps.

Discussion of camp conditions took place while Mr. Stirling's departmental estimates were before the house.

Amendments to the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act took up the rest of the sitting and almost passed through committee stage. An attempt on the part of George C. Coote (U F. A. MacLeod) to insert a clause in the act compelling a general reduction of interest rates on farm mortgages delayed approval of amendments. Mr. Coote would have had the bill provide no interest in excess of five percent could be collected on a farm mortgage.

As first presented the provision would have been retroactive to 1931 and would have made the difference between five percent and the amount charged a credit against future payments. This was ruled out of order and Mr. Coote dropped the retroactive provision. Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance said the proposed clause had no place in the bill dealing with farm debts and suggested it be considered in relation to the interest act.

Mr. Rhodes said tht act was working well and more than 1,000 settlements had already been made under it. More than 7,000 cases had been considered at some stage or other.

The fact that the deer had shed their horns the previous fall made boxing with the fore-legs necessary.

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS with Ride Stabilizer

SYNCRO-MESH ALL-SILENT SHIFTING

LONG . . . low . . . rakish . . . with brisk streamlining that gives a realistic impression of fleetness and flashing power. One look at this new Oldsmobile makes you want to drive it. Why resist the impulse? Why not slip behind the wheel of the 90-horsepower, low-priced Six, or the big, 100-horsepower Straight Eight?

You are hardly seated when you begin to realize that here is something decidedly new in automobiles. You are immediately aware of the extra roominess, of the great width of door and seat, of the richness of appointments. Now . . . engine running? You can scarcely tell, it's so quiet. Shift silently with Syncro-Mesh Transmission, and you float away from the curb on a ride that you will long remember.

Let Oldsmobile out on highway and hill. Try not to show admiration as Knee-Action "steps" you, without "jar" or "neck-snap" over the ruts of a country lane. Notice the absence of noise and vibration at all speeds. Sense the pep and smoothness of the big, dependable engine. Then, as you come to a stop, feel the equalized grip of the husky hydraulic brakes.

Yes, by all means, drive one of these new Oldsmobiles. It's a revelation of how pleasant, and comfortable, and economical, modern motoring can be. It's a convincing demonstration of the great value which has won for Oldsmobile its description as, "The Car That Has Everything".

MYSTERY UNSOLVED

London, March 5. — England's baffling "legs mystery" remained unsolved as its latest hope merely led Scotland Yard up an alley. A young English recruit in the French Foreign Legion was interviewed at Dunkirk but later Scotland Yard stated cryptically they had found he was not in a position to give any help.

OUTFITTER DIES

Montreal, March 5.—Harry K. Martin, outfitter to army officers, local police and fire department and to several public utilities companies for almost half a century, died yesterday at the central division of the Montreal General Hospital after a short illness. He was in his 78th year.

TRENT CANAL REVENUES

Ottawa, March 5—Total revenues from the Trent Canal in the five years from 1930 to 1934 inclusive amounted to $374,909, Railway Minister R. J. Manion told the House of Commons. In the last two years monies paid out in salaries, wages and work under contract totalled $348,541.

Total cost of the Trent Canal as at March 31, 1934, was $28,421,131.

A Boy Who "Bullies" Others

It's Often Necessary to "Cure Him by a Bit of His Medicine

By LISA GRENELLE

THE HOUSE master was a little man with glasses and a funny nose. And he couldn't keep order. The boys had no respect for him, and he couldn't make them. They guyed the life out of him, and if he attempted to send any of them up to the head master for retribution he was forced to send so many together that the whole thing became ludicrous.

The leader of the mischief makers was a big boy with a crude sense of humor. He thought it very funny to trip people and send them sprawling. He had tripped the little master a number of times.

Retribution

On Sunday evening when the little master was making his rounds the big boy, with a number of his cohorts, lay in wait for him by the stairs, crouching in the shadow. And as he passed they all rose and pushed against him at once so that he lost balance and went somersaulting down. All except the big boy scampered away chuckling, but he never troubled to attempt an escape, but continued to stand at the top of the stairs laughing.

The master rising, bruised and shaken, looked up and saw the boy at the head of the stairs. The sight of that grin did things to the little master that nothing had ever done to him before. He came charging up the stairs, his fists clenched. He came at the boy hard, struck out with his fist, and the boy fell. The little master didn't laugh, however. He watched the lad for a moment, noticed that he was not badly hurt, and then turned away and strode off to his room.

Drastic Measures

The boys from the dormintory, who had gathered to watch, looked after the little master with unsmiling, gaping faces. It was an awful shock to find the ineffectual little master a terrible fellow after all, who could lick Jonathan Burr.

Jonathan himself lay for a few minutes, inert, then got to his feet and limped off, a grin slowly reappearing across his blood besmirched features.

After that the little master had no more trouble. Jonathan became one of his greatest admirers, and the other boys guyed him no more. They were always a little afraid of him after that and careful not to annoy him.

Occasionally a master or a parent must beat a child at his own game to win his respect. Occasionally a group of disorderly boys can only be managed by a physical chastisement of their leader. But every other method should be tried first, I think.

ZION MISSION BAND

The Wide Awake Mission Band was held on Thursday afternoon at the school house. The meeting was opened by singing a hymn. Call to Worship period . . Miss Jean Sills president. Prayer by Miss Sheffield. Scripture lesson was taken by Miss Margaret Tufts, Mathews 21: 6-16. Memory verse by Roscoe Sine John 13: 17. Offertory Sentence was given by Miss Jean Sills Roll call was followed by a business talk. Collection was taken by Evelyn Cronkright. Donald Sills gave a reading on Japan. Maurice Sine gave a reading on Korea. Mrs. Sheffield gave a talk from the study book, "Listening In" which all enjoyed.

The meeting closed with Benedictation.

OFFICERS ABSOLVED

New York, March 5.—The local steamboat inspectors made public their findings in the Mohawk disaster of last January 24, attributing the disaster to a misunderstanding in signals and concluding with this statement:

"After considering all the testimony taken, the board finds no cause for action against any of the surviving officers of the Mohawk."

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

When love has doubts, its Happiness is clouded

It's a joyous matter to be engaged to a man with whom you are intensely in love.

Or it ought to be.

But if your adoration of your sweetheart isn't coupled with an absolute trust; if somewhere in your heart there lurks the smallest seed of suspicion, and if at the same time you are too young, too inexperienced and too loyal to be able to handle the situation you are in what then?

It goes without saying that a girl whose parents are alive and well ought never to have to concern herself with the character or past record of the man she expects to marry. Even in this indifferent and careless age, when parents become, I admit pretty nearly invisible in their daughters' universe, I cannot imagine a father's omitting the most careful investigation of a proposed son-in-law.

We can see, however what has happened in the family of "Bride-To-Be," a young correspondent who is superlatively in love, yet tortured by the secret doubt.

"My fiance is from the West," she says, "and has no immediate family. He is charming, considerate, in fact adorable. Even my parents, particularly my mother, are wild over him. Why am I not perfectly happy?

"It's just that somebody dropped a little hint about him I can't forget, yet don't dare follow up. We have accepted everything he has told us. He must be all right. I hate myself for admitting any doubt.

"But suppose I found out after marriage that he wasn't what he says he is? And let me add that my father is well to do."

It is true, I am afraid, that a man with anything at all dubious in his record always begins his courtship of a girl by ingratiating himself with her parents. If they are easily flattered, his path is clear.

This girl's parents have been bought off, so to speak, by the pleasant ways of their would-be son-in-law. But the daughter must have a brother, uncle, cousin, or reliable experienced friend. To one of these persons she must explain her predicament, for her fiance's sake as well as her own. And the wedding must not take place until that little shadow of a doubt is completely brushed away — if it can be.

Who could fail to feel a very special sympathy for this girl, who doesn't dare trust her own love or honestly believe in her own happiness, and who cannot look in her lover's handsome face without miserably wondering whether he is true or false?

Correct Manners

NO MUFF

Dear Mrs Beeckman:

1 I was under the impression that it was not proper for a lady to remove her glove when shaking hands... although correct for a man to do so I was therefore, surprised to learn from an Italian lady that it is considered necessary for a lady to remove her glove when shaking hands in Italy. What is correct here?

2 At a drawing room meeting and tea, is it correct to take your muff into the room with you, although you have removed your coat?

A.

1 In this country it is not considered necessary for a woman to remove her glove before she shakes hands. Social customs of nations vary in just such details as this. When I have visited in various countres I have tried to observe these differences, tried to figure out the whys and wherefores. But this is one that I hadn't noticed — although Italy is one of my favorite countries, and the manner in that lovely and friendly land are especially gracious. I can well understand that an Italian lady might consider that she would be paying a greater compliment to the other person if she removed her glove before shaking hands. It isn't considered necessary. Perhaps in this country sometime we may adopt this Italian lady's more exquisite point of view about this.

2 It would seem a bit forced for a woman to carry her muff into the drawing-room. But if the muff is a definite part of her ensemble, after she has removed her coat, we might let her do this, in the interest of "decorative value."

SPECIAL BIRTHDAY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to give an announcement party on your birthday? Mother is planning to announce my engagement on my birthday.

2. Should an announcement party include only special friends?

3. What if the fiance isn't in favor of it?

G.

1. It would be, to my way of thinking, an especially happy plan for your mother to have your engagement-announcement party on your birthday. It would make your birthday anniversaries hereafter even more memoried! It's entirely proper to have the announcement made on your birthday, but if you don't want this (I can't make out your wishes on the matter, from your letter), I'm sure your mother won't object to changing the date of this important announcement.

2. Yes — only relatives and close friends are invited to such an announcement-party, the ones most closely and intimately concerned.

3. I wouldn't know what to say about this — it would depend on so many things.

INVITATION NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the proper way to send an invitation to a boy friend to attend a party? I can only communicate with him by mail.

Your note might read:

Many cards of invitations to dinners mean many clothes. Most useful and serviceable is a bluish-green dress of uncrushable cut velvet with a high cowl neck in front and deep, square decolletage in back. There are self-cordings at the neckline and at the hem. A handsome buckle holds the self-belt in back. The skirt has a slight train.

It is no use being without a short fur coat or cape, if the wardrobe is to be considered complete. A delightful mink jacket has the skins worked in diagonal lines so that the points meet at the side where the coat fastens on the shoulder with one large enamel button.

How to Treat Ugly Spots On Skin

Peroxide and Lemon Solution Is Recommended for Bleaching

(The Beauty Box)

Margaret Lindsay

Her lovely complexion has been an aid to her success

By Helen Follett

It's all a dark secret about the cause of liver spots, except that they are hateful and nobody loves them. Certain chemical changes take place in the pigment of skin; just what does that has not been definitely determined.

Plastic surgeons have their own method of removing them, usually by a peeling process. Sometimes a bleach will efface them, especially if it catches them when they first appear. Since they are darker during the summer time when exposed to strong sunlight, it is taken for granted that they belong to the tan-and-freckle family.

Skins vary in texture and sensitiveness, hence it is not safe to use a strong bleach. A mild one consists of equal parts of peroxide and lemon juice. If applied for a considerable period of time will have a favorable effect upon them.

Gray hair must always be beautifully arranged. No scrambled effects for the white-crowned sisters.

If yellow streaks appear, get a bleaching bluing at the beauty shop Ordinary washing bluing is not suitable. Use a bland soap for the shampoo. Wetting white hair every day will cause discolorations. Metal curlers aren't safe.

Play a little every day. One can't carry the hod up and down the ladder all the time, and wear a bright smiling face.

If nothing else offers, dig out and trot-trot around the block. Or before the morning bath do setting up exercises. Romp with the dog or the family cherub. Jolly books are good to clear away thoughts of work and responsibilites. And one can always resort to solitaire.

Take it out on all but the coldest day. The new knits woolens are designed for all but Arctic weather. A useful sports ensemble has a dress of wool in Glenurquhart plaid in beige, blue and brown. There is a heavy beige woolen topcoat with revers of the dress fabric.

DERRY — CAVERLY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized Thursday, Feb. 28th. at the Free Methodist Parsonage at North Marmora, when Clarissa Gertrude, youngest daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Caverly, Marmora, and the late Edwin Caverly, became the bride of William Everett Derry, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Derry, Marmora. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. R. Chatson.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of powder blue, with matching accessories.

The bride was attended by Miss Alice Derry, youngest sister of the groom, while the groom was supported by Mr. Russell Wells, Marmora.

A bounteous dinner was served at the home of the bride's mother to about thirty-five guests, after which the bride and groom left by motor amid showers of confetti for a short honeymoon with friends and relatives in Prince Edward County.

Many cards of invitations to dinners mean many clothes. Most useful and serviceable is a bluish-green dress of uncrushable cut velvet with a high cowl neck in front and deep, square decolletage in back. There are self-cordings at the neckline and at the hem. A handsome buckle holds the self-belt in back. The skirt has a slight train.

It is no use being without a short fur coat or cape, if the wardrobe is to be considered complete. A delightful mink jacket has the skins worked in diagonal lines so that the points meet at the side where the coat fastens on the shoulder with one large enamel button.

How to Treat Ugly Spots On Skin

Peroxide and Lemon Solution Is Recommended for Bleaching

(The Beauty Box)

Margaret Lindsay

Her lovely complexion has been an aid to her success

By Helen Follett

It's all a dark secret about the cause of liver spots, except that they are hateful and nobody loves them. Certain chemical changes take place in the pigment of skin; just what does that has not been definately determined.

Plastic surgeons have their own method of removing them, usually by a peeling process. Sometimes a bleach will efface them, especially if it catches them when they first appear. Since they are darker during the summer time when exposed to strong sunlight, it is taken for granted that they belong to the tan-and-freckle family.

Skins vary in texture and sensitiveness, hence it is not safe to use a strong bleach. A mild one consists of equal parts of peroxide and lemon juice. If applied for a considerable period of time will have a favorable effect upon them.

Gray hair must always be beautifully arranged. Na scrambled effects for the white-crowned sisters.

If yellow streaks appear, get a bleaching bluing at the beauty shop Ordinary washing bluing is not suitable. Use a bland soap for the shampoo. Wetting white hair every day will cause discolorations. Metal curlers aren't safe.

Play a little every day. One can't carry the hod up and down the ladder all the time, and wear a bright smiling face.

If nothing else offers, dig out and trot-trot around the block. Or before the morning bath do setting up exercises. Romp with the dog or the family cherub. Jolly books are good to clear away thoughts of work and responsibilites. And one can always resort to solitaire.

Weddings

DERRY — CAVERLY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized Thursday, Feb. 28th, at the Free Methodist Parsonage at North Marmora, when Clarissa Gertrude, youngest daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Caverly, Marmora, and the late Edwin Caverly, became the bride of William Everett Derry, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Derry, Marmora. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. R. Chatson.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of powder blue, with matching accessories.

The bride was attended by Miss Alice Derry, youngest sister of the groom, while the groom was supported by Mr. Russell Wells, Marmora.

A bounteous dinner was served at the home of the bride's mother to about thirty-five guests, after which the bride and groom left by motor amid showers of confetti for a short honeymoon with friends and relatives in Prince Edward County.

A close harmony exists between black and brown, while red and brown are also together a great deal. One of the smartest coats of the season is in a heavy nubbed red tweed and it has a huge inverted yoke and collar of beaver. The collar is faced with the fabric of the coat and can be so worn, if desired.

Prince For Hollywood

A real genuine, honest-to-goodness prince is going to join the Hollywood toilers. Sigvard of Sweden, who has called himself plain Mr. Bernadotte since he was disowned by his uncle, King Gustav, for marrying an actress, is on his way to the cinema city with his bride. They're shown.

Claudette Colbert, Nero's alluring queen, tempts Frederic March, Prefect of Rome, with her beauty in "The Sign of the Cross" coming to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

WAR PADRE HONORED

Halifax, March 5 — Archdeacon Frederick George Scott, C.M.G., D.S.O., of Quebec, had another honor added to his already long list over the week-end when he was declared the 27th fellow of the Haliburton Club of King's College. The famous war-time padre was nominated by Dr. A. H. Moore, president of King's and vice-president of the club and after his election he read some of his poems and told how they came to be written.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Sign of The Cross"

Cecil B. DeMille's Stupendous Spectacle Returns By Popular Request Tomorrow Only

Spectacle upon spectacle, magnificence outdoing itself—Cecil B. DeMille's "The Sign of The Cross" comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for a return engagement, bringing with it a vivid picture of pagan Rome in all its glory.

Here is unfolded the whole pageant of Rome in the time of Nero—at once the most dissolute and the most colorful period in Roman history. Here is the dramatic contrast between the palaces of the patrician Romans and the humble, hidden abodes of the early Christians—on the one hand the wicked Empress Poppaea in her luxurious bath of asses' milk; on the other, the Christian girl, Mercia, ministering to the tortured and hunted among the people of her faith.

And here, as a climax to the whole spectacle, is the Circus Maximus with its gladiatorial combats, its wrestling matches between black men and bears or crocodiles, its battles between Amazons and dwarfs, its chariot races, and its featured event—the feeding of the Christians to the lions. Here, in short, is an unforgettable panorama of an age of blood and licentiousness and passion and majesty.

One more, as in the days of "The Ten Commandments" and "King of Kings," enormous crowds mill before the camera, and once more, DeMille proves himself the undisputed master of crowd effects. The street scenes and the scenes laid in the Circus Maximus are masterpieces of mob excitement.

In its cast, too, "The Sign of The Cross" merits extravagant praise. It is difficult to imagine a more perfect Nero than Charles Laughton's. The manner in which this young Englishman portrays the cruelty, the lewd madness of Nero and yet maintains an absolute semblance of reality, is little short of miraculous. It is a performance that will go down on the screen role of honor.

As the cruel sensualist, Poppaea, Claudette Colbert is also responsible for a performance of unusual brilliance. Elissa Landi rises to new and unexpected heights of emotional acting as the Christian, Mercia, and Fredric March surpasses anything he has ever done for the screen as the favorite of Nero's court, Marcus Superbus, whose love for the Christian girl proves stronger than tradition, wealth, position, or even life.

This is positively your last chance to see again or for the first time this gigantic and never-to-be-forgotten masterpiece.

Shows at 2.30; 7.15; 9.15.

"Charlie Chan in Paris"

Latest and Best "Chan" Film—Warner Oland, Chinese Sleuth in New Mystery

The seventh screen appearance of Warner Oland as the inimitable Charlie Chan takes place today at the Belle Theatre, where Fox Film's latest contribution to this absorbing series, "Charlie Chan in Paris", will make its bow to Belleville and vicinity audiences.

Philip MacDonald, who has succeeded the late Earl Derr Biggers as creator of adventures for the wily Chinese sleuth, has written the script of "Charlie Chan in Paris", immediate successor in the series to his own "Charlie Chan in London," which met with great success last autumn.

In the last-named film, MacDonald brought a refreshing new slant to screen mysteries. Now, according to advance reports, he tops that achievement with this new Parisien exploit for Chan. One unique angle of the present story is the presence of Chan's son among the characters. Lee Chan, played by the talented Chinese actor, Keye Luke, joins the father in tracking down one of the most baffling murder and bond forgeries ever perpetrated in fiction.

Warner Oland once more contributes his outstanding talents to the role of Chan. Preview audiences in Hollywood are said to have hailed his latest characterization as the finest of the series.

Mary Brian heads the supporting cast and other players are Thomas Beck, new Fox film "discovery", just imported from the Broadway stage; Erik Rhodes, John Miljan, Murray Kinnell, Minor Watson, John Qualen, Henry Kolker, Dorothy Appleby, Ruth Peterson and Perry Ivens.

New George Brent Film

"The Right to Live" Warner Bros., dynamic drama of triangular love under the most unusual circumstances is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

It is the story of two brothers, who love the same woman who is the wife of one. The husband, crippled for life by an airplane crash, asks his brother to escort his wife about so that she will not be deprived of all the joys of life.

Love springs up between these two young people from the constant contact, and although they fight against it, nature is too strong for them. The husband, his eyes opened to the situation, makes a sacrifice that is as startling as it is dramatic.

Other intense scenes occur between the two lovers, torn between the call of young love and the stern demands of duty; and the final great climax where the wife is accused of the murder of her husband in order to elope with the brother. There is a talented all-star cast, including Josephine Hutchison last seen in "Happiness Ahead", George Brent, Colin Clive, Peggy Wood, of musical comedy fame, Henrietta Crosman, and C. Aubrey Smith. The Belle latest news flashes will be exhibited on the same program.

"Charlie Chan" will be presented at 2.40, 7.20 and 9.50. "Right to Live" at 8.20.

CHIEF JUSTICE HOLMES IS SINKING RAPIDLY

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Former United States Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was sinking rapidly today and his death was believed to be a matter of hours.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—The interlisted group led the market to a lower level today, reflecting the bearish tone of the New York market. Distillery issues were off fractions ti a full point, Walker's common taking the main drop, oils were on the soft side, Ford A, Brazilian and Nickel fell back and C.P.R. at 10 1-2 was within 1-8 of its low mark for 1934.

About the same degree of weakness appeared in the steel, food and miscellaneous groups, Dominion Stores lost a half point, influenced perhaps by the reduction in sales volume.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 5.—(CP)—The mining list was sold active today from the opening and up till early afternoon had developed no recovery movement of importance. Prices stiffened to some extent during the morning after the first wave of selling but failed to get up very far and weakness was more in evidence than strength in the early afternoon Losses up to 2.5$ in the high price group were boarded.

Hollinger was sold actively for a loss of 75 cents to 17.50 while Lake Shore lost 1.50 and McIntyre on only a few sales dropped 2.50. A drop in the price of gold in London appeared to be the source of the weakness though a rise in sterling just about equalized the gold loss. McWatters churned about in heavy volume and was holding around 1.50 at mid-afternoon, off 5 cents.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, March 5—(AP)—Selling flruries today jolted the stock market out of its recent calm. Losses of 1 to around 3 points predominated.

Pound sterling rallied briskly and the London gold price was reduced.

Canadian Pacific and International Nickel were only fractionally lower.

On the curb, Hiram Walker yielded a point and Lake Shore Mines was down nearly 2. Dominion government 4s were off 3-8 of a point at 105 1-2. Canadian funds rallied 1-16 of a cent to 99 1-8 cents.

Shares of Celanese dropped some 4 points, and U. S. Smelting, Case and Delaware and Hudson yielded abcut 3 each. Among others, down 1 to around 2 were U.S. Steel, Industrial Rayon, Bethlehem Steel, American Rolling Mill, Goodyear, Chrysler, Du Pont, American Can, Westinghouse, Loew's, National Distillers, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, United Corp. Preferred, American Smelting, Howe Sound and Cerro De Pasco.

LIQUOR AND BEER SALES UP 19.8P.C. REPORT IS TABLED

ers approximated $65,000.

The number of liquor stores remained unchanged from the previous year's total of 124. Number of brewers' warehouses, however, was increased by one to 103.

During the past year 15,500 tons of grapes were used in the emanufacture of wine, concentrates and grape juice. The 1933-34 period was the second year in which manufacture of grape concentrates has been carried on and the tonnage increased to 2,470 tons from 862.25 tons in 1932-33.

Fewer Liquor Permits

Total sales of native wine registered an increase in 1933-34. The previous year the total was 2,440,314 gallons and last year it reached 2,810,531 gallons.

There were fewed liquor permits issued in 1933-34, the report notes. The total fell from 214,656 in 1932-33 to 188,300 during the past year.

On Aug. 1 the Board authorized the special permit, known as the single purchase permit, which enabled the holder to make one purchase of spirits of not more than 12 bottles. During the three months this was in existence there were 77,602 of them sold.

During the year there were 2,091 permits cancelled.

WESTERN CURLERS SUFFER DEFEAT

First Time in History of Brier Competition Such Has Happened

Granite Club, Toronto, March 5—(CP)—For the first time in the history of the Macdonald Brier competition, all Western rinks were defeated in one round today as eight of the strongest curling clubs in Canada began the struggle for Dominion honors.

The highlight of the first round's play today was the defeat of Roy Pritchard's rink from Killarney, Man., who were overcome 13-6 by Ontario's strong quartette from the Hamilton Thistle Club. It was the first time a Manitoba Club has been defeated in the competition since the playoffs against Ontario for second place in 1933, also against the Thistles.

Will Reduce O.A.C. To Advisory Board

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—The Ontario Athletic Commission is to be reduced to the status of an Advisory Committee and the work it formerly carried out will be under the direction of the Department of Health.

Hon. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, announced today he would introduce a bill in the Legislature shortly to effect this transfer. The Minister said the Commission would not disappear but its members would serve in an advisory capacity.

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn stated revenues from athletic events would henceforth be paid into the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Province.

The Commission was reorganized last fall with Dr. Faulkner as chairman following a dispute concerning the award of a wrestling contract to the Orpen interests in Toronto.

Beach is Too Rough For Speed Over 270

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 5. (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell believes unless conditions change suddenly and radically for the better, he won't be trundling Bluebird out on Daytona's sands again to try for the world automobile speed record until March 15th at the earliest.

"It's impossible to attempt speeds above 270 miles on hour with the Beach in its present condition," he said.

EVA COO PLEADS DEATH ACCIDENTAL

ALBANY, N.Y., March 5.—(AP)—Eva Coo, native of Haliburton, Ont., and roadhouse proprietor, sentenced to death for the insurance plot killing of her handyman, Harry Wright, has asked the New York Court of Appeals to reverse her conviction on the ground Wright was the victim of an accident.

One of her objections is that Harry Nabenger, friend of Mrs. Coo, had not told the court all he knew.

Grave Robber, Slayer Grins on Gallows

Cleveland, Miss., March 5.—(AP)—Grinning broadly as the black hood and noose were pulled over his head, Alonzo Robinson, alias James H. Coyner, huge negro grave robber and confessed slayer, went to his death on the gallows early today.

He died for the slaying and mutilation of Mrs. Aurelius B. Turner, who with her husband, was hacked to death in their home near here last December.

ACTION TAKEN BY COUNCIL

heard there was some difficulty over senior baseball in this city and that two factions were interested, but he was in sympathy with those, who had fostered the team for years, but if there was a chance of consolidation, the grant should go to those in charge of senior baseball. The council agreed to this proposition. Aldermen Cushing and Thompson were also in favor of the grant and hoped, that real support would be given the sponsors.

Mr. Carr called inside the railing, outlined the baseball situation since the close of last season to the members of the council, stating he was elected president at the annual meeting and that three days later, Mr. Rowsome is alleged to have said "that his employees could not play senior ball as it took them away from their work for too long periods.". "I immediately got in touch with Mr. Rowsome", said Mr. Carr, "and explained to him, that I wanted to see a good senior ball team in Belleville and that if I was standing in the way, I would call a meeting and resign and explain to the citizens the situation and elect a new board, "with officers being chosen from the Stewart-Warner-Alemite". Mr. Rowsome at that time congratulated me and offered me financial help and in January informed me again, that the Alemite was going to play Intermediate "A" ball as the players would not have such long jumps and be away from their work for too long a period. I again wrote to Mr. Rowsome, hoping that some arrangement could be made to have a good senior ball team and later he called me up and stated he was not interested in senior ball".

Visit of Lee Recalled

Continuing Mr. Carr told the members," that Mr. Lee came to town and after talking over the proposition went to see Mr. Rowsome but again was told, that he was not interested. On Wednesday last, I again called Mr. Rowsome explained the time was getting short and he informed me he would let me know definitely on Friday his attitude in the matter but I waited all day for a telephone call or letter, but received neither. I think I was being kept on the spot till the 15th of the month, which is the deadline to bring in players, but I decided to go ahead with my executive and I can tell you, that we will have a smart team. "Peeney" Mills has decided to come back for one more year and I have also secured positions for three boys and two more will be placed. The boys I am bringing to this city are all young and will be a credit to the team and to the city".

Alderman McCreary asked "if the Parks Board exacted a commission from the ball team for playing their games in the park? and was informed, that the club paid 15 per cent. The council were agreed, that the commission should not be collected and passed a recommendation, "that the Parks Commission forego any share in gate receipts of senior baseball in 1935".

Mayor Reynolds of Kingston, addressed a letter to the council respecting the securing of cheaper money from the banks and the council authorized the concurrence in the letter. The council also concurred in a resolution, that war pensioner's children receive allowance until eighteen years of age, instead of 16, due to the strenuous times of the present. An advertisement of a full page in the "Elevator", the Collegiate publication was ordered the amount to be $15.00. The Canadian Legion was granted the use of the auditorium free of charge on March 19th., when an open meeting of the veterans will be held at which A. A. Robinson of the Provincial Command will be the speaker.

Two by-laws were passed, one dealing with the licence for slot machines and the other to declare vacant the position of City Street surveyor, caused by the resignation of Mr. J. S. Henderson, a post held by him for 22 years. The licence for a slot machine was set at $100. and for a pin machine $25.00 and infractions of the by-law from $10 to $50. Licences must be secured from the City Treasurer.

AS VENIZELOS MAKES BID FOR POWER IN GREECE

Annual Report of Goodyear Company Of Canada Ltd.

Profits, Surplus, Reserves Are up— Liquid Position is Strong

Toronto, March 5—An increase of $51,359.30 in net profits, an increase of $181,514.39 in the earned surplus, increased reserves, an excellent ratio of assets to liabilities, and a strong liquid position were shown in the statement of The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada, Limited, and subsidiary companies, for the year ending December 31st, 1934, presented by the president, C. H. Carlisle, at the annual meeting Monday.

Current working assets, with well balanced inventories entered at considerably below market price, stood at $10,185,547.19, as against current liabilities of $402,048.19, and cash on hand alone was over twice the liabilities. Net current assets or working capital, after deducting all current liabilities, and tax reserves, was $9,783,498.98. A reduction of $404,561.59 in working capital was occasioned by the redemption of the Goodyear Cotton Company's bonds amounting to $769,000.00 (par value) in February. As a result of this action none of the Goodyear Companies now has any bonded indebtedness, and a saving of $46,140.00 per annum in fixed charges has been effected.

Profits for the year, after charging all manufacturing, selling and administrative expenses and income taxes, but before providing for depreciation, were $2,028,310.02. Depreciation allowance was $599,474.13, leaving a net profit of $1,428,835.89, an increase of $51,359.30 over the net profit for 1933. Dividends of $504,171.50 on Preferred Stock and $643,150.00 on Common Stock were paid during the year. The balance added to the surplus of $7,740,187.32 carried forward from the previous year, gave a total surplus as at December 31st, 1934, of $7,921,701.71. Preferred Shares redeemed amounted to $59,800.00; expenditure on plant and equipment $413,814.53; special provision for Employees' Pension Fund, $100,000; increase in deferred charges $1,757.46. The accumulated reserve for depreciation is now $6,611,241.96. The net book value of plant and buildings is 44.75% of the gross book value, and the net book value of the manufacturing equipment of the rubber plants 18.47 percent of the gross.

The balance sheet shows a decrease in cash, call loans and Government bonds from $6,943,614.79 to $5,168,798.75. Cash decreased $320,253.01 from $1,203,104.47 to $882,851.46; call loans and government bonds at cost or market were down $1,454,563.03 to $4,285,947.29; accounts receivable less reserve for bad and doubtful accounts were up $85,364.97 to $1,552,945.01; inventories at cost or market, increased $1,150,233.02 to $3,463,803.41; making total current assets $10,185,547.17, or $499,218.05 less than at the end of 1933. As against these current liabilities totalled $402,048.19, a decrease for the year of $94,656.46. Net working capital was therefore $9,783,498.98, a decrease of $404,561.59.

The statement includes the profit on export business for 1933 but does not take into account the accrued profits on export business for 1934, which are estimated at about $300,000.00.

President's Works

"Thomse who are forceful in the condemnation of private industry, are usually persons who have produced nothing, employed no one and contribute little, if anything to society or government, and are usually self interested and seek their gains through politics" declared C. H. Carlisle, President.

"It is this class of inexperienced and selfish persons who would run your business and confiscate your property. The demagogues' arguments in favor of socialism are plausable, but he has never proven the soundness of those arguments by results. Controlled industry and public ownership may appeal to those who are not experienced or who have not made a careful study, but the results have not been beneficial, our public owned railroad has been costing you about one hundred million per year, our much cherished Ontario Hydro Electric System, which has been considered as the criterion of public ownership is now, according to the press, condemned by the Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney General, as being operated in the most inefficent manner, its losses great and its financial structure in danger. It would likely be informative to you, it you were to study the period of the last one hundred and fifty years and to ascertain the results of public ownership and socialism on the one hand and private ownership on the other hand, compare the results as to how they affect the welfare of all our people."

Discussing the company's strong financial position, Mr. Carlisle said this was due to fact that for seventeen years there was only one six percent cash dividend paid to common stock holders, the earnings being retained to strengthen the company. In 1921 and 1922 when business almost collapsed, when employment and wages were reduced, dvidends were suspended. The company has done an export business in 87 countries, bringing many millions to Canada and giving continous employment to Canadian labor.

Shareholders

The Company's wealth, said Mr. Carlisle, belonged only to a very small extent to its directors. In the main it belonged to its 3,488 shareholders, 3,450 of whom were Canadian citizens or Canadian residents scattered from coast to coast. The money paid in dividends was only a just return on capital invested and the risk of investment, and it found its way through every branch or industry and national activity. The company's status had not been attained by those responsible for management and operations limiting themselves to a thirty six hour week.

It had required long hours, constant thought, constant responsibility and personal sacrifice.

"Viewing the position of your company" said Mr. Carlisle, "You may conclude your investment is safe that you will receive an adequate return and be able to convert it readily into cash. I am not so sure that these conditions exist or will continue to exist. The security of your investments appears to rest largely in control of your transitory governments. The money you invested in this company some years ago is now worth sixty percent of what it then was. Your taxes last year were 16.09 percent of your domestic sales. You have no assurance that this rate will not be increased until it absorbs all the earnings of your company or that it may not go further and impair your capital. Our staggering government debt of over $7,000,000,000 is increasing yearly by $175,000,000. If these debts are to be paid, the burden is yours. You will pay either through higher taxes or the devaluation of your money. You likely agree with me that our present debt does not exist through necessity. If this be true who is to blame? May I say you are the ones to blame. You who are responsible citizens, you who know, you who are responsible as to who small govern, you who pay the cost of government. The present adverse conditions exist through your inactivity. They can only be remeder by our activity and your constructive effort. Is not our personal welfare and that of your community a just demand on you to give your best efforts to a betterment of conditions. Conditions in this country will improve only when a high percentage of our individuals demand improvement and will aid in doing the things essential to improvement."

FARMERS BENEFITING

Brookville, March 5.— Farmers from the Winchester district are finding a market for their surplus hay in northern New York in view of the shortage of feed in that area Truckloads of baled hay are crossing the St. Lawrence at Ogdensburg bound for farms in the surrounding sections. Ordinarily, there is a duty of $5 per ton upon hay entering the United States but, owing to the smallness of the 1934 crop, a special U. S. customs order permits importation duty free when the hay is for a farmer's personal use, and when a permit has been obtained from the county farm bureau agent.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ARE HIGHER

Quebec, March 5.—The number of contagious diseases showed an increase last month compared with February of last year. The total according to statistics furnished by Dr. V. Martin, head of the health department, reached 131 against 113 for the same month last year.

MIDDLEWEIGHT?

Vancouver, March 5—Jimmy McLarnin, the golfer, admits that Jimmy McLarnin, the world's welterweight champion, may take a shot at the middelweight title next.

Interviewed between shots on the golf links—where he spends most of his time these days—Jimmy talks like this:

"Yes, I'll probably move up to the middleweight division." Pause while Jimmy sinks a fairish putt.

"It's getting tougher all the time to keep down to 147 pounds" Jimmy tees up. "I can do it all right, and will do it if there's another bout with Barney Ross. But there's nobody else in sight." Biff—a 175-yard drive speeds away.

"Yes, Pop Foster is in New York now looking into the possibilities of a middleweight title bout"—this over Jimmy's shoulder as he strides down the fairway.

"Well, Barney Ross held two titles for a little while; why shouldn't I?"

FRANKFORD

GALA CARNIVAL WELL ATTENDED

Quinte Skating Club Delights Spectators With Exhibition

Frankford—A most successful carnival was held in the arena on Friday evening. Despite the zero weather a good crowd was present to witness the performance of the evening.

Reeve D. R. Ketcheson gave a few remarks at the opening thanking those present for their loyal support. The Quinte Skating Club of Belleville for over an hour, gave an excellent exhibition of fancy skating, waltzing, solos, etc., to the music of the Frankford Band. Mr. J. Murphy gave an exhibition of barrel jumping and the clown kept the crowd in an uproar of laughter. The solo skating of our own local boy, Elmer Finnegan, brought round after round of applause. After the judges had completed their difficult task of choosing the winers of the prizes—of fancy dress skaters, the members of the skating club and others were entertained to a hot supper in the I.O.O.F. Hall.

Prizes were awarded as follows:

Ladies Fancy Dress—1st, Miss Anita Finnegan; 2nd, Miss Aileen Hoag. Ladies Comic Dress, 1st, Miss Ruby Hadley; 2nd, Miss Pearl Powell. Girls Fancy Dress, 1st, Miss Marie McCauley, 2nd, Miss Helen Armstrong; Girls Comic Dress, 1st, Miss Dorothy Lawrence; 2nd, Miss Erma Smith. Gents Fancy Costume, 1st, Mr. Fred Elgie; 2nd, Mr. Hugh Simmons. Gents Comic Costume, 1st, Mr. Ray Turley; 2nd, Mr. Frank Philips. Boys Fancy Costume, 1st, Billie Madill; 2nd, Reginald Frost. Boys Comic Costume, 1st, Geo. Christopher; 2nd Edward Turley.

Prizes were also won by Bernice Turley and Teresa MacEvoy. The prizes were donated by the merchants of the village.

The Rebecca Lodge gave an afternoon card party on Wednesday and served a delicious lunch at the close. Mrs. Ray Turley was the lucky recipient of first prize.

The annual banquet and ladies night was held on February 21st in the Oddfellow's hall under the auspices of Frankford Lodge A. F. and A. M. The hall was gaily decorated for the occasion and after justice was done to the good things provided, the programme was opened by the chairman G. N. Spencer, W.M., who gave a short address. Mr. Frank Wessels of Wooler led in community singing. Mr. and Mrs. Austin gave several orchestral selections, and Mr. Joe Gossens, an old favorite in Frankford gave three vocal solos. Toasts to the ladies and visitors were replied to by Rev. A. S. McConnel. Rev. Mr. Poulter and Mr. W. Barlow and Mr. Frank Wessels. Mr. W. C Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, D.D.G.M., of Prince Edward District gave a short address. At the conclusion of the program Auld Lang Syne was sung.

A dance was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 21, in the Parish Hall, sponsored by Mr. Cecil Frost and Gerald Chapman. Mr. Gordon Orr, accompanied by Miss Marion Wanamaker furnished the music for the evening.

A shower was held at Mr. Albert Caskey's for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Osterhout, who lost their home by fire. Neighbors and friends gathered to render their sympathy in tangible form and a goodly number of gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Osterhout.

On Feb. 25 League was held in the United Church. Opened by hymn 114, followed by Lord's Prayer in unison. Minutes of last meeting were read and a group discussion was held.

Miss Freda Rogers had charge of the program as follows:

Hymn 68.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Lane.

Scripture Reading by Edna Johnson.

Explanation of scripture, Kathleen Hibbert.

Reading by Lucy Ferguson.

Piano Solo—Miss Foster.

Topic—Mr. Bell.

Benediction.

A dance was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 28 in Community Hall by the Frankford Band. The Ambassadors of Belleville furnished the music.

Leavens Brothers were at the Iroquois Gardens on the Stirling Road on Sunday afternoon and made many trips into the air. They have an enviable record of having never had a mishap in their flights.

Mrs. G. E. Sine has returned from a most enjoyable trip to Rochester and other points.

Mr. Arnold Stickle has had blood poisoning in his arm.

Several from this town are suffering from a mild attack of the flu.

Mr. Chas. Dewes expects to leave shortly on a trip to England. Mr. Dewes has been making his home for the last year or more with Dr McMullen.

Triple Group meeting was held at Mrs. Clayton Powell's on Friday, March 1st.

Miss Eva Harrison spent Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hadley.

Mr. J. M. Bell is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bell and Mr. J. M. Bell were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McKee on the occasion of their 32nd wedding anniversary, February 28th.

Police are searching for the slayer or slayers of Abner Abraham Appleby, proprietor and manager of the Roxy theatre, Toronto, whose body with two bullet wounds in the back of the head was found lying face down Sunday afternoon in his small office in the theatre. Robbery apparently was the motive for the murder as some $376 receipts from the Saturday night show, was removed from the safe. The killers in their haste overlooked $52 in the murdered man's pockets, a $2000 stick pin in his tie and $75 dollars in silver in the safe.

While the body of Appleby lay in the office, a Chinese play by members of the Chinese Free Masons went on in the theatre below.

In the above layout are shown the scene and principals in the murder mystery taken by a photographer shortly after the discovery of the body. (1) Abner A. Appleby, the slain main. (2) Roy Wong, member of the Chinese Free Masons, who together with Murray Latofsky (4), son-in-law of Appleby, discovered the body. Wong had become worried about the Chinese play to be presented when he called and found the office and theatre locked. (3) The interior of the office with its looted safe, showing the small window through which Wong gained access to discover the murder. (5) A. Applebaum, brother-in-law of the dead man. (6) Misses Bert Percy, LEFT, and Betty Appleby, nieces of the murdered theatre owner and cashiers at the Roxy, who state a letter was taken from the files a week ago. (7) Willie Yee, Chinese doorkeeper while the Chinese play was in progress, who admitted the police and took them to the office, the scene of the crime.

bec, in 1924. It offered $15 a horsepower for Quebec power.

Mr. Price's Reply

Col. Price was replying to a charge made by Mr. Roebuck last week, that negotiations for Quebec Power did not start until after Sir Adam Beck's death in 1925, and such action was a "betrayal" of the Hydro Knight's power policy.

The Commission meeting Col. Price referred to was held on May 20, 1929, to consider a report Mr. Gaby had submitted two day's previously. It dealt with the future supply of the Nigara system, estimated an increased load of 850,000 horsepower would be required by 1936, and favored purchasing power from Eastern Canada rather than erecting steam plants.

Mr. Gaby, according to the minutes, to which the report was attached, said the report had the endorsation of all the associated engineers. It suggested acceptance of the Beauharnois and James MacLaren power contracts and the purchase of the Carillon Power site.

In the minutes it was recorded four Hydro engineers, T. H. Hogg, E. T. J. Brandon, Don Carlos and R. T. Jeffrey also urged the Commission should acquire the O'Brien properties on the Madewaska and Bonnechere Rivers. the Dominion Power and Transmission Company's properties and the Canadian Niagara Power Company "on the broad grounds of a sound provincial policy."

Following a question by the former Attorney-General', Mr. Roebuck said all the engineers concurred in was the mathematical calculation.

"I'm glad to have the Attorney-General pinned down to something." Col. Price replied. He added he was glad to be able to tell the House that the records of the Commission show the engineers did concur in the recommendations of the report.

Asked by Leopold Macaulay Conservative member for South York whether he had read the minutes, Mr. Roebuck replied he read the last paragraph.

Mr. Nixon Challenged

Earlier in the debate Col. Price demanded the government explain why, if it considered the Quebec Power purchase contracts illegal, it allowed the $6,000,000 bond issue of the MacLaren Quebec Company to be put on the market last fall.

Additional exchanges yesterday followed discussion of the motion of W. D. Black, (Cons. Addington) for amending the representation Act to change the name of his riding to Addington-Frontenac because most of that county was included in it.

During the discussion the intimation came from Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, the government contemplates a new representation Act before the next Provincial general election.

Mr. Nixon told Mr. Black he could have effected the name change had he so desired, when the present representation Act was being framed.

That caused Leopold Macaulay to rise and state he was going to tell for the first time what happened when the Act was being drafted. It was a compromise measure and received the unanimous support of the legislature.

"My friend (Mr. Nixon) liked the geographical look of the riding of Brant after it was changed," he went on.

"I challenge him to bring down a bill, that will have the unanimous consent of this House because you can't be fair enough to do it."

COST OF CLEANING

London, March 5—A rate of one cent a foot frontage will be on the 1935 tax bills to cover the cost of cleaning unpaved streets in 1934. The total cost was $4,321.82 of which $1,056.38 is being paid by the city, leaving $3,169 to be assessed against the property owners.

The cost of oiling unpaved streets was $10,955.22. This is divided $2,728 to the general tax rate and $8,216.42 to local improvement taxes. The rate for streets requiring heavy oil will be 6 cents a foot and for those requiring light oil, 3 cents a foot.

921 TRANSIENTS IN YEAR

London, March 5—Only 921 transients sought a night's lodging at the King Street police station during the past year as compared to 1,241 during 1933, and 1,699 during 1932.

The peak year was reached in 1931 when the register at the police station was filled with 1,782 names which was 39 more than during 1900. In 1929 there were only 832.

Loyalists

Who were the Loyalists of the American Revolution? How are they ascertained? These are two questions that are occasionally asked.

During February the radio and the press have dealt fully with Washington and Lincoln. It may not be amiss now to refer to things Canadian.

Prior to the Declaration of Independence on the 4th of July 1776, undoubtedly the majority of the residents of the Thirteen colonies were loyal to Great Britain in sentiment.

At the Continental Congress at Philadelphia in June 1776 the vote on separation was a tie. At the adadjourned meeting July 4th, 1776, the vote was one majority in favor of separation, following which the vote was made unanimous.

This close vote no doubt reflected the sentiment of the people. In 1775 the Continental Congress declared, that there was no truth in the assertion that the people of the colonies as a whole desired separation. After the war started the sentiment changed considerable in favour of separation and after the battle of Yorkton in 1782, which was really won by the French, the sentiment became much stronger in favour of separation, and in 1783 Great Britain consented to the separation. Dr. Canniff says some 20,000 Loyalists poured into the colony of Quebec, which then included what is now Ontario. Van Tyne, a U. S. historian places the number at 25,000 and also estimates the total migration to all British territory at about 60,000.

After the constitution of the United States was adopted in 1787 those who remained in the new republic became citizens of it, and could no longer be regarded as Loyalists whatever their earlier sentiments might have been. The Loyalists, who came to this country may be divided under six general heads.

1. The unity of Empire Loyalists or Mark of Honor Loyalists constituted under the order-in-council passed by Lord Dorchester at Quebec on the 9th of November 1789. These comprised persons who had joined the Royal Standard prior to the close of the revolution and after the revolution came to this country, including their descendants. Membership in this class does not depend on registration under the Land Boards as that registration was primarily for the purpose of acquiring land. In those days as there were no roads, travel through the bush was exceedingly difficult or impossible. and travel by water was also difficult because of the absence of supply of lumber and nails with which to construct boats, and writing material was almost unprocurable, consequently many of these Loyalists never registered, only about 7,000 registered with the Land Boards. Some 5,000 filed claims with the Royal Commission many of whom had already registered with the Land Boards.

2. An order was passed by Colonel John Graves Simcoe, Lieutenant Governor in Council on the 6th of April 1796 extending the time for registration.

3. On the 31st of October 1806 Francis Gore, Lieutenant Governor in Council had an order passed extending the time for registration for land to the quartersessions at Michaelmass. In none of these orders were the words "United Empire Loyalists" used.

4. The Royal Commission Loyalists. The British Government in July 1783 appointed a Royal Commission to hear claims of the Loyalists of the American Revolution for compensation. The Commission classified the Loyalists under six different classes as follows:

a. Those who had rendered ser-

a. those who had rendered services to Great Britain.

b. Those who had borne arms against the revolution.

c. Uniform Loyalists.

d. Loyalists resident in Great Britain.

e. Those who took the oath of allegiance to American states but afterwards joined the British.

f. Those who took arms with the Americans and later joined the English army and navy.

None of these were called "United Empire Loyalists."

5. On the 27th of May 1914 the Dominion Parliament passed a statute incorporating the United Empire Loyalists Association of Canada. This was the first occasion when the words "United Empire Loyalists were used legally, and this statute extended the term to include "the descendants of those families, who during the American Revolutionary war of 1775 to 1793 sacrificed their homes in retaining their Loyality to the British Crown."

6. The name "United Empire Loyalist" had been used by writers and speakers prior to this date, but up to this time the term had never received recognition as a matter of law.

METROPOLITAN LIFE BUSINESS SHOWS GROWTH

Insurance in Force Increased—Welfare Work Benefits Policyholders

A highly satisfactory record for 1934 and the maintenance of a strong financial position are revealed by the 68th annual report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company just released. A substantial increase in assets to the extent of $170,346,960 was shown and total life insurance in force was materially increased, while policy loans receded to the predepression level. The value of the Company's health services was demonstrated in new low mortality figures. The Metropolitan is an entirely mutual Company and the report shows that total dividends paid to policyholders since organization will pass the billion dollar mark with the 1935 declaration.

"Continuing the policy with regard to our Canadian business, we paid out and invested in Canada during the year about $10,000,000 more than was collected here in premiums," stated Third Vice-President Wright, the Manager for Canada, "which brings the total of such excess payments and investments over premiums to about $126,000,000 in the 63 years that we have been doing business in the Dominion." Mr. Wright pointed out that the Metropolitan's investments in Canada had increased during 1934 and now totalled $256,920,068 of which $173,744,148 was in Bonds issued or guaranteed by Dominion, Provincial or Municipal governments. "The double value of this type of investment cannot be over-estimated," he said. "Not only is it a safe investment for policyholders funds, but also this money is contributing greatly to the building-up of our country and the betterment of communities all over Canada."

HARRY D. WRIGHT

Third Vice-President and Manager for Canada, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who reports increased investments in the Dominion.

The amount of life insurance in force in Canada now totals $1,022,859,931, this being a substantial gain over the preceding year. Payments to Canadian policyholders and beneficiaries for 1934 totalled $28,263,755 and during the year over 400,000 free nursing visits were made to Industrial and Group policyholders in Canada.

It is interesting to note that the Metropolitan's first publication on health was issued in 1871 and that the nursing service for Industrial policyholders started in 1909. Since the Company first cooperated in 1892 with Government officials in a threatened cholera epidemic, it has worked side by side with national, provincial and local health organizations to stamp out preventable disease. It is pointed out that new low mortality figures are recorded in 1934 for practically all of the diseases against which public health forces have directed special preventive measures — notably typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, infant mortality and maternal mortality.

Definite evidence of improving business conditions in Canada and the United States is indicated by the increase in the total life insurance in force, in income and in assets.

The amount of new life insurance, including policies revived and increased during the year totalled $3,287,100,370 which was $112,105,895 greater than the amount of the past year. This increase is evidence of a healthy progress in business conditions, especially when it is considered that the demand for policy loans has dropped to the predepression level, and the demand for surrender values has decreased considerably. The Company's 1934 business was done at an average rate of 19,900 policies for $10,884,438 issued, revived and increased, for each business day.

A still further indication of better times is the increase in life insurance in force of over six hundred and eighty-six million dollars. The Company at the end of 1934 had 41,970,561 policies in force for a total of $19,489,805,475 on the lives of about twenty-seven million people. The total of Ordinary insurance in force has now passed the Ten Billion Dollar mark.

Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries resulted in a considerable amount of money being put into daily circulation during 1934. The year's total was over five hundred and twenty-five million dollars, of which more than two-thirds was paid to living policyholders. This sum represented payment of $4,351.73 during each minute of each business day in the year.

3 Goal Lead for B.C.I. Students In First Interscholastic Game Tweed Being Defeated 5-2

McCreary and Johnson Led Teammates to Well-Earned Victory

GAME QUITE ROUGH

Elbows, High Sticking and Tripping in Evidence in Game

In one of the most spirited hockey matches of the season the Belleville Collegiate squad of pucksters gained a three goal lead over the Tweed High School sextette when the local "collegians" downed the Tweed "students" 5 to 2 in the first game of the C.O.S.S.A. play-offs at the local Arena last night. By virtue of their win the Shiels-coached clan now enjoy a three goal advantage to commence the second game of the series at Tweed on Wednesday night, goals to count on the round. The winner of this interscholastic series will continue in the hunt for the province secondary schools hockey championship.

Despite the fact, last night's ice was slightly sticky the game carried plenty of speed and more than the usual roughness, when high sticks, charging, tripping and other infractions of the game were entered in upon, much to the enjoyment of the fans present. The Tweed students out-weighed the locals in every department, it being more noticeable on the defence, where Leal and Arber towered loftily over all players on the ice. What the locals lacked in weight they more than made up for in sheer determination to win.

Led by Bud Johnson, their pivot centreman, the Shiels-coached aggregation swept in on Mouck to give him a rather busy evening, as the locals out-skated and checked the visitors to the proverbial stand-still at times. McCreary on the left wing was the shining light of the night in the matter of goals scored, when he figured in four of the local's five counters. McCreary scored three goals on beautiful solo efforts, from end to end of the Arena and carried the puck to the goal mouth for Johnson's lone counter. Johnson and Finnegan also played a fine brand of hockey for the local first line, with the former starring on the offensive. Sharpe in the nets, and "Stewie" McElrath carried the bulk of the defensive work of the locals, although Logie is fast improving each time out as a rearguardsman. Muir led the second local line into battle being ably assisted by Ling, Lee and Odell.

Courneyea Scores Two

J. Courneyea, alternate centre player for the Tweed sextette, scored the two goals registered by the visitors on sweet solo efforts, both being well-earned goals. Mouck was given fine protection by Leal and Arber, but the Belleville speedsters just skated a little too fast at times. Tummon and Elsbury looked good on the first front line, while J. Courneyea starred for the losers with Luffman also turning in a creditable effort.

No score was in evidence in the initial frame, although play raged the length of the ice throughout and several spills were seen at the defence lines. Tweed scored first, when J. Courneyea, after about eleven minutes, sunk the boot heel behind Sharpe on a speedy solo rush. Five minutes later Johnson charged through the defence, but as he was about to shoot, Mouck came out of his net and Johnson was tripped, coming in from his wing position Finnegan pounced on the loose puck and knotted the count as some 300 students sounded lustily, their approval. One minute later McCreary raced up the right boards and from the off-corner passed out to Johnson at centre, the latter rifling the rubber past Mouck to put B.C.I. one up. Two minutes later McCreary again skated too fast for his opponents and scored at the goal-mouth when his shot hit Mouck's skate and slid into the open net.

On two successive solo efforts in the last period McCreary beat the entire Tweed team while J. Courneyea's beautiful solo attempt resulted in Tweed's only goal in the last period. Players' ire rose in the hectic third period and Referees McGuire and Barrett were kept busy cooling off tempers with continued penalties. The game was a typical interscholastic match. The return game is scheduled to be played in Tweed on Wednesday night. GGGrafl halikk fl kiw,04fisd ffo.,

Bill Cook Staying in Big Time Until 350 Goals are Secured

(By George MaGuire, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 5 (CP)—Hockey's "grand old man," William Osser Cook, captain of New York Rangers, imparted some sage advice for aspiring young hockeymen today before departing for Boston and a game with the rough tough Bruins.

Captain Bill, frequently proclaimed the greatest right wing the game has known, first let it be known he is not quitting big time puck chasing until his goal scoring mark has soared over 350.

The Saskatoon fancier of blue-blooded shorthorns has 310 markers to his credit to date, a lifetime feat unequalled in hockey records. And Bill is quite confident he can stick another two seasons despite the fact he is fast approaching 40 summers.

As for the counsel to young sharpshooters "lookee, lookee here comes Cookee," as the gallery kids hail him, says they should bear in mind there are no hard and set rules for scoring.

"Hockey is a game I believe calls for trigger action thinking more so than any other sport. I have read and heard where some players say shoot from this spot or that. I say shoot for a goal as the circumstances warrant. You have to mix your plays plenty to fool the goalkeepers of today, who have improved 50 percent over 10 or 15 years ago.

"I would say the best thing for a youngster to learn today is team-play first. That will enable him to get in on the goalie which is no mean feat in these days of high speed defensive play. Once the player gets in it is entirely up to him."

Another bit of advice was a warning to youngsters to get out in the open during the summer months.

"I am sure the reason I have lasted this long," he said, is because I spend my summers out on my ranch near Saskatoon.

TWEED ADVANCES TO SECOND PLACE

Will Meet Madoc in Finals of Central Intermediates

Tweed, Feb. 5—Tweed intermediates secured undisputed possession of second place in the Central League on Friday night when they defeated Marmora by a score of 4 to 3. The score hardly denotes the difference between the teams as Marmora secured two goals in the final period of a decidedly fluky variety. Thompson presented them with one when after catching the puck on Smith's shot he dropped it into his net when attempting to throw it to the corner. The other slid into the net off a defenceman's skate when it was shot in from the side with the goalie and several players piled up in front of the net. Tweed will play a series of home and home games with Madoc this week.

Meraw who was a constant threat throughout, securing three goals, notched the first counter after less than two minutes of play in the opening frame, sinking the rebound of Quinn's shot into the twine. H. Hewitt drew the first penalty a moment later, to be followed by Maguire in a few seconds, with his first of three penalties, for an accidental trip. Campion tied the score when Hewitt passed to him just before the period closed. The work of referee Cousens of Marmora was marked by inefficency in the opening period and the game threatened to get out of hand. In the intermission it was decided to use two referees and Tom Beatty consented to act.

Five seconds after the second frame opened Maguire was waved to the box for an accidental infraction of the rules. He had hardly returned when he was again sent to the showers. As he was coasting along the boards towards the penalty box he was grabbed by an irate and somewhat inebriated Marmora fan and almost hauled over the boards. This was the signal for a general mixup among the spectators who were in the vicinity and the game was delayed until the ice could be cleared. After the interval Smith and Shannon also drew the displeasure of Referee Beatty who handed out penalties without fear or favour, and in that way kept the game entirely under control. Meraw, Maguire and Quinn combined for the prettiest goal of the game when each man handled the puck twice inside Marmora's blue line, Maguire finally passing to Meraw who was about ten feet in front of the net. Meraw picked the corner for a pretty goal. Maguire scored number three when Quinn passed out to him from the corner. The second stanza concluded with the locals leading 3 to 1. G. Geraldi drew a penalty shortly before the gong sounded.

Geraldi was still in the penalty box when Meraw secured his third goal on a backhand flip. Marmora began to press Thompson hard and got two goals within a few minutes. Smith received credit for a counter when Thompson threw the puck into his own net when clearing. Loveless scored the final goal from a scramble shortly before the final gong sounded.

Marmora—Stuart goal; Shannon, and Burns, defence; Campion, centre: H. Hewitt and R. Smith, wings; Subs. Loveless, Neil, B. Hewitt and B. Johnson.

Tweed—Thompson, goal; A. Geraldi and Lafontaine, defence: Maguire, centre; Meraw and Quinn, wings; Subs. Shanque. G. Geraldi, Tummon, Rupert and H. Leal.

Summary:

First period:
Tweed—Meraw (Quinn) . . . 1.30
Marmora—Campion 19.00
Penalties, H. Hewitt, Maguire.
Second period:
Tweed—Meraw ,Maguire, Quinn) 6.30

GAINS WINS BY K.O.

Birmingham, March 5—Larry Gains, former heavyweight boxing champion of the British Empire, knocked out Charley Smith, of London, last night in the third round with a right to the jaw. Gains hails from Toronto.

Chuck Conacher Likely to Win As Goal Scorer

Toronto, March 5—(CP) — The cruising right wing bomber of Toronto Maple Leafs, Charlie Conacher, is about to tickle the fancy of National Hockey League History torians by winning the individual scoring championship for the second straight season. It's been done before by only two players.

The record-book men will inscribe his name under those of Joe Malone, hockey's greatest sniper in the immediate pre-war and post-war era, and Ty Smith, whose most successful gunning occurred in the early war years. Both played for the rugged old Quebec Bullgogs

Six years out of junior ranks, Conacher has outdistanced the N. H. L.'s top scorers since the autumn of 1933 except for a period of two months at the start of this season when Harvey Jackson, driving in close collusion with Charlie, pulled into an early lead. Injuries spoiled Jackson's chances of finishing ahead of his mate.

Has 47 Points

Official N. H. L. scoring figures released last night at Montreal showed Conacher with 27 goals, 20 assists and a point-total of 47 — eight more than Frank Boucher of New York Rangers and nine more than Jackson and Larry Aurie of Detroit Red Wings. They can't overtake Conacher very well in the remaining few games of the schedule.

Malone's position as a greater scorer was established in 1912 when he started a two-year reign. He led the league's marksmen in 1912 and 1913, again in 1917 and 1918 and made it five by leading again in 22 games — a record never approached.

Ty Smith led the league only two years, but they were consecutive. Newsy Lalonde couldn't accomplish this, although he topped them all in 1910, 1916, 1919 and 1921. Later greats such as Babe Dye, Howie Morenz and Bill Cook couldn't maintain the pressure either.

Dye led the league in 1923 and 1925, Morenz in 1928 and 1930, the elder Cook in 1927 and 1933. Last season Conacher led from the start of the campaign, reaching 30 goals for the third time in five N. H. L. campaigns. He needs only three more to make it four out of six.

PETERBORO WINS EASILY BY 9-3

Defeat Napanee in Junior "B" Playoff Round by 17-4

Peterboro, March 5—Peterboro Colts cleaned up the Eastern Ontario end of the O. H. A. junior "B" series here Monday night by defeating Napanee Gibbards 9 to 3, taking the round by 17 to 4.

The easterners started last night's game with a seven-goal deficit, having been defeated at home Saturday night by 8 to 1 and they were never in the hunt after the first period, although they tried valiantly until the final bell. The Petes took command of the game in the second session and were always in front, leading 5 to 3 at the end of the period and ramming in four goals in the third.

The Petes had too much speed and experience for the Gibbard crew and won their way into the semi-final round against Barrie without much difficulty. Burton, Kingdon and Williamson went well for the winners with Clarke starring in goal while the two Jacksons were outstanding for the losers.

The Napanee youngsters not a bit disheartened over the fact that they were geaten on their own ice, tore into the Petes with a vengeance in the first period and held the homesters to a 2 to 2 tie in fact only clever goal-keeping by Clarke prevented them from being in front at the end of the period.

Napanee Sets Lead

Napanee scored the first two goals C. Jackson lifting the rubber into the net on Tompkin's rebound and then W. Jackson registering the second on a sm[illegible] play 30 seconds later. Jopling scored for the Petes on a ganging play with the visitors a man short and shortly before the session ended Williamson went through alone to tie up the score.

Early in the second session goals by Burton and Vitarelli put the Petes two in front. W. Jackson got the Gibbards' final counter shortly after and Kingdon made it 5 to 3 before the end of the period. In the final twenty minutes, Burton, Williamson and then Archibald twice in succession scored for the Petes without a comeback from Napanee.

POSTPONE SPEED ATTEMPT

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 5 — Sir Malcolm Campbell Monday postponed a possible assault on his own world's automobile speed record of 272.108 m.p.h., when he decided the ocean speedway was too rough. He may make another run to-day.

Sir Malcolm made a careful examination of the beach from start to finish and reported that the stretch between the third and fifth mile markers was too soft for safety.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Judging from the consensus of opinion of many Toronto sports writers a new threat has loomed on the horizon of the senior O.H.A. in the medium of the Brockville Magedomas. As a matter of fact some of the scribes have already given notice, that many of the senior "A" teams will have to look to their laurels before the Allan Cup is in its 1935 resting place, and simply because the Magedomas looked so powerful in Oshawa. As was pointed out by Queen City sport writers, the Jess Spring-coached aggregation boast of the best tutored team, in the lost art of accurate shooting, seen in many seasons. The Island Town squad flashed the red light exactly 16 times in Oshawa last week while the Motor City crew bulged the twine but thrice. Bill Hancock's Oshawa seniors have been playing all season in the Toronto and District Mercantile loop, a league equally as fast as any senior organization in the country, but the "Chevies" were never beaten by over two or three goals in that loop. Had the Magedomas been rewarded the services of "Red" MacDonald, Pete Morgan and Jo Graboski, they would be potential Allan Cup winners right now.

President Joe Shortt, of the Belleville Anglers' Association, dropped in to inform us, that the annual plug and fly casting activities of the Club would commence on Friday night of this week. "We have nearly 150 members, anglers and hunters now and more applications for new membership coming in every day. As a matter of fact we have a real live-wire organization, drop over to the Armouries and see for yourself," added Joe as he hurried away to complete some Ki-Y League arrangements. The local Anglers are always ready to welcome strangers or interested fishermen and hunters to any of their gatherings. No matter when or how they hold a conclave, a sportsman can always be assured of picking up some good authentic information pertaining to fishing or hunting.

The local Deacons inform us, that Bob Abate's Elizabeth Park junior cagers did surprise them with their speed. "We opened purely on the offensive and had things pretty well our own way for the first few minutes, then the "Lizzies" seemed to fly around us in every direction and we got off our stride, in a disastrous first half. We staged a come-back in the second period, however, and held our own," stated two of the Deacons last night after which they started figuring out just how they might go about it to pull down that 16 point lead they are now facing. The local junior hoopsters are not afraid of the "Lizzies" trimming them in Belleville, it's that mountainous-like lead that worries the Deacons, but stranger things have happened, the local "Y" intermediates were 13 points down last week in Kingston and staged a last period rally to win. Basketball is a game during which 20 points can be scored in about as many seconds, that is if a team is clicking properly. The Deacons hope to "click properly" on Saturday night, they say.

Although the ice may happen to be slightly sticky, the opening game of the Belleville City League finals takes place at the Arena tonight with the Alemite and Trenton as the attraction. The odd few wagers have been laid down on the series but not until just before game time will it be announced whether the series will be—two games, goals to count, or—the best two games out of three. Of course the final answer in this matter depends paramountly on the future weather forecasts At any rate there has to be at least two games before the city champions are crowned. Tonight sees the first game and a tidy battle can be assured the fans.

In paying tribute to the passing of Babe Ruth from Gotham, the New York Times published the following editorial in his honor—

"Half a century ago, when "Pop" Anson was in his prime, the national genius for coining colorful sobriquets like Bambino and for crowning sultans and monarchs of swat was nowhere so well developed as it is now. Men like Anson or John M. Ward won and maintained their fame in times when the instruments of popular repercussion and reverberation were in almost a rudimentary state, compared with today. To that extent Ruth suffers diminishment. Success carries further and faster and louder today than a generation ago.

But on the other hand success also wears faster today. The competition is fiercer, the age is more fickle in its loyalties. In that sense Babe Ruth's twenty-one years of baseball since 1914 mean more than Anson's twenty-one years in Chicago after 1876. Ruth's fifteen years of stardom with the Yankees began in 1919, the year after the Armistice. How many real sultans and monarchs and republics and regimes and statesmen and political reputations and economic faiths and social formulas and literary epochs have not come and gone in these fifteen revolutionary years! To have been a distinguished name in 1914 and to be still a great name in 1935 is a rare distinction in any field, including the outfield."

Hockey fans who passed up last night's interscholastic game missed the most spirited match seen locally in a good many moons. The Tweed team outweighed the locals to a marked degree, but what the Shiels-coached clan lacked in weight, they more than made up for in determination. The score of 5 to 2 in favour of the B.C.I. squad, just about indicates the play, insofar as scoring chances are concerned. The Tweed "students" know all of the tricks of the trade and gave Bud Johnson and McCreary just about the worst "going over" they ever experienced. High sticks, charging and all those infractions of the rules ,that appeal to the fans were injected into the game, to say nothing of a couple of fistics encounters. At any rate the local "collegians" enjoy a three goal lead to journey back with on Wednesday night. The winner of this interscholastic round will enter the provincial semi-finals at Toronto later this month.

In a friendly game of hockey the "boot heel" chasers over at the Belleville-Sargent Hardware Company defeated their rivals in business, the American Hardware by a decisive score at the Arena last evening. Of course the Pinnacle St. aggregation were materially assisted by the McGuire brothers, Jim and Fred, both players of O.H.A. calibre, while another veteran Belleville puckster, Ted Whalen, was induced to don the blades once again, and capably played centre for the winners. 'Twas a hectic affair, eye witnesses state.

RANGERS MUST TAKE BOSTON

Loss Would Put Them Three Points Down in Race

(By the Canadian Press)

If New York Rangers wish to keep right in the fights for American division leadership of the National Hockey League they will have to defeat Frank Patrick's Bruins in Boston tonight. Already a point up on brother Lester's team, Frank's Bruins could make it three points — a good lead in so tight a race — by toppling the New Yorkers.

New Yorkers have the toughest schedule of any team in the next week, playing tonight in Boston, Thursday in Detroit, Saturday in St. Louis, Sunday in Chicago and with Canadiens in New York next Tuesday.

While Rangers and Bruins are playing in Boston, Chicago Black Hawks, tied with Boston for leadership, play Americans in Chicago which makes it practically necessary for Bruins to win if they wish to keep pace with Clem Loughlin's team.

Toronto Leafs and Canadiens play the third game of the night in Montreal. Although they are all but mathematically sure of finishing on top, Leafs are not giving their cripples any longer rest than usual. Hec Kilrea and Joe Primeau will both make the trip and expect to get into the game.

FRANK "KING" CLANCY
THE IRON MAN OF HOCKEY

CLANCY THE DURABLE

Durability, perhaps, is more an attribute of Frank "King" Clancy than plain speed, but it takes a deal of the latter commodity, too, to last a dozen years in the swift company that is the National Hockey League. Despite the fact that defencemen as a rule lean to beef, Clancy is about the smallest in the big league business as well as being one of the best. Just a 150-pound bundle of fighting fool is Clancy, the life of the Maple Leafs, now leading their section of the N.H.L. Clancy's transfer from the Ottawa Senators to the Maple Leafs [illegible] the Toronto club $[illegible].000, the largest amount ever involved in connection with a hockey deal for a single player. The saddest sight one can recall is the look of "The King" the day and night of the final play-off game with Detroit in the Michigan city last spring. Clancy was limping; Clancy had an injured hand, and you could only see half of his face, the rest being lost in bandages which swathed an injured eye; but [illegible] that it took a team of wild horses to keep him from scrambling over the boards and onto the ice to help out his mates in that gruelling contest. If there's one thing "The King" likes it's hockey and more hockey—and maybe a little bet on the horses now and then.

Hot Favorite for Allan Cup Missing from Qualified Teams

By ELMER DULMAGE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

In the wake of Moncton's fold-up in the Maritimes, leaving the Allan Cup race as open as any in years, there is a complete absence of anxiety in any single area to purchase Olympic boat tickets. There isn't a single hot favorite anywhere along the Allan Cup trails.

Few of the forces conquered by Moncton's Hawks a year ago are in any better position today than the disbanded champions themselves. The downfall of 1934 sectional title-holders has been something remarkable.

Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are certain to crown new champions shortly. Quebec's title-holders, McGill, have been tumbled by Ottawa Senators. Halifax Wolverines stand ready—or will after disposing of the Senior "B" winners—to defend the Allan Cup for the Maritimes and win the Olympic games trip to Germany in 1936.

Port William , western champions last spring, are in the midst of a torrid series with the neighboring foemen, Port Arthur sailors, for the Thunder Bay championship. And the thundering herd is more damaged than damaging after three struggles.

The forts, however, may be one of the few titled teams to repeat. Kimberley dynamiters are on the point of winning the British Columbia stakes for the second straight time. Hamilton Tigers may repeat their 1934 triumph by defeating Toronto All-Stars in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" finals.

Kimberley can complete their B.C. conquest tonight by upsetting Vancouver Cubs for the third straight time in the finals. There is every reason to believe the Dynamiters will do this and lay plans for a series against the Alberta champions.

The foothills will send either Edmonton Superiors or Coleman Canadians into the Interprovincial playdowns . Lusgar Indians, 1934 titlists, were dethroned Saturday night by Edmonton, accepting a 6-1 defeat in the deciding game of the Northern playoffs. Coleman downed Drumheller miners in the south.

Title Open In Saskatchewan

Regina Aces relinquished tit[illegible] rights early, leaving the Saskatchewan championship open to Regina Vics, Weyburn Beavers and Yorkville-Melville All-Stars in the South and Prince Albert Mintos and North Battleford in the North. The Aces, champions last year , were eliminated by Vics.

Manitoba's 1934 champions, Winnipeg Monarchs, are having fun in Europe and their throne will be taken over by either Winnipeg Falcons, Senior "A" Champions, or a strong Deer Lodge Senior "B" team. The Falcons won the first of the three-game series 4-2 Saturday night.

Port Arthur took a 2-1 lead in games in the five-game Thunder Bay playoffs last night, drubbing the Forts by 9-5 with a great rally in the second and third periods.

The Hamilton-Toronto series for the O.H.A. Senior "A" title—a two-game, total-goal affair—opens tomorrow night at Hamilton, with the Tigers strong favorites to win. This, despite the fact the Bengals lost a star wingman, Toe Blake, to Montreal Maroons just before the playoffs started.

Northern Ontario is expected to send either Kirkland Lake Millionaires or Sudbury Frood Mines into the playdowns, and Ottawa District is in the throes of a play-off campaign involving a half-dozen teams. The Royal Canadian Air Force team of Ottawa is being called to survive.

Ottawa Senators and Mon[illegible] Royals played a 2-2 tie Saturday night the first game of the Montreal Senior League finals and the ultimate winner will take on the Quebec Intermediate champions for Allan Cup rights.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

CHAPTER 22

Faith swung down the Avenue des Champs Elysees in the clear invigorating air of the October morning. There were mornings like that when you couldn't worry about anything because the trees were so brown and crispy, the sky so blue, the shops so enticing, and all the women looked as if they had just stepped out of bandboxes.

The stares of passing men told Faith she was beautiful. She wore violets on the short green jacket of her tailored suit. A wide sable collar framed the pale gold of her hair.

There wasn't a soul on earth who could hurt her if she didn't let herself be hurt. Not even Roger Welsh with his treacherous intrigues, nor the Count de Markoff whose passionate outbreak had practically spoiled their friendship, nor Paul Tuckerman who loved her from his garret that might have been in another world for all she saw of him. Even the situation between herself and Hunter didn't seem hopeless—not while she bore his name.

In this mood, shem et Phillip Stevens ambling up the Avenue on his way to Fouquet's Bar for his morning nip. He looked better than when Faith had last seen him. There was a returned jauntiness and florid good humor to his greeting.

"Well, I have good news," he announced. "We're sailing the end of the week."

Faith's heart grew lighter than ever. "I won't say I'm sorry."

"Gertrude's got it in for your husband," Philip said with satisfaction. "She expected him to be in New York this winter, and now it seems you're taking a house here."

Faith nodded. "Yes, we are. Isn't it wonderful?"

Mr. Stevens grinned at her. "I don't know how you managed, but certainly put a crimp in Gertrude's plans. I'll do the best I can to keep her over there," he added without too much conviction. "But you know Gertrude!" Faith nodded again, concentrating on the thought that Gertrude was going away. Leaving her the field.

It was too good to be true, Faith told herself joyously. And the new house suddenly stood for a symbol of security, a shell to fill with happiness.

Luck seemed at last to be with her. She heard nothing more from Roger Welsh who had disappeared as completely as an evil dream. And although Hunter never mentioned Gertrude, the papers duly announced that the Philip Stevens had sailed. Faith wondered if it were all imagination that, with their departure, Hunter grew more approachable.

He even showed an interest in the house Faith finally decided upon on the rue Spontini, off the Bois.

"Pure Louis XV, my dear," Madame de Luxe was enthusiastic. "And quite your type."

Faith fell in love with the house at first sight. There was a tiny garden pungent with fallen leaves. A spirit of elegance lingered in the high ceilinged rooms with their over-door panels of fruits and flowers. And there were darling iron work grills and balustrades.

As she consulted and planned with Therese de Luxe and de Markoff, whose wild declaration of love had, by tacit agreement, been buried between them, Faith realized what progress she had made in the past months. She had absorbed this life of ease until it had become a part of her. She answered its demands with increasing assurance, and filled the emptiness of her heart with a thousand and one trifles which make up the days of a woman of taste and fashion.

"Things—just things mean a lot, don't they?" she remarked to de Markoff one day. They had been poking about a quaint little shop where he had taken her to select a few pieces of Louis XV furniture. "Being able to buy things," she went on, "is like stuffing on little cakes when you haven't bread. You really begin to prefer the little cakes."

"Suppose you can't afford to buy cakes?" Back of de Markoff's usually reckless eyes lay melancholy. He slumped huge and blond beside Faith in her car.

How did Sacha live, she wondered, as they drove through the twilight. "Have you ever worked, Sacha?" she asked impulsively. "Or do you live off the family jewels and things exiled Russians sell?" It sounded very tactless. She added a quick, "I beg your pardon. I didn't mean to—"

"Not at all." But his manner was stilled as if he were suddenly on his guard. And there was a sense of strain between them.

Faith did not, as usual, invite him up to tea when they reached her apartment. She was glad she had not, when she found Hunter waiting in the living room. She looked at him with pleasure. His long limbed body was so clean cut, so fit and rippling with well trained muscles. Beside him de Markoff would appear a trifle gross.

"I've been over the house," he said in his well bred voice. "You've done wonders, Faith."

The girl flushed a lovely pink at his praise. "I hoped you'd like it."

"We'll soon be able to move in."

He had said "we." Such a tiny word, but to Faith it unlatched a window letting in a flood of light and warmth. "Whenever you like after tomorrow." She tried to sound casual.

Hunter's eye were a vivid blue in his lean bronzed face as he smiled back at her. "You must decide that, my dear. But you'll be ready, I suppose, to send out invitations in a week or so."

"Invitations?" she stared at him.

"You'll want to give a housewarming" he said carelessly. "Therese will give you her lists. Since we seem to be spending the winter in Paris," he went on picking up a silver paper cutter, testing its edge with his finger, "you must start the ball rolling." It was almost a command.

"If you think I can—successfully" Faith said in a low voice.

"You will be a very charmnig hostess," he said gently and turned away.

The idea of a housewarming rather appalled Faith when she realized that what he had meant was a formal Reception—a function. Madame de Luze showed her an imposing list of names.

"But I don't know these people", Faith exclaimed.

Madame de Luze smiled indulgently. "They are what we call Tout Paris—all of Paris," she explained. "That means they have either brains or breeding—in rare cases, both. They will expect to be invited to the house of Hunter's wife. You will naturally also send cards to any of your particular friends." There was an odd tone in the Countess' voice that made Faith glance at her quickly.

Could she possibly mean Roger Welsh? Faith shook her head. "Aside from you and Sacha, I have no particular friends", she said. And then she thought of Mary Allan.

What a rotten little snob she had turned into! She hadn't even tried to communicate with Mary, who had taken her, a stranger, into her own studio. Sheltered and comforted her. Faith felt a sudden overwhelming desire to see Mary.

But, strangely enough, when she went to the studio she found little to talk about. The sight of the old house on the narrow, crooked street the cavernous stone entrance, and the old courtyard gave her a weird feeling of having moved in a circle back to a starting point. Nothing had changed except herself.

Mary, in a long paint-stained smock, came to the door of the studio. The doors opening on to the balcony that Faith remembered in the enchantment of June nights were closed now, and the white dome was outlined against a sweep of soft grey sky.

"Faith, my child—what a vision!" Mary drew her into the studio among the canvases and model stand. Her clever brown eyes studied Faith with a quizzical expression. "The butterfly has come out of her cocoon," she said.

Faith didn't know whether to be pleased, as at a compliment. "A butterfly hasn't a very long life," she observed, wandering to the balcony doors. Her impulse was to fling them wide and recapture the ecstacy and romance of those first days in Paris, when yearning for Hunter had colored the foreign world.

Mary started putting away her paint brushes. She took Faith's visit as simply and naturally as if they had seen each other every day. She didn't ask any questions.

It was Faith who questioned: "How is Paul?"

Mary very carefully laid aside her palette, with the fresh daubs of red and blue and white. Wiping her hands on her smock, she turned to look at the girl in the window.

A November haze hung over the old roofs. The ash gold of Faith's hair was like a pale sun shining through mist. In the delicate oval of her face, her eyes looked large and grey. "You haven't told me how Paul is," she repeated.

"Have you ever seen a sick animal?" Mary Allan turned away as if she didn't want to look at Faith any more. "He creeps into his hole alone. That's what Paul has done." Her voice trembled a little. "He won't let any of us help him. And I think he's starving to death."

Faith rushed at Mary, clutching her arm. "Paul—starving! Oh, why didn't you tell me? I must go to him at once."

CHAPTER 23

Paul Tuckerman was in the American Hospital at Neuilly, where Faith had taken him in spite of his half-delirious protests. She had found him weak from a raging fever, babbling incoherently of his airplane motor and of her.

"Darling, why did you come?—You mustn't come here—go away—" he had moaned, pushing her back when she bent over the cot where he tossed, shivering and burning in the bleak, chilly room. "I'm all right."

But he wasn't all right. At the hospital they were very grave. Insufficient nourishment. Worry. So much timber for the fever that had fastened on his wasted body.

"I know you'll do everything you can," Faith said anxiously to the doctor. "Put him in a private room, with nurses, and send the bill to me."

She couldn't get Paul out of her mind. The pathetic way his hot, thin hands had clung to her once he gave in about the hospital. His flaming hair boyishly rumpled over his flaming eyes that had followed her until she had to leave him. And the sigh with which he sank back on his pillow as she tip-toed from the little white hospital room.

It seemed wicked to be spending money on pleasure when Paul's genius couldn't even get a foothold. She wished she hadn't refused Hunter's offer to settle a small fortune on her that she might feel independent. She had not then wished to feel independent. If only she had that money now, she could help Paul put over his motor. But somehow her pride wouldn't permit her to ask Hunter for anything for Paul.

She felt selfish, heartless continuing the costly preparations for a fete that was to throw open the doors of her new house and present her to the elite of Parisian society. But the invitations were out.

So there it was. Her tower of gold had shot up almost over night, and from its narrow, glistening confines Faith looked out, still restless, still heart-hungry. Yet Hunter had never before seemed so accessible, so aware of her as during these days preceding the party, when the quality of her beauty was touched and tempered by her pity for Paul. If Hunter had held out his arms to her then, she would have gone to him with the old thrill awakened into vibrant love. As it was the air between them faintly stirred with electric signals.

But the day before the party Faith was thinking more of a discouraging visit to the hospital than of anything else.

"We can't keep the fever down," the doctor had admitted. "There's some invention he worries over, and then—" he had hesitated—"he keeps calling for you, Mrs. Barclay."

It was rather a surprise to Faith, on returning from Ueuilly, to find Madace de Luze waiting in her private sitting room. For it was not the Frenchwoman's custom to drop in unannounced.

There was a faint air of embarrassment about Madme de Luze as she murmured: "I've come, my dear, to ask for a card."

"Why, certainly." Faith slipped off fawn-colored gloves and went to her desk.

Madame de Luze lit a cigarette, wandering to the window, where she stood, a chic silhouette in a black tricorne and black tailored suit. "It's for Roger." She pronounced it Rojay, with a hint of defiance.

Faith swung around, staring at her. "You've been seeing that man! Oh, Therese!"

"Well, why should I not?" The Countess was openly on the defensive now, and a little sharp. "Do you not run all around Paris with Sacha de Markoff?"

"That's very different," Faith retorted. Her thoughts ran wildly in circles. She could not desuroy Roger without giving away her own secrets.

"The poor boy!" The Countess crushed out her cigarette with a nervous gesture of her beautiful hand. "Is it his fault that you were once crazy about him?"

"So that's what he told you," Faith cried in disgust. "I give you my word it isn't true, Therese. He's a despicable worm. You wouldn't ask me to have him here if you kno—" And again she halted on the brink of disastrous confidences.

Madame de Luze nodded her bird-like head, a sternined glitter in her eyes. "You will not give me the card, then?"

"No, I most certainly won't. Oh, Therese, do believe me," Faith urgently begged her lovely face clouded with dismay. "He isn't fit to be received."

"Yet you introduced him to me." The older woman's lips were thin and cynical.

"I never supposed you'd like him", Faith murmured.

GETTING MAD

Some people get mad easier than others, and some never get mad, being the most aggrevating kind to try to pick a fite with.

Men get mad whenever they argew about politics and ladies get mad whenever they argew about each others children. Boys sound mad no matter what they're argewing about on general principals.

People with famous bad tempers dont usually get sassed back to, thus giving thm the unfair privilege of doing all the sassing and proberly being the reason why 2 people with famous bad tempers are careful not to pick on each other. This proves that the unarmed countries are the ones most libel to be attacked.

People that ony get mad once in a while would be better of if they never got mad at all because they cant think of any good ansers until it's too late on account of lack of practice, making them still madder.

Children with bad tempers can be cured by kindness and reason at home and good stiff puntches in the nose outside.

Teechers that are libel to get mad have the quietest classes. This proves you are lucky if you're good natured and lucker still if you're not took advantage of.

Many people are reasonable enough not to get mad as long as everything is going the way they want. This proves if everybody gave in to each other the werld would be so different it proberly wouldn't be any more fun.

Circling slowly, Ska dropped clo[illegible] to the dying ape-man. Why did n[illegible] Had he indeed been overcome by the sleep of exhaustion? Or was Ska right—had death at last stilled that mighty body?

Filled with suspicion, the vulture circled warily. Twice he almost alighted upon the great, naked breast, only to wheel suddenly away. But the third time his talons touched the brown skin.

Instantly sudden life vitalized the body that had lain motionless so long. A brown hand swept downward from the brown forehead, and before Ska could raise a wing in flight he was in the clutches of his intended victim!

Ska fought, but he was no match for even a dying Tarzan. A moment later the ape-man's teeth closed upon the carrion-eater. He ate a little of the tough flesh, and the blood was drink for one who was dying of thirst.

YOUNG CONSERVATIVES FAVOR EARLY NOMINATIONS

In opening the meeting, President R. D. Arnott complimented the members upon the excellent turnout which jammed every available corner of the hall, and expressed his gratification upon the support given him at such an early date. The minutes of a previous executive meeting were then read by Secretary Wm. Warham.

Chas. A. Payne, K.C., and president of the local senior organization as guest speaker of the evening delivered a brief but inspiring address to his interested audience when introduced by Mr. Arnott. Mr. Payne in his remarks added his appreciation to that of the junior president for the excellent turnout. "I don't know, when I have seen as many interested members, even among the senior members at a similiar meeting," he said.

Young People Concerned

"Unless the younger element of a party has the interests of that party at heart, then the party will not get far," continued Mr. Payne. "It has often been left to the oldsters to do the tasks connected with the organization and the carrying on of the association, and often they are not as capably done as they would have been if the younger people could take hold. Times change. We need the vim and the ginger of the younger people now more than ever—more than at any other time in the history of this country. A new era has set in for Canada, and it will be more sure if the Hon. Mr. Bennett puts in his platform recently enunciated; it augurs well for the success of Canada. The young people should be directly concerned with these vital questions of the day."

Mr. Payne warned his hearers, that he would not thresh or rehash any of the recent political moves or policies so prominently displayed in the press lately, and admitted that he was not "politician" enough to do this even if he wanted to. He turned to the problems of local organization, and in lauding the executive chosen told his hearers, that if their President, R. D. Arnott gave as much attention, time and detail to the work of the organization, which he represents as he does to the practise of law in which he is engaged, "then he will be a very valuable man, and one you need".

"There must be organization to assure success. I would suggest as the first move, that the junior branch divide up the same as the senior one, into wards, then polling sub-divisions and so on. The officers on the executive you then choose know everyone in their particular wards and are able to handle details much easier and correctly than otherwise. Also each municipality throughout the riding should have their own Young Canada Club. This means organization. It also means that we will be able to secure a great proportion of the vote of the younger people of that section, and possibly turn the tide this way at the election."

Advocated Early Nomination

Mr. Payne at this point referred to the question of why no early date had been set by a previous executive meeting for a convention at which a choice for federal candidate for this riding would be made, by pointing out that the majority of members felt that the time was yet too early to put one in the field. That was not his opinion, he added.

In turning to the patronage question he advanced the firm belief, that the young people should have some say in this matter. "Patronage in a party should start from the polling subdivision, and the chairmen should be fully acquainted with all the details."

In concluding his brief remarks, Mr. Payne pointed out: "There isn't anything you can ask me to do to further your association that I won't do unless I'm not able."

Ex-Alderman Harold Armstrong, introduced by President Arnott in his brief remarks called attention to his belief that the large attendance showed only an awakening of interest on the part of the younger people in the questions of the day.

"And they should be interested. We are all more interested in this coming election than we have been for the past twenty-five or thirty years. We have more questions vitally affecting this country and ourselves just now than we have ever had. It is the young people, who should be the most interested, however, because in the years to come the problems, that are being talked about are the ones they must shoulder. If the younger residents do not take this interest, then they will be unable to understand these questions and problems which will eventually confront them." Ex-Alderman Armstrong offered every hope for success and the promise that he would assist the organization in any manner possible.

Ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid, introduced as "an old campaigner" was urged for his advice on matters connected with further organization of the club.

"I've seen some turnouts, but this is the best ever," he congratulated as he arose.

Party Not Dead Says Mr. Reid

"We were told a few months ago, that the party was dead. But I don't feel that way. I was down to a couple of meetings in Foster Ward not long ago, and I just want to say now that if you think the party is beaten there, you'd better think again. When election time comes around, Foster Ward will redeem itself, and if it does, then the rest of the wards should.

In referring to city organization ex-Mayor Reid pointed out, that meetings used to be held anywhere, private homes for example "and thy were good ones, too," he added.

"I used to have a list of all the prominent workers in the different wards, and ones with telephones in each ward. Just let me tell you here not to overlook the girls, either; one girl is worth two fellows, when it comes to organization work. These workers used to go and call up the rest of them and spread the word around when there was to be a meeting. This is quite necessary, because even the best of us is apt to forget when and where the meeting is, even if it is advertised. In this way we were all cogs in the big wheel, and could work together."

"I feel that the young people, even if they are not voters, should feel that when they are working they are working above any party—for the whole Dominion. They have a policy to uphold. They should consider the question of what they are really working for. It's not the candidate, but the good of the country. I have always advocated even when I was Mayor, that work was what would bring the country back to normal, not only in the city, but the province and the Dominion. We today are gradually forging back into better times, and even today we stand the envy of all other countries."

Premier Bennett Praised

Mr. Reid referred to what he claimed was the difficulty under which the present Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was working in attempting to bring back better conditions. He cited the lack of support being given him by the opposition and referred particularly to statements recently made by the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health for Ontario, and representative of this riding.

"Dr. Faulkner said, if he was reported correctly, that 'he could support R. B. Bennett's policies, if he thought he (Mr. Bennett) was sincere'." "But," continued Mr. Reid, "Dr. Faulkner wouldn't support those policies. Mr. Bennett is a Tory. That is the reason he wouldn't support them."

The speaker referred also to Mr. Roebuck and statements he was said to have made regarding Hydro. "Before the opposition gets through with Mr. Roebuck, he will wish he had never said them," said Mr. Reid. "Those who are at all conversant with Hydro know, when Mr. Roebuck makes such utterances that he is not right. Even today Hydro is in such good shape, that Hydro bonds do not need the endorsement of the Ontario government before they are placed on the open market."

Mr. Reid turned again to the Hon. Mr. Faulkner. "Dr. Faulkner said that there was a man for a job, and a job for a man—that was his policy. I have said this before, not at these meetings, but elsewhere, and they have never appeared in the press.

Mr. Reid Levels Charge

Mr. Reid in continuing, charged that in local circles, members of the Liberal party "are working a scheme." "They are not talking Liberalism at all. They believe they have us on the run. They're working a vote wherever they can but where it is not possible to get a vote, they are keeping Liberalism out of it. Charlie Cameron is travelling the wrong way. He is a good fellow and should be working for the good of the country, and not for a party. I believe, that if we get up and work and work hard enough we'll roll up the biggest vote for the Conservative party at this coming election, that Hastings County has ever seen," concluded ex-Mayor Reid.

Mr. Frank McKeown called upon for a few brief remarks pointed out, that the coming election was a "young man's election". Young men are the ones, who are out of work these days, and if they studied the policy laid down by the Hon. Mr. Bennett they would realize that Mr. King has no policy. The shirt has been taken right off his back by Mr. Bennett," he added.

Mr. McKeown pointed out that at the coming convention there would be sixty-nine delegates from the city. The Young People's Club was entitled to one third representation at this convention.

Mr. Jack Andrews, official delegate to the recent convention at Toronto gave an excellent report of his trip and attendance there. Twenty-three hundred delegates from all parts of the country were on hand. Mr. Andrews explained, that the age limit in regard to the Young People's Clubs had been brought up and it was finally decided by vote that no age limit would be placed on members of the various organizations. The executive of the clubs, however, would be limited to members between the ages of 15 to 35 years. As Mr. Andrews concluded, president Arnott pointed out, that the same question had been brought up in the local club and the decision had been reached some time ago, that no age limit would be in effect locally.

"But," pointed out Mr. Reid, "you must also let it be known, that this club is not for men only. It is not generally known, but the ladies of the city have just as much right to join and hold office as the men.

Ladies Welcome To Join

"That's a very good suggestion, and it might be added, that the ladies are just as welcome as the men," agreed President Arnott.

At this point the meeting was thrown open for discussion, and upon the question by Mr. Arnott as to whether it would be better to defer the convention at which a candidate for the riding would b elected, until late in the spring was answered by a chorus of "No's." The discussion finally resolved into a motion put by Mr. Countryman and seconded by Mr. Hill, that the convention be held at the earliest possible date. It was carried unanimously by standing vote.

Mr. Geo. P. Ostrom, chairman of the Belleville Board of Harbor Commissioners, urged to address the meeting, dealt chiefly with the work of the Harbor Commission but spoke also of organization work.

Paying his compliments to their choice of Mr. Arnott as President this year, Mr. Ostrom voiced the hope that all would get behind the executive and render every assistance. "Organization is after all nothing more than the spirit of the Old Conservative Party. We have a great leader and we should all feel proud to get behind him."

Mr. Ostrom warned of the danger of delaying the convention too long.

"Even if the election is not until August or September, then Aprile would not give time enough for the work ahead. That is, unless a candidate has already been picked, and perhaps one has. Perhaps it is Ernie Tummon whom the executive have in mind. In that case it is all right. In Mr. Tummon we have a good leader; he is well respected; he has prestige; and he is a favorite with the sitting members at Ottawa. We on the Harbor Board have had the privilege of dealing with Mr. Tummon and have always had satisfaction. We were always able to get just what we went after because he has had no trouble getting it."

Explains Situation

In turning to his own job of Commissioner, Mr. Ostrom pointed out the difficulty under which the local Board had worked since dock extension construction had commenced.

"I, for one, have been booed, or it was reported I was booed in open meeting because I couldn't give something that I was unable to do. This was in regard mostly to work and wages. All along this has been against me. I have had anonymous letters sent me; I have had complaints registered at Ottawa by letterwriters. Some have even gone to Ottawa about it. I have had Conesrvatives threaten to turn Liberals because I couldn't convince them of facts. Their fight was also against some outsiders, who were brought here to do the work. But they don't know, what the situation really is."

"A long time ago we visualized this harbor extension. We held a meeting with the Chamber of Commerce over it. We saw the need for this work, which would benefit Belleville greatly by reducing storage and dock charges, especially on coal. We had spent $5,000 on the habor and found we had no facilities. Then your present Mayor, a member of the Commission, Tom Wills, secretary, and myself, went to Ottawa, where we made arrangements with the government. I proposed, that if they would dredge the harbor we would build the dock. I had hoped relief workers of the city would be given jobs filling in the marsh at the rear of the extension, but only a little work was done before they were called off. We need this work done."

"The government has nothing to do with the dock. It is the Harbour Board, spending its own money that is doing the work. We are building it with revenue, that was taken in from the old dock and saved up. Now all that money has been used in putting in the cribs and so on. We have to borrow. Tom Wills and myself went up to the Royal Bank today and signed a note ourselves for money to carry on. We intend to start the cement work next week."

"This is not Corporation of Belleville or Government money we have been using. We are doing the work ourselves with our own money and we are trying to provide the most work and the most employment to the greatest advantage. We are doing the work by day labor even though we were tempted to use contract work. I held out for day labor. I wanted to give the local boys the work. The men, who were sent here to help us in the work are and have been absolutely necessary, and were recommended by the government; they are following the government plan in building the dock, and are experts in their line."

"When we started we hoped to hire about thirty men, but we found that we were only able to use seventeen or eighteen. All the men that were hired were badly in need of work, and were picked on these qualifications. We have done the best we could on this matter and I don't believe we deserved the blame we got and are apparently getting. We hope you will believe that we are putting up no bogeys in front of you in this matter," concluded Mr. Ostrom.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and a promise by President Arnott that at future ones "plain speakers on plain subjects would be secured when possible."

AT 62—IN BED WITH RHEUMATISM

At 65—Working Again

Why worry about rheumatism? This old fellow had it almost as bad as it could be. But he just found the right remedy, stuck to it, and now he's working again—at 65 years of age.

Let him tell you all about it:—"For two years and a half," he writes, "I have suffered from rheumatism. For eighteen months I could not turn over in bed, not help myself any way. My legs and feet were swollen, and I could not sleep or get any rest until I started taking Kruschen Salts. After taking one bottle, I went about on two canes. I kept on taking it, as I found the pains were leaving me. I have taken six bottles, and now I have started work again. I am 65 years of age, and everybody that knows me says I am a wonder to get on, after what I was."—J. R.

Do you realize what causes rheumatism? Nothing but sharp-edged uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.

"De Lawd" of Green Pastures Fame, Son of Negro Slaves

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

New York, March 5—The theatre world was shocked by the sudden collapse of one of the most famous of its characters, Richard B. "De Lawd" Harrison.

While making up for his 1,659th performance of "The Green Pastures," Harrison collapsed and was rushed to the hospital, where his friends were relieved to learn that it was nothing serious. He was "just tuckered out."

Amazing is the story of Richard Harrison, a Canadian by birth.

Back in 1854, a family of negroes cast off the chains of slavery in the southern states and headed for Canada. They settled in London, Ontario, where Richard was born ten years later. Richard was just a normal boy who attended public school, sold papers and gathered driftwood to keep the home fires burning. At an early age he went to Detroit to study for the stage, and later went to a college in South Carolina.

RICHARD B. HARRISON

Five years ago, Marc Connelly, playright, wrote a play called "The Green Pastures". It represented the white man's idea of how the negro looked upon religion. From one producer to another he went, to be turned down by all, save one who had made the production of Broadway plays a hobby.

The first performance of the play, with Richard Harrison playing "De Lawd", a cigar smoking almost illiterate negro, was received with mingled feelings by the critics. But the people flocked to the theatre. From pupils came words of praise for this play; congregations were urged to see it, to understand its simple beauty.

They did, and "The Green Pastures" has been playing up and down the United States and in Ontario for the past five years.

And always Richard Harrison thrilled audiences, caused them to laugh uproariously, with his portrayal of the Diety. He has been officially honored on many occasions for contributing to the stage a magnificent work. Though his part is semi-humorous, he nevertheless gave to the character, a sincerity and simplicity that left a definite impression.

As an illustration of Harrison's own fine character, it is reported that he was happy and delighted at the success of his understudy who took his place after he was stricken. Charles Wood, who subbed for Harrison, has been a friend for 50 years.

Declares to Truth

MRS. MARIETTE BURROWS

In a sworn statement, Mrs. Burrows, 129 Vauxhall Street, London, Ont., tells how Fruit-a-tives gave her health and happiness after she had suffered for years from such poor health that she was nervous, high-strung—cross with her children. Mrs. Burrows wants others to benefit from her experience, and tells of it in a statement sworn before a notary so that everyone can be sure of its truth. She says,—"For some years I was miserable with a 'tired-nervous' feeling . . . cranky and cross with the children. Then a friend suggested Fruit-a-tives. I tried them and now I am never irritable. My nerves are good and I feel strong and healthy all the time."

Copy of Mrs. Burrow's complete sworn statement will be sent on request. Write Fruitatives Limited, Ottawa, Ontario.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1935

ROOSEVELT FORESEES COMMODITY PRICES RISE

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Barbourville, Ky., March 6 (CP)—Boyd Smith got fifteen years on conviction here yesterday of killing a man who he mistook for one wanted by the law. Testimony was that Smith, although not a Deputy Sheriff, was searching for Henry Setser for whom a reward had been offered on a minor charge. He mistook George Napier, Clay County farmer who had come to Knox County on a real estate deal, for Setser. Napier resisted arrest and was killed in the fight that ensued.

Muskogee, Okla., March 6 (CP)—Twelve hours yesterday in the life of Leonard Watson, Muskogee negro:

6.00 a.m.: Stole a cow and heifer.

8.00 a.m.: Sold them for $12 and applied $10.50 on his debts.

1.00 p.m.: Arrested by Sheriff Tom Jordan.

2.00 p.m.: Pleaded guilty.

5.30 p.m.: Dressed in at McAlester State Penitentiary to start a three-year sentence.

Louisville, Ky., March 6 (CP)—"Zero" a three-year-old bulldog was a minus quantity today but not until after he had proved his worth as a watch dog at a figure indicated by his name.

Mrs. Edith Kunz left Zero to guard a pair of shoes in her car while she attended a theatre. A thief forced open a window, stole the shoes and Zero.

Sacramento, Calif., March 6 — (CP)—A spectacular attempt to lower a transport aeroplane, possibly filled with passengers, to earth with a giant parachute will be made May 19 by Col. Roscoe Turner, noted speed flyer. The demonstration will seek to prove the feasibility of equipping transport planes with emergency parachutes.

Several years ago Col. Turner dropped an open airplane to earth safely in such a manner.

Los Angeles, March 6 (CP). — "Mike" Ferguson, 22, was sentenced today to a nice hot bath, some girl's clothes and 10 days in jail.

Mike protested when a patrolman, making the pickup in little Harlem, started to run his hand down the ragged trousers legs in search of weapons.

"Please don't, I'm a girl," Mike said.

To Municipal Judge Clement Nye, yesterday, she said:

"My name's Mike. I have no home. I've worn men's clothes all my life."

And so he sentenced her.

JAMES F. HILL ASKS QUESTION

Member For East Hastings Inquires of Insurance Placed

Toronto, March 6—(CP)—On the heels of a week's debate on affairs of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario the Conservative opposition in the Legislature today gave notice of a series of questions regarding the present administration of Hydro.

Arthur Ellis (Cons. Ottawa south) asks how many employees have been dismissed by the commission since July 11, 1934. He asks what salary reductions took place and how many employees have been taken on by the commission.

Inquiry whether the government intends to appoint any representative of the municipalities on the commission is made by Mr. Ellis.

James P. Hill (Cons. Hastings East) inquires, what insurance has been placed by the government, the Hydro Commission and the Liquor Control Board with G. Angus German or G. Angus German Limited of Toronto.

He also asks the identity of purchasers of $10,000,000 of Hydro Electric Power Commission Bonds advertised on Dec. 4, 1934.

"Did the commission furnish a favorable legal opinion of Messrs. Long and Daly, Toronto?"

"If so, what was the opinion?"

"How much was paid by the commission for that opinion?"

ON SPEED FLIGHT

Los Angeles, March 6 (CP) — Bound on an attempt to set a non-stop passenger plane speed record from Los Angeles to Mexico, D. F. Leland S. Andrews, veteran airlines pilot, took off from Burbank this morning.

Flying with five passengers, Andrews hoped to make the 1,670-mile air dash to the Mexican capital in less than nine hours.

HOLMES SUCCUMBS FORMER JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT

Oliver Wendell Holmes Would Have Been 94 on Friday

MILITARY FUNERAL

Classed as America's "Great Liberal" by U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—(AP)—The career, that inscribed the name of Oliver Wendell Holmes in United States annals as "America's great Liberal" ended at 2.15 a.m. today in a death, which his physician described as "the most peaceful I ever saw."

Undaunted to the end, the former Justice of the United States Supreme Court succumbed to bronchial pneumonia. Had he lived until Friday he would have been 94 years old.

Instead on that day high dignitaries of Nation, State and Church will attend his body to All Souls' Church and thence it will be taken to a private military burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Started as Soldier

The Military funeral will be in honor of the man, who started out as a soldier in the Union Army during the United States Civil War. Recovering from grievous wounds suffered in a Virginia campaign he went on to a full life, that caused his great legal opinions—often dissenting ones—to be read as examples of liberal jurisprudence and of fine literature. He retired in January 1932.

His Sparkling Wit

Despite the strain of pneumonia he delighted at times in joshing his nurses and doctor.

One of his last comments, referring to the extreme care given him, was that "this is a lot of damn foolery". Again, in mock impudence he smilingly thumbed his nose at his old friend, Felix Frankfurter, Harvard Law Professor as the latter passed his sick-bed.

Washington, March 6.— (AP) — President Roosevelt issued a statement today saying the United States "has lost one of its first citizens" in the death of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"We cannot minimize the grief of his passing but we can find solace in the thought he was with us for so long. His was the life of rare distinction: soldier, scholar, author, teacher, jurist and gallant gentleman, he personified through his long career the finest American traditions. . . .

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I have had the high privilege of his friendship for many years, our sorrow at his passing is great."

Queen's Student Still Unconscious

Cobourg, March 6—(CP)—Hyman Levine, Queen's University student, whose skull was fractured when his automobile collided with a C.N.R. train here five days ago, was still unconscious today. His condition is "serious and unchanged." He is given a chance to recover, hospital heads said.

BRITAIN FORSAKES DISARMAMENT

In keeping with the new British policy of heavy rearmament and the forsaking of disarmament conferences, the government launched this new 1,000-ton naval sloop at Chatham, England. The vessel is known as H.M.S. Deptford and is the latest of the "general service" class authorized under the program of 1933. She carries light armament and is an oil burner with 16-knot speed.

RECOVERY OF GIRL NOW LOOKED FOR

Pulse And Temperature Fall, Which is Good Sign

Fall River, Mass., March 6 (AP)—Hope for Alyce Jane McHenry's recovery from her "upside-down" stomach operation rose today as her pulse and temperature slowly fell. The road to complete recovery is long and dangerous but surgeons who have been in constant attendance upon her say she is "holding her own" and look upon it as a good omen.

Dr. George C. King, associate of Dr. Philemon Truesdale, the Rawdon, Que. native, who peformed the operation, said:

"The change in temperature, though moderate is most encouraging and the fact she is getting no worse is also a hopeful sign, but not one to be overrated."

Dr. King was eager to correct any mistaken impression Alyce Jane will have passed her crisis in 72 hours.

"It is an uphill climb," he explained, "one on whcih progress depends upon her constantly gathering strength as her vital organs adjust themselves and begin functioning normally."

GIRL SECRETARY COMMITS SUICIDE

Dies of Bullet Wound in Heart, Despondent Over Unemployment

London, Ont., March 6—(CP)—Mary Madeline Jarvis, 22, of Glendale, near this city, died from a bullet wound in her heart at her parents' home late yesterday. Her mother, hearing a revolver shot, rushed upstairs to the bedroom but the girl was already dead when she reached her.

Miss Jarvis was the former secretary of the late Russell Struthers, London investment broker who committed suicide last October. The firm was shortly afterwards declared bankrupt and since then Miss Jarvis has been out of employment.

Resulting despondency is believed to have been responsible for her act.

Ontario Provincial Police investigated and Coroner Dr. J. P. G. Colling of Lambeth decided an inquest was unnecessary.

TRUCK DRIVER TO STAND TRIAL

Charged With Causing Death and Injury to Cyclists

Sandwich, March 6—(CP)—Charged with manslaughter, Fred Deschamps, Tilbury truck driver, at present free on bail, will appear in county court tomorrow. Deschamps is charged in connection with the death of Jean Lalonde, 21, Tilbury, found dead on the highway, just west of Tilbury, Feb. 25.

Jean Sauve, 25, also of Tilbury, companion of Lalonde, was picked up a short distance from the latter and is at present in a serious condition in the hospital. Both men were riding bicycles when hit.

22 Ex-Wardens to Meet

Amhersburg, March 6—(CP)—Twenty-two ex-wardens of Essex county will gather here tomorrow for their annual meeting. The period in which these men served dates back to 1901.

SUDDEN DEATH

London, March 6—(CP-Havas) — A coroner's jury today decided no inquest was necessary into the death of William Hector Hume, aged 69, Canadian journalist found dead yesterday in a room in a hotel here. The jury decided death resulted from heart disease.

Deposed Rector Will Preach, Warden Says Church for Him

Hamilton, March 6 (CP)—No official statement has been made yet on behalf of Rev. W. H. Daw, rector of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi who was deposed from the ministry of the Church of England in Canada in a judgment handed down by Right Rev. L. W. B. Broughall, D.D., Bishop of Niagara. It is understood, however, Mr. Daw is preparing a statement which will be issued on Friday or Saturday.

No Statement By Rev. W. H. Daw

"There are no further formalities in connection with the judgment," Bishop Broughall said today.

O. M. Walsh, K.C., counsel for Mr. Daw, said he could make no statement until such time as he had had a conference with Mr. Daw.

"I cannot say whether there will be an appeal against the sentence or not," he said. "Provision is made in the canons for an appeal to the Provincial Synod but whether or not this will be taken I cannot say."

Major P. H. Leleu, one of the wardens of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi and a former chairman of the parochial council of the parish of St. John the Evangelist before the new church was set up, stated:

"We are also asking Mr. Walsh to prepare a statement on the legal points of the case."

"Up to the present, Mr. Daw has been censured because he has made no statement of any kind," he continued.

"The reason he did so was because the matter was in the hands of the Bishop and was sub judice. Now that a verdict has been given, it is felt Mr. Daw can make a statement and that the public, if sufficiently interested may be the judges of the matter.

Rally About Rector

"I wish to point out that the congregation of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi is wholeheartedly behind Mr. Daw. The people are attending the services and rallying around him in a way never expected.

"In addition to issuing an official statement before the end of the week, Mr. Daw will devote his Sunday evening sermon to the religious aspect of the affair which will be of interest to the congregation."

COMMODITY PRICES NOT HIGH ENOUGH SAYS PRESIDENT

Debt Burden Reduction Depends on Higher Prices

RECIPROCAL PACTS

Time Has Not Arrived For Stabilization of Domestic Commodities

Washington, March 6—(AP) — Commenting on commodity prices in the United States, President Roosevelt said today he did not think a sufficiently high level had yet been reached to bring about the relative reduction of the debt burden desired by the administration.

Declining to discuss any suggestion for further devaluation of the United States dollar, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not think the time had arrived for stabilization of domestic commodity prices.

He explained the debt burden had been reduced enormously but not sufficiently.

Asked about reciprocal trade agreements with other nations, the President reminded negotiation of each one takes a long time but progress was being made.

He further explained in the reciprocal agreements lowering of tariff rates were made available to other nations in many instances under most-favored nation clauses and therefore it was necessary to include provisions for terminating the reciprocal pacts if a lowering of the tariffs permitted too great a flood of imports.

Mr. Roosevelt said study was being made of an international effort to aid China but he had not been informed of the progress for a couple of weeks.

GREECE ATTACKS ON THREE FRONTS

Official Report Says Rebels Are in Retreat

Copyright 1935 By the Associated Press

Athens, March 6—Three loyal divisions of the Greek army advanced from different directions today in an effort to "liquidate" the rebel forces fighting in Salonika with their backs to the Aegean Sea.

(Reports from Salonika said official sources claimed, the rebels were in retreat).

Government troops under Gen. George Kondylis, Minister of War, poured into the valley of the Struma, attacking the rebels from the west. General Ioannides led a division from the northwest and a division under General Gialrystras bore down from the north.

The details of their operations and of the casualty lists were strictly censored.

The government troops were reported inspired by their success in driving the revolutionists out of Seres, which is 45 miles northeast of Salonika.

Bandit Held Man With Head Under Water

Montreal, March 6 (CP)—Three men who held up a gasoline station attendant and kept their victim's head in a basin of cold water while they emptied his pockets were the object of police search today. The bandits escaped with $38 in cash. G. Eldon told police two of the men grabbed him and thrust his head under the water while the other frisked him.

MYSTERY OF HEIRESS' DEATH THICKENS

Professor W. Barton Leach (Left) of Harvard Law School, drew a will for Mrs. H. Bradley Davidson, Jr., (RIGHT), heiress to Statler millions at his home in Weston, Mass., only a month ago. The will disposed of $540,000. Mrs. Davidson, Jr., a bride of 58 days was found dead in the garage of her Pinehurst, N.C. home under mysterious circumstances. At first thought suicide, a rare poison is now suggested.

New Nomination is Ordered To Fill Trenton Council Seat

Trenton, Ont., Nov. 6 (CP)—Trenton must have a new nomination and possibly an election to fill the place on the town council vacated by Councillor Henry LaFleur. Mr. LaFleur resigned because of "ill-health" it was stated in his letter.

LaFleur's resignation was received by the town council on Monday and accepted. The usual proceedings were at once taken to fill the vacancy.

Nominations will be held Tuesday, March 12, and the election if necessary, one week later.

The retired councillor is at present an inmate of the Hastings county jail at Belleville where he is serving a sentence for a third offence under the Liquor Control Act. He was sentenced by Magistrate E. J. Butler of Belleville last October.

He appealed, but it was disallowed, and he started his term a month ago.

While the appeal was pending, Mr. LaFleur was returned to the Trenton council by acclamation, in January.

FREIGHTER AFIRE SEEN FROM MIAMI

Miami, Fla., March 6—(AP)—Reports that what appeared from land to be a freighter afire "from bow to stern" about four miles off Alligator Lighthouse in the Florida Keys, were received today by telephone shortly after a coast guard seaplane was dispatched to the scene.

REWARD $500 OFFERED

ABITIBI REORGANIZATION FORECAST BY PRESS

Toronto, March 6.—(CP)—Plans for a "complete re-organization" of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company "involving acquisition of control by Canadians and injection of millions of new capital into the enterprise" have been placed before the Ontario Government, the Star says today.

Left Accident Scene After Skid on Ice

Chatham, Ont., March 6.—(CP) — John Edwards ,29, of Chatham, today was fined $25 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Edwards' car on February 21, skidded on icy pavement into a gasoline pump, which was smashed by the impact and gasoline, spilled over the pavement, became ignited.

Flames leaped to a great height, the heat from which was so intense it cracked four plate glass windows of nearby motor show rooms. The damage was estimated at about $800.

Aimee's Divorce Is Almost Ready

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—(AP)—The law was ready today to declare Sister Aimee Semple McPherson, a free woman in the world of romance.

All that is necessary for the final decree divorcing the Evangelist from the portly baritone, David Hutton, is for the attorneys to submit the formal decree to the Superior Court for a judicial signature.

VOTE CASH PAYMENT

Washington, March 6.—(AP) — The United States House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee voted 14 to 11 today to consider the American Legion Bill for cash payment of the bonus to war veterans as opposed to the Patman Currency Expansion Bill. This action was taken after an agreement to report a Bonus Bill to the House for floor action.

Quadruplets are Born To New Zealand Parents

Dunedin, New Zealand, March 6—(CP—Havas)—New Zealand eagerly following the progress of Ontario's famed Dionne quintuplets, today had quadruplets of its own to cheer for. Three lusty daughters and a son were born to a Mrs. Johnson here. Physicians attending the birth pronounced the babies in perfect health despite the fact, like the Dionne sisters, they arrived almost two months before their time.

STEAM FILLS CAB, DRIVER BURNED, SUFFERS SHOCK

Engineer Stops Train When He Finds Steam Entering Cab

IS FOUND OVERCOME

Condition of Stratforder is Not as Serious as First Thought

Stratford, Ont., March 6 (CP)—According to a report issued by Canadian National Railway headquarters here, a loose reducing valve caused steam to fill the cab of an engine travelling between Stratford and Kitchener last night, causing internal burns to Engineer Herbert Morton of Stratford. The condition of Morton, now in Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital, is not as serious as was at first intimated and he will likely return home today.

He is suffering principally from shock and some internal burns caused by the steam. When Morton noticed steam flooding the cab he brought his engine to a stop and in reaching over to tighten the valve it is believed he was overcome by the steam. It was at first believed that a steam heat pipe had burst.

OIL EXPLOSION BURNS FAMILY

Mother Pours Oil in Stove Causing Death of 3 Children

Detroit, March 6—(AP)— A mother and three of her eight children died today of burns a few hours after fire destroyed their home in Suburban Ecorse.

The dead Mrs. Helen Wisler, 42; Mildred Wisler 10; Winifred Wisler, eight and Robert Wisler six. Albert J. Wisler was in a hospital where his condition was described as critical.

The fire started when Mrs. Wisler poured oil over the smouldering coals in a stove, causing an explosion.

BELIEVES IN SPORTS

Orillia, Ont., March 6—(CP)—T. A. Main, retired Orillia businessman and member of Orillia's tankard curling champions of 1885, thinks every boy physically able to do so, should take an active part in sports. He is celebrating his 87th birthday today.

HONOR KATHERINE CORNELL

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Judging the ten best performances, of the past season on Broadway, New York dramatic critics are unanimous in selecting Katharine Cornell and Elizabeth Bergner as the Theatres two outstanding actresses. Not a male actor won the approval of all the reviewers.

Participating in the annual poll conducted by the Associated Press, every first string critic cast a vote for Miss Cornell's Juliet in her lavish $95,000 production of "Romeo and Juliet", and for Miss Bergner's interpretation of the unmoral waif in "Escape Me Never".

WEATHER

Toronto, March 6—(CP) — The weather remains cold in the west where snowfalls have occurred in southern districts. Heavy snow has fallen in Quebec, with light falls in Ontario and the Maritimes. It has been quite mild in the lower lake region.

Lake Superior — Strong northerly winds; turning colder with snowflurries.

Kenora and Rainy River and Manitoba—Fresh northerly winds; clearing and colder.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Easterly winds; partly cloudy with snow in southern districts, not much change in temperature.

Sale of City Hotel Currently Reported

Negotiations for the purchase of the City Hotel, well known hostelry in this city, owned by Mrs. E. Johnston have been about completed, it was reliably reported today. It was stated that Mr. F. Turner and Mr. J. Yanover, both of Picton are the purchasers. It is expected they will take possession of the building in May.

CITY STEAM ENGINE THAWS OUT BASINS

"If this thaw continues for another day or so the city will be in perfect shape as far as our department is concerned", stated City Engineer Chas. A. Mott, today.

According to the department the slow and gradual thaw has been the best in years for clearing the streets of the accumulation of ice and packed snow, without the customary heavy flooding of the streets. So far only a few complaints have been received regarding flooded cellars, at a season, when dozens of such calls could be expected daily. This week the city steam engine is busy thawing out dozens of frozen catch basins at various points.

MARCH LAMB IS ON THE FROLIC

"Just like spring" was the comment heard most frequently on streets through the downtown section on Wednesday morning. Warm soft winds, and the straggling rays of a bright sun through the clouds resulted in rapid disappearance of the caked ice and snow on the streets, melting and running in rivulets down the gutters to convenient catch basins.

VETERAN WOMEN ASKED TO UNITE

Every Branch of Women's Service in The Army Will be Welcomed

Prompted by the desire to keep alive the traditions of their former units, and also to assist ex-service men in the commemoration of various significant anniversaries connected with the Great War, ex-service women of this district who were connected with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces during the war have made their first move toward the formation of their own particular war veterans' association in this city. This is believed to be the first attempt made by ex-service women of its kind ever tried.

All ex-service women, who were in any way connected with the Canadian forces during the war in England or in France are asked to register their names and addresses with Miss N. Milburn, Reg. N., 216 Charles Street, this city. The phone number is 823.

The registration will include all former nursing sisters, ex-members of the W.A.A.C., W.R.E.N., V.A.D., the clerical corps and other units.

Returned men of Belleville announce themselves wholeheartedly behind the move and will assist the formation in any manner possible. The men are anxious to include the ex-service women in all festivities and commemorations relating to Canada's part in the Great War. It is expected later, that two of the local ex-service men's clubs will have a guest night for the ladies in the near future. The registration is hoped to be completed by March 18.

Obituary

HYDRO SURPLUS REACHES $29,977: RATE CUT ASKED

Belleville Commissioners Decide to Petition For Reduction

'THIRTEENTH BILL'

Belleville Hydro Electric System closed the year 1934 with a surplus of $29,977.02 for the year, the largest since the year 1931.

This fact was disclosed at the meeting of the Hydro Commission at the home of the Chairman, Mr. M. P. Duff, 74 Alexander Street, on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, the members present being Mr. Duff, and Commissioner George A. Reid, Commissioner G. O. Tice, mayor, being absent on account of illness.

As a result of the condition of the system it was decided to ask the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario for a substantial reduction in rates at the earliest possible date.

Secretary O. H. Scott, submitted the annual financial, statement for the year showing gross profit for the utility for the year as at $29,977.02, which included a profit of the Hydro Shop of $1939. The thirteenth power bill was a credit of $15,762.55. The commission advised the secretary to send a copy to the mayor and city council.

The secretary submitted a statement in reference to the year's operations which he suggested should be published. On motion publication was decided upon.

Following discussion of the financial statement, it was moved by Commissioner G. A. Reid, seconded by Chairman M. P. Duff,

"That whereas the annual statement of The Belleville Hydro Electric System shows a large surplus for 1934 and whereas sufficient funds are on hand to retire all liabilities and whereas it appears that the surplus for the year 1935 at the same rates will be as large if not larger than for 1934;

"Therefore The Belleville Hydro Electric Commission is of the opinion that a substantial reduction in rates should be made and requests the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario to authorize a reduction as soon as possible."

The secretary read a letter from W. W. Pope, of the Ontario Commission regarding a School of Lighting sponsored by the Hydro.

On motion of Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Duff, the secretary was authorized to attend the school and arrange to have whatever employees who would benefit by attendance to attend.

Geo. O. Tice, Mayor.

March 5th, 1935

TO THE OWNERS:

Your Commission has much pleasure in advising you that the year ending December 31st, 1934, has been a successful one. The System's revenue increased, the load increased and the surplus increased.

The local system was purchased as of April 1st, 1929 and for the first nine months was operated by the Ontario Commission. The local Commission took charge on January 1st, 1930, and this is the fifth year it has been able to report gratifying results.

A detailed financial statement of the year's operations will be presented as usual but the Commission gives you herewith a few facts. You will note that some facts deal with the last year's operations and others with the operation over the period you have been owners.

The surplus for 1934 is $29,977.02. This is the largest since 1931.

The revenue increased 4.71% during the past year.

The power purchased increased during the year 252.38 H.P. but the cost was $5111.98 less.

At the end of the year the liquid assets were sufficient to retire the liabilities and leave a credit balance of $23,811.41.

There has been $144,000 paid on the debenture debt leaving $22,000 still to pay.

The domestic consumers have received three rate reductions which has meant a saving to them of from 34% up depending on their use.

The commercial consumers have received two rate reductions which has meant a saving of from 21% to 40%.

The Street Lighting has cost the citizens over 25% less than it would have under the 1929 rates. This includes the cash rebate of $9,489.26.

The system of rates is based on the principle of "The greater the use, the cheaper per kilowatt hour."

The plant has been improved during the year and interruptions to service have been a minimum.

The operation of the Hydro Shop has been very satisfactory and has been an important factor in the increase of the load.

It appears that a further rate reduction can be made and your Commission is taking the question up with the Ontario Commission.

Your Commission desires to express its appreciation of your support and the loyalty and service rendered by the Management and Staff during the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed on behalf of the Commission,

M. P. DUFF,
Chairman.

KIWANIANS VISIT LOCAL HOSPITAL

Surprise Visit is Much Appreciated by The Patients

An open meeting of the Kiwanis Club was held on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel and the discussion therefrom considerably cleared the air for the directors, and the club in general. The discussion led along the lines of promoting some project to raise funds to carry on the work planned in the club and there will be a statement in the near future. The members were in favor of an open meeting once a month, where questions vital to the welfare of the club can be discussed with an open mind and bring the members closer together in their work for community interests.

Three members were congratulated by the president, Cliff Barrager, J. O. Herity for his appointment as Grand Superintendent of Prince Edward District for Royal Arch Masonry, Gordon Blue for the successful opening of his marketeria and George Forhan for completing 25 years in the theatrical profession. Dr. R. A. Flynn gave a comprehensive review of the visit to the hospital after the luncheon one week ago, stating the patients were most agreeably surprised and expressed appreciation for the candies, magazines, papers, cigars and cigarettes, that were distributed. Dick also mentioned George Lee, Harry Cross and Frank Hinchey for their assistance in distributing the gifts. The visit to Deseronto Chamber of Commerce by the club was deferred for another month at the consent of the members. An invitation was extended to the Belleville Club to join with Toronto Club in entertaining the president of International, Dr. Carrington and his wife at the Arcadian Court in Toronto on Friday night. It is expected a number from this club will be in attendance.

Albert Boynton, manager of the Imperial Oil Company branch here and one of the new members was booster for the day and gave a resume of his own life as well as the company by which he is employed. Albert told the members he was born in Kirkfield and had one hobby, trading horses. He told of joining the Imperial Oil Company in 1918 and showed the progress of the company since it was formed in 1880. "At first it was a small concern manufacturing kerosene and rough oil and greases and today is one of the largest industries in Canada," said Mr. Boynton. "There are 9,000 Canadians employed, seven refineries are in operation, 6,000 railway tank cars used to transport the products and 7,000 pieces of automotive equipment besides boats for lake and ocean." He further stated that the company supplied nearly every industry in Canada and Imperial gas was burned in six out of every ten autos in the Dominion. Mr. Boynton told his listeners, that the company was an Canadian one and was the first to introduce the five day week. The speaker told the club what was extracted from a barrel of crude oil containing 42 gallons. J. O. Herity and Frank Hinchey were the prize winners.

It is possible the club will run a bridge tournament in the near future for the club members and their wives as the discussion is getting quite warm as to who is the best exponent of this game. A resolution will be sent the Minister of Highways asking the date of purchase of car markers be made the first of June. Eddie Logan collected the several fines. Claude Tice acted as song leader and Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano.

GUNNERS TO WEAR BERET OF DIVISION

Monthly Meeting in The Memorial Hall a Success

Songs, entertainment and general good fellowship followed the regular business of the Gunners' Club at their monthly meeting held in Memorial Hall last evening. Although two of the speakers scheduled to address the members did not appear, the meeting was entirely successful throughout.

With President Fred Wiggins in the chair assisted by Keith Marron, secretary, the routine business was conducted. It was decided, following a motion advanced, that in future all gunners attending the meetings should wear the berets of division in which they served during the war. An invitation for the gunners to attend the grand social evening being held by the Army and Navy Veterans on the evening of March 14 was accepted.

Out of a number of names taken last evening ten men will be selected, following a competitive shoot at the Armouries, to form an official Gunners' Club small arm shooting team. The shoot will take place on Thursday evening.

During the evening Mr. Art Rogers, member of the club was formally introduced to the assembly as having celebrated the twelfth anniversary of his marriage on that same evening. "Art" accepted the good wishes of the club in a brief, humorous address.

Mr. Geo. Cornish, well known impromptu entertainer assisted in the enthusiastic evening that followed. Clare's orchestra furnisheed the music.

Gunner Benjamin Burton was the lucky winner of the prize basket of groceries donated for this meeting.

Clerk of Township of Rawdon Is Leader in Community Life

Lorne C. Bateman Entered Office and Business at Age of 18 Years

HIS INTERESTS WIDE

LORNE C. BATEMAN

Appointed at the age of eighteen years in July 1932, as clerk of the township of Rawdon, Lorne C. Bateman of Springbrook, is one of the youngest, if not the youngest of municipal clerks in Ontario. Death of W. F. Bateman, who had been clerk for 25 years and Springbrook general merchant projected his son, Lorne C. Bateman, at an age when youths are not thinking much of business or of public office into the municipal post and into active business. In the less than three years in which he has held the office he has carried on the fine tradition set by his father. In business likewise he has maintained the fine reputation his father had earned by fair and straight dealing.

Born at Springbrook, Lorne was educated in the village school and attended Stirling High School for four years.

Then all at once he entered business and official life. He was appointed a justice of the peace on the recommendation of the late lamented the Hon. J. Robert Cooke, former M.P.P. for North Hastings. This office he continued to fill until this year when he with many others throughout the province, was retired from the post when the Hepburn Government set up a new magisterial and justice of the peace system.

Lorne has made a success in the general store business. To this he has added the office of district agent of the Continental Life Insurance Company.

He is full of the zeal of youth and sport owes him a great deal, He is captain of the ball team and is interested in hockey at Springbrook. Cleancut in business and in official performance he is a clean-cut sport. So keen is his interest in athletics that last year he travelled all the way to Detroit to witness a final game. He is generally popular.

Mr. Bateman is unmarried.

His sister, Mrs. Mumby conducts the postoffice in the Bateman General Store at Springbrook.

From Doorstep to Indoors, University School Advances

Remarkable History of New University Sunday School

From the steps of the old Albert College where about a dozen young scholars first met under tutelage of Mrs. J. McClusky and her sister, Miss N. Mason, three years ago this coming August, there has grown up an institution which is now comfortably housed in the gymnasium of the old college and numbering no fewer than a registration of ninety. This is the story of the New University Sunday School, today one of the most thriving of Sunday Schools in zeal and interest if not in wealth. For the past three Sundays this school has averaged attendance of seventy-five scholars.

The school is really a continuation of the old University Sunday School, explained Mrs. James McClusky, secretary, in conversation with a newspaperman. She was recalling the school where one of the most devoted Christian women the city has ever known, the late Miss Ella Gardiner, M.A., lady principal of Albert College for many long years, taught the University School, which met in the building, now used for industrial purposes. While the old Albert College functioned, Miss Gardiner taught her on Sundays. When the college took to itself new buildings and the students were gone to the new home, the school at last closed and was disposed of for industrial purposes. For a time there was no school to function and it remained for the originals of the new University School to take up the work.

"We met on the steps for three months until it was beginning to become too cold. Then we moved to Mrs. William Allum's kitchen and there met for a time and finally when Rev. Mr. E. Farnsworth became superintendent and the head of the Bible Class, we were housed in the gymnasium of the school under arrangement and approval of Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker. From the dozen we had at the start we had about thirty at Christmas of that first year.

Since the school began to meet in the gymnasium the progress has been steady. Today a staff of Mrs. J. McClusky, secretary, Mrs. William Allum, Mrs. J. Brown, Miss Edith Bird, Mrs. James Donaldson, Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Burley, Mr. Melville Donaldson who teaches the young men, and the Rev. E. Farnsworth who is head of the Bible Class and superintendent, carries on the work.

VOLLEYBALL

One game of volley ball was played in the newly formed Y. M. C. A. volleyball loop last night when the "West Winds" gained a one point advantage over the "South Winds", the final score being two games to one. The loop is composed of four teams, East, West, North and South Winds. The line-ups for last night's game were—West Wind Munnings, Blaker, Shortt, Brown, Shapiro and Thompson. South Wind—Martin, Cole, Burley, Stephenson, Morden and Bryant. Referee Vic. White.

On Monday, Feb. 25th, the meeting of the Pathfinder's club was under the direction of Philip Dodds, in the absence of Dr. Scott. The devotional period was taken by Herbert Mallett. Community singing was enjoyed under the leadership of Mr. Walden. One hundred coloured slides, showing "Canada from coast to coast" were shown accompanied by a fine lecture. A vocal solo by Miss Martin brought another worthwhile program to a close.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shannon, Owen St., was the scene of a very happy surprise party on a recent evening, when about thirty young friends of their son, Lawrence, gathered with well filled baskets to spend the evening. Cards and dancing were enjoyed, until twelve, when supper was served. Mr. Earl Dunlop and Mrs. Stewart played for the dancing while Mrs. Elmer Thompson, Miss Claire Thompson and Miss Gladys Shannon assisted in serving. A very happy time was spent.

Mrs. Nettie Wright spent Tuesday with Mrs. Fred Shannon who is ill.

MILLIONS SPENT IN DRINKING

Consumption of liquor and beer in Ontario is at a high-water, or rather a high-liquor mark, with a total sale of over $36,000,000 during the year ending October 31st last. How Ontarions can get rid of so much will likely baffle many, including those who consume some of this vast total consumption and who recognize that tourists drink some. There are large numbers of families and individuals who do not drink liquor or beer and if these were set as low as half, the inference is very clear that the per capita consumption of the rest must amount to at least twenty dollars, including children and babes that do not drink. It would mean probably over one hundred dollars a year spent in liquor in a family in which there is drinking.

The report made public yesterday shows that beer drinking in hotels was responsible for a large amount of the increase. It was also shown that the amount of domestic wine drunk fell while imported wines enjoyed a recrudescence of buying.

The government has a golden treasury, which makes nearly six million dollars in profit. But the thirty-six millions spent in liquor and beer runs into a pile of taxes of all kinds. The man who buys liquor is paying a lot of taxes with what he spends on intoxicating beverages.

SPEEDS WITH SAFETY

The world is waiting for Sir Malcolm Campbell to break his record and to make a new all-time speed of over three hundred miles an hour. Yesterday the knight who drives at the wheel instead of driving forward a lumbering charger of the percheron type as shown in medieval pictures of knight errantry said the beach at Daytona was too rough to test out at 270 miles an hour. If it is that for Sir Malcolm it would be too rough for the average driver at 100 miles. If Campbell can drive safely at the speed of 300 miles and others cannot use the highways safely at thirty-five miles an hour, it is very clear some persons should not be on the roads. If only some persons could be so mechanically wise as to know the difference between a speed of 270 miles and 300 miles! To all of us one speed is the same as the other.

WHAT NEW YORK PREACHERS ARE SAYING

At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, Bishop William T. Manning declared that the "best beginning for the forward movement all over the church would be a really well-kept Lent." While the Episcopal Church consciously and deliberately left large liberty to its members, the bishop called on all "to observe Lent by praying more, going to church more often, making special confession of sin, reading the Bible and Prayer Book at greater length and partaking of Communion more frequently.

"Let us all, clergy and laity, try quite definitely this Lent to be more faithful, more simple, and more real in our personal prayers each night and each morning. There is need of this as we all know. Even a brief time of real prayer will make the whole day a different one for us because it means that we begin the day with Jesus.

"Let us all be more faithful in taking our part in the public worship of the church. We know that in so doing we are following in the way of Jesus.

"Let us all this Lent, examine ourselves more truly and face the things in our lives that are keeping us from Christ with true repentance and confession."

The Bishop asked all to think more of the grace and strength which Christ offers in the sacraments of the church.

He recommended the reading of the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistle to the Ephesians, at least one of these four parts of the New Testament, during this season.

Experience cannot be borrowed in the spiritual realm as in athletic contests, declared the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in Riverside Church, New York. He said that the Americans were accused of having a disease "spectatoritis" and added that "we go to see other people have experiences. But there are realms where expereince cannot be borrowed. Especially is it a tragedy to live in a world, where such spiritual life is possible as Christ represents, and not to know it for ourselves—its strong faiths, its inner powers, its saving virtues—so that we can say, at least about some of it, that it is our very own."

Many practical men who ridicule the idea of divine guidance frequently trust in an intuitive sense, said Dr. Richard Lynch of New York's Unity Society, said. "Yet intuition is the inner voice of truth in the soul; it is direct insight, constant awareness, true inner perception and swift instant understanding. It is time we encouraged the education of intuition along with that of intellect. True education is a development of the whole spirit."

Rabbi Goldstein told the congregation B'nai Jeshurun that he feared man is moving backward in the wave of reaction which is sweeping the world. "While science and invention are proceeding to unprecedented heights, in the realm of morals and ethics it is devolution rather than evolution which seems to be taking place."

Bishop John McConnell of the Methodist Church Episcopal Church said the old exclusiveness of his church had passed and he upheld the idea of a united church as there was no chance of one church influencing the entire country. Only by standing together to uphold Christian ideals could the churches acquire lasting influence.

On the present age he said that these times were just as good as times in the past. There is despair in the air today but the way had been found out of previous troubles.

The aid of religion as an added force for recovery was referred to by the Rev. Dr. A. E. Keigwin, Presbyterian. He told that a statesman had told him that "a transformation such as is sought could not be achieved without changing human hearts. The classical economist, orthodox scientist, hard-headed business man question whether human natture can be changed; this public man thought it could be, as it has been many times in the past. The Christians of the second and third centuries inaugurated tremendous changes which exist until this day." Dr. Keigwin said the underlying illness of today is more spiritual than economic or political.

BETTER COUNTRY HOTELS

Proprietors of hotels in small towns and villages are advised by George H. O'Neill, honorary president of the Ontario Hotel Owners' and Managers' Association, to model their places of public accommodation after old English inns that have apparently perfected the art of attracting guests even through years that have brought tremendous changes to the business of operating a public house.

Mr. O'Neill warns the hotelmen of the rural districts that they cannot hope to have the same type of hostelry that pertains to the larger cities and must therefore employ extra resourcefulness to garner their harvest from a different kind of patronage.

If Canadian bonifaces in the rural districts hope to imitate the English inns of outstanding repute, many of them will have to remodel their houses to make them more cosy and homelike. In many cases there will have to be a radical reform of the menu so that travellers will be sure to find food that will be wholesome and attractively served.

Many inns in the English countryside are famous for the victuals which they serve. There is no reason why efficient Canadians could not emulate that example. There is no limit to the variety of appetizing food available in this country.

A determination to observe scrupulous cleanliness in all departments of the hotel will aid Canadian country hotelmen to do more business. Too many of our public houses in the rural districts are unkempt in appearance and operated in a generally slovenly manner, with poorly-cooked meals and a general air of unattractiveness in the entire atmosphere.

The man who is seriously in the business of offering public accommodation ought to recognize that guests are impressed by cleanly surroundings, first-class food, comfortable rooms and the requisite spirit of hospitality. The capacity to inject some originality into all the services will be a great promoter of trade. Good, wholesome home-cooking can be practised with advantageous results in the average country hotel. That is something that the taveller cannot get in the deluxe city tavern and if he knows a place in the country that is making a specialty along that line he is going to put forth an effort to patronize that place.

It may be argued that it is difficult to get the capital, the labor and the conveniences in the country to produce hostelries of the class outlined. It is admitted that it will equire enterprise, energy and some financial resources to accomplish such results, but these are requisites of any successful business and it cannot be expected that the public is going to lavish financial rewards on accommodation projects that offer only indifferent service, untidy surroundings and the spirit of take-it-or-leave-it, a combination that is today all too common in the country hotel ensemble.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

LOWER INTEREST

The normal way to get interest rates down is to improve the security. If he security is without question, the interest falls of itself. If the security is doubtful, the interest goes up and up to cover the risk. Vancouver has, since the first of the year, been progressively and deliberately destroying her security—not actually, perhaps, but certainly in the minds of investors and the large and influential body of financial people who advise investors, and that amounts to the same thing.—Vancouver Province.

How often in this world are the actions that we condemn the result of sentiments that we love, and opinions that we admire.

NIGHTFALL ON THE NECHES

It is nightfall on the Neches
And the gray moss-tendrils quiver,
Swaying in the wind of evening
Just above the sleepy river.

Here its low banks curve and widen,
Nearing where the journey closes,
And the salty tang of sea air
Mingles with the breath of roses.

Giant cypress trees are wading
In the ripples at its edges;
Springing thickly in the marshes
Stand the stiff, wind-wearied sedges.

Slim magnolias, towering pine trees
Cluster on the sandy reaches,
Opal-tinted glides the river
Toward the gulf's wide, silver beaches.

It is nightfall on the Neches,
Twisted cypress trees moss-laden,
Lift their arms up to the young moon,
Flying like a frightened maiden.

—Aline Michaelis.

SOON WE WILL HAVE NEW MONEY—not really new money but a new form of money in the bills to be issued by the new Bank of Canada which will be issued about March 11. The notes are six inches long and two and seven-eighth inches wide. They will be slightly shorter and slightly wider than United States notes and will be printed in French and English.

IF THE WICKED STAND IN SLIPPERY PLACES, the righteous certainly did some slipping and sliding Monday, the slipperiest day of the Glad New Year, if you know what we mean. This is just the preamble to a tragic-comedy involving three artisans, off work, and on a binge, apparently. They emerged from the liquor store in late afternoon, each one with a suspicious bulge in the hip pocket. They ascended the hill, then descended another hill, making heavy weather, with an occasional narrow escape from shipwreck. Finally one fell and the leak was pungent while the salvage was meagre. On they went, then another fell, and another smell—but Excelsior, on they went, finally to make port at a friend's house with one crock unbroken and a thirst that the one bottle failed to take off entirely. Reminds me of that story of the poor colored man who saved his pennies one by one for many weeks before Christmas and finally on Christmas Eve had enough for one bottle of his beloved gin. Again the night was slippery and the going rough, but he plodded on, bought his bottle and started homeward. To make a short story shorter Rastus slipped on the icy pavement and the crock went a-spinning to the pavement and crashed. He rose slowly and sadly, viewed the remains, then scratched his head and said, "Merry Christmas! —Christmas done been and gone already."

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT, passing upon Uncle Sam's juggling of the gold standard and his avowed intention of paying his debts with a 59-cent dollar, said that his action was illegal but there was nothing you could do about it. So, if you bought United States bonds carrying a promise to redeem in gold, legally you are entitled to gold dollars, worth considerably more than one dollar, but there is no way you can make Uncle Sam pay you in other than silver dollars worth considerably less than one dollar. In the meantime some of Uncle Sam's foreign creditors are refusing to accept payment in dollars which are worth little more than four bits.

THE GODS OF THE STORM have been riding the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans of late and so many SOS calls were filling the air from ships in distress that ordinary wireless messages were crowded off the air. So many ships were apparently in distress that there were few in condition to render aid to others and through the long nights of storm and stress each ship had to fight its own battle for life 'mid mountainous seas and terrific gales which threatened to blow all the upper works of the vessels to pieces.

Two Choices Open to the U.S. Says Gen. Johnson in Address

Lashes at Huey Long And Rev. Father Charles Coughlin

New York, March 6.—(CP)—Denouncing Senator Huey P. Long and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as "Pied Pipers" preaching revolution, General Hugh S. Johnson holds out to the United States two choices.

(1)—A return to the "solidarity and enthusiasm" which backed President Roosevelt in 1933, or

(2) Dictatorship and Chaos.

The former NRA Administrator lashed at Long and Father Coughlin —"Plausable Punchinello" and "political Padre," he called them—at a dinner in his honor last night.

"Whether consciously or not," he said, "these two men are raging up and down this land, preaching not construction but destruction, not reform by revolution, not peace but a sword."

Johnson said he expected them to hit back, and Long did it promptly.

"Those wreckers from Wall Street," shouted the Senator in Washington, "ruined Woodrow Wilson, Herbert Hoover and President Roosevelt. I'll cover Johnson's case from hell to breakfast in a speech Thursday night."

Johnson, he said, was "just a screwdriver" in the hands of Bernard M. Baruch whom he described as "Kingfish of the Lodge under Hoover, too.

Johnson called the Louisiana Senator and Michigan Priest leaders of the "emotional fringe", and adding "any desperate person is a candidate to join it," warned 80,000,000 depression victims are "ready to strike back at disaster in any way that is shown them."

Must Restore Enthusiasm

"If we can't restore something of the solidarity and enthusiasm of 1933 among our whole people, and do it quickly, we are in for trouble of the most serious sort—for if a chaos of inflation and worse follows a frustration of these plans, nothing we can hope to do will keep a dictator out of Washington, and that chaos is imminently threatened."

In lashing out at Father Coughlin, General Johnson made reference to the Priest's birth in Hamilton, Ont., when he said:

". . . . This political Padre, who does not arraign our President and our institutions in the American language without a Canadian accent, and who may or may not now be an American citizen, but certainly once was not."

To back up his contention there was an alliance between Senator Long and the Oak Park, Mich., Priest, the General said on a recent Sunday Father Coughlin announced at the conclusion of a sermon on Money and politics his topic would be taken up later in the evening by a distinguished Senator.

"And sure enough," the speaker swept on, "across the evening air, replacing the Father's melodious burring came the Kane-Brake drawl of Huey Long, expounding that priestly and saintly discourse. And the first voice Huey heard when he gave up the microphone was that of Father Coughlin, congratulating him."

Coughlin Vowed to Poverty

The former NRA administrator continued his "cracking down" to say he was for the crusading priest at the beginning, after hearing, that as a Canadian citizen he was a member of the Basilian Order, vowed to poverty.

"When I heard about a year ago his private corporation, the Radio League of the Little Flower, was interested in the silver of which he was preaching monetization. I gave the lie to that statement," General Johnson added. "When the official list was published by the Treasury Department, I saw, that I had been wrong.

"From the day of the publication of that list the Good Father has become a bitter enemy of President Roosevelt's administration. Now I don't question the right of any man to invest money as he will but when a Priest vowed to poverty and preaching to the poor flays the faith of a people to advance a monetary interest—his own or another—you can about conclude that Judas Iscariot as just a poor piker."

At another point, the speaker suggested Father Coughlin and Long might have been reading a published story an "American Hitler" would ride into Washington at the head of troops. He added:

"That would be definite to Huey because he knows what part of the horse he can be, but we have a right to object most vigorously to the sanctification of such a centaur by having the head wear the color of Rome and come intoning the Stately measures of the Church in Pious Benedication on such an unholy monstrosity."

SEXTUPLET!

The Dionne quintuplets are quite famous now—so you can imagine what a sensation was caused by sextuplets born to Jennie A. Bushnell and her husband, J. F. Bushnell in Chicago on Sept. 15, 1866. Yellowed slipping still tell about it. Of these sextuplets three are still living. One died only last year. All reached maturity. Above is Mrs. Alinca F. M. Parker, one of the living ones. She still lives at Silver Lake, N.Y. Her mother was born in France, but went to the U.S. at an early age. She married at 13 and was the mother of 17 children, including the sextuplets. At their birth she did not lose consciousness and laughingly recalled later how the doctor said: "My God, how many more," when he laid out the six little mites.

BOY SOPRANO VISITS STIRLING

Dewi Jones Welsh Singer Delights Audience at St. Paul's

Stirling—Hundreds of music lovers throughout Central Hastings gathered in St. Paul's United Church on Monday evening to listen in rapt silence to the unique recital of Dewi Jones, world famous boy soprano. It was indeed fortunate that the engagements of this outstanding youngster permitted him to grant one evening to Stirling. Before he had completed his first number, every one in his audience was aware of the unusual treat they were about to enjoy. Light footed, confident in every movement, the young genius ascended the platform, conducted by Rev. E. W. Rowland, to whom the community is indebted for the splendid concert.

Not a big boy for his twelve years, he is endowed with a talent that is beyond description, and an intellect superior to that possessed by many people more than twice his age. Dewi Jones has turned all his energy toward developing the gift bestowed upon him, to bring happiness to thousands. Apparently he loves to sing more than anything else in the world. Like all artists, his aim is to study hard in order to gain ground closer to perfection. After completing his American tour, Dewi desires to continue his studies in Italy.

At an age when most English speaking people find difficulty in mastering the mother tongue, this boy masters with apparent ease, two distinct languages in song. His vast experience before large audiences has taught him the art of reading the minds of his listeners, so that his program is arranged in a way that gives a greater amount of satisfaction, and due to this careful arrangement his numbers were carried through faultlessly.

His program was divided into three groups of songs. He opened his first group with the famous "Angels Ever Bright and Fair," by Handel, in perfectly controlled voice. His second number in this group was a Welsh song, and in concluding the group he sang, "Good Morning Brother Sunshine" In his second group he offered "Little Moon," and "Cuckoo" concluding with "Daddy", a number that reached deep into the hearts of those present. It was truly a work of art. His last group included "Advice," and "Cherry Ripe," and the ever popular "When Apples Grow Upon the Lilac Tree." Although he had rendered nine complete songs, the audience was not content, and after minutes of applause he responded by singing an encore, "Prayer Perfect." Professor Hunt, organist of Bridge St. United Church Belleville furnished the accompaniment at the piano in fine manner, and added to the excellence of the numbers on the program.

In addition to this fine entertainment, the work of Miss Loraine Scott in the rendition of piano numbers, greatly delighted the audience. Her first number was "Pollchanelle" by Rachmaninoff, and later she offered a descriptive number, "The Harmonica Player," by Guion. For an encore she gave a classical arrangement of "Turkey in the Straw," by the same composer. Miss Scott's ability at the piano is well known hroughout this part of the country, and coupled with the fine work of Master Dewi Jones and Professor Hunt, provided a concert of exceptional quality. The church was filled yith an appreciative audience that made no secret of the fact that they were more than pleased.

Young People's organizations of other churches in the community withdrew their regular meetings that their members might attend the concert. St. Paul's Young Peoples' Society gave the entire evening over to Master Dewi Jones, and in doing so, unconsciously paved the way for music lovers of Centre Hastings to enjoy a treat they will not soon forget.

Miss Helen Geneva Wright Weds Mr. Francis G. Rose.

Miss Helen Geneva Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Wright and Mr. Francis Gerald Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rose of Wooler, were married at a quiet ceremony in St. James Catholic Church, Stirling, on Monday morning, March 4th at nine o'clock. Rev. Father Farrell officiated, and Mrs. Clinton McGee played the wedding music. Mrs. Emery sang "On Wings of Time," during the signing of the register. The bride wore a dress of ankle length, national blue transparent velvet, tunic style, hat and shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty Roses, and Baby Breath Maiden Hair Fern. She was attended by Miss Nora Miron, cousin of the groom, who wore a blue ensemble with hat and shoes to match, and carried carnations. Mr. Hugh Rose of Wooler was his brother's groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Rose left later for a short honeymoon in Toronto. The bride travelled in a modish suit of mustard matelasse crepe, with brown satin trimming, with hat and shoes of brown, and a beaver coat. The grooms gift to the bridesmaid was a silver compact, to the pianist, a and to the soloist a centre piece.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Burke, 14 Highland Avenue, wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Marguerite Isabel (Peggy) to James Kenneth Crosby, son of Mrs. and the late Mr. James Crosby, of Ameliasburg. Marriage will take place March 16th.

Mrs. S. Twining, who has been a patient at Belleville General Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home on Bleecker Avenue.

Due to a fractured right ankle received when he slipped and fell on a patch of ice, Mr. James Lorimer is at present confined to the Belleville General Hospital.

Miss Kitty Howie, Dundas Street, who has been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital for some days suffering from blood-poisoning, has recovered sufficiently to return to her home.

Mrs. Marion Poste has returned to the city after attending the Spring Millinery Openings.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Wilson have returned to the city after an extended vacation trip to the West Indies, Panama and California. They were detained one week in New York owing to the illness of Mr. Wilson.

A very enjoyable game of euchre was held at St. George's Hall, Station Street, by the ladies of the Guild. The prizes were won as follows: ladies' first, Mrs. Jack Hall; second, Mrs. A. S. Newman; third, Mrs Bill Taylor; men's first, Mr. Dick Snell; second, Mr. Frank Markle; third, Mr. Wm. Raynor. After the cards a dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the Guild.

At the Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations held at Albert College recently, the following pupils of Mrs. Pearl McLaughlin were successful. Theory: Grade III Harmony—Winnis Kiser, honours; Ruby Howes, honours; Donald Dies, Grade III History—Bessie Way, honours. Grade I Rudiments—Phyllis Knight, 1st class honours.

Under the auspices of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, No. 133, a progressive euchre and dance was held in the I.O.O.F. Temple on Tuesday evening at the conclusion of a short business meeting. A number of tables were in play with competition keen for the prizes offered. Those successful in securing favors were as follows: Ladies, Mrs. E. Cleeton, first; Mrs. A. Elliott, second; Mrs. Baker, third. Gents, G. Miller, first; W. J. Hall second and F. Charlton, third. The door prize, a sack of flour, was won by Mr. W. Muir. At the conclusion of cards the floor was cleared and dancing was indulged in by many present. Suitable music was provided for the numbers by Bob Clare's Orchestra.

Last evening friends gathered at the home of Mrs J. Ingram, Moira Street, to honor her daughter, Mrs. Dick Burrows (nee Crissie Meldrum) with a miscellaneous shower. During the evening cards were played, the winners being, Mrs. C. Bolton, Miss Mary Carmichael, Miss Anne Browning, consolation, Mrs. Jay Murphy. At midnight a daintily arranged basket was carried in, laden with gifts, and presented to "Crissie" on behalf of her friends by Mrs. C. Bolton. Crissie thanked her many friends for the lovely presents in her most gracious manner. A dainty lunch was served after which her friends left for their homes wishing the young bride bon voyage through life.

SHORTER COLDS VICKS VAPORUB
PROVED BY 2 GENERATIONS

The supper arranged by the Parish Guild of Christ Church in the Parish Hall last evening, was a splendid success. Mrs. Bob Burke was the efficient convener assisted by Mrs. Storms, Mrs. Sprung, Mrs. Reg. Hinchey, Mrs. C. P. Bishop, Mrs. Chaplain, Mrs. Harry Ketcheson, Mrs. Neate and Mrs. Wilson. During the supper hour, Miss Leeman presided at the piano. Mr. Jimmy Varley acted as song leader for community singing. After the delicious supper had been served there was an interesting program which included a piano and violin number by the Lennox brothers, piano selection by Mr. Maybee and a recitation by Douglas Bateman. The angel cake donated by Mrs. Scott was won by Mrs. Jack Hinchey.

Captain T. D. Ruston was guest of honor at a delightful surprise party arranged last evening by Mrs. Ruston and Mrs. A. W. Martin to mark the occasion of his birthday. About thirty-four friends gathered at his home, Cedar Street, and spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening. Travel talks by two guests, music and song made the evening pass all too quickly. Capt. Ruston was presented with a handsome gift by his friends. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. W. Hart, Mrs. W. Lockyer and Mrs. Jones before the party came to a close.

Assembling in the main offices on Pinnacle Steet on Friday evening, employees of the "Big A" Company of this city, gathered to pay their respects to a valued member of the sales staff of the company, Mr. Ray Lockyer, on the eve of his marriage, which took place on Saturday. Following brief addresses by his fellow employees, Mr. Lockyer was presented with several beautiful gifts, including a floor lamp, smoking set and other house furnishings. The remainder of the evening was spent in social chat and concluded with a well prepared buffet lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Laidlaw, Vancouver, and Miss Mary Roberts left today for Montreal where they will be joined on Saturday by Mrs. A. Roberts and Miss Mary Kelso and proceed to New York. The party sails next week on the Conte di Savoia of the Italian line to Naples and will spend the next three months on the continent.

Jackie Cooper, Evelyn Brent and Randolph Scott in "Home on the Range", main feature attraction coming to the Capitol tomorrow.

Mrs. A. Black, Cannifton, has returned home from Toronto where she attended the marriage of her grandson, Clare Black, to Miss Nellie Hargraves of Durham. The ceremony was performed in the Anglican Church by Rev. C. Clarke former rector of Christ Church, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends. A reception was held at the groom's home for about thirty-five guests. Miss Mildred Procter acted as bridesmaid and Robert Black assisted the groom. Fred Middlemas and Howard Black were the ushers. Clare is well known here having spent most of his holidays for the past seventeen years with his grandparents, Mrs. Black and the late Alonzo Black. The young couple will reside at 164 Gilbert Avenue, Toronto.

Too Cold For Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Four persons are leaving after spending an evening visiting us. I will call them A. B. C. and D. We accompany them to their car which is parked in an alley in the rear of the apartment where we live. It is late in the evening, dark and cold. Two other persons drive up after our guests are seated and ready to drive away I will call the newcomers E. and F.. E. and F. know Mrs. A. and Mrs. B., but have never met Mr and Mrs. C. and D.

There is no time for conversation of any kind and in the darkness they could not possibly see the parties concerned. What I would like to know is, if, under these conditions, an introduction was necessary or proper?

C.

Under these circumstances it would be entirely out of order, very forced indeed, to attempt to make any introductions.

Gentleman Assists

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Does a gentleman always help a lady put on her coat, or is it proper for her to do so herself? 2. Does he always open the door for the lady when they are leaving the lady's home together?

Constant Reader

1. The man should help the woman put on her coat. This is a polite service that a woman always expects of a man. One more thing about this: he should not give over this gallantry to a servant. That is, when they are given a table in a restaurant, he does not take his seat until he has gone to the woman's chair and helped her take off her coat and arranged it on the back of the chair. And when they start to leave, he again goes to her chair and helps her on with her coat. 2. Yes. And a well-bred woman waits for a man to open a door for her.

Glad to Have Met You

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When someone says "I'm glad I met you" what should one answer? 2. Is it proper to say "Thank you" when someone says, "I like your dress?"

S.

1. "I'm glad to have met you" is better than "I'm glad I met you". And when a gracious person says this, we say, "Thank you, I'm very happy to have met you too", or "Thank you, Mrs. Brownson. I'm very glad to have met you too".

2. Yes. We may say, for instance, "Thank you, I'm so glad that you like it", or "thank you. It is kind of you to tell me — and I'm very proud that you like it", or even, "Thank you. I'm so glad that you like this dress, for I like it too".

JUNIOR

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I have a sister who became Mrs. John Jones, junior. Since her marriage her father-in-law has died, so she and her husband have dropped the junior. She now has a son John and signs his name John Jones, junior. I should think he would be John Jones, third. Which is correct? 2. When should you use junior or Jr.?

M.

1. You do not tell me if your sister's mother-in-law is living. It is this fact that determines the answer to your question. If her husband's mother is living, she is Mrs. John Jones, and your sister's husband would still be John Jones, Jr., and your sister would be Mrs. John Jones, Jr. Then the baby would be John Jones, third. If your sister's mother-in-law is not living, then your brother-in-law drops the Jr., and of course your sister does the same. They are Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, and their son is John Jones, Jr.

2. If we use the abbreviation of junior, we capitalize it — Jr. If we spell out the word, we do not capitalize it — junior.

After-dinner Coffee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Please advise me when the service plate is removed when there is no soup served at dinner? My meal will consist of fruit cocktail, fish, roast and so forth. Is the service plate removed with the fruit cocktail or the fish?

2. I am serving after-dinner coffee in the living-room. Shall I serve my cordials with the dessert at the table, or with the coffee or after the coffee?

B.

1. The best form is for you to have the service plate removed with the plate and sherbet glass of the fruit cocktail. The general rule is that the service plate is removed when the first heated plate is brought on the table, and the fish plate should be heated. Some hostesses, however, have the fish plate served on the service plate, and there is no harm in doing this if you wish. As a matter of fact, some fish or entree plates are designed to "go with" certain patterns of service plate. That is, the border decoration of the fish or entree plate echoes in some definite way the design on the service plate. But in any event your service plates should be removed as the heated plates for the roast course are placed.

2. When you are planning to serve your after-dinner coffee in the living-room—and I am so happy that you are following this charming and friendly custom—do not serve your cordials at table. They are served with, or after, the coffee, as it is convenient. If you yourself are serving the after-dinner coffee, you will find it more convenient to serve the cordials after the coffee.

Napkins

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a dozen beautiful napkins twenty-seven inches square for a gift. They are in one piece, not hemmed or cut. I really cannot use them as napkins as I think they are too good. You see, I never have a formal dinner, and for every day use they are really too good. I have been wondering if you could suggest what I could make out of them? I'd deeply appreciate any suggestions.

J.

Please, I beg you, don't consider making anything but beautiful napkins from this cloth that is intended for napkins. The giver of this most lovely gift gave them to you for this use—and it is gracious of you to respect the intention of this gift, and enjoy it as the giver hoped that you would enjoy it.

Don't be held back by the fact that you don't give formal dinners. Think what enjoyment you will have using them for your informal dinners, or for your intimate family dinners. Life is short—get all the beauty and delight out of having and using this kind gift as it was intended and planned for you.

Regrets

Dear Miss Beeckman:

Does a formal invitation to the wedding of my niece in a distant city require a reply if I cannot attend because of the distance? If so, what form should I take?

K.

If your invitation is to the ceremony only, a formal invitation, it does not require an answer. But if it is to the reception also—with the second line reading, "request the pleasure of your company"—then it must be acknowleged. Your regret would read like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Royal regret that they are unable to accept kind invitation for
Tuesday, the first of May.

Just in case you buy a gray suit for early spring wear, give a thought to the smart ensembles consisting of hat, gloves and scarf, now available in various shades of red, as well as in various fabrics including velveteen, corduroy, wool, taffeta and satin.

Just one tug on the tassel of a jewelled fob and the top of a vanity opens automatically to reveal makeup supplies. The same idea is introduced for cigarettes. The cases come in the finest leathers for daytime and exquisite fabrics with jewelled touches for night.

A good thought being developed by millinery stylists is that of having crown and brim in contrasting fabric and color A smart hat of this type is a capeline with brim of navy felt and low, rounded crown of white pique. At the side is a large white pique flower with green leaves.

Not over yet is the rage for the tailored evening frock in rich metal cloth. A new model is in gold lame and is made on simple two-piece lines with basque bodice and scalloped peplum. The neckline has a slightly circular ruffle and two ruffs; one to form a dropped shoulderline and the other, a continuation of the neckline, to add a softening effect.

An ideal suit is one that can be worn under a winter coat and will be right for wear alone when Spring comes. Such a suit is in brown fancy woolen with white hairs on the surface. The jacket buttons high and has four flat patch pockets. The skirt has outside stitching on the seams.

On top of the new millinery mode will be the capeline for afternoon wear. A new model is made of peacock blue leghorn. The wide brim is lifted at one side and the hat is trimmed with old blue, green and light blue velvet ribbon and a cluster of tiny red roses and daisies.

RED FOX PLENTIFUL IN THIS DISTRICT

Not in the memory of oldest residents of Prince Edward County have foxes of the common red variety been so numerous throughout the county as during the past winter and even at the present time, it is reported by Mr. Ed Belnap, well known resident. Constant daylight raids into the poultry flocks, during which time the hungry animals pursued the squawking fowl even into the barnyards have caused considerable loss to the owners, seeking some way to end the nuisance, it was reported. throughout Tyendinaga an increase in Reynard was also reported lately. Owing to their increase, pelts this year have fallen off in price, it was stated by local furriers this week.

CHRISTIANITY BRINGS NEW LIFE TO INDIA

Paper Read by Mrs. H. Lattimer at W. M. Society Meeting

"Christianity has brought a new life to India; it has given India not a dead Mohammed, nor a set of rules, but a "living Christ", said Mrs. H. Lattimer of this city in reading a carefully prepared paper on "What Christianity Has Done for India," at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society held in the Bridge Street United Church parlors.

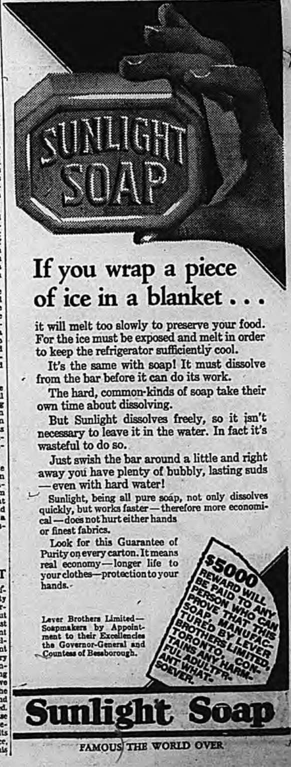
The meeting was opened with prayer by Mrs. James Semple and after the singing of a hymn, blessing was asked by Mrs. E. N. Baker. This was followed by a reading from the devotional leaflet by Mrs. Wallace.

Following the transaction of regular business and reports of the various committees, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. W. H. Finkle and her assistant, Mrs. B. C. Sisler. The subject chosen for the afternoon was "The Religion of India, and What They Have Done for the People" and many excellently prepared readings were given.

Mrs. Sisler spoke of Hinduism "whose roots run deep in the race history of India". She explained the original significance of the caste system. Mrs. Sisler was followed by Mrs. F. R. Budden, who favored with a beautiful solo "Prayer Perfect."

Mohammedanism, the different phases of the life of Mohammed, the effects of his teaching on the Arabs and later on the Hindus of India, was clearly and vividly portrayed by Mrs. G. H. Stobie. Mrs. Stobie was followed by Mrs. A. E. May who read her carefully prepared paper on "Buddhism". This was followed by a solo from Mrs. Stobie, who sang "I Shall Not Pass This Way".

During the meeting Mrs. W. E. Gartley gave the Scripture reading from Mathew, Chapter 16, and offered prayers.



If you wrap a piece of ice in a blanket . . .

it will melt too slowly to preserve your food. For the ice must be exposed and melt in order to keep the refrigerator sufficiently cool.

It's the same with soap! It must dissolve from the bar before it can do its work.

The hard, common-kinds of soap take their own time about dissolving.

But Sunlight dissolves freely, so it isn't necessary to leave it in the water. In fact it's wasteful to do so.

Just swish the bar around a little and right away you have plenty of bubbly, lasting suds —even with hard water!

Sunlight, being all pure soap, not only dissolves quickly, but works faster—therefore more economical—does not hurt either hands or finest fabrics.

Look for this Guarantee of Purity on every carton. It means real economy—longer life to your clothes—protection to your hands.

$20,000 VOTED FOR ADDITION TO P. SCHOOL

Mary St. School to Have Two Extra Rooms to Relieve Over-crowding

Picton, March 6—John L. Graydon—known as "Jack" to a host of friends—passed away at his home Main Street, West, at eleven o'clock Monday evening, March 4th. His health had been broken down in the summer of 1934, but in the autumn, had improved. Since last December he has been seriously ill.

Mr. Grayton has spent his entire life in his present home in Picton. He was born sixty-two years ago a son of John Henry Grayton and his wife Margaret Lawson. On his mother's side he was descended from the Washburn family, one of the pioneer families of Picton.

For forty-three years Mr. Grayton was connected with the dry goods firm of A. Bristol and Son, importers and later with the Canadian Department Store, when the T. E. Eaton Company purchased the Bristol business. He was known to almost every resident of the county, and possessed a bright, witty, and interesting personality.

He was a member of Prince Edward Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 18 and was secretary of Prince Edward Chapter for the past thirty years. He had for many years been a member of the Collegiate Institute Board, and had been secretary treasurer of that board for the past twelve years. He was also secretary for many years of the local Horticultural Society. He was a correspondent for the Toronto Globe for a number of years. On Nov. 9th he was appointed Deputy Registrar of Prince Edward County.

Twenty-two years ago Mr. Grayton married Miss Emily Vanderlip of Brantford, a member of one of the pioneer families of Brant County who survives. Surviving also are two sons Jack and Billy and one daughter Mary at home, the eldest eighteen years of age. The members of Mr. Grayton's family surviving are one brother George A. Grayton of Chicago, and three sisters, Mrs. A. J. Ford (Helen); Mrs. Edith Cashman and Miss Annie Grayton all of Vancouver, B.C.

Mr. Grayton's health was not good in the summer of 1934 but in the autumn it improved and he took over his new duties in the Registry Office. Since Christmas he has been seriously ill.

The funeral service will be held at his late residence on Thursday, March 7th at 2.30 p.m. under Masonic auspices with interment in Glenwood cemetery. Rev. David Wren will conduct the service.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Mary Magdalene's Church were hosts of the Wellington A.Y.P.A. on Monday evening in the parish house. A goodly number of young people with Rev. J. M. Brownlie journeyed to Picton and a number of young people of the town were also guests of the society. The guest speaker of the evening Mr. R. McKenzie of Belleville, was unable to be present because of the icy roads. He telephoned his regrets and hoped to be able to come at a later date. A short business meeting was held with the president, Mrs. Jack Perkins in the chair. Miss Emma Haylock, secretary, read the recent invitation of Christ Church A. Y.P.A. Belleville which did not arrive in time for Picton members to make arrangements to accept. The student Troubadours orchestra, with Miss Dorothy Duetta, Fred Newman and Maurice Gibson, supplied for dancing. At eleven o'clock supper was served and the dancing enjoyed later until after twelve.

At the meeting of the town council on Monday evening approximately $20,000.00 was voted to the Picton Public School Board to be used for the addition of a passage[illegible] and two extra class rooms on the Mary Street School. The average number of pupils in the rooms of the two public schools is 52 and it is thought the two new class rooms will take care of a sufficient number of pupils to reduce this average to 42.

Miss Florence Sayers left on Monday for Galt where she expects to take a position. She will be with her aunt, Mrs. J. Fortune in that city.

Mrs. Garnet Cowan is making progress towards recovery following a recent thyroid operation performed by Drs. Boulter and Allison in hospital here.

Mrs. E. C. Garbutt is ill at her home, Centre Street.

Mrs. Harold Franklin was called to Picton from Toronto owing to the illness of her father, Mr. Wm. Turpin whose condition is slightly improved.

Miss Verna Cook of Belleville, spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sayers, Owen Street.

A MILLION INCREASE

Toronto, March 6—(CP)—Revenues of the Ontario Treasury Department for the past four months of the new fiscal year, November to February inclusive, increased by $1,055,345 over the corresponding period of 1933-34, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced yesterday.

The government plans to change the ending of the fiscal year from Oct. 31 to March 31.

AT THE BELLE

"Biography of a Bachelor Girl" Two Stars Head Brilliant Cast in Refreshing Comedy Romance

Film entertainment of exceptional merit is in store for Belleville and vicinity moviegoers with the showing Tomorrow and Friday, matinee and evening, at the Belle Theatre of "Biography of a Bachelor Girl", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaptation of the Theatre Guild success, "Biography", which enjoyed a long run on Broadway with Ina Claire in the starring role.

The photoplay version of S. N. Behrman's social comedy brings together for the second time Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery whose joint performances in "When Ladies Meet" made that one of the most delightful of last season's pictures.

A Distinctive Group

The distinctive supporting cast features Edward Everett Horton in the role of a pompous, big-wig politician from the backwoods state; Edward Arnold whose performance as the drunken millionaire husband in "Sadie McKee made him Hollywood's most sought after character actor; Una Merkel, without whom no comedy cast is complete; Charles Richman who created the role of "Kinnicott in the original play; Greta Meyer and Willard Robertson.

Everyone connected with the filmization of "A Biography of a Bachelor Girl" is an expert in his or her field. Behrman, author of the play, has written such outstanding successes as "Brief Moment", "The Second Man" and "Meteor", to say nothing of the dialogue of Greta Garbo's "Queen Christina".

Anita Loos, who wrote the talkie script, is noted not only for "Gentleman Prefer Blondes", but also for such Jean Harlow cinema hits as "The Girl from Missouri" and "Red Dust".

Edward H. Griffith, who directed the new picture, has long been associated with Ann Harding and was largely responsible for such of this star's hits as "Holiday" and "Paris Bound".

Action and Excitement

No better selection than Miss Harding and Montgomery could have been made for the leading roles of the story which concerns a young lady portrait painter slightly down on her luck, and a magazine editor equally anxious to better his fortunes. When these two put their heads together and join their respective careers plenty of action and excitement ensues.

From all reports no expense was spared in equipping this picture with handsome settings. The outdoor scenes, taken at mile-high Lake Arrowhead in California, are said to be among the most beautiful to be ever used for a motion picture background.

Exceptional Shorts

Phil Spitalny and his Musical Ladies is only one of the exceptional array of junior feature treats to be presented on the same program with "The Girl From Paradise" a tuneful and laugh-crammed musical comedy introducing a host of Radio, Vaudeville and night club entertainers and the ever welcome Pete Smith and his latest screen Oddity "Motorcycle Cossacks".

Charlie Chan, Leaving

Charlie Chan's latest and the best of the series "Charlie Chan in Paris", with Warner Oland again in the role of Chan, filmdom's fascinating oriental detective with Mary Brian and Thomas Beck supplying the romantic interest in the story will be presented at the Belle Tonight for the last times. George Brent and Josephine Hutchinson are co-starred in "The Right to Live" a smashing drama of life and love, and the second feature attraction on the same program. Edwin C. Hill in the Belle Latest News of the World completes a pleasing program of screen entertainment.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Home On The Range" Zane Grey's Story Brings Jackie Coogan Back to the Screen in Cowboy Role!

Grown into a tall, bronzed and handsome young man, Jackie Coogan of "The Kid" fame, returns to the screen for his first adult role in "Home on the Range" which opens Thursday at the Capitol Theatre.

And fully accoutred with Stetson hat, high-heeled boots and six shooters, Jackie Coogan proves as hard-riding and straight-shooting a Western star as Randolph Scott, Addison Richards, Fuzzy Knight or any of the other three hundred famous cowpunchers who appear in the film.

With Evelyn Brent and Ann Sheridan providing the feminine interest, "Home on the Range" is the story of the deadly feud between a gang of crooks and the rancher-brothers, played by Coogan and Randolph Scott.

Through devious channels the crooks get control of the ranch owned by the brothers in order to take possession of the racing horses. But Evelyn Brent, who is a member of the crooks' band, falls in love with Scott and turns the tables on her former colleagues.

There are thrilling fights and a hair-raising escape from death in a forest fire. But these are only preludes to the blood-tingling horse race in which Jackie Coogan rides his horse, Midnight, to victory, after the crooks have been bested.

Background music, throughout the film, is furnished by the supremely fine voice of Joe Morrison, famous for "The Last Round-Up", who sings "Home on the Range".

Second Feature Attraction:

"She Had to Choose"

The movies during the past few years have flourished on stories revolving around hotels, steamers, railway stations, etc. The latest in the group is "She Had to Choose", a picture that weaves a plot around doings in a "drive-in" barbecue stand, peculiarly native to Southern California.

Isabel Jewell, dazzling young leading lady, plays a Texas girl, who finds herself in one of these stands during the climax of several days of forced fasting. Larry "Buster" Crabbe, the owner of the stand, feeds her, then offers her a job and shelter in his mother's home. A wholesome romance develops as Miss Jewell, a waitress now, becomes more and more infatuated with her boss.

Sally Blane, as a fluttery young heiress, complicates the heart duel with the attention she forces on Crabbe. The denouement is reached when Sally's brother, played by Regis Toomey, escorts Isabel to a night- club, where his sister and Larry are dining and dancing. In a spectacular scene there is a crisis to the heart-affair of Larry and Isabel and the headstrong Texas girl runs off to marry Regis.

In addition to sparkling comedy lines, love and laughter in the moonlight, and an unexpectedly dramatic climax, "She Had to Choose" is starred with music, both vocal and instrumental.

How the finish is unravelled satisfactorily provides one of the surprise endings of this year's list of films.

Capitol News Reel will be shown at each performance.

Complete shows 2.30: 7.10: 9.10.

My back was so sore I could hardly walk. A well-known druggist in Ottawa advised Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes my back started to feel better. I kept on taking them and today my back feels fine. No more soreness. No more weakness nor sickness as long as I have Dodd's Kidney Pills." D11

MURDERS FOLLOW NEW YORK'S VICE CRUSADE

At least three murders on eve of New York inquiry into alleged links between vice and "numbers" racket gangs and officialdom in New York are attributed to underworld's efforts to suppress evidence. One of them, John Murtha, was "put on spot" on street as shown below, in same manner as Herman Rosenthal, gambler, under similar circumstances years ago which led to great reform in Gotham affairs. Rev. George Drew Egbert (RIGHT, ABOVE), has become a modern Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst in the new crusade, with Samuel Marcus (LEFT) special attorney ferretting out activities of "Dutch" Schultz, Public Enemy, whose sinister shadow hangs over New York rackets.

Obituary

LATE MAJOR J. I. HARTT

(Contributed)

Death removed one who had been a conspicuous figure in the political life of Orillia and of East Simcoe for many years when James Irwin Hartt passed away on Sunday, at the age of 69. Major Hartt had been in ill health for several years, and his death was not unexpected.

Major Hartt was best known as Conservative member of the Legislature for East Simcoe two terms, from 1911 till 1919. In his first election, in 1908, he was defeated by Mr. J. B. Tudhope by 180 votes. Three years later, however, he defeated the late Erastus Long by 329 votes, and again in 1914 he was victor over the late Herbert Cooke by 899. While in the Legislature he did yeoman service in support of the Whitney and Hearst Governments. In 1919 he was defeated by Mr. J. B. Johnston, who ran on the Labor-Farmer ticket, by 471. This was a three-cornered contest, the late Duncan C. Anderson being the Liberal candidate. When Mr. Finlayson wrested the Conservative nomination from him in 1923, Mr. Hartt withdrew from active political life, and entered the service of the Government as inspector of Crown timber agencies and supervisor of timber operations in Ontario, a post which he held until ill health forced his retirement.

Born in Riverstown Count Sligo, Ireland, J. I. Hartt came to Canada as a boy of sixteen. In 1900 he came to Orillia and established the Hartt Lumber Company. When the war broke out, he took an active part in the recruiting of the 157th and 177th Regiment, and accompanied the latter overseas, with the rank of Major After that unit was broken up in England, he went to France in command of the 48th Forestry Company, a post for which his lumbering experience had fitted him. After his return he continued to take an active interest in the welfare of his soldier comrades, particularly those who were suffering disability because of their war service.

Major Hartt also held a high place in the Orange Order, and had held the office of Grand Master for Ontario West. He had also been Supreme Grand Master of the Loyal True Blues in Canada, and was a member of the Black Knights. He was a member of the Chosen Friends and of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. He was a member of the Methodist Church and afterwards of the United Church, and was for a number of years teacher of the Ryerson Bible Class.

Major Hartt is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Flora E. Carter, of Trenton, also four daughters and one son, Mrs. E. Silverthorne, Bowsman River, Manitoba; Mrs. Kenneth Hill, Trenton; Mrs. Cecil Litster, Oshawa, Miss Hilda Hartt, at home, and James G. Hartt, Orillia. He was buried Tuesday afternoon with full military honours. The Orillia Kiltie Band led the funeral procession and amongst those attending were representatives of the Town Council, the Canadian Legion, the Simcoe Foresters and the fraternal organizations with which Mr. Hartt had been connected. The service in St. Paul's Church was conducted by the Rev. W. E. Baker. The pallbearers were Major Walter Scott, Barrie; Major Rodgers, Camp Borden; Major Clark Wallace, Major John Clark, Major B. H. Mainer and Captan J. C. Miller, Orillia. At the cemetery the last post was sounded by Bandsman B. F. Leeking.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

The Silver Jubilee of His Majesty King George V., who ascended the throne on May 6, 1910, will be commemorated in THIS PAPER by a series of intimate pictures of the King and his consort, Queen Mary. These pictures, presented with anecdotes and historical data, will review the lives of our King and Queen from early childhood to the present day

Hog Prices Mixed

Toronto, March 5.—(CP)—Bacon Hog prices held steady today in a range of from $7.00 at Chatham and London to $7.75 at Hull. Stratford and Kitchener supplies sold at $7.35 while Brantford hogs brought $7.40. At Peterborough $7.25 was quoted.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 6 (CP)—An early sag in the industrial share section was changed into a vigorous rally by noon, helped by a report from Washington President Roosevelt ored higher commodity prices. The market accepted the statement as an inflation signal and buying of shares speeded up. Ford A, Walkers Common, Nickel and the oils had gains of a point or more for a time but as the flurry subsided, some of the gains were dropped.

C.P.R. had a gain of 1-4 in the rally but by early afternoon it was at 10 3-8. Its low mark since 1933. Nickel dropped half its gain while Smelters held up with the metals in other markets.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 6—(CP)—The gold stocks had a nice rally in the morning session on the strength of the new advance in the price of gold in London. Volume was heavy in the first three hours, the turnover in that time equalling the entire trade on Tuesday. Gains up to 2.50 were boarded in the senior gold group and the secondary issues advanced 5 to 15 cents each. Trading slowed down in the early afternoon.

McWatters was again the feature of the trading. At the opening the price was pushed to 1.95 following a dip to 1.75 the price firmed again and this afternoon was holding around the top.

Silver shares moved slowly and these as well as the base metals were very little higher with the exception of Noranda which added 1.50.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, March 6—(AP)—Just as the stock market was preparing to receive another downward kick today, help came from the White House in the form of remarks by President Roosevelt, interpreted by some as presaging another cut in the value of the United States dollar.

Gold and silver mining issues led the initial spurt with recoveries of 1 to 3 points but later slipped back.

Among shares recording advances of 2 to around 3 points were U. S. Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine, American Can and Case. Aside from McIntyre Porcupine, most Canadian shares were only slightly changed. Dome advanced 5-8 of a point and Dominion Stores was 1-4 higher. International Nickel held unchanged.

Bonds Firmer

Toronto, March 6—(CP)— The bond market firmed today. Particularly the power issues which were hammered last week as a result of criticism of power contracts. Gatineau 5's, Beaharnois and McLane, Quebecs were up about two points to day. The Gatineau 5's selling at 91 1-4 to 92 1-2 against a close around 89 1-2.

The whole market was up. High grades moving with less alacrity than the corporations. At mid-day the government issues were a little higher and firm.

The noon-hour advance in sterling from a low opening helped to stiffen the Canadian bond price level.

MARKETS RALLY AFTER ADDRESS

Decline of Pound is Quickly Checked at New York

New York, March 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt's remarks concerning the value of the United States dollar at his press conference today were followed by a brisk rally in the stock market and a moderate sag in U. S. Government Bonds.

A fresh decline in the pound was quickly checked. The pound had dropped to a new low since 1933 at $4.72 1-2, off nearly four cents, but it quickly recovered its loss.

Within a few minutes, several issues had pushed up $1 to $4 a share. The buying quickly subsided however.

KING'S SON AT JAMAICA

Kingston, Jamaica, March 6. —(CP Cable)—The Duke of Gloucester, third son of Great Britain's Royal family, reached here today for a few days of sport before continuing his homeward voyage rfrom Australia and New Zealand.

Thousands of Kingston residents cheered him through the streets.

Change of Business Practices Is Forecast by Prof. Walker

Stabilization of Business is Seen as One Result

"Conditions will not improve until we do effect some changes, I think, and I do not believe that business improvement will continue and that we will be safeguarded from depressions unless we do effect some of the changes to which I will refer," said Prof. C. E. Walker, acting director of commercial courses at Queen's University speaking before the Greater Citizenship gathering under the auspices of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce last evening. His subject was "Suggested Changes in Business Practices with a View to Stabilization."

A number of present day practices which he condemned would have brought about evil results in business if the big depression had not come he added.

That business practices must be based upon sound principles was self-evident, Mr. Walker affirmed, approaching the problem from the point of view of an accountant. Here are some of the things he said:

Must Know Cost

"Business men must know cost. Sufficient attention is not given by businessmen in determining cost. This cost must take account of the material, the merchant must know how to buy in the best market at the best price.

"The best market is where there is fair competition. I am speaking not as a socialist nor communist. I believe in capitalism, but I think changes must come.

"There must be a fair wage—we must realize the claim of the wage earner. We must recognize the wage cost is an essential—that goods cannot be placed on the market without expenditure of labor and capital.

"I believe that when competition is fair, every manufacturer and merchant can pay a fair wage. I cannot see any justification in such wages being paid as we have recently been told.

Safeguards

"The cost must carry a fair share of overhead. The cost includes a fair return on capital and unless we get fair returns and capital is fairly safeguarded, we cannot continue in business. We must build business for permanency.

"What does it cost to do business? We must prepare an honest record. It is absolutely essential that proper accounting records be kept. We must before we go into business prepare a scientific budget and must keep within the budget. Management problems can best be solved by those who know the most about them.

"Do we know the cost?" Prof. Walker told of a business which dropped thirty lines because they were not paying and another which dropped two departments.

Taking of Losses

"We must build a sound financial structure and take our loss when it does occur. Losses like bad debts have to be taken care of, though losses such as come in a depression cannot be forecast.

"Depreciation must be taken account of and provided for over a number of years. The sliding scale of depreciation moving as profits go up and down is not fair.

A depreciation is a part of cost. It is a problem of the engineer, not of the accountant though the accountant takes the report presented him.

"Inventories must be valued. Close observation of executive heads can reduce one inventory. There is no value in keeping idle capital in inventory.

"Goods must be kept which will be sold.

"Every business man has to keep his own business solvent, it is a moral obligation. Bankruptcy is a serious thing with loss and disruption to creditors. Sound business will guard against insolvency.

Rewards of Business

"What advantage is it to go into business?" the man with a job, an income from his savings, asks. He must receive equivalent of salary and income and have extra when he goes into business to cover capital risk. We must recognize the claims of capital because there is risk.

"I believe business develops only under the profit urge and the satisfaction that comes from service.

"There must be fair practices.

"We must not permit concealing of actual earnings, as hidden in bonuses, water stock, stock split. (The professor saw no justification in a company watering stock and selling it up $20,000,000) He told of a firm in 1914 whose stock was worth one dollar a share, and in 1933 each share had become 128 shares at $16 a share, while in the meantime $674 in cash dividends has been paid to shareholders. The money has been earned on the asset put in the business, not on the watered stock) In this case you are asking the dollars put into the business to earn nineteen times as much.

Public Knowledge Counts

"I am arguing that the public must know and this knowledge will have its influence. (Mr. Walker referred to a company whose stock was so watered, according to recent revelations that it had to be refinanced because the original money in the business could not pay the dividends.)

"Refinancing by the vendor company is merely an operation to sell out on terms which seem to them to be advantageous.

"The promoter depends on the business owner selling to you and you going out and selling to the public. It is just a boom practice, is the work of promotion.

"What does the promoter get? $100,000 and perhaps he expects to get 39 dollars a share on warrants. That refinancing is a waste. You are taking money to pay dividends on watered stock that should go to the wage earner or should be sold to the public for less.

Creation of Illusion

"Loss leader practice is not a form of advertising for the sale purposes to attract customers by creating the illusion of lower prices for all products. My criticism is this, whether you get an advantage or not, you pay. It is not fair for some other goods to have to carry their share of the overhead.

"I think there is a principle. There is a fairness in practice that will bring stability. (Mr. Walker cited investigations in bread and milk which brought the conclusion that there had not been any unfair practice by the bread and milk dealers and that if milk and bread industries had not been subjected to cutting into their lines, they would have been able to sell lower to the consumer.)

"Prices given on high grade goods, when the high grade goods are only a very small percentage—misleading advertising.

"For changing of the size of packages there is no justification.

"Conditions of the depression have been used by companiese to get a low price and a price advantage.

Price Fixing Not Feasible

"I cannot see that price fixing is feasible to any large extent.

"The earning on a dollar is fixed. Firms should show the earnings as they are. Companies which have built up reserves before the depression are now able to pay dividends when they are not being earned as in some cases at present.

"We must remember that the wage earner must have a place.

"The investigation shows, that certain firms have patronized sweat shops. Business can afford to pay a living wage and consumers can afford to pay a little more if necessary and so we will have a structure that will be stable.

Prof. Walker referred to the revelation that where the union rate for work on a dozen pairs of pants was $1.50, work of this kind had been let out to women in the homes in Quebec at 25 cents. "Those people needed work and so would rather work for the low wage than go on relief.

No Justification

"But what is the justification? Here is a man working seventy hours for seven dollars. Such companies will pay dividends and forget the wage earners. Employers must not rob employees of the reward of good work and of satisfaction.

"We do not know enough about values. We have a national research bureau. The belief is that there will soon be functioning at Ottawa a bureau of standards. We have a great deal to learn as to quality. Much research work remains to be done.

"Tooth paste—think of the cost in broadcasting, and magazine advertising! Our bureau of standards will be able to make you realize how little you get for your money in this particular product.

Protection

"I contend that no tariff can be fixed justly unless we know the costs. We must know to what extent there is need of protection. Because of protection we pay more for shoes than if there were no tariff. Think of the great number of shoes which are not made in Canada and which we want and what we pay for them." (The speaker averred that no tariff was justified that did not produce in the way of wages and returns of that nature, return to the consumer, reasonable interest on investment and plants the equivalent of something in excess of what it costs the consumer because of the impost. He referred to the attempt to get a tomato tariff which was rejected because it was felt the benefits would have been more than counter-balanced by the increased cost to the consumer.)

"Expansion of business, idle equipment—prices have to pay the cost of this. In normal times it is too great.

"There is so much of waste in manipulation in financing and promotion, in the tariff, etc. Because of this we are handicapped for money necessary to carry on business.

"I believe changes will be effected to bring the wage earner, the consumer and capital a fair return."

Mr. Leo Riggs was chairman. Mr. Walker was introduced by Mr. Ross Neill, chartered accountant and a vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. Russell Woodley.

World Day of Prayer

Once again women of all denominations, in all parts of the world will unite in a Day of Prayer. The program will be practically the same in every country. The theme is "Bear ye one another's burdens," prepared by Vice-Chairman of International Missionary Council, the Baroness Von Boezelaer of Holland. Specail attention is being given to the young people, "a new Commandment," a fine appropriate program, prepared by Miss Marjorie Trotter, Principal of Moulton College, Toronto. The fifteen congregations in our city will meet in Holloway Street Church Friday.

The World Day of Prayer has grown to something so great and far-reaching that pen fails in attempting to picture its wonders and its power.

The vision of Federation of W.M.S. Boards of Canada, led to an interdenominational prayer meeting January 9th, 1930. The Dominion-wide interdenominational Women's Day of Prayer was instituted and held two consecutive years.

In U.S.A. the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions which had previously held separate prayer meetings, came together in 1920. Two years later the Mission Boards of Canada were approached by those of U.S. who asked for a nation-wide interdenominational Women's Day of Prayer for Missions, to be held March 3, 1922. The decision was unanimous.

Every year a widening of fellowship of believing women throughout the world have united.

In 1928, the observance became worldwide. Women and girls of all lands and colors pray for missions. Beginning at New Zealand at sunrise "the voice of prayer is never silent" nor dies the strain of Praise away until the circle around the globe is completed with the Doxology forty hours later, as the sun goes down in Honolulu.

Police News

Activities were at a very low ebb in local police circles during the past 24 hours, not a single arrest being necessary and no motor accidents were reported on local streets.

A general decline in the matter of transients coming into town has been observed during the past few weeks, only four putting in an appearance at the police station last night in quest of a warm night's lodging.

A local youth was arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in police court today, held at the Court House. The lad admitted imbibing a little too freely and was given a chance to prove his sincerity relating to his future good intentions. Sentence was delayed for one month, the youth assuring the court, he would be of good behav'our and procure sure employment within that time. "We'll let you go for one month on your own promise that you will behave yourself and mend your erring ways, young man," stated His Worship at the conclusion of the proceedings.

BREAKUP IN RIVER ONE YEAR TODAY

One year ago today massive ice cakes reared and tumbled in the swollen Moira River on the first day of the most rapid spring breakup of the river in local history. The swollen river, threatening to overflow its banks and inundate the lower sections of the city carried the huge masses of ice to the car bridge where they jammed. Dynamite was suggested as a means of breaking the jam and allowing the dammed water which flooded cellars in stores, free passage. On the evening of March 5, the first breakup occurred in the upper portion of the river.

Rules to Increase Scoring Advocated for Pro. Hockey

Frank Fredrickson

Defensive play and low-scoring games long have been the chief source of unpopularity with hockey enthusiasts. Customers at professional games lay their cash on the line to see action and plenty of it. They jeer kitty-bar-the-door tactics and such safety-first methods as "golfing the puck," as they term it in the eastern state. They whoop when the twine is rattled. The more it is rattled, the merrier the spectators.

If I were lord and master of the National Hockey League I would make two rule changes in the interests of the box office. Neither of them, I am sure, would meet with the approval of the goaltenders.

First of all I would introduce a regulation against "golfing the puck" out of the defensive zone, especially when a team is shorthanded. Such methods slow up a game no end and eliminate what might well be the high spots of the show. I would advocate a rule whereby the puck must be carried out of the defensive zone, or possibly caromed from the boards over the blue line. Then, when a team happened to be short-handed, it would be in a tough spot. No end of action would result, and win, lose or draw, the onlookers would get their money's worth.

As a second move to increase drama and general excitement, I would widen the goals by one foot. It would be tough on the pad-wearers, of course, but sharpshooters would be given a greater opportunity to score from angles. Deadlocks usually the height of boredom in any hockey game, would be rarer than a hungry amateur.

Lester Patrick

No matter how many changes are made in modern hockey rules, there's always a method of defence for every method of offence. A supposedly surefire scoring play usually becomes just another manoeuvre. Strategy on the attack never will overcome a determined defence. In order to open the game, the defense must be shackled by rules rather than rushes. Not that I believe present-day professional hockey is hard to watch. Far from it. The modern game, as evolved by the Patrick brothers, is proving its worth in customer interest.

But no game is above improvement. Compared to some sports, professional hockey is still in its swaddling clothes. We all are experimenting, and eventually we hope to present hockey at its greatest point of appeal. It is a problem that will not be solved in one season.

Johnny Mitchell Possible Big-Time Whistle-Tooter

By DICK DAWSON

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

JOHNNY MITCHELL

Hamilton, March 5—Hamilton has always claimed a high place in the sporting world, but considering this fact, it is noteworthy that few of its inhabitants have gained fame as arbiters.

True, such personalities as Johnny McKelvy in football, Billy Dean in soccer, and Guy Smith in hockey, have attained some prominence, but none have ever reached the top rung in the ladder. Now, however, appears a Hamiltonian who seems destined to reach the very peak in his chosen avocation as a sports arbiter. We refer to Johnny Mitchell, considered to be one of the very best referees in the Province.

Johnny was born in Scotland just over thirty years ago, but moved to Hamilton at an early age. For about five years he has been kept particularly busy during the winter months ringing the bell or tooting the whistle at hockey games.

Brilliant Playing Career

Only a half-pint in size, Johnny showed considerable hockey ability in his school days as a centre ice player, and when he went to work for P. Thompson at the Hamilton Arena he gained much knowledge of stickhandling from Mickey Roach, then a Hamilton player. Johnny migrated to Stratford where he played on the same team as Howie Morenz, Frank Carson, Butch Kelterborn and others. As a junior, he was a decided hit at Stratford despite his lack of inches. Then he went to Guelph, where he played for the intermediate team of that city. After several seasons at Guelph, Mitchell returned to Hamilton, where he finished his career as a player in the Hamilton City League. At that time, the Hamilton Commercial League staged three games every Saturday at the Hamilton Arena, and Mitchell was chosen to take charge. His firm but quiet manner soon made him popular.

His first O.H.A. game was between Waterford and Caledonia in 1929, and from that time Mitchell has never looked back as a referee. Assignment after assignment followed, and the tougher the going the better Mitchell seemed to handle the game.

May Reach N.H.L.

Johnny has been in many tough spots on the ice, but he has never faltered and his fearless manner soon teaches players that he is one man they cannot take any liberties with. He is not without honor in his own country either, for he is the most popular referee to appear in Hamilton this season.

Recently he was appointed by President Charles King, of the International League to officiate in that league for the balance of the season, and next season he may be a member of President Frank Calder's staff, in the National Hockey League. Efficiency is the keynote of Mitchell's success as a referee.

A quiet spoken little fellow, Johnny Mitchell is a credit to his profession, for he is a perfect gentleman wherever and whenever you meet him. Success has not gone to his head, and he is young enough still to keep up with the play at all times.

Phils' Hope For First Division Aroused by Lumberjack Hurler

CURT DAVIS

A pitcher who might have won a pennant for the New York Giants last year—Curt Davis—is the savior of the seventh place Phils instead, and faith in his ability has led the lowly Philadelphians to hope for a first division berth this season.

Bill Terry of the Giants offered the San Francisco Seals $25,000 for Davis at the end of the 1933 season. San Francisco wanted more, but Terry, manager of a ball club that had just won a world series, felt that his Giants could repeat without many replacements.

Best Since Alex

So Davis finally came up to the Phils via the draft route, and at the draft price of $7,500. And all he did was to win 19 games for the downtrodden Quakers, the first record of its kind to be made since Grover Alexander's day.

Another year like that for Davis—a miraculous year in view of the little park in which the Phils play—and Jimmy Wilson's improving ball club can confidently expect an improved position in the standings. The Phil park, a bandbox in which a healthy single can carry easily for a home run, always has been a purgatory for pitchers.

Davis came into baseball accidentally 10 years ago. The town team at Grand Ronde, Ore., was shellacking a nine from Cloverdale when the regular pitcher failed to stop the home boys.

$15 Per Game

Davis did so well that day he was offered $15 a Sunday to hurl. After pitching for various semi-pro and league teams in Oregon, he was recommended to the Seals by Court Hall, 70-year-old baseball enthusiast who had seen him pitch for Ashland against Medford. The Seals sent him to Salt Lake on option in 1928, and the following season Curt started a five-year hurling career for the Seals.

In 1933 he won 20 games for San Francisco, Terry's offer was refused and the Seals finally had to let the Phils have him in the draft.

Catcher Jimmy Wilson says Davis is the smartest newcomer he ever caught. He has great control, with a good sidearm fast ball and a palm ball that resembles a spitter. He is a native Missourian, born at Greenfield, Sept. 7, 1906, the son of a farmer.

Marcum Seemed a Dud But Mack Waited; Now He's Ace

JOHNNY MARCUM

It appeared the Athletics had spent $30,000 foolishly when Johnny Marcum, rookie pitcher purchased from Louisville, lost his first six games last year. But Marcum pleaded for another chance.

"If you will be patient with me," he said to Connie, "I know I can win a dozen games for you this year."

Mack was patient. Marcum was as good as his word, winning 14 games out of his next 19, a record that few pitchers in either major league surpassed. Now he is regarded as ace of the Philadelphia staff and counted on as a possible 20-game winner in 1935.

Little of This, Little of That

Marcum has a strange assortment of stuff, and is a careful student and thinker. He throws a knuckle ball taught to him by Eddie Rommel, coach, and former pitcher. When Johnny was under Allan Sothoron at Louisville, he learned many of the master trickster's stunts. Sothoron, during his major league career, constantly kept umpires on the jump because of his varied freak deliveries.

Nick Cullop, the old left-hander, taught Johnny how to throw a screw ball. Mix in with the above a fine fast ball, fair curve and excellent change of pace and the result is bad medicine for batters. Johnny has mentally indexed most of the hitters in the league, and knows offhand what each likes to hit.

Father Semi-Pro Pitcher

Marcum is a native Kentuckian, spending the off season at Eminence, about 12 miles from Campbellsburg, where he was born Sept 9, 1909. His father, Ben Marcum was a semi-pro hurler. Signed for a trial with Louisville in 1928, Johnny was sent to Dayton, O., in the Central league in '29. Because of his hitting ability he often was used in the outfield when not on the rubber. Finally he was brought back to Louisville, where the Athletics found him late in the 1933 season.

One of Johnny's possessions is a baseball on which are written the words, "Johnny Marcum beats Schoolboy Rowe, Aug. 24, 1934, ending 16-game winning streak." Victory for Rowe in that game would have established a new American League record.

Johnny saves the last ball used in every game he pitches.

Curling Club rink. They went through eight games of the New Brunswick bonspiel without a defeat piling up a total score of 110-59 against their opponents. They will curl against Canada's best in the Toronto meet. LEFT to RIGHT: P. S. Andrews, lead; E. R. Shirley, No. 2; J. Harper Kent, No. 3 and Nick Thibodeau, skip.

AND HERE ARE THE LADDIES FROM MANITOBA

This quartet of curlers, the Pritchard rink from Killarney, Man., is the first rink from a country town to win the right to represent Manitoba in the MacDonald Brier finals which will be held in Toronto early in March. Victory in the MacDonald Brier draw brings recognition as Dominion curling champions. Pritchard defeated Congalton's Granite rink, Winnipeg 15-9 in the finals for the right to represent Manitoba. LEFT to RIGHT the curlers are: Roy Pritchard, skip; G. H. Ellis, No. 3; C. A. Boyce, No. 2, and M. H. Teskey, lead.

SOCCER .... SIDELIGHTS

Tom Groves

London, Mar. 5— Another example of a change of atmosphere working wonders for a fine football player is the case of Tommy Groves. Groves, playing the inside forward position for Blackburn Rovers, was never much of a success, but with Derby County, where he is now located, well, that is a different matter entirely. Groves never could seem to fit in with the Blackburn club, although he arrived in the Lancashire bailiwick amidst a fanfare of trumpets. His play lacked the inspiration that can make a mediocre athlete great and for a time it seemed that Groves' undoubted ability would be lost to first division play. Then he was transferred to Derby County with a sizeable lump of money changing hands in the deal, for Groves was still highly regarded among shrewd managers. The move from Blackburn was no great surprise but Groves immediately started to do wonders. Going along fine he is an asset to the Derby club and on his good days there is no more dangerous forward than the former Blackburn boy.

Conacher - Primeau - Jackson Secure 11 Scoring Points As Canadiens Swamped 10-3

First Time This Season That Line Has Really Clicked

BOSTON, HAWKS, WIN

Above Teams Failed to Break Tie For Leadership

By A. E. F. FULFORD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Clem Loughlin and Frank Patrick who have seemed anxious to bring their teams against Toronto Leafs in the National Hockey League title series, probably were wondering today why they tried so hard to finish on top in the American division.

Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins both won games last night, that kept them tied for the leadership but if they had known, what was going on at Montreal they might not have been so eager to clash with the team, that seems sure to win the International division.

Toronto burst out in their best scoring style to overwhelm Canadiens 10-3. But more significant than the one-sided win over a travel-weary team was the perfect combination the matured "kid line" of Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson and Joe Primeau displayed as they collected 11 scoring points.

The Leaf trio, voted the best in the league last year, reached their top form for the first time this season as Conacher collected four goals, Primeau got two and two assists and Jackson aided in three goals. Injuries to Jackson and Primeau had kept the line below par previously.

Frank Patrick's Bruins won 3-1 from Brother Lester's Rangers in Boston, which kept the New Yorkers in third place, a point behind Boston and Chicago. The Hawks defeated Americans 5-1 in Chicago.

Conacher's four goals last night gave him 31 for the season with four games to play and put him over the 30 mark for the fourth year in six. With 20 assists he has 51 points, only one less than the total, that gave him the league scoring title last season.

Three Goals In 2 Minutes

Besides the Conacher and Primeau goals, Toronto scored through Pep Kelly, Andy Blair, Red Horner and Buzz Boll. George Mantha, Leroy Goldsworthy and Roger Jenkins got the Canadien counters.

The section leaders banged three pucks past Cude in less than two minutes in the first period and after Mantha had cut their margin, whipped in two more counters. They could get only one in the middle frame but when the Habitants tired in the third they picked up four more.

Boston's first string line of Marty Barry, Max Kaminsky and Dit Clapper did all the scoring for the Bruins against Rangers. Each goal came in a different period and each was a solo affair. Barry got his in the first, Kaminsky followed it up in the middle frame and Clapper topped it on in the third after Cecil Dillon had picked up Rangers' goal.

Dillon robbed Tiny Thompson of the shutout Bruins have been trying to score over Rangers in nine years of N.H.L. warfare.

Five thousand fans were turned away from the Boston gardens after 17,200 had packed the place to capacity. The reserved seats were sold out yesterday morning.

Doc Romnes was the hero of the affair at Chicago, scoring three of the Hawks goals. Lorne Carr sandwiched the American tally in between Romnes' two first period goals. Mush March and Tommy Cook scored in the third before Doc got his third.

The win gave the Hawks a 4-2 margin over the Americans on the season.

CAMPBELL RINK WINS 2 GAMES

Hamilton Four Appear Headed For Canadian Championship

Toronto, March 6—(CP)— The curling princes from the Provinces buckled down today in a concerted effort to somehow stop young Gordon Campbell of Hamilton Thistles from racing through the MacDonald Brier Tankard and arriving at the Canadian championship.

After what happened yesterday there remained no doubt in any quarter, that Campbell and his young assistants, representing Ontario, were out to do better than finish second in the round-robin series. The Thistle curlers placed second to Alberta in 1933 and second last year to Manitoba.

Yesterday they scored a slam in the opening round by trouncing the Manitobans, led by Roy T. Pritchard of Killarney, 13-6, then upsetting Jim Shaw's Northern Ontario entry from Sault Ste. Marie by 18-6. It was noticed the Campbells would be the rink to beat.

Only Charles W. Durant's entry from Nova Scotia kept pace. The Halifax curlers got away to a fine start by defeating J. S. Black of Saskatchewan 11-6. In the second round the Nova Scotians won an extra-end struggle from New Brunswick, skipped by Nick Thiboudeau, 10-9.

The Campbell and Durant rinks will decide this morning, which is to move on ahead. They are drawn for the third round, while Manitoba, twice beaten, faces Alberta; Quebec plays Northern Ontario and New Brunswick meets Saskatchewan.

The double setback of the Pritchard rink from Killarney was the biggest opening-day surprise. After taking a decisive beating in the morning, the Manitobans made a close fight against the Black quartette from Saskatchewan, 13-12, in the afternoon.

Saskatchewan and Alberta broke even on the day's play. So did the Quebec entry, led by W. P. McGerrigle, which dropped a heart-breaking battle to Alberta in the second round. Alberta scored three on the final end to win by 9-8.

TWO TEAMS TIE FOR 4TH PLACE IN TRENT LOOP

Carrying Place and Benedict-Proctor to Play Off Tie

FINISH SCHEDULE

Wooler, Brighton And High School Finish in That Order

Trenton, March 6 (Special)—The schedule of the Trenton and District Hockey League was completed on Monday night. The High School ended in third place after they defeated the Co-operative Workers 7 to 2. The second game went ten minutes overtime between Carrying Place and Brighton to a 5-5 tie. Wooler ended first, Brighton second, High School third, Benedict-Proctor and Carrying Place next. They will battle on Wednesday for fourth position. The Carrying Place team led all through the game but Doug Powers scored with seconds to go to tie the pastime. A win for the Carrying Place team would have eliminated the Benedict-Proctor. A loss would have put the Carrying Place team out, one point behind the Benedict-Proctor.

In the first game the students packed too much speed and showed more condition as the game progressed. The first period found both teams on equal terms until Dadswell batted in Cain's rebound after Blondin had saved. The Workers pressed in the second but Gray stemmed them when they came in. LaBelle went through to miss the net. Later Lamore grabbed a loose puck, skated around Hyatt and scored. Rosenplot and Longdon combined. The former skated in on Gray and stopped for a second and then drove the disc past him for the Workers first counter. Derry and Staples scored for the knowledge hunters before the period closed 4-1. Heaney went through just before the bell to hit the goal post. Dadswell netted his second on a pass from Allan Lamore. Heaney scored from a scramble before Rosenplot scored again. He was stopped hard by the defence but as he fell he drilled one of his famous smoke shots that beat Gray. Jack Kidd ended the scoring when he took the puck around behind the net and shoved it past Blondin.

For the winners Kidd, Lamore and Dadswell were the pick of the forwards with Heaney and Kerr putting up a stalwart wall of defence. Rosenplot, Longdon and Zig-Aziz were the choice of the losers.

High School—goal, Gray; defence Heaney and Kerr; centre, Kidd, wings, Beale and Derry. Subs. Lamore, Cain, Dadswell, Mitchell and Staples.

Co-operative Workers—goal, Blondin; defence, Aziz and Allore; centre, LaBelle; wings, Hyatt and Benham. Subs. Crouter, Longdon, Rosenplot and Hardy.

Carrying Place 5—Brighton 5

Pulling up from an almost hopeless chance of a play-off, the Carrying Place team took one point when they held the Brighton club to a 5-5 tie that earned them a right to meet the Benedict-Proctor for fourth position and a play-off for the Courier-Advocate cup. The lads from over the canal, led by Norm Johnson and Vic Willie, led through the entire game until the dying moments when Powers rifled a hot one past Lamore off Utronki's pass. Powers was the big noise for Brighton with three goals and an assist. Vic Willie had the most points, when he scored one and assisted in three counters. Johnson scored two.

The Carrying Place team started off with a bang with Johnson, Willie and Anderson combining to pepper McKinnon. Johnson netted two from Willie's passes before Brighton could get started. Powers counted the first off Utronki's pass before the period ended. The second period got a little rough but referee Burtt sent three from each team to the cooler and the boys started to play on the ice. Both goalies were exceptionally good and time and again they turned away shots that were labelled for counters. Waddling and Pearson scored for their teams in the second. Smith, fast little centre star for Brighton, counted after he took a beautiful pass from Powers. Vic Willie, who was working hard and continually breaking up the Brighton combination, scored as the period closed 4-3 for the Carrying Place team. Brighton showed more condition in the last stanza and Powers and Utronki broke through several times before Powers evened the score. Not to be outdone the Carrying Place team took the lead when Dolan sent Willie's pass in for a goal. The last minutes was a real battle but the Carrying Place team were bunching around the puck and not sticking on the defence to protect their one goal lead. Utronki sailed in passed to Powers in front of the net giving Lamore no chance to save and the score was tied. Just after the face off the final bell rang.

In the overtime Carrying Place were content to let Brighton carry the play as a tie would let them in. A loss would have eliminated them. Anderson drew a penalty for bouncing a Brighton player off the boards but with the man short they could not score. Willie and Johnson were checking like fiends although leg weary. Lambert was taken in for repairs after a collision and both teams got a breathing spell. The final bell sounded and the game ended 5 all.

Brighton—goal, McKinnon; defence, Shannon and Wright; centre Smith; wings Waddling and Lambert. Subs. Purdy, Powers and Utronki.

Carrying Place—goal, Lamore; defence Pearson and Vieau; centre, Johnson; wings, Willie and Johnson. Subs. Dolan, Herrington, Juby, Quackenbush and Ferguson.

Referee—Ross Burtt.

T. and D. Hockey League Finish

One of the finest leagues ever completed in a town the size of Trenton was completed on Monday night. Fifty-five scheduled games were played. This is an outlay of over one hundred and sixty-five players. Plenty of material was seen to improve as the games progressed. One thing was found out that a real junior squad could have been rounded up that would have given anything in this district a real battle. The High School team alone will all be eligible for the junior ranks next year. They are well balanced from goal to the last alternate. The league afforded many who were formerly O.H.A. stars to get back and show the younger players the fine points of the game. The attendance was good and the arena made more money than for many years previous. The final standing was as follows:

	won	lost	tied	pts.
Wooler	8	2	0	16
Brighton	7	2	1	15
High School	6	2	2	14
Benedict-Proctor	6	4	0	12
Carrying Place	5	3	2	12
Frankford	4	4	2	10
Trent Cottons	4	5	1	9
Cities Service	4	5	1	9
Airport Tigers	2	6	2	6
Smithfield	1	5	4	6

DAY BY DAY

Walter Gerow, guiding maestro of baseball and hockey in Napanee, dropped in to visit us yesterday enroute home from Peterboro, where his junior O.H.A. squad was eliminated. "The Petes got the jump on us in Napanee when they beat us 3 to 1, and they have a better team, I will admit, but if we had held them to a closer score I honestly believe that we might have made the series darn interesting for them," added Walter as he made it plain, that the better team had won, however. On the other hand the Napanee team was in no way disgraced at the hands of the Petes, a veteran team. Taking into consideration that the Napanee squad is a first year team, they did remarkably well. The Gerow-coached crew won their own group with such tough opposition as Belleville and Tweed. Then they surprised the Kingston juniors by walloping them in the first round play-downs. "Our great trouble was winning games in our own rink, the front line of Tompkins, flanked by the Jackson brothers, being large ice surface players" concluded Skipper Gerow.

Although it may be a little premature there is a possibility of a new arena being erected in Napanee before the next hockey season rolls around. Would it be that Ernie Gibbard is contemplating going into hockey in a manner somewhat similar to his baseball activities? Of course it should be realized that the Gibbard A. C. sponsored the Napanee junior O. H. A. team this past season, and with so much landscape being wasted in the vicinity of the George W. Gibbard Memorial Baseball Park, it might be an ideal location for a new Arena. If such were built it would be safe in saying, that the new Napanee Arena would be a credit to the town just as much as their baseball park is today.

Naturally while conversing with Walter Gerow the subject drifted around to baseball. "What's doing in baseball down your way?" we asked. "Well it's like this, there has been some talk of an intermediate league being formed east of us embracing a picked team from the Kingston "B" loop, Gananoque and our "A" team, of course there has been nothing definite done in the matter and we are awaiting the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. before going too deep into the matter," came back Walter. "Why don't you take the pick of your two Napanee championship intermediate clubs and come into the C.O.B.L.?" we asked. "There's nothing I'd like better, but don't you think, that Napanee is a little too small, I mean in population to enter senior ball?" came back Skipper Gerow without batting an eye. "No,", says we and Walter then gave us the well known raspberry and changed the subject, the result of which we learned, that C. Jackson, brilliant left winger of the Napanee juniors, is being sought by the Campbellford Maroons for 1936. Local "big six" teams please note, apparently the Maroons are out for blood next season.

We observe by the press report of Monday night's local city council meeting that W. J. "Peeney" Mills has consented to return to his old love, baseball, for just one more season and play with the Nationals. Incidently we observed a few strange faces at last night's hockey game, by any chances would they be "ball hawks"? There seems to be an air of optimism about town relating to the future of senior baseball as President Raymond Carr stopped us on the street last night and made a request. "Say, young feller, will you tell the baseball fans of Belleville that the 1935 edition of the Nationals will be one of the classiest outfits seen on a local diamond in years," stated Prexy carr. (We sincerely hope Mr. Carr is right, as Belleville fans always can be depended upon to support a good baseball team.)

Coming sport activities for the remainder of the week locally include the second city league play-off game on Thursday, the B.C.I. interscholastic return game at Tweed tonight, the Anglers commence their plug and fly casting season at the Armouries on Friday night, while on Saturday the Deacon A.C. hoopsters meet the fast "Lizzie" outfit from Toronto in the second junior O.B.A. play-down game, at which time the locals must overcome a 16 point leade to win and thereby enter the provincial semi-finals for the championship.

One of the most definite and, at the same time, most surprising successes of this National Hockey League season was scored by Leroy Goldsworthy with Canadiens. "Goldy" had been tried out before with indifferent luck. He started to hit the high spots as soon as he joined Canadiens. Maybe his baseball career with Winnipeg's Northern League team will look up too.

Harry Smith's Trenton aggregation proved themselves more proficient in the mucky water going and downed the Alemites to the tune of 6 to 2 last night. The game, in reality, should never have been played, but owing to previous uncalled for postponements there was no alternative. Incidently the Trenton aggregation completely out-played the Alemites going both ways and were undoubtedly the better team throughout, but on firmer ice Thursday night the "lubricants" expect to make it "one all". Considerable controversy entered into the pastime, before the game opened, relating to whether two games, goals to count, or the best two out of three games should be played. It was finally decided, that the latter should be adopted and we now find Trenton one game up and possibly two to go. If the Smith-Day-LaBrash crew win on Thursday night, the Trenton squad will be awarded the championship of the 1935 Belleville city league. Incidently, we understand that the local Arena is to be closed at the end of the week, but what of that much-talked of post-season series, that is if the weather gets colder and tightens up?

A lot of adverse matters entered into last night's city league game, first the ice was in no condition to play upon, then due to weather conditions and fog the Trenton team was somewhat late, then arguments ensued relating to how the championship should be determined, two games, goals to count, or the best two out of three games. After all these were amicably settled it was discovered that the private box of the Alemite team had been broken into and players' equipment, sticks and first aid material had been stolen, but, then, to add insult to injury the robbers came back, apparently, and walked off with six brand new sticks, the property of the Trenton team, while the game was in progress. Such procedure should be thoroughly investigated by the police and the guilty culprits made an example of, and simply because there has been too much such proceedings at the Arena this season. Incidently the ice was literally covered with water last night, which naturally made fast skating, good hockey and shooting practically impossible, but the game was well worth the price of admission as will be the second game on Thursday night.

Trenton Wins First Game In City League Finals by Defeating Alemites by 6-2

Water Covered Ice Slows up Game, Puck Rolls Crazily

DEFENCE STRONG

Trenton Showed More Defence And Front Line Clicked

Proving by far the more superior team on water-covered ice, the Trenton team drew first blood in the Belleville City Hockey League finals, when they downed the Alemites by the score of 6 to 2 in the first game of the play-off series for the city hockey title at the Arena last night. The game was delayed for over 30 minutes in starting owing to adverse weather conditions prevailing, but once the teams stepped on the water-soaked ice ready for the fray, Harry Smith's Trenton team took a decided step to the fore and looked much the better squad going both ways.

Despite the fact the Alemites successfully carried the puck on the wet sticky ice, they could seldom get in position to shoot, as the Trenton defence turned in their best performance of the season and gave Goalie Joe Gould ample protection all evening. A bouncing, rolling puck lowered the chances of the speedy Alemites throughout as they seemingly could do nothing on such a poor sheet of water-covered ice, while the winning Trenton team settled away to play a continued offensive game and win a well-earned victory. The series is to be the best two games out of three for the league championship, with the second game being scheduled for Thursday night.

With their defence of York and Lott in the leading role the Trenton team swept the Alemites before them and looked much the better. Lott and York proved a tower of strength in front of Goalie Gould and were the paramount reason, that Alemite score was kept to such a low figure. The front line of Johnson flanked by Rosenplot and Smith turned in a sweet passing game turning in scoring threats, that resulted in four of the winners' six goals. Miller, Kidd and Lamore gave splendid accounts of their efforts as alternates with the former playing stellar hockey. Jim Ethier led the Alemites with Covert and Carl Morgan looking the best for the forwards and Don Lee carrying the bulk of the losers' efforts for the alternates.

Miller opened the scoring in the initial frame, when he golfed home his own rebound only to have Wilson push Covert's deflected shot into an open net and knot the count at the end of the initial frame. Smith's goal put Trenton one up in the second but their lead was short-lived when Jim Ethier raced through the centre and tied the score as he pushed the rubber underneath Goalie Gould. In the last frame the Trenton aggregation looked by far the better team and scored four times, while the Alemites were kept from the scoring sheet. Rosenplot, Johnson, a sweet solo effort by York and Roy Smith were the Trenton marksmen in the last frame.

The line-ups—Alemite—Goal, Sinfield; defence, Gilbert and Ethier; centre, Covert; wings, H. Morgan and Carl Morgan. subs—Lee, Bentley, Wilson and Hammett. Trenton Goal, Gould; defence, Lott and York, centre, Johnson; wings, Smith and Rosenplot, subs—Kidd, Lamore and Miller.

Referee—"Larry" Goyer and Jack Trulasch.

Impressions of Tennis Stars By Bill Tilden

NEW YORK, March 6—(CP)—Bill Tilden has told many a tennis umpire what he thought of him, but to date has kept his opinion of the players pretty much to himself. But in the March issue of Racquet Net Magazine, he breaks down and confesses.

Here are his impressions of a few stars:

Lester Stoefen: A Greek God gone goofy.

George Lott: A Kewpie with a grouch.

Helen Jacobs: Brunhilda with a shovel.

Helen Wills Moody: Venus with a headache.

Frank Parker: Penrod in Marble.

Berkeley Bell: Tumbleweed in a High Wind.

Wilmer Allison: A bull pup with a grievance.

Clifford Sutter: Machiavelli in a coma.

Fred Perry: "Charlie' in Hamlet.

H. W. Austin: Pall Mall in shorts.

Jack Crawford: a contented kitten after dinner.

Vivian McGrath: A sparrow with a cricket bat.

Sarah Palfrey Fabyan: Shirley Temple grows up.

Henri Cochet: A ballet master presented at court.

THE BIG SEVEN

By The Canadian Press

Harvey Jackson of Toronto Maple Leafs bounced back into second position in the National Hockey League big seven today. The "kid line" of Leafs went on a scoring spree last night and Jackson got three assists while his big teammate Chuck Conacher scored four goals to take a clear lead of 10 points in the rankings.

The standings:	G	A	Pts.
Conacher, Toronto	31	20	51
Jackson, Toronto	21	20	41
Boucher, Rangers	10	29	39
Aurie, Detroit	15	23	38
Howe, Detroit	16	21	37
Chapman, Americans	8	29	37

Barry, Boston; Lewis, Detroit; Robinson, Montreal; Schriner, Americans all tied at 35 points.

PROVINCIAL CHAMPIONS MEET TO DECIDE CANADIAN CURLING SUPREMACY

With eight rinks, representing the cream of Dominion curlers gathered to decide ownership of the Macdonald Brier Trophy in Toronto this week, followers of the "roarin' game" held the spotlight in Canadian sport. Above are scenes caught by the camera-man as the respective rinks squared away for the opening games. Left, Roy Pritchard, skipping the Killarney, Man., rink given a good chance to take the silverware, gets a stone away. Centre: Bobby Alexander's Alberta quartette, look longingly at the silverware on display at the Granite Club, Toronto. Left to right they are Howard Palmer and Alexander, (bending), and Walter McLaws and Cyril Glover, standing. Right, Gordon Campbell, skip of the youthful Hamilton Thistle rink representing Ontario. Thistles are another rink ranked as high favorites.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

With a faint shrug, the Countess picked up her small patent leather handbag, her black enamelled cigarette case. "You are very young, my dear," she said. "And very naive. Everyone in Paris knows that Sacha de Markoff makes his living on commissions he rceives from the tradesmen of his friends. He has helped you furnish this house, has he not?" She waved at the green and silver appointments of the room. "So why all this fuss about a young man who—amuses me?"

"I don't believe it," Faith said indignantly. But de Markoff had made a great many suggestions for the house. She had bought the Beauvais chairs from a man he recommended, and the Watteau panel from an art dealer he took her to. The prices had been high!

Madame de Luze reached the door. "Think it over—and mail the card, ma chere," she said. "I do not often ask favors."

But faith did not send the card. She made up her mind instead that when the party was over, it would be her duty to tell Madame de Luze more about Roger at whatever cost to herself. She was rocked to the foundations by the collapse of her illusions on these two people — Madame de Luze and de Markoff— whom she had considered her friends. It was like finding out that a beautiful fruit tree in a private garden had been touched by a blight.

This world she had been so anxious to enter might be an orchard of just such fruit trees, all of them fair to look upon from a distance.

But the night of the party Faith's spirits rose again with excitement. She stood under the flooded lights of her dressing room, gazing into the mirror, and she caught her breath. The promise of Spring was in the silvery gold of her hair, in the peachblow tints of her skin. High from her slim waist, green tulle foamed and flowed over the darker green sheath of a satin undergarment. Brilliants flashed from the cascade of tulle, and a wide band of sable trimmed it.

Someone knocked. Faith turned to find Hunter smiling from the door, a white carnation in his buttonhole, his black hair smooth as lacquer, his eyes, this evening, an intense ardent blue.

He held a velvet box which, still smiling, he tendered her. Her fingers lingered over it, and her heart quickened as, at his nod, she pressed the catch.

Pearls. They were coiled serenely against the black velvet of the case, their luster mysteriously a part of her even before Hunter lifted them, and with a murmured—"May I?" drew them about her neck.

Faith touched them wonderingly, hushed under the spell of them.

"You shall always wear pearls, Faith", Hunter said, and there was a deep undernote to his voice. "I shall be proud of you tonight."

Her hands went out to him with a lovely winging movement. "I can't tell you how I love them, Hunter!" she cried. "You've made me so happy."

He took her hands and drew her a little closer. "You'll let me take them off—tonight?" Then very gently he kissed her, and went from the room.

The first guests were arriving when Faith radiantly descended the wide carpeted staircase to the landing banked with tropical plants and flowers that smelt of Southern gardens.

Hunter stood beside her, courtly, suave. Faces paraded before her wide starry eyes. Voices tinkled pleasantly, telling her how charming the house was. Guests mounted the shallow lower stairs in a rising tide. Among them, Faith saw de Markoff shouldering his way behind Mrs. Duane-Smith. His light blue eyes caught hers with gay challenge. But there was no sign in the brilliant crowd of Therese de Luze.

Faith didn't turn her head when someone whispered behind her. It was old Leon, urgency in his low apologetic voice— "The telephone, Madame."

Her French was equal to the few words it took to tell him she could not possibly go to the telephone just then. Hunter had advanced a few steps to greet a venerable rather terrifying old lady in a wig and diadem. That must be the Princess he had told her to courtesy to.

Leon was agitated. "The hospital Madame," he insisted.

Faith was turning away when she heard the word hospital. A message from the American Hospital at Neuilly? That meant that Paul was much worse, for only in some grave emergency, would they disturb her.

Hunter glanced around as he escorted the Princess up the few remaining steps to the landing. Old Leon, the picture of confusion, fell back.

Faith went forward mechanically. In a daze, she dipped her courtesy, received a quavering compliment. Then quickly she slipped back up the stairs to the telephone in her living room.

THE HOSPITAL

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Faith sat staring at the telephone on the small marquetery desk in her sitting room. Her hand strayed to her new pearls. They were a symbol of all that was going on in the white and gold ball room, in the old rose hung salons, the long panelled dining room flashing with crystal and silver where footmen passed trays of bubbling wine and out of season delicacies.

She should be down there, a sparkling target for the curiosities of what the Countess de Luze called "Tout Paris" —all of Paris. But Faith made no move to rejoin her guests. From the American hospital at Neuilly, they had telephoned that they feared Paul Tuckerman would never live through the night except for a miracle. The fever had drained him of strength. His heart was giving out. He was calling for her.

She must go to him. Faith counted against the imperious duty to save a human life, and in her heart she knew she alone could be the miracle for Paul. The balance tilted under her strained young eyes. On one side the world of her adoption filled to overflowing with plenty; on the other the lean soul of a dreamer from whom she could take nothing.

She rose moving uncertainly toward her dressing room. Memory of Hunter's voice, his eyes when he gave her the pearls, returned with an almost unbearable sweetness. All that it had meant —all that he had meant when he kissed her. He would never forgive her if she left him tonight even for a while.

With a start she turned to find him standing in the doorway, a slight frown of surprise on his dark handsome face. "My dear child, why on earth did you run away?" He sounded puzzled, a little annoyed "You made quite an impression on the Princess. And everyone is asking for you."

The filmy green tulle fluttered as Faith ran toward him, grasping his arm. "Something has happened," she said in a low hurried voice. "They've just telephoned me from the American Hospital. A friend of Mary Allan's—and mine, is desperately ill there. He's— calling for me, Hunter." She clung to him, her lovely grey eyes pleading. "I'll have to go to him——"

"You can't do that". Hunter's tone hardened to brusqueness, his black brows drew together.

"But I must,' Faith cried a little wildly. "He may die. I'll just go for a moment. Honestly, Hunter—I know it's terrible, but what can I do?"

"It's quite impossible." His voice was flat and cold.

Faith drew back staring incredulously at the inflexible lines of his jaw, the stiffness of his shoulders. "But he's calling for me," she whispered. "Is there any reason why he should call for you?' Hunter whipped out with such harshness that the blood left Faith's cheeks, leaving her whiter than her pearls.

"Oh, how can you?" she said blankly. "He's poor friendless boy I've tried to be kind to." She clasped, unclasped her hands. They were playing a waltz downstairs. Its melody flowed in a: 1 seemed to curl around her and Hunter summoning them back to lights and flowers.

For a second Hunter hesitated, then his expression grew implacable again. "Your duty tonight is toward me—and our guests," he said. "You can see your friend tomorrow morning."

Faith closed her eyes on the picture of Paul's feverish eyes, his thin hands reaching for her. "Oh, I don't know what to do," she murmured.

With sudden violence Hunter's arms went around her, his lips crushed against hers. The feel of his body was hard and tense. Then as suddenly as he had taken her to him, he released her.

"Come," he said.

Faith followed him. She followed him out into the hall, down the steps, her hand clinging to the thin iron balustrade, her feet lagging. Nearer and nearer to lights that swirled up, and faces below that swam in blurs to the wilder beat of music.

Hunter moved beside her, tall and composed as if the moment of passion had never been. He had conquered.

But in Faith there was a sense of defeat, as with a mechanical smile she picked up her hostess' duties. Diplomats with the ribbons of Foreign Orders slashing their shirt fronts, bent over her hand; young men invited her to dance. Dully she said to herself: "I should have done what I thought was right. If Paul dies, I shall never forgive myself." And, for the first time she thought of Hunter with a sickness of spirit. "How ruthless he is!"

De Markoff's voice drew her about. "Where's Therese?"

Where was Madame de Luze- It did seem odd that she hadn't turned up among the earlier arrivals. "Why I don't know," Faith murmured lifelessly.

The Russian pressed closer. "The little white dove wears pearls tonight—so beautiful——"

Faith avoided the stare of his light blue eyes. "Hunter gave them to me," she said coldly. And the mean little thought pushed up in her mind that the Russian was appraising the cost of the necklace.

"You are different to me, Faith. Have I offended you?" De Markoff was whispering.

"How could you offend me?" Faith answered wearily. Her glance strayed past him to the women in their exquisite gowns, the well groomed men. Then she saw the Countess de Luze coming out of the ball room. She wielded an enormous black spangled fan, over which she peered in a vivacious fashion, her small jutting nose an accent under rolls and puffs of hair piled high and drawn forward. The black sequins of her gown reflected the lights like so many dancing mirrors.

She was talking animatedly to a young man whose narrow back was familiar to Faith even before he turned around.

It was Roger Welsh! Therese had dared to bring Roger here tonight. This was her challenge to Faith's wishes, the gauntlet flung in an arena, where, no doubt, the Countess felt she had the advantage.

Faith heard de Markoff's anxious questioning voice through a hum as of wires strung along her body. She had to close her eyes on the giddiness of anger that shook her. She felt a give in her knees as she moved forward, her hands icy cold at her sides.

Madame de Luze saw her coming, and for a moment an expression of disquiet flickered over her birdlike features. Then she raised her fan with a playful gesture that screened Roger.

"I looked for you everywhere, ma cherie," she cried, "to explain that this naughty boy insisted on escorting me tonight. He was sure you wouldn't mind."

Roger stepped to one side of a potted plant, his sallow face twitching in smiles that did not reach his eyes.

"Hope you'll forgive me crashing in," he said, as if Faith couldn't do anything else. His shiny eyes slid from the ash gold of her hair to the calm luster of the pearls, and on down her slim erect figure. Then under her continued silence, he shifted uneasily.

Faith turned to Madame de Luze. "I'm sorry, Therese but I don't care to receive Mr. Welsh. You knew that."

Madame de Luze snapped her fan shut, drawing herself up. "I have known Hunter a great many years," she said, "and he has never yet refused me the privilege of bringing anyone I wish to his parties." Her bright determined eyes had singled out Hunter in a group nearby. She signalled to him with her fan.

Roger shrugged his shoulders, studying the lacquered effect of his nails.

Faith looked toward Hunter, color rushing back to her face. "Hunter—" she began impulsively.

But Madame de Luze cut in with the authority of old friendship. "My dear Hunter," she said, ignoring Faith. "I have ventured to bring a friend to your party. Mr. Welsh—Mr. Barclay."

"Why certainly — delighted." Hunter's pleasant smile travelled with the merest lift of eyebrow to the glossy finish of the young man.

Madame de Luze seemed to consider the matter settled. She turned graciously to Roger. "I should like," she said, "a glass of champagne."

"Just a moment, Therese.' Faith spoke in a tight thin voice. "Hunter I asked Therese not to bring this person here. He's —objectionable."

Hunter moved so that his broad shoulders concealed the tense little group from the sway and eddy of couples caught in gusts of dance music.

"My dear Faith," he protested. "Surely Therese would not—"

"But she has.' Faith was choked with anger.

"I can easily go, Hunter, if you wish." Madame de Luze said with dignity. Roger sidled defiantly up beside her.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was tawking to Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver around at the firehouse, and I said, Hay, Mr. Riley, did you ever have to go to a fire when the weather was cold as anything? I dont mean just awful, I mean really fearse? I said.

There was a cold snap just before the Big Blizzerd, and it's never been any colder or any snappier before or since, Mr. Riley said. Just as luck would have it, we was called out on a practiculilly dangerous fire in a celluloid coller factory, and the water from our hoses froze in solid streems in the air before it had time to reach the fire, do you bleeve that? he said, and I said, Sure.

I'm glad you do, because the most peculiar part is still to come, Mr. Riley said. Well sir, it was the most bewtiful site that you ever saw, or more stickly speeking, that you never saw. The whole air was full of looping, twisting streems of solid ice, and when the sun hit them it was just like a thousand rainbows. Our men rushed off home and got their cameras so they could have a permanent sooveneer of the occasion. But fun is fun and bizzness is bizzness, and meanwhile the fire raged on and on as box after box of celluloid collers exploded, and there was no way to reach it with water, but luck never deserts good old Engine Company Number 6, and that time was no exception, Mr. Riley said.

Well G, what happened? I said, and Mr. Riley said, The thermometer dropped 3 more degrees, being all the room it had left to drop in, and those flames froze cold and stiff in mid air. Well, it was the werk of minnits to rush in and chop them down with our axes and drag them off to a safe empty lot before they had a chance to start berning again, and by that time they were out of reach of mischiff, and we had won the day. Well, drop over again some time, he said. Which I will.

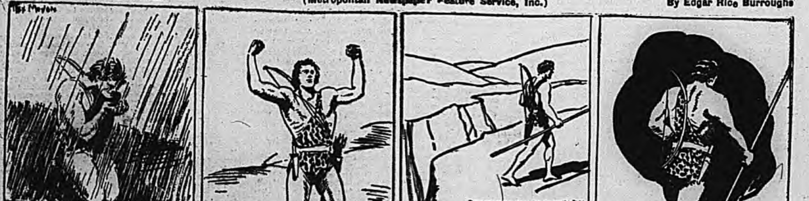
By Edgar Rice Burroughs



After killing the vulture with his bare hands and teeth, Tarzan felt he could now sleep in safety. Rain beating heavily upon his body, awakened him. Catching the precious drops, he transferred them to his parched throat.

Only a little he got at a time, but that was best. The few mouthfuls of Ska he had eaten, together with the vulture's blood and rain water had refreshed him greatly, putting new strength into his tired muscles.

Though there was no shining sun, the world looked bright and cheerful, for Tarzan knew that he was saved. The bird that would have devoured him and the providential rain had saved him at the very moment that death seemed inevitable!

With something of his old force the ape-man set out with steady gait toward the hills of promise rising alluringly ahead. Darkness fell before he reached them. Even his keen eyes could not penetrate the blackness farther than a few feet.

W. HEIGHINGTON SUGGESTS PROBE IN HYDRO MATTER

Move Climaxes Long Debate on Power Purchase Contracts

APPROVAL DENIED

Hon. Duncan Marshall Produces Memorandum To This Effect

Toronto, March 6—(CP)— Hydro matters have occupied the attention of the Ontario Legislature since Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney-General, started his nine-hour review of the Hydro situation a week ago continue to hold the centre of the stage and will figure in the debate tomorrow when the House will sit afternoon and evening.

Today members counted on a short session following yesterday's six-hour sitting, which dealt almost entirely with the power purchase questions raised by Mr. Roebuck in his lengthy address.

Climax to the day's debate came, when Wilfred Heighington (Cons. Toronto-St. Davids) demanded the government appoint a special committee of the legislature to investigate statements of Hydro commission engineers regarding power purchase contracts.

Col. W. H. Price, (Cons., Toronto-Parkdale) had read on Monday what he called a "suppressed" report of a special Hydro-Electric Power Commission meeting on May 20, 1929, when four engineers were on record as favoring a special report submitted by F. A. Gaby, former Chief Engineer of the Commission.

Minutes of the meeting quoted the four engineers—T. H. Hogg, R. T. Jeffrey, E. T. Brandon and H. C. Don Carlos as supporting Mr. Gaby's recommendation for power purchases including those from the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company and the James MacLaren Company.

Denied Approval

Just before the afternoon session adjourned yesterday Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, submitted a memorandum signed by Jeffrey and Hogg, denying they had approved of the power contracts.

"I'm willing to take their statement in preference to any so-called minutes of any so-called meeting," he said.

Asked afterwards why the other two engineers, who had been at the meeting did not sign the memorandum, T. Stewart Lyon, Hydro Commission Chairman, said there was not sufficient time to obtain their signatures.

Because of the apparent conflict of evidence Mr. Heighington pressed the government to appoint a special legislative committee to question these engineers on their statements.

Mr. Marshall entered another document into the Hydro controversy. He read a letter C. A. Magrath, former chairman of the commission wrote to Premier G. Howard Ferguson in 1926 in connection with the Gatineau contract.

It has been suggested that it might be desirable to approve of the principal agreement by the usual order-in-council and the four separate agreements by another order-in-council, Mr. McGrath wrote.

Original Agreement Given

Last week Mr. Roebuck claiming to have revealed these four separate agreements for the first time, declared separate orders-in-council had been made for the main agreement and the additional ones.

Questioned by Col. Price whether the original agreement had been made public, Mr. Marshall insisted it had been and he said reference to the "secret" agreements "was the greatest surprise, that ever struck you on top of the head."

Mr. Heighington replied to Mr. Roebuck's charges the contracts negotiated with Gatineau, Beauharnois, and MacLaren, Quebec were "illegal."

He could discover no provision in the Hydro Commission Act to prevent it doing business outside the province and in reply to the Attorney-General's statement none of these companies had taken out extra-provincial licenses said because of reciprocal legislation neither Quebec nor Ontario require these of companies in their territories.

Contending the Dominion government cannot legislate to prevent a company incorporated under provincial jurisdiction from acquiring the right from another province to carry on such business in that province, he quoted a decision the Privy Council delivered to this effect in 1916.

Other features of the day in the legislature were Col. Price's attack on the government for its dismissal of civil servants and Mr. Marshall's criticism of the operations of the Agricultural Development Board under the government of former Premier George S. Henry.

"Juggling" Is Charged

The Minister of Agriculture charged "juggling of finances" in the Board's books and said improper investigation had been made of farm properties before they were approved for loans.

During his address Mr. Marshall attacked Col. Price for charging during the provincial general election campaign last June he had been associated with the Elgin ballot box scandal several decades ago. He also criticized Leopold Macaulay Conservative member for South York for referring to the matter

"Not once in my career have I struck very much below the belt," the Agriculture Minister said.

Col. Price explained he had apologized for his reference after reading Mr. Marshall's denial of his connection with the incident.

J. H. Clark (Lib. Sandwich-Windsor) adjourned the debate after attacking the former government on the negotiation of power purchase contracts.

He criticized the Dominion Power and Transmission Company deal in 1929 as "a scandalous grab" and referred to holdings by Mr. Henry of Ontario Power Service bonds.

If the leader of the opposition thinks this didn't have something to do with the upheaval in June, he is sorely mistaken or I am no judge of public opinion, Mr. Clark said.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

DEFENCES BY AIR WILL COST MORE

Second Shock For British Taxpayer Given in Three Days

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 6—(CP Cable)—The United Kingdom will spend ($116,015,860 at par) on its air defences in the coming fiscal year. This is £3,685,000 ($17,909,000 at par) higher than the air estimates last year.

The air estimates formed the second shock for the British taxpayer in three days. Yesterday the army estimates at $211,653,000 were $19,197,500 over last year. And the naval estimates to come down tomorrow will also show an increase.

The increases were clearly indicated weeks ago and their necessity was bolstered by an official white paper yesterday which pointed to rearmament in Germany and elsewhere in the world and so many words declared Britain's policy of unilateral reduction in its defences could not longer be followed with safety.

The increase in the air estimates reflects the first stage of the great expansion programme for the Royal Air Force, which is to increase it by 41 squadrons within three years.

ATTEND BANQUET MARKING CLOSE OF SHORT COURSE

3rd Ameliasburg—Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boyle are busily engaged moving to their new home at Hillier. A number of their neighbors assisted them in moving on Thursday. All wish them every success in their new home.

Mrs. May Humphrey and family and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Adams and Marion attended the banquet in Consecon Masonic Hall on Friday evening, sponsored by the members of the class in Short Courses, Agriculture and Home Economics.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Adams spent the week end in Belleville the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Foster.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mastin were the tea hour guests at Mr. Everet Adams' on Monday evening.

Owing to the teacher, Mrs. E. Marvin being confined to her bed with influenza, school was closed on Thursday and Friday.

We are glad to know Mr. J. Dempsey is slowly improving in Belleville General Hospital.

BIRTHDAY IN HOSPITAL

Cobourg, Ont., March 6 (CP)—The "grandma" of Cobourg Hospital, Mrs. E. Nerden of Colborne yesterday celebrated her 95th birthday on the sun balcony of that institution.

Mrs. Nerden fell and was injured two years ago and since then has been confined to the hospital where the entire staff addresses her affectionately as "grandma".

BOY STRUCK BY HYDRO POLE

Windsor, March 6—(CP)— Condition of three year old Maurice Lepensee showed no improvement in hospital today. The boy is suffering from a head injury and a fracture of the left leg from being struck by a Hydro pole which fell on his leg. The post was pulled over when a trolley of a street-car caught one of the supporting cables.

FARM LOAN BOARD RECEIVES NINETY MILLION DOLLARS

Other Estimates For 14 Million Passed in House

INDIAN GRANT

Parliament Informed That Indian Population Increasing

OTTAWA, March 6.—(CP)—After a constructive day in which it sent two important agricultural bills to the Senate and passed more than $14,000,000 in estimates, the House of Commons today expected Premier R. B. Bennett back in his place to proceed with some of his Reform Bills.

If his illness makes it impossible for him to be present a discussion will take place on the tourist promotion activities of the Dominion Government started last summer following a senate committee investigation.

With the blessing of all parties, a bill establishing a fund of $90,000,000 to be advanced to financially-harrassed farmers by the Farm Loan Board was given third reading yesterday. It also extended the sphere of the Board to all provinces, including Saskatchewan, Ontario and Prince Edward Island for the first time.

The Second Agricultural Bill made minor changes in the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act.

The House was in a generous, industrious mood all day. It passed a Bill changing auditors for the Canadian National Railways and gave first reading to a bill legalizing inspection fees collected for three years from Fish Canners. To top off the day it passed million of dollars in estimates, touching Indian Affairs, Postoffice and Marine. It was the biggest day's work of the session.

More than $14,000,000 was voted for Departments of Indian Affairs and Marine. Hon. T. G. Murphy, superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, obtained approval of the House for all estimates of his Department amounting to nearly $5,000,000, and Hon. Alfred Duranleau Minister of Marine, also found the House in a complacent mood and secured some $10,000,000 for his department.

A report from the committee of Engineers studying the declining water level in Montreal Harbor and the St. Lawrence seaway is expected by the Government within a week. While it will be an interim report and further investigations will be made next year it is being awaited as basis of the Government's plans for dealing with the condition which is regarded as a menace to shipping.

Water Level Report

Mr. Duranleau told the House the Committee was well on the way towards presenting its report. Should it suggest the construction of remedial works he said he would recommend they be constructed as a Government undertaking. Practically all lakes and rivers in Canada had been growing lower in recent years, said Mr. Duranleau, but particular concern was felt about the St. Lawrence.

Before Mr. Duranleau, furnished his news on the water level report Mr. Murphy enlightened the House about the Indian Wards of the Dominion Government.

Among other bits of information the House learned that:

Health of the Indians is improving; they are developing resistance to the diseases of the white man which once threatened to kill them off:

Indian population is increasing at the rate of about 1,000 a year:

The Dominion Government will spend nearly $2,000,000 next year on education for Indian children; the second generation of Indians who have been to school shows a satisfactory response to education.

Full consideration of a measure of compensation to the Six Nations Indians, Brantford, for funds misappropriated many years ago will be given when the Government is preparing its supplementary estimates, Mr. Murphy told the House. Franklin Smoke, (Cons. Brant), urged that compensation be provided and said he had made a similar plea last year.

Many years ago, said Mr. Smoke, Trust Funds belonging to the Indians had been misappropriated invested in a dam and lost. The sum taken with interest now amounted to more than $1,000,000. It was contended, he said, one government was not responsible for the acts of a previous government but he thought there was at least a moral responsibility. He did not suggest $1,000,000 be provided but at least a substantial sum should be placed to the credit of the Indians. This would go a long way to put an end to present discontent on the Brantford Reserve.

DAWSON MARACLE HELD FOR MURDER

Police State Indian Had Confessed to Killing After Argument

Waterford, Ont., March 6 (CP)—Dawson Maracle, 19-year-old Indian of the Six Nations Reserve, today faced a charge of murder in connection with the death of George Bilton, 65, Townsend Township farmer.

A coroner's jury last night returned this verdict:

"We, the jury, find from the evidence submitted that George Bilton, Lot 10, Concession 1, Townsend Township came to his death on the morning of February 21, 1935, by being struck on the head with an axe, said, from the evidence and confession, to have been in the hands of one Dawson Maracle."

Provincial Constable L. L. Shipley of Simcoe, in his testimony at the inquest, said that Maracle had confessed to killing Bilton after an argument about the latter's relationship with a woman they both knew.

Maracle was said to have confessed that Bilton struck him first with a poker and that he retaliated with an axe. He also is said to have admitted he started a fire in the basement of Bilton's shack after the fight.

Crown Attorney W. E. Kelly of Simcoe ordered the murder charge laid upon receiving the verdict of the coroner's jury.

STIRLING

FIRESIDE MEETING AT ST. PAUL'S

Subject of Tithing Discussed Informally by Gathering

Stirling—At St. Paul's church on Sunday evening, Mar. 3 after the regular hour of worship, several members and friends remained for another fireside meeting in the church parlors. A great deal of interest is shown in these unusual gatherings, and every one is invited to join in this period of informal discussion. Much is gained from the privilege given to express one's views freely on world topics of the day, and to listen to the various speakers is an inspiration to those not given to public speaking.

Promptly at 8.15 the meeting was opened by Rev. E. W. Rowland, with the singing of several familiar hymns, which served to create an atmosphere of close fellowship. Miss Betty Conley then sang a very pleasing soprano solo. Mrs. Cecil Macklin led in the discussion of the evening, which was based on tithing.

The speaker suggested that ministers should preach tithing instead of the gospel of giving. This is not a popular subject, but a definite command of our Lord with a promise. In the gospel of Malachi, 3 and 10. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." "It is not a matter of being generous," stated the speaker, "but rightfully dividing one's income with his partner, Christ. God's place must be first. The remaining portions and remnants of our time and strength are not sufficient. The first and rightful share must be set aside for Him. We are only stewards, not masters. Our families, friends, honor, lands, etc. are given by God, and He can recall them at any time."

The speaker quoted verses 9 and 10 of Proverbs 3, "Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase; So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst with new wine Every christian should set aside a definite percentage for the support of the church and the kingdom, and that percentage should be at least one tenth. the ancient Jews did as well as that. The first mention of tithing was in Gensis 14 and 20. And blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes of all. Abraham also gave a tenth. When we heartily sing: "I consecrate my all to thee," we must emphasize it with material help to his cause."

During the period of questioning that followed, a member of the gathering who follows farming as a means of livelihood, stated that it must be admitted that no industrial enterprise ever felt the pinch of hard times more than that in which he was active, yet by carefully following the plan of tithing, which was sufficient proof to him of its righteousness. Less activity in material things and more concentrated effort on the grasping of Christ's teaching is our only salvation from the dreaded condition into which we are gradually drifting. Periods such as these serve to create a sense of duty within us all to study and develop an individual line of thought that is not forcibly instilled in our minds by others. We are endowed with intellect that should be used, exercised, and developed to a point of perfection. Allowing others to think for us slows up our ability to grasp even the more simple things of life. This fine period of study was brought to a close by the singing of the closing hymn.

A few days ago an accident occurred which might have been serious but for the presence of mind of Malcolm Reid. Little Gerald Bamforth aged four, on his way home from the arena decided to short cut across the Rawdon Creek at a point where the ice was quite thin. Malcolm Reid heard the lad's cry as he broke through the ice, and hurrying to the spot, and found the boy lying prone on the ice, which was scarcely strong enough to hold him, he reached out and pulled him to safety. The little lad suffered no ill effects from his experience, and in a few hours he was quite himself again.

During the absence of Mr. Charles Allen, organist of St. Andrew's Church, who was called away for the week end. Mrs. R. H. Williams presided at the organ.

Mr. Clarence Duff of Fort Erie spent the week end with friends here.

Mrs. Mary Ann Cain spent the week end in Belleville.

MISS M. BELCOUR ENTERTAINS Y.P.S.

Halloway—The regular weekly meeting of the S.Y.P.S. was held at the home of Miss M. Belcour with Miss E. Laughlin in charge. The meeting opened with hymn 4 and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Miss A. Horton read the Scripture lesson from Mark 8: 1-13. Miss M. Reed called the roll and read the minutes of last meeting. About 20 young people were present. Hymn 29 was sung and Miss L. Wannamaker gave a reading which was followed by a solo by Miss D. Carter. Miss E. Laughlin gave another reading and the business was discussed and correspondence read. Hymn 13 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. A social evening then followed.

Mrs. H. Kelly spent Thursday at Mr. R. Reid's.

The many friends here of the late Mrs. W. Kelly of Madoc, learned with regret of her sudden passing on Saturday morning. Much sympathy is extended to the husband and Miss Aileen.

Miss Vera Rose spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. M. Rose and family near Stirling.

DISINTEGRATION OF ICE IN BAY SEEN

First signs of the disintegration of the ice on the Bay of Quinte is observed this week following the past few day's thaw. Flooded areas of the surface are covered inches deep with pools of water over wide areas, and large cracks are visible. Scattered here and there far out on the ice are numerous fishing shanties and even ice cutting equipment temporarily abandoned and marooned. Unless heavier rains are received before the middle of the present month, it is expected by older south side residents, that the spring breakup of the ice will be gradual and slow. Following Tuesday's drizzle of rain, further weakening of the ice of the Moira is noted. Rapid erosion of the ice is being caused by the water now running over the surface.

RECALL OF FORMER KING DISCUSSED BY GREECE

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

San Francisco, March 7 (CP)—Jack M. Leavy drove his car into the garage at his home early Tuesday after driving some 40 blocks from the downtown district.

He turned out the lights and started to leave. Then he noticed something in front of the car. A man lay on the front bumper fast asleep.

Leavy tried to awaken the man but couldn't. So he backed the car out of the garage and drove to a police station.

Hours later the man awoke in a cell to say his name was Edward Meyers. He was mystified at the soreness along his spinal column. A policeman explained.

"The bumper made that," said the policeman.

"Must have been asleep," muttered Meyers.

. . . .

Moscow, March 7 (CP)—The official newspaper Izvestia announced today Soviet shop employes must concentrate further in developing "store culture" — the courtesy treatment of customers.

In many stores there are signs reading: "Clerk, be polite to the customers; customer, be polite to the clerk."

. . . .

New York, March 7 (CP) — "Do you like to play bridge?" If you answer "yes," said Mr. Irving Lorge, research associate in Teachers College, Columbia University, it still doesn't mean you really like the game.

Mr. Lorge's answer to the question about bridge, he said, may mean the person likes the game; that he just likes to gossip, or that he "knows John Jones is a bridge fiend and he wants to put through a business deal with him."

. . . .

Chicago, March 7 (CP)—That old argument between street car motormen and truck drivers moved a long way toward settlement today.

Chicago's 6,000 surface lines motormen were made special traffic policemen and were instructed to report all serious traffic violations, especially those involving peril to street car riders or pedestrians.

. . . .

New York, March 7 (CP)—Wallace Beery, 240-pound character actor and screen comedian, who gets dizzy in New York's tall buildings, today was impatiently waiting delivery of his new aeroplane in which he hopes to pilot himself back and forth between the west coast and New York.

Beery explained skyscrapers made his head swim but that he can fly 18,000 feet in a plane "and it doesn't bother me at all."

. . . .

Detroit, March 7 (CP)—Edin V. Hubert, who is behind with his alimony, will be in contempt of court if he should take his own life.

Circuit Judge Harry B. Kiedan signed an injunction yesterday restraining Hubert from attempting any form of self destruction and ordered him to make a reasonable effort to catch up on the alimony, now $1,245 in arrears.

The action was obtained on behalf of Mrs. Grace Horlacker, Hubert's former wife.

GAMBLED AT HOME 3 MEN ARE FINED

85 Year Old Law Used in "Penny Ante" Prosecution

Sandwich, March 7—(CP)— An 85-year-old statute of the Criminal Code which prohibitis gambling even in private homes on Sunday, was used by Police Chief J. Babcock of Kingsville in charging four young men in police court today for playing a game of "penny ante" in a barber shop last Sunday night.

Under the Statute, commented Magistrate W. A. Smith, playing bridge on Sundays for stakes as little as a hundredth of a cent a point was an infraction of the law. The magistrate intimated even he might be liable to a police court charge. The maximum penalty under the statute is $50 and costs.

Three were each assessed $5 and costs. One was remanded indefinitely for sentence.

$112,000 RELIEF PLANNED

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Details of a proposed $112,000 relief works programme in St. Catharines were laid before Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, today by a group of civic officials.

The tentative programme includes an addition tothe city hall, police station and construction of an arena.

Concentration of Turks Along Bulgar Border Protested by Bulgaria

Samos and Chios Islands Capitulate to Rebel Forces

WARSHIPS IN PIREAUS

Revolt Spreads Into Tobacco Districts of Kavala

Geneva, March 7 (AP)—Bulgaria today protested to the League of Nations against the concentration of Turkish troops along the Turco-Bulgarian frontier.

Athens, March 7 (AP)—The Islands of Samos and Chios capitulated to the rebels today after a visit by the ships of the rebel fleet, it was officially announced.

Athens, March 7 (AP)—The 29,000-ton British battleship, Royal Sovereign, steamed into Piraeus, the Port of Athens, and dropped anchor today. The Royal Sovereign and the French destroyer Verdun are standing by in the harbor. Meanwhile the rebels are showing no signs of surrender.

To add to the Government's worries, it was reported today unemployed in the great tobacco growing districts of Kavala had issued a proclamation against the Government.

The internal situation in Greece has become so serious in the last 48 hours the Government is reported to be discussing the question of recalling former King George from India and restoring the monarchy as the only means of saving the present chaotic situation. This idea gained in strength since M. Metaxas was appointed temporary Minister of War, succeeding General Kondylis who is directing the military campaign against the rebels in Macedonia. Metaxas is known as an ardent Royalist.

Foreigners living in Athens declared the revolution the ninth and most serious within 26 years, will put Greek progress back at least 20 years.

Situation Tense

The revolution is clearly an internal affair. However, British and French consuls have arrived at Piraeus to protect subjects of their respective countries and their property in the event of a bombardment by the insurgents.

GUARDIANSHIP BILL AGREED UPON

Croll Meets Oliva Dionne And Statement is Issued

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, announced today following a conference with Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, and Paul Martin of Windsor, Dionne's lawyer, he would introduce a bill in the legislature tomorrow providing for the guardianship of the quintuplets.

Details of the proposed measure were not revealed by the Minister nor would Mr. Martin make any comment on the conference.

Leo. Kerwin, Callander, manager of the Dionne's, came to Toronto with Oliva but did not attend the conference.

Mr. Kerwin intimated there would be no more stage contracts for the Dionnes, if an agreement could be reached with the government regarding the guardianship of the babies.

"SHOOTING" WELL BRINGS DEATH TO EIGHT PERSONS

Premature Explosion Is Result of Nitro-Glycerine

DERRICK HURLED FEET

Terrific Blast Rocked Countryside For Five Miles

St. George, Utah, March 7 (AP)—A premature explosion at an oil well claimed the lives of eight persons last night and injured at least a dozen others gathered to watch the spectacular "shooting" of the first well in this district.

A deadly charge of nitro-glycerine, dropped into the unfinished well, exploded prematurely, ripped the derrick from its moorings and hurled it onto the crowd which surrounded the well. The terrific blast rocked the countryside five miles south of here.

Scores were thrown to the ground. Others were knocked down in the rush to escape the blinding sheet of flame, which accompanied the blast.

Among the victims was Mr. and Mrs. George Alsop. Alsop was general manager of the Arrowhead Oil Corporation which was drilling the well.

The other victims were: Joseph Empey, St. George electrician; an unidentifed man, believed to be Empey's son-in-law; William Maloney, St. George; Ray B. Nelson, St. George dairyman; Mrs. Joseph Snow, wife of a prominent St. George attorney and former State Legislator and C. M. Flickenger, oil driller in charge of the "shooting".

Others injured included Miss Rosemond Snow, daughter of Mrs. Snow, and Miss Leah Cottam, daughter of Heber Cottam, St. George.

The exact number of injured and their identity was not known.

Ellis J. Pickett, an attorney, who witnessed the tragedy, said he was sitting with his wife in their automobile near the well and after the first blast moved 60 feet farther back because of Mrs. Pickett's nervousness. The second charge was sent down, he declared, but it exploded before reaching the bottom of the well. With a terrific roar the derrick was ripped from its anchorage and hurled upon the crowd.

MAY FACE CHARGE

Covington, Ky., March 7—(CP)—Kingdon "Pete" Murray, held in jail here in connection with the kidnapping of John S. Labatt, wealthy London, Ont., brewer, faces a possible charge of violation of the Dyer Act, police announced today.

An automobile stolen in Newport and recovered by two detectives was said by C. X. Bochstahler, oil station attendant, to have been sold to him by "Harlam Hill", who he identified as Murray.

HON. PETER HEENAN ILL

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, may be absent from the legislature for the remainder of the session, as a result of complications which set in following an attack of influenza.

Newest King in the World Prefers to Play With Trains

Lausanne, Switzerland, March 7 (AP)—The world's most newly proclaimed King would rather play than rule.

Eleven-year-old Prince Ananda was asked today by the people of his country to leave his school and toys here and return to receive the homage of his subjects in far-off Siam.

The Prince gave out his first interview today.

"Are you glad to be King?" he was asked.

And he answered: "No."

"What would you like to do?"

"I like to play—with locomotives and trains."

It was suggested to the lad he would be able to have a great many of his favorite toys when he was enthroned as King but the wise little Prince commented:

"No I won't. They won't let me."

INVERTED STOMACH GIRL GIVEN 50-50 LIFE CHANCE

Alyce McHenry (below) was given 50-50 chance to live after operation at Fall River, Mass., for inverted stomach. Graphic photo shows attendants at operation outlined against skylight of operating theatre. Girl's mother is seen leaving after surgery.

DEPUTY MINISTERS SALARIES TABLED

Six in Government Receive Over $6,000 Yearly

Toronto, March 7—(CP)— Six Ontario Deputy Ministers receive annual salaries exceeding $6,000, according to an answer Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn has tabled in the Legislature in response to an inquiry directed to the Ministry by George S. Henry, leader of the opposition.

Salaries of three of the Deputies are $7,500. They are: Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education; Dr. B. T. McGhie, Director of Hospital Services and R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways.

I. A. Humphries, Deputy Attorney General, receives $6,600; C. S. Walters, Controller of Revenue, has a salary of $7,000 and G. A. Brown, Provincial Auditor, received $6,500.

As Deputy Minister of Education Duncan McArthur replaces two officials, the Deputy Minister and Chief Director of Education. His predecessor as Deputy Minister was paid a salary of $6,000 and the former Chief Director of Education received a total of $6,814. Total for the two positions was $12,814.

'HOLE CARD' MAY HELP HIS THEORY

Carbon Monoxide Only Poison Found in System

Pinehurst, N.S., March 7—(CP)—The inquest into the death of Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, beautiful young heiress, drew toward an end today with solicitor Rowland S. Pruette promising to present evidence of foul play before the transcript of testimony was completed.

It was revealed by an authoritative source toxicologists found only carbon monoxide— deadly fumes from an automobile exhaust—could have caused the death of the 22-year-old bride.

No other poisonous substance was found, it was reliably reported today. This same source said some alcohol was found also but not enough to cause intoxication.

Before the inquest opened Tuesday Solicitor Pruette said he was withholding a "hole card" which would substantiate his theory of murder, adding he would not reveal it until later.

WIFE ALSO SLAIN BY REDS

Shanghai, March 7—(AP)—Mrs. S. C. Frenchan, wife of a slain Australian missionary, was learned definitely today to have been murdered by the Communists who captured her and her husband last month. Until now, her fate has been in doubt.

Catholic Bishop Makes Request Of N.S. Managers

Halifax, March 7—(CP)—An Easter week boycott of Roman Catholics against Nova Scotia theatres might be initiated unless they were closed Good Friday, Rev. Dr. Charles F. Curran, Director of Catholic Action in the Archdiocese of Halifax, declared in an open letter to theatre managers.

It would be a "gracious gesture" he said, if the managers would "decide on uniform action in regard to the closing of theatres on Good Friday." Otherwise, he asserted, it would be necessary to institute a vigorous campaign to dissuade Christians from "resecrating the sacred day."

A conference of theatre managers here yesterday left the question to individual theatres.

WHEAT PACT IS DOOMED TO FAIL

Argentine Refuses To Accept Export Proposals

London, March 7 (CP)—Efforts by the world's leading grain exporting countries to regulate production and export of wheat today appeared to have failed.

Canada, United States, Australia and the Argentine—the "big four" in the wheat export business—have practically abandoned efforts to carry on the principles of the 1933 wheat agreement.

The refusal of the Argentine government to accept the wheat pack proposals or alternate proposals submitted by the other three countries caused the delegates to the current "big four" meeting to admit the scheme had broken down. It was admitted there would be no further enforcement of any provisions of the wheat pact—nominally in force until Aug. 1 next—or its subsidiary agreements by any of the 21 signatory countries.

Further exchanges of views were scheduled for today and perhaps Friday in an effort to find some basis for extension of the pact for another two years.

Toronto Trustees Cut Salaries of Teachers

Toronto, March 7—School Trustees decided at an emergency meeting yesterday to co-operate with the City Council and adjust salaries to strike a tax rate of approximately 10.5 mills. The original Board of Education rate was 10.75.

A motion presented by Trustee George M. Orr, which was carried by the board, moved for a cut of 2 1-2 per cent. from all salaries up to $5,000; a cut of 3 3-4 per cent. from salaries of $5,100 to $7,500, and 5 per cent. from salaries of over $7,600. Cuts will be effective from March 1.

CONFESSES CRIME BEFORE HANGING

Negro Expresses Sympathy for Parents of Boys Before Trap Sprung

Halifax, March 7 (CP)—Sympathy for the parents of two school boys he stabbed to death was expressed by Daniel P. Sampson shortly before he went to the gallows today.

The 35-year-old negro was hanged in the Halifax county jail yard for the murder of Bramwell Heffernan, 12, who, with his 10-year-old brother Edward, was found dead near Chain Lake in July 1933.

"I, Daniel P. Sampson, on the eve of my execution admit I killed the two Heffernan boys, but because I was tormented by them," he dictated as he sat in his cell awaiting death.

After thanking the jailor and the assistant jailor for their treatment to him during his year of imprisonment he added:

"I am sorry for what I did and I wish to apologize and extend sympathy to the parents of the children."

Unable to write, he put his mark at the bottom of the confession before he was led out into the courtyard.

Twice convicted of murdering Bramwell Heffernan, he was not tried on the second charge. After an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada had failed and a plea for clemency to the Governor General-in-Council had been dismissed, Sampson told his counsel O. R. Regan: "If I have to go up them steps, I can take it."

And he did. Facing 16 steps to death at 1.04 o'clock, the negro never faltered until he reached the 14th Then he rallied as he heard the hangman say "you're all right."

MRS. GIGNAC MOURNED BY 74 DESCENDANTS

Aunt of Liquor Commissioner Odette Dies at the Age of 89

Windsor, March 7.—(CP)—Mrs. Christine Gignac, 89, aunt of Edmund G. Odette, Ontario Liquor Commissioner, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward T. Plante, here last night following a brief sickness Seventy-four descendants survive her, including five sons, two daughters, 46 grandchidren, 20 great grandchildren and one great great grandchild.

Her husband predeceased her 45 years ago.

Cow Up to Neck in Water Goat Floats on Big Plank

Kitchener, Ont., March 7 (CP)—Marooned nearly 24 hours, six families along the Grand River at Westmontrose, about 14 miles north of here were able to get out of their home today when the water of the river receded. About 18 people were stranded.

Jamming about three o'clock Tuesday morning, about one mile below the village and continuing for a half mile above the community, the rushing waters flooded the banks, rising more than two feet.

Today the water had receded almost its normal depth and the road had been cleared of ice, permitting traffic.

Livestock was safely removed from many barns. One cow was found up to its neck in water while a goat floated around in another barn on a large plank.

100 Million Increase In Trade With Tourists Forecast by Director

300 Millions of Dollars in 1935 is Present Prediction

INFLOW FROM U.S.

Importance of Farming Urged by Senator Buchanan

OTTAWA, March 7.—(CP)—Return from tourist business in Canada will approximate $300,000,000 in 1935, representing an increase of $100,000,00 over 1934, D. L. Dolan, director of the Canadian Tourist Bureau, told the Senate Tourist Committee today in answer to Senator W. H. Dennis (Cons. Halifax), Committee chairman.

"More people in the United States are looking to Canada for Tourist purposes than ever before," the official said. "There is a tremendous increase in Canadian travel."

A suggestion was under consideration whereby the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission might allot a few minutes two or three times a week at the end of the day's programme giving facts on the Tourist attractions in the east and west, the official said.

Tourists and Farming

Senator W. A. Buchanan (Lib. Lethbridge), urged importance of promoting the Tourist business among farmers. For this purpose, Senator Buchan said, occasion for public speaking by Tourist officials should be seized.

Senator George Parent (Lib. Quebec), said the Duke of Kent was donating a cup to the winner of the Golf Tournament to be held at Kent House, six miles from Quebec next July or August. It was possible the Duke of Kent might present the Cup to the winner. But this was indefinite as arrangements had not been completed.

KINGSTON FARMER KILLED BY AUTO

Ephriam G. Finley, 60, Allegedly Struck Down on Highway

Kingston, Mar. 7—(CP)—Ephriam Garfield Finley, about 60 years of age, wos instantly killed Wednesday night when struck by a car allegedly driven by Dr. Herbert C. Burleigh, while he was walking on the Gananoque Highway, about four miles east of Kingston. Provincial Constable Joseph Nelson and Traffic Officer Percy Dowsley of Kingston investigated, and Dr. C. W. Bennett, Coroner, Kingston, decided an inquest would be held.

Finley was walking east on the highway and Dr. Burleigh was driving west from Prescott to Bath, near here, where he will take over the practice of Dr. Northmore. Finley, former resident of Kingston, was working on the farm of William Finnegan, six miles east of Kingston. He was walking to the farm when struck by the car.

A native of Amherst Island, Finley was unmarried and had a cousin, Mrs. E. W. Lane, living here.

TO TAX LIQUOR

Windsor, March 7.—(CP)—While the United States Customs Court has ruled a tourist may enter the country with $100 worth of liquor, duty free, it will cost the owner another $50 at least if he takes it into Michigan. Following the decision of the Customs Court the Inland Revenue Department decided to impose a tax of 50 cents a bottle and to cap this Walter F. Petty, Acting Collector of Customs for Michigan announces the State hereafter will levy a tax of 45 per cent. of the value on all liquor entering the country through its ports.

NINE STOWAWAYS BRAVE ICY NORTH

Youngsters Come Out of Hatches Too Far Out at Sea

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., March 7. — (CP Cable)—Nine young Newfoundlanders, eager to flirt with death on the ice, are bound north with the sealing fleet as stowaways.

Somehow they dodged the searchers who went through the eight ships before they sailed yesterday and came out of hatches today with the vessels too far at sea to turn back and land them at St. John's.

Four were aboard Captain Abram Kean's Flagship Beothic, the 79-year-old Commodore of the fleet reported by wireless. The Imogene carried three more and the Caribou had two—all young boys.

PREMIER MOVES TO ESTABLISH COUNCIL

New Body Would be Called National Economic Council

Ottawa, March 7—(CP)— Prime Minister R. B. Bennett gave notice of motion today he would move in the House of Commons for establishment of a National Economic Council.

The council would be called the Economic Council of Canada. Although the notice of motion gave no details concerning its organization, reports current in parliament circles said it would resemble the National Research Council and would act in an advisory and co-ordination capacity for economic activities in much the same way as the research council has done for scientific affairs.

WEATHER

Toronto, Mar. 7—(CP)—The weather has been mostly fair and quite cold from Alberta eastward to northern Quebec and has turned somewhat colder in Southern Ontario.

Lake Superior—Moderate northeasterly winds; fair and a little colder.

Kenora, Rainy River and Manitoba—Moderate winds; fair; stationary or a little higher temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta— East to southeast winds; fair and not so cold.

ICE IN ARENA IN GOOD CONDITION

The sudden drop in temperature this morning assured the Belleville Arena of dry ice for tonight's city league play-off between the Alemite and Trenton. "The brisk wind, that blew all night completely dried the ice and it was thoroughly tightened up early today," stated Robt. Redner, manager of the Arena this afternoon. With a fast sheet of ice and colder weather in the offing, a bumper crowd can be assured for the city league final play-off tonight at the Arena.

BUSINESS BETTER IN DETROIT AREA

Business conditions have been much better in Detroit lately, stated Mrs. W. P. McMahon of that city now visiting her mother, Mrs. James Ross of 22 Geddes Street. Automobile factories, high are again in full swing have returned thousands to work, and the slackness, that was noted in the city during the past two or three years has been materially improved following the slight boom.

Quota Now Working On Stirling Road

A quota of fifty men from Sidney Township working under relief regulations has been divided into two gangs of twenty-five men each, with alternate weeks of labor on the Foxboro-Stirling road. The shift, which changed yesterday is busily engaged in trimming the road with new gravel just west of Foxboro.

TOUCH OF WINTER VISITS DISTRICT

A chill March wind brought a touch of winter to the district again today and made overcoats, conspicious by their absence during the past few days, again a welcome article of raiment. During the night a low temperature of 15 above was recorded, with the highest point reached at noon today registering 27. Flooded streets from the melting snow, which hampered pedestrians since the beginning of the week were again frozen hard and solid.

FISH DEALERS BUSY IN LENT

Lent, synonomous with fish, has resulted in greater activity in the business houses of fish dealers in the city. Although the present winter has been one of the slackest on record for the industry, it is expected that fishermen of the district who have found the season an entirely unprofitable one will commence business in earnest within the next week or so. Already the first stirrings of carp, mullet and other larger fish have been noted in surrounding waters, and preparations for heavier netting are now being made. The fish, already stirred by the spring urge to forge upstream and spawn, have been collecting in large numbers in the vicinity of Big Bay, it is stated

Grocers Warned About Under Weight

Grocers and retail stores, wherever the product is sold in the city have been issued a notice by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, calling attention to the fact that: "The sale of prints of butter containing less than one-quarter pound, one-half pound, one pound, or two pounds of butter, is prohibited by law and heavy penalties are provided for violations of this regulation". This is contained in circular No. 30, issued by the Department. The notice follows a recent checkup of local stores and creameries, and the discovery that several stores were reported to have been unconsciously selling underweight purchases of butter.

CHEESE INDUSTRY TO BE DISCUSSED

Several residents of this city will be in attendance at Kingston on Tuesday night, March 19, when the Hon., Robert Weir, Federal Minister of Agriculture will address a dinner meeting under the auspices of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Weir will speak on the cheese industry, a subject which has been arousing a great deal of attention in this district lately. The meeting will be an open one, with invitations extended particularly to those connected with the cheese industry.

INFLUENZA WAVE HARD ON THE V.O.N.

A contagious wave of influenza which has swept the city during the past few weeks has made its effect felt upon the nurses of the local Royal Victorian Order. For the past week or so the nurses have been working overtime in an attempt to keep up with the numerous calls upon their services by residents of the city. The majority of the cases attended are for complications following recurrent attacks of the 'flu. Maternity cases lately are also demanding much attention.

"Y" JOTTINGS

Word was received in Belleville this morning to the effect, that the executive body of the E.O.B.A. had met and declared the Belleville "Y" intermediate basketball team tied with R.M.C. in the final standing of the group and ordered a play-off between these two teams. Coach Ralph Morden immediately got into communication with the heads of sport at the R.M.C. but no decision was arrived at, Belleville desiring a home and home series, goals to count, while the "Cadets" intimated, that a sudden death game was more desirable. This matter also will be taken up by the E.O.B.A. executive later today.

The second meeting of the Y.M.C.A. "swimming club" was held in the "Y" pool last night when over 20 interested divers and swimmers held a local meet. These weekly aquatic meets are gaining in popularity around the "Y" and attracting wide attention.

The Y.M.C.A. spring volleyball league got away to a flying start on Tuesday night. Four teams are included in the loop this spring, all being quite evenly balanced. The executive of the Belleville Anglers' Association met at the "Y" and completed arrangements for the opening of their plug and fly casting competition at the Armouries on Friday night of this week. The Anglers have an organization some 150 strong.

"OWNED BY THOSE IT SERVES"

COMMISSIONERS
M. P. Duff, Chairman
Geo. A. Reid,
Geo. O. Tice, Mayor.

March 5th, 1935

TO THE OWNERS:

Your Commission has much pleasure in advising you that the year ending December 31st, 1934, has been a successful one. The System's revenue increased, the load increased and the surplus increased.

The local system was purchased as of April 1st, 1929 and for the first nine months was operated by the Ontario Commission. The local Commission took charge on January 1st, 1930, and this is the fifth year it has been able to report gratifying results.

A detailed financial statement of the year's operations will be presented as usual but the Commission gives you herewith a few facts. You will note that some facts deal with the last year's operations and others with the operation over the period you have been owners.

The surplus for 1934 is $29,977.02. This is the largest since 1931.

The revenue increased 4.71% during the past year.

The power purchased increased during the year 252.38 H.P. but the cost was $5111.98 less.

At the end of the year the liquid assets were sufficient to retire the liabilities and leave a credit balance of $23,811.41.

There has been $144,000 paid on the debenture debt leaving $22,000 still to pay.

The domestic consumers have received three rate reductions which has meant a saving to them of from 34% up depending on their use.

The commercial consumers have received two rate reductions which has meant a saving of from 21% to 40%.

The Street Lighting has cost the citizens over 25% less than it would have under the 1929 rates. This includes the cash rebate of $9,489.26.

The system of rates is based on the principle of "The greater the use, the cheaper per kilowatt hour."

The plant has been improved during the year and interruptions to service have been a minimum.

The operation of the Hydro Shop has been very satisfactory and has been an important factor in the increase of the load.

It appears that a further rate reduction can be made and your Commission is taking the question up with the Ontario Commission.

Your Commission desires to express its appreciation of your support and the loyalty and service rendered by the Management and Staff during the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed on behalf of the Commission,

M. P. DUFF,
Chairman.

Vermilyea Drops His Solitaire Turns to Cross Word Puzzles

Hour after Hour Work of Reconstructing Pictures Continues

CONDUCT IS SAME

Harold W. Vermilyea's interminable game of solitaire, played with a well worn pack of playing cards on his blankets in the condemned cell at the Hastings County jail since sentence of death was passed on Tuesday, February 26 has been temporarily discontinued in favor of another game with which to pass the dragging hours until May 2nd. The county's chief prisoner has been supplied with a sheaf of crossword puzzles and hour after hour, with a stub of pencil in hand, he tackles the engrossing problems. Vermilyea's agile brain requires puzzles of the harder sort than that generally favored. He is proud of the accomplishment of being able to solve the puzzles with a rapidity and ease commented upon by the guards.

Vermilyea is reported to be accepting his confinement with the same unruffled calm and insouciance as ever, it is reported by Gaol Governor G. H. French.

Police News

The largest number of transients to apply at the local police station for a warm night's lodging this year was in evidence last night when 24 shivering transients were taken in and given a warm night's lodging. The sudden increase in the number of transients passing through the city is attributed to the milder weather, that was experienced earlier in the week.

One speedster and another local motorist found themselves in the clutches of the law and facing charges under the H.T.A. The speedster was seen driving at an excessive rate of speed on East Dundas St. on Tuesday, when the street was covered with a thick coating of sleet and ice. The second motorist was apprehended, while operating a motor car without at first having obtained an individual operator's licence. Both cases will be presented in tomorrow's police court.

One lone inebriate occupied the police cells last night, he being arrested on Bridge St. late yesterday afternoon and charged with being intoxicated. A bottle containing what police allege to be rubbing alcohol, was found in the man's possession and confiscated.

Local police authorities received two complaints relating to dead dumb animals being abandoned on local streets yesterday. The city scavenger was immediately notified and removed the source of annoyance. A dog was found dead in the Tickell property at the corner of Foundry and Pinnacle St. The carcass had apparently been thrown over a high board fence and abandoned. A cat died near the eastern extremity of the city yesterday. The animal had apparently been struck by a passing motor car on Dundas St. Both annoyances were removed by the city scavenger.

Picton, March 7 (Special) — On Saturday, March 2nd, at Cherry Valley United Church, at two o'clock the funeral of Mr. David E. Sivyer was largely attended. Mr. Sivyer passed away at his home in Picton on Thursday, February 28th. He was in his seventy-eighth year.

STANLEY McKIBBON

Suddenly on Tuesday morning at five o'clock, as the result of a heart attack, the death occurred of one of Cherry Valley's most respected citizens, Mr. Stanley McKibbon. The deceased had not been in the best of health for some time but his death came as a shock to the family.

Mr. McKibbon had spent his life as a successful farmer in Athol township until ten years ago when he retired, and moved to Cherry Valley. He was of a quiet, pleasant disposition, and held the esteem and respect of everyone. For many years he was tax collector of Athol township. His wife, Cynthia Scott predeceased him fourteen months ago.

Surviving is one son Amos on the homestead at Point Petre, and two daughters, Edna (Mrs. Gerald Emery of Toronto) and Florence (Mrs. Suffle of Noranda, Que.). Two sisters, Mrs. John Bentley of Cherry Valley and Mrs. Mary Marshall of Deseronto also survive. The deceased was a life long Conservative and a member of the United Church.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Gardiner in Cherry Valley United Church on Thursday, March 7th at 2 p.m. and interment was made in Cherry Valley cemetery.

GEORGE McCULLOUGH

After a brief illness George McCullough passed away at his residence, 13 Forin Street, this Thursday morning.

The late Mr., McCullough, who was in his 75th. year, was born in Tyendinaga township, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William McCullough. For the past two years he had been a resident of Belleville, prior to which time he had made his home in the 5th. concession of Sidney where he was engaged in farming for many years. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church, Foxboro, and was held in high esteem by many friends who will regret to learn of his death. Fraternally he was a charter member of L. O. L., No. 3, Foxboro, and the funeral from the residence of his son in Sidney township, will be held under the auspices of the Orange order.

Surviving to mourn his passing besides the widow are, one son, George D. McCullough of the 5th. concession of Sidney, and one sister, Mrs. Benjamin MacDonald, Deseronto.

ORGANIZE MADOC BRANCH H.N.S.

Fred Meraw Elected President of Newly Formed Society

Madoc, Mar. 7.—At a recent meeting of the men of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, a Madoc branch of the Holy Name Society was organized. The society will meet once a month. The following members were elected as the executive for the coming year: President, Fred Meraw; first vice-president, Francis Tobin; second vice-president, Fred Nayler; secretary, E. H. Mulholland; treasurer, Dan Barry; marshall, Leonard Mulroney; consultors, Wilfred Forestell, Jack Lahey, Dan O'Connor, Vincent Jackson.

Eastern Star Party.

On Tuesday evening members and friends of the Eastern Star attended the card party and dance held by that order in their rooms in the Mackenzie block. Auction and contract bridge were played at which the fortunate winners were Mrs. Robert Belshaw and Mr. Pete Clark at bridge and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nayler at euchre. A very tasty lunch was served about midnight after which the guests spent a couple of hours dancing to the melodious rhythm of the Madoc orchestra.

Young Women's Auxiliary.

The March meeting of the Young Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church was held at the home of Miss Vera McGee on Monday evening. The meeting was opened by singing hymn 545. This was followed with a prayer. Miss Lillian Connor read the Scripture lesson. The minutes of the February meeting were read and approved.

A short period was devoted to the discussion of business. A very interesting study, entitled "Mrs. Osborne's Awakening", was given by Miss Ivah Spencer. The devotional part of the program was then brought to a close by singing hymn 437 and repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

A short but interesting social program followed. Miss Helen Whytock played a pretty piano selection. Miss Loreen Connor recited a poem, "Political Successions". Miss Eileen Wilson rendered a lovely guitar selection. A contest and a very tasty lunch served by the hostess brought the evening to a close.

Mrs. Alex Moore of Belleville is spending a few days in Madoc as the guest of her son, Mr. Carl McCoy.

Mr. Duncan Blue leaves on Wednesday for Vancouver, British Columbia, to visit his brother, Neil, who is ill.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hunter attended the meeting of the Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church at Kingston on Tuesday.

Trinity Young People's Society.

The regular weekly meeting of Trinity Young People's Society was held in the basement of the church with Miss E. MacDiarmid, the president, in charge. Following the opening hymn, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. A short business period followed. It was suggested that communication be opened with the Carolina Singers with a view to securing their services in the near future.

Mrs. A. Abbott, the Christian Fellowship convener, then took charge of the program. The Scripture Lesson was read by Mervyn Rutherford. Rev. G. W. Rivers led in prayer. Miss Edith Burr read an interesting poem called "Courage". Mrs. Abbott then gave the topic, "Youth of To-day", and presented a paper on the problems confronting the young people of today and the solutions. The topic was very capably discussed in its various phases by Miss Minnie Ferguson, Miss E. MacDiarmid and Mr. Rivers. Miss Etta Marsette read a poem.

A very pretty piano solo was rendered by Miss Jean Nickle. Three little girls, Miss Laura Storrings, Miss Betty Phillips and Miss Thelma Storrings gave "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross". Miss Margaret White played the accompaniment. The program was brought to a close with a vocal solo by Miss Minnie Ferguson and the repeating of the Mizpah Benediction in unison.

Miss Eleanor Martin has returned to her home in Madoc having spent the last two weeks visiting relatives in Belleville.

Mr. Colin Dafoe who has been at home in Madoc for the past week has returned to Kingston to resume his studies in the faculty of medicine at Queen's University.

The Madoc Badminton Club visited Belleville on Tuesday evening as the guests of the Belleville Badminton Club. The following players accompanied the team, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Nicol, Mr. and Mrs. James Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Niel Caverly, Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty, Mr. and Mrs. James Erwin, Mr. Norman Whytock, Mr. Charles Johnston, Mrs. T. H. Rupert, Miss Grace Garrett, Miss Loreen Connor, Miss E. MacDiarmid, Mr. Greenwood, Mr. William Scrutton and Mr. Hugh Keller.

Congratulations are sincerely extended to Mr. Samuel Rollins of Madoc Village on the 72nd anniversary of his birthday on March 5. Mr. Rollins spent his early days at his home in Madoc township near Cooper. His younger days were spent as a farmer and one of the well known lumber merchants. About fifteen years ago Mr. Rollins retired and with his wife took up his residence on St. Lawrence street in Madoc. Mr. Samuel Rollins is widely known as the back bone of the Madoc Fall Fair. In his capacity as treasurer of the Madoc Agricultural Society he has given unstintingly of his time and help and the many fine buildings and the successful fall fairs are a tribute to his work. During his spare time, he enjoys playing his favorite game of checkers. His many friends join in this opportunity of wishing him many more years of life and happiness.

Labor Protests Arms Increase

London, March 6 (CP)—Members of the Labor Opposition met in the House of Commons today and asked their colleague, Arthur Henderson, to resign as chairman of the World Disarmament Conference in protest against increases in British defence appropriations.

Mr. Henderson listened to the arguments but was said to have ejected the suggestion on the grounds his appointment had nothing to do with his political beliefs.

The party decided to move a vote of censure against the Government for its armaments policy next Monday and Mr. Henderson was reported to have declined to take part.

Why nervous, sleepless high-pressure people need the vitamin "B" stored by Nature in Oatmeal
Thousands are turning to a breakfast of delicious Quaker Oats, because 1c worth of it contains more Vitamin "B" than 3 cakes of fresh yeast.

IN VITAMIN B
1c worth of Quaker Oats

3 cakes fresh yeast
SINCE WE'VE BEEN HAVING QUAKER OATS REGULARLY I'VE LOST THAT NERVOUS HIGH-STRUNG FEELING AND BOTH MY APPETITE AND DIGESTION HAVE IMPROVED!
DADDY, ISN'T IT SWELL TO HAVE A LOT OF PEP? YESTERDAY TEACHER SAID, "WHAT'S COME OVER YOU, JANE, YOU'RE A DIFFERENT GIRL?"

Youngsters must have vitamin B. Yet 1c worth of delicious Quaker Oats contains more of it than 3 cakes of fresh yeast.

How doctors now trace much nervousness to a lack of this nerve-nourishment

DOCTORS say much nervousness is simply a form of hunger! Because most diets lack the vital nerve-nourishing element stored so richly in delicious Quaker Oats.

In a cents worth of this abundantly energizing breakfast, is the precious Vitamin "B" of three cakes of fresh yeast!

Make this two-weeks test

Start tomorrow with a dish of Quaker Oats the appetizing, natural way to get the all-important Vitamin "B". Not only is it nerve-nourishing food, but this same vital element curbs constipation and stimulates normal, healthy appetite!

STRENGTHENING BRITISH DEFENCES

British effort to aid all means of bringing about disarmament has been insistent but as the task is so great progress is slow. Britain's moderation in the matter of arming has doubtless been looked upon by some of the powers as an opportunity to strengthen their own forces.

But Britain with all her idealism in regard to the advisability of disarmament would have been committing a grave mistake were she to risk the safety of the world by neglecting to keep herself in preparation. It may be that her preparation will do a little more than her disarmament efforts to show the folly of competitive armament construction.

Even in disarmament there would have to be some protection such as the civil police of today, which are necessary though duelling, fighting in the streets and private squabbling are things of the long past.

One of the most potent factors in the decision of Britain is doubtless the air arm. Things have changed very greatly since the war and if trouble were to break out there is not the slightest doubt that the first damage would be done by planes, wheher they would be capable of wholesale havoc is problematical.

With Europe and Japan acting in a militaristic manner while Britain has been urging disarmament for years, without apparent effect, Britain has turned to guard her own doors. To do so means that she must have adequate air defences which will place the boundary of the country somewhere in Central Europe.

If any nations were trusting to Britain's allowing her strength to decline while others were adding to their military equipment, those nations must now see that they have made a grave mistake. They should realize that Britain is a power whose word should be taken as it is given. They may now realize that while Britain has reluctantly gone in for strengthening the three defence arms of the army, navy and the air, Britain will still pursue the ideal of peace. It may have been it was impossible for the aim to succeed at present as being too advanced for a world suffering from the pains and wounds of the Great War with its adjustments and settlements which did not of course please all nations. Britain may have been just a little ahead of time. However it is clear that any time the world wants to talk disarmament Britain will be ready.

WAR IN GRECIAN ISLES

The Isles of Greece! Every schoolboy, every schoolgirl remembers the Byronic lines

"The Isles of Greece! The Isles of Greece!
Where burning Sappho loved and sung
Where grew the arts of war and peace,
Where Delos rose and Phoebus sprung.
Eternal sunshine gilds them yet
But all except their sun is set."

These isles of Greece are in revolution. Venizelos has been one of the most remarkable men who came out of the Great War in which Greece fought on the side of the Allies while King Constantine leaned towards the Central Powers. Since then Venizelos has been the big man of Greece. The present revolution is said to be an attempt to prevent a possible move to restore the monarchy.

Venizelos has weathered many storms and has extended the power of Greece over Crete, Macedonia and the Aegean Sea. Latterly he has been living in retirement after defeat.

Old men played a great part on the ancient classical world of Greece and it may be that seventy-one-year-old Venizelos is still able to play a great role.

Byron's lines do not ring true today. Greece's sun is not set. She is one of the countries which has come out of great tribulation and is growing rapidly. Greece was the first point in the Western World where classical civilization rose.

Greece is in turmoil and Balkan nations show anxiety over the situation in Crete.

GREEN BELTS FOR BIG CITIES

Despite its enormous commitments, especially for housing, the London county council has set aside the sum of $10,000,000 to buy up land so as to preserve for all time a green belt around London, so that no matter how big the metropolitan area grows, nobody will be far away from green fields, trees and flowers. This is a commendable spirit worthy of the greatest city in the world. London is well supplied with parks and open spaces, far more so, for example, than New York, and the transportation system is so extensive, rapid and cheap that it does not take long to get out into the country.—St. Thomas Times and Journal.

KALEVALA

The brevity of the greetings presented by the delegates of twenty-five countries at the celebration in Helsingfors of the centenary of the publication of the Kalevala, the Finnish epic into which the early folk ballads were gathered and published in 1835, was hardly in character with the poem itself. It consists of fifty runes, with a total of more than 23,000 lines, beginning with these:

I am driven by my longing
And my understanding urges
That I should commence my singing
And begin my recitation.
I will sing the people's legends
And the ballads of the nation.
To my mouth the words are flowing
And the words are gently falling.
Quickly as my tongue can shape them
And between my teeth emerging.

The American Minister must have shaped his words most quickly and felicitously to have said in thirty-five seconds what the people of Finland had such pleasure in hearing. The heroes in Kalevala make frequent use of magic as magic as the "word of origin." His magic must have been the "word of ending," or some happy phrase which included the three words that one of the Kalevala heroes had to find before he could make perfect the ship in which he "sailed to loftier regions."

The Kalevala, unlike the Odyssey or the Aeneid, has to do with the adventures of more than one hero—the name itself meaning "The Land of Heroes." It is significant of the culture of the people of this land, who have in our time given the world a greatest living composer and made a memorial to a poet their chief monument, that the first of their legendary heroes was a primeval minstrel, "born of a divine Creatrix," to rejoice the plains to make the woods more cheerful, to make the coast grow wealthy and the whole region of his reach more fruitful. He was the Finnish Orpheus. When he played indoors on his kantele the ceilings rang, the windows were rejoicing, the hearthstones moving, the columns singing. When he walked out of doors the pines bowed—the fir trees to the very ground—the cones rolled round him, the leaves called gayly to him and the flowers breathed fragrance about him. The other heroes were: a great smith and craftsman, "born on a hill of charcoal"; an adventurous personage, "in part the original" of Longfellow's "Pau-Puk-Keewis"; and a morose giant, "in part prototype" of Longfellow's "Kwasind". The lines are so closely interwoven that they are (as the Song of Hiawatha) easily read, though as their rune maker is himself made to say, "Many people I encounter x x x call my songs too lengthy." Rather would one repeat what was said of the minstrel hero, and so of the whole epos:

But his kantele he left us,
Left his charming harp in Suomi—
For his people's lasting pleasure
Mighty songs for Suomi's children.

Now that the poem in all its length and beauty has been translated into other languages, it has been left to the world—and the way has been shown to other singers and of other lands of heroes.—New York Times.

TWO YEARS OF ROOSEVELT

It is, perhaps, only natural that the second anniversary of Roosevelt's inauguration to the Presidency of the United States should pass with rather less fanfare of trumpets than the first. The New Deal, in any case, has passed the "hurrah" stage and must perforce settle down to a long, steady pull, if it is to succeed. A year ago it was easy enough to draw striking contrasts between March 4, 1933, when every bank in the country had to be closed and financial panic reigned, and the comparative confidence of March, 1934. It is still possible to draw such contrasts with conditions two years ago, but not one year ago.

For, undoubtedly, there has been some recession of business confidence in the United States during the past year. Furthermore, the NRA is involved, today, in all sorts of difficulties, including adverse court judgments. Again, Roosevelt has lost the absolute command he formerly had over Congress, and has suffered some notable reverses at its hands. The Senate has "gone radical" now, and threatens to outdeal the New Deal. All sorts of wild-cat inflationary schemes for robbing the public till are on foot in the present Congress, and it is profoundly to be hoped that Roosevelt will regain his ascendency. He remains, as ever, the bulwark against the cruder types of Utopian scheming. His overwhelming victory in the November "off-year" election leaves him still huge reserves of power.

A sunny character, a superb politician and a very considerable statesman, Franklin Roosevelt, in spite of some conspicuous failures,—matched by some conspicuous successes,—retains a strong hold upon the affections of the American people.—Montreal Star.

Nature knows no pause in her progress and development, and attaches her curse on all inaction.—Goethe.

It is not strange that remembered ideas should often take advantage of the crowd of thoughts and smuggle themselves in as original. Honest thinkers are always stealing unconsciously from each other. Our minds are full of waifs and strays that we think our own. Innocent plagiarism turns up everywhere.—Oliver Wendel Holmes.

A STRANGE BOOK

Few pleasures can defy the years
When heads grow gray, hearts chill;
But with a strange book in my hands
There comes a joyous thrill.

How eagerly I turn the leaves
(Though it be new or old)
For unknown vistas opening,
Fair worlds it may unfold!

Great ships may go with billowing sails
To fabled lands, therein;
There men of pomp may live and breathe,
Grandee and mandarin.

Perhaps joy dances there, or pride
With weighty tread may move;
Perhaps, like sunlight, through the words
May shine the look of love.

There are few pleasures which do not Grow lesser with time's flight;
But with a strange book in my hands
Still comes the old delight!

—Aline Michaelis.

ELVA STATLER, of the Hotel Statler clan, heiress in her own right, was married two months ago, to a Bradley Davidson. The couple were honeymooning in North Carolina. Her dead body was found in a garage one morning recently, dead from carbon monoxide gas, but whether by accident or design of her own or others, is not known, pending investigation. She was twenty-two years of age and with her husband had attended a ball the night before returning at 4 a.m.

HERE THEN IS A STRANGE THING—cattle are killed in Australia, the hides shipped to England where they are tanned, then reshipped to Canada where the leather is used in upholstering a certain type of automobile. These automobiles are not sold in Canada but exported to England, India and Australia. Here then is a strange thing. These huge cattle which roam the great plains of Australia and contribute to commerce their immense hides finish their careers in nicely upholstered automobiles in company with many a charming Miss or Mrs.——come back to Australia, in fact, as finely finished leather upholstery, after a journey across the seas to England, then to Canada—and then back 'ome in automobiles. Gor blimey if this aint a rum go!

CRYOLITE, a very rare mineral, found in large quantities only in Greenland, and in small quantities at the top of Pike's Peak, where the bankruptcy idea came from, "Pike's Peak or Bust," is used in the making of automobiles. Boxite, another substance used in the making of automobiles, is imported from British Guiana, in South America. Truly in the making of automobiles there is no end of interesting facts.

THE WELSH have a fashion of beginning meals where children are seated round the table with a very interesting questionaire. Every article of food on the table is made the subject of questions, for instance, roast beef might come from the Argentine or Canada, lamb or mutton from Australia or New Zealand, familiar vegetables from Jones' farm down the road, but most of the food stuffs being imported in the isles of the sea, question time in Wales is very interesting and instructive. Welsh folks wish to know just everything possible about everything they come in contact with.

LLOYD GEORGE in the news reels states that unemployment and the dole in England can be banished by intelligent planning such as was necessary to win the war. Says the Welsh Wizard there is enough work needed fixing the roads and building houses fit to live in to put all the at present unemployed back at work. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald has invited Lloyd George to outline his proposals for governmental consideration, and the man who was such a mighty force for good during the war as Minister of Munitions and afterwards Premier can doubtless tell this government something worth while.

EXPERIMENTAL HOUSE PRESAGES NEW TYPE OF HOME

Artist's conception of a street of these new homes.

The "woman's Worshop" employs electrical servants from range to refrigerator, and automatic ventilation and local illumination where most needed.

This experimental house, built in Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio, by General Electric to test the value and practicability of a standardized-room-unit method of residential construction has just been completed. It may pressage a new era in home building, bringing comfort and convenience feature within reach of the average family living in smaller type residences.

Former Resident of Wellman's Attains Unique Position in Church

Rawdon—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. George Stone at Bethel.

Several of the Mount Pleasant boys journeyed to Campbellford on Friday evening and attended a hockey match.

Miss Eileen MacMullen spent a couple of days last week in Stirling and attended the High School Commencement.

Mrs. Herbert Miller and sons of Madoc are holidaying with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cooney, Howard and Lloyd spent Sunday with Mrs. Will Mitts at Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Andrews entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin and Jennie to tea on Saturday evening.

Mrs. Hamilton Donnan, Ronald and Douglas of Ridge Road are spending a few days this week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. James Sharp.

Mr. Charlie Carter spent Sunday with friends at Mount Pleasant.

Friends at Mount Pleasant and Wellman's were delighted to read in the New Outlook last week of the unique position held by Mr. George Mack of High River, Alberta.

Mr. Mack is chairman of High River Presbytery and is perhaps the only layman to hold such an important office. He has been Sunday School Superintendent for thirty-five consecutive years and has also been a commissioner to General Council. He was born at Wellman's and became a loyal member of Wellman's Church at the age of eighteen.

Among those from Mount Pleasant who attended the High School Commencement last Wednesday evening were Misses Frances McKeown, Muriel Milligan, Isobel Turner and Marjorie Hagerman and Messrs Kenneth Holmes, Burton Sharp, Harold Hagerman and others.

The many friends of Mrs. Ross Hoard will be delighted to hear that the doctors at Kingston have came to the conclusion that it won't be necessary for her to undergo another operation. Mrs. Hoard will be remaining in Kingston with her sister, Mrs. Harry Ketcheson for a couple of weeks and will continue the treatments that she has been undergoing in the hospital.

Mrs. Willie Montgomery and Marle are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Montgomery at Ross' Corners.

Mr. Herbert Higgs accepted a position in Stirling last Thursday.

Mr. John Coggins opened Mount Pleasant Y.P.S. with a Devotional Service on Friday evening.

Miss Mildred Sharp, convener of Christian Fellowship then presided and all repeated "The Lord's Prayer."

Mrs. Merle Spencer read the Bible lesson and Miss Edna Thrasher delighted with a solo "It Pays to Serve Jesus."

Mrs. Frank Smith outlined the topic on "Jesus' attitude towards sinners" and brought out many interesting points. Miss Phyllis David contributed a piano solo and Mrs. Cyrus Summers gave a lovely poem entitled "Would Mother Care". All joined in "Blessed Assurance". Mr. Fred Eigie sang a beautiful solo "An Evening Prayer". Miss Olive McConnell played the solo accompaniments.

Rev. F. G. Joblin divided the company in two groups and then conducted an oral Bible contest which proved of interest to all.

Mrs. J. Crippen of Cordova Mines is spending a few weeks with her daughter Mrs. John Hay.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Lloyd and Donna of Belleville spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. John McMullen.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Moore of Belleville were weekend guests of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Dave Cotton.

Mrs. Clifford Clancy and children have returned home from a holiday at West Huntingdon.

About thirty members of Bethel Young Peoples' Society journeyed to St. Paul's and gave a programme. Among those assisting were Mrs. Roy Melbourne, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. Harold Elliott and Bobby, Miss Elda McMullen, Misses Annie and Mildred Elliott and Mrs. M. Hayton.

Mr. Thomas McMullen, Lauretta and Blanche and Mr. John McMullen attended the funeral of their uncle, Mr. Will Kent in Belleville last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Stewart and family were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cooney.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Cooney and sons were recent guests of his mother at Harold.

Mr. John Coggins spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Andrews.

Miss Helen Spencer spent Friday with Miss Vera McAdam.

Mrs. Earle McAdam is slowly recuperating and friends were pleased to hear that she had the cast removed from her ankle last Friday.

Mr. Clifford Holmes of Peterborough Normal attended the High School Commencement on Wednesday evening and visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. J. Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hagerman and children have returned home from a holiday with relatives in Clayton, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hagerman entertained a number of young people to a delightful party one evening last week.

MRS. J. GOWSEL CELEBRATES HER 84TH BIRTHDAY

Foxboro, Mar. 7.—Mrs. Annie Bonkin returned home after spending some time with relatives in Trenton and Cobourg.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson had Sunday dinner at the latter's parents', Mr. and Mrs. A. Gough.

Mrs. E. Reynolds returned home after spending the winter with relatives at Queensboro.

Mrs. W. Hopkins spent Thursday in Belleville.

Mrs. S. C. Gay was the guest speaker at a W.M.S. banquet in Napanee last week.

Miss Alice McKelvie of Campbellford visited her sister, Mrs. Charles Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett McCaughan entertained their friends at a dance on Wednesday evening.

This village, which is widely known for its many elderly people who attain the ripe old age of eighty years or more was again reminded of this fact on Feb. 28 when Mrs. John Gowsell Sr. celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday. This event was of interest to many friends who called during the afternoon to extend congratulations and wish her many happy returns of the day. Many friends at a distance favored her with cards and letters, one being from Mr. Egbert Ashley, a resident of this place fifty years ago, but now of Winnipeg, who is nearing his ninetieth birthday and who is still hale and hearty. Spring flowers lent their brightness and cheer to this happy occasion.

Mrs. Bonkin is nursing Mrs. J. Bryant who is ill.

Mrs. Campbell spent Friday afternoon with Mrs. C. Finkle.

Mrs. Reginald Skinner is visiting friends in Campbellford.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Murray (nee Marguerite Smith) on the arrival of a baby boy.

Quite a number attended the hockey match on Tuesday evening.

ICE JAM OCCURS

Galt Ont. March 7 (CP): An ice jam on the Grand River at Blair caused the flooding of the Blair-Preston highway and the Canadian National Railways tracks for several hundred yards.

The ice jammed at the Blair bridge and the structure is reported in danger. A family by the name of Miller living a hundred odd yards back from the river were marooned in their homes with water were in no danger.

SEARCH STOWAWAYS ON SEALING SHIPS

Season opens March 14 and all eager to go to work

St. John's Nfld. March 7 (CP): The traditional search for stowaways began today as the Newfoundland's sealing fleet prepared for the annual foray into the northern icefields. Every year adventurous youths — and sometimes girls hide away on the crowded steamers hoping for the thrills of "Going on the Ice" up where 48 of the Greenland's crew perished in a blizzard in 1898; Where the Southern Cross foundered with 73 men aboard in 1914. The same year 77 of the Newfoundland's crew unable to reach their ship after a storm trapped them on the floes, were frozen to death. Where the Viking was wrecked in 1931 by an explosion that killed 28 men.

Last year 27 stowaways, the youngest a boy of seven were dropped at Coastal Ports as the fleet headed northward. The year before a dozen, including a youth, who had spent all night in a pork barrel, were evicted and the year before six girls were sent back to St. John's.

Nine steamers making up the largest fleet in years will go to the kill this year. With whistles shrieking and crowds cheering along the waterfront, the 79-year-old commodore, Hon. Abram Kean, O.B.E. will hoist his colors on the Beothic and lead the fleet to beat last year's catch of 227,380 seals brought in by eight vessels.

The men will have it easy until March 14, when the season opens. But on that day more than 1,800 seal-killers will leave the ships and hop over the ice-pans.

'Unchristian to Oppose' Is Minister's Comment

Windsor March 7 (CP): "My feeling is that it is unchristian to oppose any person serving God in whatever way they wish." Remarked Rev. O. D. Farquharson, when commenting today on the action of the Middlesex Presbytery of the United Church of Canada voting against the admittance of women to the pulpit.

The attitude of the Essex Presbytery on the matter was determined in February of this year when a resolution favoring ordination of women was passed 33 to 0.

Jealousy Over New Baby

By LISA GRENELLE

George's mother and father were horrified to find how calmly he took the death of his small sister. They thought at first that he could not have realised what had happened. Perhaps they had tried too hard to spare him, assuming that a blow so devastating to them would prove entirely crushing to one of his tender years.

But when George remarked one day, "Well, now that God has taken Aimee back I can make all the noise I want, and nobody will break my toys", there seemed no longer any reasonable doubt that George did not understand the nature of the tragedy, or that he was hiding a deep grief in order to spare his parents.

"How can you talk like that about your little sister whom you'll never see again?" cried his mother.

"Well," George continued frankly, "you must admit she was an awful nuisance, mother, always crying and getting in the way and breaking things."

Heartless Boy?

Furious and heartbroken, George's mother rebuked him again and left the room crying.

Later at supper, he asked, "Mother would you cry if I died?"

And she, still angry, and shocked, answered, "I don't know whether I would or not, now that I have found out what a heartless little boy you are."

"I guess," George said after some thought, "mothers only cry when little girls die."

"Nonsense, that has nothing to do with it, George, and you know it!"

But George was not convinced.

Shocking that a small boy should not mourn his baby sister's death? Tragic rather that his parents gave him so much cause for jealousy that he could not learn to love her.

It is natural for children to love, but natural also for them to hate, resent, fear. They are as ready to jump one way as another. They are not born saints any more than sinners.

Avoid Jealousy

I have given the example of an extreme and shocking case only because it happens to be true, and cases only slightly less extreme are so common. I know a number of families in which the jealousy of the older for the younger runs so high as to endanger the baby's safety.

And with a little care and knowledge it can so easily be avoided.

In the first place don't spoil your first born. Try not to make him feel he is the most important thing in the world. If you do the birth of a second child will be a very serious and perhaps tragic problem. A child who has been made to feel the centre cannot adjust himself overnight to second place, or even to sharing the spotlight. You cannot expect it of him.

Only by making him feel from the beginning that the baby is not a rival but a shared acquisition, can jealousy be avoided. And never, if possible, must he feel that the baby absorbs all the attention while he is present.

SUPPER PARTY HELD BY W. A. GROUP

Tuesday evening, March 5th, the ladies of Group No. 1 Tabernacle United Church W. A. entertained their husbands and other friends, when they met and dined at the supper hour, in the ladies' parlor, more than fifty members and guests partaking of the banquet prepared by the ladies.

Mrs. R. L. Johnson, Goup Convener, presided, during the following programme:

Opening Song: "O Canada."
Toast: "His Majesty the King" proposed by Mrs. Moon.
"God Save The King."
Toast: "Our Guests," proposed by Mrs. P. Lent.
Reply: Mr. Johnson.
Hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."
The Lord's Prayer, repeated in unison.

A worship service based on a study of Mary, Sister of Lazarus, was conducted by Mrs. H. W. Proats, in which she was assisted by Mrs. Rose, who led in the responsive reading, by Mrs. Nunn who read the Scripture lesson from St. John's Gospel, Chap. 12, and by Mrs. Taylor reading a poem entitled "Mary and Martha." Mr. Naylor delighted all present by rendering Jude's beautiful musical arrangement of the hymn "I Gave Myself For Thee" in a vocal solo, and the devotional period was closed with the hymn, "Love Divine."

After the usual business routine the programme continued with a piano duet by Misses Jean and Betty Shorey; a vocal solo, "They Called It Ireland" by Mrs. Bradley; a reading, "Mary's Reply" ably given by Mrs. Windover, Jr., and a musical dialogue, "Billy Grimes" by Mrs. Proats and Miss Jean Shorey, as Mother and Daughter.

A contest in Merchandises closed the evening's entertainment and all report having had a most enjoyable evening.

Healthful, Outdoor Play Preserves Youth, Beauty

(The Beauty Box)

June Lang

Lovely Screen Star Who Appreciate a Beauty-Value of Outdoor Exercise

By HELEN FOLLETT

Youth is simple because youth romps and plays. No reason why one shouldn't keep on playing, stay supple. Healthy outdoor exercise keeps muscles resilient, wards off the fatty cushions that sometimes appear when a lady-person goes streaking past the thirty milepost.

Every woman who would wear clothes beautifully and retain the slender silhouette must walk in the proper manner. She mustn't progress with jerky steps. That's a bad habit. Neither should she stride, a practice that makes her appear masculine, doesn't suit feminine attire of this particular moment.

Let her cultivate an easy swing, chest up, hips back, placing the foot on the pavement so that the weight is carried by that portion of the little pedal that is directly under the ankle bone. Walking is first-class exercise. Does grand things for the complexion.

When the tape measure gives reports of expanded hips, try this exercise:

Place the hands on the hips, hold the head high. Then run, but don't run any place. Remain on the same spot. Lift the heels high with so much of a muscle pull that you feel it in the thighs.

Keep on your toes. At the first sign of puffing or fatigue, rest. Then at it again.

Scalp massage, therapeutic lamps, the violet ray, the vibrator are helpful in the business of restoring a glory crown that seems bent upon self-destruction. You get them in beauty shops that specialise in scalp treatments.

Tonics do good because they warm the surface of the flesh, encourage the blood streams to come trotting along with nourishment for the little papilla from which the hair root sprouts. Brushing is highly recommended. Since the finger wave arrived to make all heads beautiful, the brush has been sadly overlooked.

A common fear is that oily cosmetics will produce a crop of fuzzers on the fact. Electrolysis operators who dewhisker unhappy ladies say that the worst cases of superfluous hair are suffered by women who have never used cosmetics. Nothing to it.

If cold cream were a hair grower, there would be no baldheads in the world.

The cause of white spots on the finger nails is not definitely known, but it is believed that they are caused by an injury to the matrix. So don't go prodding around the nail base when treating the cuticle. Lift the flesh lightly with an orange wood stick.

Milk is a beauty food. Lap up your quart a day, and there will be a decided improvement in the complexion.

You'll get vitamins A, B, C and D if that means anything to you. Besides these pep makers you will pour into your digestive tract various food elements, that are a help to well being and beautifiers of the skin.

For the white haired woman there are lovely mauve eye shadows. The right and happy choice for silvered locks and the delicate transparent skin. The proper lipstick is a raspberry shade. Grandmamma is entitled to her makeup trifles, finds they sustain her, help her face the birthdays with courage.

Treatment of enlarged pores must go on for a long time before a change for the better can be noticed.

Hot water s taboo, too relaxing. Use water just warm enough to fluff up a suds. Follow every face washing with an ice cold rinse, lave with witch hazel. Cut down on sweets, starches and fats; they have it in for the complexion, don't do good by it. Drink plenty of unsweetened lemonade, eat green salads.

Styles in Cotton Pass in Review

Cottons for the Bedroom or for Smart Dresses are Demonstrated

Styles in cotton were viewed yesterday by a large, interested audience at the Canadian Department Store, when Mrs. Margaret Ballingall of the Wabasso Company gave a delightful talk to the ladies assembled.

Mrs. Ballingall first discussed fashions in cottons for the bedroom and showed the charming effects that can be obtained with a little thoughtful planning. This was followed by a very interesting Cotton Frock Parade which gave the spectators a glimpse of the charm of such simple and fresh-looking garments.

Fashion Flashes

Old friends of the wardrobe should include those really fine tweed suits and coats that are always in style. Of course, such clothes are very expensive, but the outlay is soon forgotten as they last and are always good. A charming suit is in turquoise green tweed with a tiny red fleck in the weave and a creamy yellow check. Made with two buttons and self-belted jacket.

Right on top of the millinery mode is the tight-fitting skull cap for the very young and beautiful. A charming skull cap is in fine black felt with a cluster of ostrich tips in pompom formation high to one side.

Young girls are dancing in surprisingly dark colored dresses this year. A charming dance frock is in very deep plum colored crepe with fuchsia velvet used around the top and for the braided shoulder straps. There are four fuchsia velvet buttons at the waist, in back.

It is hard to find the perfect little frock that will look distinguished in any daytime setting. Such a dress is a beltless model in soft pink-red crepe. It has a deep cowl neck, and the skirt is slit at the side. The big loose sleeves are done entirely in drawnwork that looks like fagotting.

A cruise demands the proper clothes, or else it is best to stay home. Ideal for the cruise is a suit of such light tweed that it looks like flannel. It is checked in gray, pink and green; the amusing box-jacket hangs from a rounded yoke.

Any age, mother or daughter, would look lovely in a new ensemble, which consists of a smooth woolen coat with black Alaskan seal to match, cleverly inserted. With it is worn a simple but perfect frock in rose-beige pebbled crepe with a square neck and a big black chiffon flower at the side of the low, square decolletage.

MILLIONS NOW USE MEDICATED CREAM TO END SKIN FAULTS

Scientific formula saves money—costs only a "penny-a-day"

WANT to make faulty skin and red, chapped hands beautiful—for only a penny a day? Already 6,000,000 women have adopted this inexpensive new, scientific cream that quickly improves even the worst skin.

It's Noxzema Skin Cream. Not a salve. Greaseless. Noxzema's penetrating medication purges away deep hidden pore-poisons that cause blemishes. Then its bland oils and gentle astringents soothe, soften, refine the coarsened skin to baby-fine loveliness.

Today apply Noxzema as a corrective foundation for powder and at night after removing make-up. See new beauty tomorrow! For lovely hands use regularly after exposure.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Is So Strong She Braves Marriage with an Outcast

You'd know by her handwriting, stationery, the way her letter is expressed, that she is "nice", and you wonder how she is going to make the grade—or if she's going to make the grade at all, with such a problem. Here's her letter:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I never can remember when I didn't know Harry. We lived near each other and went to grade school together. But his home wasn't happy like ours; his father drank and his mother wore herself out trying to keep the family going, and died of consumption when Harry was twelve.

He sold papers and had no regular home, and when he was about sixteen he got in with a gang and began to go wrong. Still, we always cared a lot about each other, and he used to hope he'd be able to go to night school, so he could get a decent job.

Then he got into trouble, sure enough. He was with some boys who robbed a store — he looked out for the cop on the corner, but didn't go in the place at all. Still, they were all sent to jail.

When he came out he came to see me first thing, and told me if he starved he meant to go straight. It was awfully hard for him to keep a job, because people would hear he'd been sent up and he'd get fired.

My father wouldn't let him come to the house, and as I really loved him, I used to meet him away from home. He got a job in another state and we were married secretly. My father found out about us and informed on him, so he has lost that job, too.

Dad says he intends to have the marriage annulled, but I shall stick to Harry always, no matter what happens. Miss Fairfax, don't you think it's wrong not to give a boy a chance when he wants to go right?

Delia B.

Yes, I think it's too bad not to give anyone who wants to go right, a chance. I say this, knowing all the arguments which have been brought forward against parole boards. But there ought to be some way of separating the sheep from the goats; some way of differentiating between old criminals and first offenders — boys from wretched homes who have gone wrong through bad company, have taken their medicine, and desire to go right. Yet, they lose job after job when someone informs on them.

In prison this boy could have fraternized with inmates and learned of underworld characters who would have befriended him when his time was up. But he came out and has been going sraight for two years, though he has been fired from one job after another.

Have you ever tried to put yourself in the place of a man newly released from prison? Free at last, the suit of shoddy clothes and $5 given to you won't take you far or keep you long. You're an outcast. Officers of the law regard you as a criminal and warn you to leave town. The world is afraid of you.

Why doesn't the state take charge of released prisoners who want to be decent citizens. It wouldn't take long to determine which of the former prisoners wanted to go straight and which did not.

This girl's letter opens up plenty of food for thought. My advice to her is to get a job and keep the home fires burning, till Harry has proven to someone willing to trust him that he intends to go straight.

DUEL IS FOUGHT

Paris, March 6—(AP)—Two Corsican members of the Chamber of Deputies fought a duel at dawn in a football stadium on the outskirts of Paris today and then left the field of honor unreconciled after one had been slightly wounded.

Cesar Campinchi came off second best in the encounter. Struck in the wrist in the first exchange of shots with his adversary, Horace de Carbuccia, he was taken to a hospital.

Origin of the ill feeling between the two Corsicans was an article referring to Campinchi published in Carbuccia's weekly.

The periodical recently attributed a jury verdict condemning a blind slayer to death to a plea for the defendant made by Campinchi. The article said the lawyer "made a mistake in not keeping still."

ERNEST JOSEPH WESSON
—8 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wesson, Toronto. Fed "Crown Brand" Corn Syrup since birth.

Could you wish for a HEALTHIER CHILD?

HIS little body is straight as a young tree. He is plump, rosy and full of happiness. His skin is velvet-soft and without a blemish. He is a "CROWN BRAND" BABY.

EDWARDSBURG "CROWN BRAND" CORN SYRUP was prescribed in first feeding formula. It has become a fixture in his daily diet. He loves it and thrives on it amazingly.

"CROWN BRAND" is wonderfully rich in Maltose and Dextrose, the great energy producing elements. Its easy digestibility enables even delicate children to assimilate all the body-building nourishment it contains. Doctors and Children's Hospitals recognize the vital importance of "CROWN BRAND" in infant feeding. It is a delicious table syrup too, that every member of the family will enjoy.

Your grocer sells EDWARDSBURG "CROWN BRAND" CORN SYRUP. Ask for it by name. Then you are sure of getting one of the greatest food values money can buy.

HERE is what MRS. WM. WESSON says about her beautiful child.

"We have fed our son on Edwardsburg 'Crown Brand' Corn Syrup practically since birth and have found it most digestible and suitable from every point of view. He now weighs 20 lbs. at 8 months old, and we heartily recommend Edwardsburg 'Crown Brand' Corn Syrup to all mothers."

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

NEW YORK CLOSE

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—The Stock Market displayed rallying tendencies in dull trading today. Prices moved up at the start, levelled off later and in the final hour came back again. The late tone was steady to firm. While there were a few soft spots in evidence, gains of fractions to around a point were shown by Santa Fe, Delaware and Hudson, American Telephone, U.S. Steel, General Motors, Cerro de Pasco, Case, National Distillers and Evans Products. Transfers approximated 550,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 7.—(CP)—Trade flattened out on the Mining Section and prices displayed a heavy tone. The slight decline in the price of gold in London gave the market an opportunity to indulge in the usual reaction from its strong rally in the last week and while selling was in small volume, losses up to 10 cents were recorded in the secondary and cheap issues and up to 25 cents in the high-price group.

McWatters and Central Patricia were again the most active of the list and after narrow swings both were holding unchanged at mid-afternoon.

Base Metal and Silver stocks were slow but firm. Noranda, trading mainly in broken lots, advanced 50 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Interlisted leaders hung on to gains of the smallest board fractions today in a slow market while domestic listings boarded more losses than gains. Aside from a fair trade in the oils and liquors as well as nickel, Ford A, Brazilian and Westons, the board was pretty bare of transactions at early afternoon.

Nickel, Brazilian, Ford A, C. P. R., International Petroleum, British American Oil and the distillery stocks recorded gains of 1-8 to 1-4 and Westons recovered nearly two points of its Wednesday loss. Massey Harris was offered down to 4 3-8.

Utilities and the miscellaneous group maintained a better tone and the steels and constructions were slow.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL
(By Victor Eubank)
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, March 7.—(AP)—The Stock Market, apparently recovering from its inflationary spree of previous session, today sat up and took a little nourishment.

Moderate gains predominated throughout the list.

Advances of fractions to a point were registered by such Canadian shares as McIntyre, Dome and Canadian Pacific. On the club, Lake Shore Mines got up about a point and Hiram Walker improved. Dominion Government 4s were slightly improved at 105 1-2. Canadian Funds gained 1-4 of a cent at 98.62 1-2 cents.

Shares that managed to come back fractionally to around a point included Santa Fe, Delaware and Hudson, Southern Pacific, Howe Sound, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Western Union, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Case, Sears Roebuck, National Distillers, Loew's General Motors, Goodyear, Macy and Evans Products.

REPORTER MISTAKES ENGINEER FOR DIONNE

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Ben Lamson, St. Catharines city engineer, had the experience today of being mistaken for Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets.

Emerging from a conference in the office of Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, he was greeted as "Mr. Dionne" by the representatives of an Ottawa paper.

"I know your're a Frenchman by the way you smile," said the reporter. Of the same build as Dionne and with a small moustache like his, the St. Catharines' official had considerable difficulty in convincing the would-be interviewer it was a case of mistaken identity.

Stirling Musician Assists With Services at Kirkland Lake

STIRLING — The citizens of Kirkland Lake, Ontario, were given a rare treat on Sunday, when the national famous Wishart Campbell, known as "The Soldier of the Air", and Mr. Charles E. Allen, musical director and organist of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, were the special artists at the dedication services of the new Trinity United Church, and the opening of the new organ. The new church is considered to be one of the most beautiful in the northern part of the province: ultra modern in architecture. The organ, the first one to be installed in Kirkland Lake, is a Duo Manual electric action, with a wide range of stops, and its installation cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. With an instrument of such high quality, and the added ability of these fine artists, the musical part of the program was an excellent one, for which the people of Kirkland Lake were grateful.

Leaving Stirling on Friday, Mr. Allen joined his old friend, Wishart Campbell, in Toronto, and together they took their four hundred mile trip north. A few years ago, Charlie and Wishart, both ambitious students in music, parted, one going to New York to continue his studies and the other, Mr. Allen, going to Chicago to continue his studies in music. Since that time their roads have been far apart. Each watched the progress of the other with great interest, and being together on the same program gave them not only a thrill, but it served as a joyful reunion of two old friends.

The program of organ and vocal numbers was broadcast from 3.15 to 4.15 on Sunday afternoon over the northern network through station CJKL and the joy of again working together inspired these two friends to give one of the best performances in their career.

The church which seats nearly five hundred, was packed to the doors, long before the recital hour, and the front of the church took on an elegant appearance, being literally banked with ferns, potted bulbs, and cut flowers.

While in Kirkland Lake, Charlie and Wishart were the guests of Mr. Campbell's brother-in-law, and sister, Dr. and Mrs. R. Neelands. The hospitality and friendliness of the northern folk left an earnest desire to return to Kirkland Lake again. Mr. Allen was forcibly impressed by this northern town and its fine people on this his first visit. Furthermore, he was surprised to learn that its population was nearly seventeen thousand.

Returning to Toronto on Monday, more enjoyment was added to this trip for Mr. Allen, as he remained with his friend for a few days to talk over old times, and to gain a little insight into the routine of the (busy men on the air).

Scheduled to be on the air for an evening broadcast over CFRB called for a hurried rehearsal of the various artists, which Mr. Allen was privileged to witness. After the regular broadcast, he enjoyed playing at the console of the mighty studio organ. As guest of Wishart Campbell, Mr. Allen visited most of the broadcasting stations throughout the city. Though thrilled with the entire trip, those who know Charlie, and his ability at the organ, know that he was in his rightful element in the company of the leading artists of the nation.

At St. Andrew's Church

Preaching the third of his illustrated sermons on the Life and Teachings of Jesus Christ, Rev. J. A. Koffend paused at the point where Christ fed the multitude to give the audience a condensed version of the story as written by Sheppard.

These illustrated sermons possess a great many qualities that are beyond an ordinary sermon. The outstanding points brought before the audience are more lasting, the beautiful pictures remaining in the mind's eye, especially the younger folk, for an indefinite period, and the recalling of the picture recalls also the lesson gained from it. Much is being done by this work of Mr. Koffend, who is conscientiously striving to further the kingdom through any medium that brings forth results.

On Tuesday the managers of both hockey teams, Zion's and Glen Ross considered it wise to postpone the final game of the play off on account of the spring-like weather. Somehow the signals got crossed, and promptly at eight o'clock the entire Zion's Hill team with a large number of supporters arrived at the Stirling Arena. Glen Ross receiving the information correctly, failed to appear, leaving Zion's with no alternative but to return home. It is definitely decided to play on Friday night, whether the ice is in condition or not.

Pancake Tea

St. John's Church held their annual pancake tea on Tuesday evening, March 5th. Though the weather was unfavorable there was an immense crowd in attendance, with visitors from distant places, including Marmora, Frankford, Belleville and Trenton. Well over three hundred persons sat down to the very lavish meal, which consisted of everything one could desire. The twelve tables artistically decorated with candlesticks and pale green tissue, and literally creaking under the load of good things to eat, presented a very appetizing appearance. After supper the room was re-arranged to permit of dancing and card playing. At one end of the hall many enjoyed a few hours of playing euchre and bridge. The remainder of the room was occupied by some eighty couples who heartily enjoyed dancing to the music provided by Maurice Bell, Don Rose, and Garney Reid. The large crowd on the dance floor was very well handled by Mr. Ernie Dainard who acted as floor manager. This was a very successful tea, and the ability of the ladies of the congregation to prepare for such an event is so well known that no further advertising is necessary to draw a crowd each year. This undertaking is carried out with such minute precision that every one wonders how it is accomplished.

On Saturday afternoon, the Maple Leaf Mission and of St. Andrew's Church held a special meeting in honor of two of its departing members, Donald and Helen Murduff. The program was very interesting and varied in character. After the opening exercises, five of the little members presented a missionary play, entitled "The Five Helpers". Those taking part were, Margaret Wilson, Mary Agnes Fox, Jean McIntosh, Shirley Montgomery and Betty Hulin. Jean Dafoe then gave a reading entitled, "Just Suppose". This was followed by a recitation by Mary Tulloch, "We should be Friendly". Miss Lillian Matthews told an interesting story about an Indian Mission. Helen Pitchett then provided a deal of merriment with her comic recitation, "Peter learns to say Jack Horner". Shirley Ormiston and Mary Tulloch sang a duet "Little Lights are Shining". As the closing number on the program Doris Jandrews gave a recitation. The meeting closed with prayer, and a dainty lunch was served by the senior girls.

MINIMUM WAGE BILL GIVEN NOTICE

Premier Bennett Will Ask House's Approval of Labor Convention

OTTAWA, Mar. 7—(CP)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett today gave notice on the order paper of the House of Commons he would ask approval by Parliament of a draft convention of the General Conference of the International Labor organization at Geneva concerning creation of a minimum-wage fixing machinery.

The draft convention for which the Prime Minister seeks Parliamentary approval provides each nation ratifying it shall be free to determine what nature and form of minimum-wage fixing machinery shall be adopted.

It contains conditions, however, that call for consultation between the government of the member country of the International Labor organization and representatives of employers and workers concerned before adoption of any machinery.

It also specifies representatives of employers and workers shall take part in operation of the machinery in any way that shall be determined by law but in such a way the numbers of their respective representations shall be equal.

It provides minimum rates of wages which have been fixed shall be binding on employers and workers concerned "so as not to be subject to abatement by them by individual agreement, nor, except with the general or particular authorization of the competent authority, by collective agreement."

BROCKVILLE TEAM PASS THRU CITY

On Way to Chatham For Second Game on Friday Night

Magedomas of Brockville, fresh from their victory over Chatham last night stopped their palatial bus in the city today and members of the team especially Les Tice, Bill Sherry "Red" MacDonald and Harry Nicol were renewing old acquaintances. The players are quite confident they can take Chatham on Friday night and meet the winner of Toronto and Hamilton for the Ontario championship and the right to enter the Canadian playdowns for the Allan Cup. If Chatham should win the game, the third game will be played in Oshawa on Monday or Tuesday night of next week Les Tice stated to the writer the team was going great there were no injuries and perfect harmony reigned in the camp. "We will make any senior team step to town to beat us" said the genial Les and "our coach Jesse Spring has had wonderful success."

A large number of the executive of the club and well wishers were in the party. They expect to arrive in Chatham tonight

TRAIN STRIKES CAR DRIVER IS KILLED

William Cosgrove Thrown Some Distance by The Impact

Hamilton, March 7—(CP)—William Cosgrove of Kilbride was instantly killed this morning when a coupe in which he was driving was struck by a train on the Burlington-Allandale line a mile and a half south of Milton.

The train struck the rear of the automobile, which was badly wrecked and Cosgrove was hurled to the side of the road. He was picked up by the train crew but was dead by the time he was conveyed to Milton for medical assistance.

ACCUSED CALLED HIGH GRADE MORON

Preliminary Trial of Maracle For Murder, is Begun

Simcoe, Ont., March 7 (CP) — Dawson Stanley Maracle appeared before Magistrate Cross in Norfolk County court here today for preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering George Bilton, Feb. 21. He was defended by M. McLean, Hamilton, and Crown Attorney W. E. Kelly, K.C. appeared for the Crown.

Several witnesses were called during the first hour of the hearing and they traversed much of the evidence brought out at the coroner's inquest at Waterford Tuesday. One new piece of evidence was that of Dr. Keith McIntosh, jail surgeon of the Norfolk county jail, who testified he made an examination of Maracle the day following his arrest and found a slight skin abrasion on Maracle's right shoulder and a bruise and swelling back of the left hand which might have been caused by Maracle's fist or by a blunt instrument striking the hand.

"High Grade Moron"

In answer to questions by Mr. McLean, Dr. McIntosh stated he had conducted general examination of Maracle to determine mental intelligence and while not in a position to give an expert opinion, would classify Maracle as "a high grade moron of limited intelligence."

Mr. McLean then inquired whether one so classified would have the same reaction to horror as a normal person and the doctor stated in his opinion there might be a slight, but very immaterial difference.

Other witnesses heard were John Laplant who filed plans made at the scene of the crime; Gordon Hay of the fire marshal's department who had arrived at Bilton's farm home, scene of the murder at 12.15 p.m. Feb. 21, and Dr. W. E. Sutherland, Waterford, who with Dr. E. W. Zukstein, Delhi, performed the post-mortem. Mr. Laplant described how he found the smoldering fire in the cellar and stated it was apparently of incendiary origin. Dr. Sutherland described Bilton's injuries, testifying at least four blows struck penetrated the skull and other bruises on the head might have been caused by the blow of a blunt instrument or in falling.

Replying to Mr. McLean, Dr. Sutherland said the murdered man was a healthy farmer of about 65 years of age. He was of the opinion Bilton could have held his own in a scuffle with a city man of about 46 and even with some men as young as 18.

Crown Attorney Kelly called Rita Fraser, Indian woman living with Maracle, to the stand, but objection was taken by Mr McLean. Mr. McLean submitted the woman was Maracle's common-law wife and as such could not be called as a witness. She did not give evidence.

Widow of Victim Testifies

Mrs. Emma Bilton of Toronto, wife of the murdered man, testified she had been married to Bilton for 40 years. They had a son, she said, whom they had not seen for many years.

At the inquest police alleged Maracle hade a statement in which he was claimed to have admitted killing Bilton with an axe in self defence as the farmer hit him with a poker.

Obituary

MRS. SUSAN EMILY WEESE

After an illness of about six weeks' duration, Mrs. Susan Emily Weese, widow of Addison Weese, passed away at her home, 224 Coleman Street, shortly before midnight, Wednesday, March 6th.

The late Mrs. Weese was born in Rednersville, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Rose. All her life was passed in this vicinity and she was most highly esteemed by those who knew her. In religion she was a member of the United Church, and the funeral will take place from her late residence to the United Church at Albury where service will be conducted.

Surviving to mourn her passing are two sons, Evans Weese, Belleville; Ray Weese, Carrying Place, and one sister Mrs. Angeline Urquhart, Carrying Place.

DRINKING AND BEATING OCCUR FREQUENTLY

Sandwich, Ont., March 7—(CP)—Steve Makuch of Sandwich West, his wife testified in county court today, regarded wife beating in much the same light as he did his drinking—to be done frequently. Makuch was charged with assault and his wife exhibited a bump on her neck and a much larger one on the top of her head as evidence of the attack.

At the request of Mrs. Makuch the charge was withdrawn after she had asked the magistrate to tell her "husband" to stop beating me and coming home drunk."

MOTHER, DAUGHTER BURNED

Bridgeport, Conn., March 7—(AP)—A mother and her daughter were burned to death when fire swept the Harding apartments early today, driving 200 residents into the street. Several firemen were overcome and a score of persons were trapped on the third floor for 30 minutes.

Thee dead: Miss Janet Roff, 23, nurse at the Bridgeport Hospital and Mrs. Nellie Roff, her mother.

2 Children Show Recovery With Stomachs Corrected

LEWISTON, Pa., March 7—(AP)—Physicians attending 11-year-old Sidney Isenberg, whose stomach was put back in its proper position by an operation, said today "nature will fix her up unless something unforeseen develops".

The girl was bright and cheerful and her diet was increased to orange juice, tea and water after the oxygen tent in which she had been placed was removed.

Doctors said her progress indicated she was on the way to complete recovery. They said X-rays show her heart is continuing its slow movement back to its right position and a collapsed lung is approaching normal. The two organs were affected by the pressure of the upside-down stomach, appendix and intestines which were in her chest instead of her abdomen.

Fall River, Mass., March 7—(AP)—Alyce Jane McHenry's cheering smiles were reflected today in the faces of the surgeons, who attended her.

The 10-year-old Omaha girl's temperature stood at an even 100, and her pulse was 110, her respiration 20.

Surgeons attending Alyce Jane were not ready to say she was definitely recovering from the delicate operation performed Monday to correct her "upside-down" stomach, but they appeared less tense and more cheerful as continued improvement was reported.

A bulletin issued early last night gave her temperature as 100.6. At 11 p.m. her temperature had risen to 101. By 2 a.m. this morning it had fallen a degree.

Attending surgeons characterized last night's rise in temperature as "inconsequential" and explained it was "an entirely natural phase".

ONTARIO WINNER OF BRIER TROPHY

First Time Province Has Won Since Contest Started in 1927

Granite Club, Toronto, March 7 (CP)—Ontario today won the Canadian curling championship for the first time in the history of the Macdonald's Brier Tankard competition that began in 1927. It was the first eastern victory since that year when Nova Scotia took the title.

The Hamilton Thistle Club, skipped by Gordon Campbell, making its third appearance intact as Ontario representatives, won the title in the sixth round of play, defeating Alberta 15-8. It was Ontario's sixth straight win and turned aside the last threat. Bobby Alexander's Calgary curling club rink could have tied Ontario, but the loss was their second with only one more round to play.

The defending province, Manitoba, whose entry this year was a newcomer, the Killarney curling club of Killarney, Man., fell by the wayside early but rallied in the last three rounds to even their count at three wins and three losses.

Twice before the same Campbell rink was runner-up. In 1933 the Hamiltonians were defeated by Cliff Manahan's Royal curling club rink from Edmonton, carrying the Alberta standard. In 1934 the youthful Leo Johnson brought his Strathcona curling club quartette from Winnipeg and the Manitoba representatives turned back Ontario in the final match.

Ontario had two big ends today, the second and fourth, in each of which they counted four. Alberta's best was a three in the sixth, the half-way mark where Ontario held a 9-7 lead. From there on the Hamiltonians were almost invincible, scoring in five of the final six ends and giving Alberta only a single in the ninth.

The last three ends made it safe. In the 10th Alberta was lying two, when Gordon Campbell knocked one out to lie shot. Alexander went through when he attempted a knockout and Campbell sent out the Alberta second to lie with a guard. Alexander chipped an Ontario rock and his own went out with it. Campbell then drew in for a two.

Alberta was lying shot in the 11th and Campbell's first took his own and the Alberta shot rock out, but left Ontario lying one. Alexander was too light with his first and the Ontario skip's second went in to lie two. Alexander's draw was too heavy to lie shot but it cut off one Ontario stone to leave Ontario a one count.

Quadruplets Born In New Zealand

Dunedin, New Zealand, March 7—(CP-Havas)—New Zealand's Johnson quadruplets, born here yesterday, weighed an aggregate of 17 pounds 7 ounces, it was announced today.

The weight was an average of a shade under six pounds, six ounces heavier than the quintuplets at birth.

The babies, a boy and three girls, seem in perfect health although like the Dionne babies they were born prematurely.

The proud parents announced they would be christened Bruce, Mary, Kathleen and Vera.

Basketball Game Played Saturday

Information was received in the city late this afternoon from Toronto to the effect that the Ontario Basketball Association had ordered the Toronto "Lizzies" at Belleville Deacon A. C. junior play-off game to be played on Saturday night in this city. Despite the fact that the Deacons requested a postponement until early next week, this request was denied and the game will be played on Saturday night at the Collegiate gymnasium.

BENNETT MAY NOT ATTEND HOUSE TILL MONDAY

Ottawa, March 7—It was stated Mr. Bennett had over-estimated his strength and would probably not return to his office until Monday.

Rt. Hon. Sir George Perley, acting house leader in Mr. Bennett's absence, will bring up the unemployment insurance bill in the house today.

LAST ADDRESS BY PROF. McQUEEN

Course of Lectures in City Unqualified Success

The concluding address in the Greater Citizenship Lecture course will be delivered by Prof. R. McQueen, Professor of Economics in the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon. His subject will be a timely and interesting one: "National Problems from a Western Viewpoint". Prof. McQueen is said to be an exceedingly capable lecturer with a vivid and typically western style and delivery.

Those who desire to become more familiar with the questions to be discussed will find it of advantage to read in advance some of the books bearing on western Canada that are on the shelves of the Corby Public Library. Miss White, librarian, furnishes the following suggestive list:

McGill University Economic Studies: No. 7, National Problems: The Pulp and Paper Industry; No. 8, Assisted Emigration and Land Settlement with Special Reference to Western Canada.

W. P. Davisson, Pooling Wheat in Canada.

W. W. Swanson, Wheat.

J. C. Woodward, Wheat and Politics on the Prairies. (Queen's quarterly, autumn '31).

Aiken, Economic Power for Canada.

C. W. Peterson, Wake Up Canada: Reflections on Vital National Issues.

Robert England, The Central European Immigration in Canada.

Canadian Problems As Seen By Twenty Outstanding Men of Canada.

McWilliams, If I Were King of Canada.

W. H. Moore, The Definite National Purpose.

BLIZZARD TIES UP STURGEON RIVER CAMP

Jellicoe, Ont., Mar. 7 (CP)—The Sturgeon River gold camp today was digging itself out from under a two-way blizzard which had tied up movements of men, supplies, communication in the district.

The eastbound passenger train, due Monday night, passed through here late yesterday, more than 14 hours late. It had been buried in snowbanks in the vicinity of the Empire Mine station, twenty miles west. Shovels and snowflows led the way through for the train.

The train due in here at ten o'clock Tuesday night was expected to arrive early today. But no one was sure.

Camps in the bush are completely cut off from communication. Inhabitants of Jellicoe are doing their travelling on skiis and snowshoes. A doctor called out on a confinement case last night lost the trail which leads from the town out to the home in question and arrived there only after floundering around waist deep in snow for some time.

FEAR ESPIONAGE IN COPENHAGEN

Eight Arrested, Two of Them Claiming to be Canadians

Copenhagen March 7 (AP)—Eight persons two of them claiming to be Canadian citizens were arrested today by State police on charges of possessing false passports. Their names were not revealed by the authorities.

The other were said to be two claiming United States citizenship two Danes and two Letts. Suspicions of espionage were understood to have prompted their arrest.

All eight said they had lived in the United States although they were unknown at the United States Legation. Some of them are reported to have appealed to Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark for protection.

A secret examination was scheduled and it was reported those arrested probably would be charged with violation of the Danish defence of the realm act. All were reported to have large accounts in leading Danish banks and travelers cheques.

BRITISH NAVAL ESTIMATES HIGHER

Defences However Remain Within Limits of All Treaties

London, Mar. 6.—Great Britain's defence appropriations for the new fiscal year were completed yesterday with naval estimates totalling £60,050,000 ($291,843,000 at par). This is an increase of £3,500,000 ($17,010,000) over the naval estimates of 1934.

The naval, army and air estimates introduced in the past three days show an increase of £10,539,000 ($51,219,540) over the past year, reaching an aggregate of £127,451,000 ($620,011,860).

Naval defences remain limited by the Washington Treaty, despite its abrogation by Japan, until the end of 1936. Consequently the naval building program to be carried out during the coming twelve years remains one of replacement and not of increased construction. The bulk of the increase in expenditure will go for necessary repairs and modernization of capital ships with a view to lengthening their term of effective service.

No new capital ships may be laid down until the Washington Treaty expires and then only in event a substitute treaty permitting new capital ship construction is reached —or no substitute is evolved. Similarly, cruiser forces may not go over the maximum limits of the London naval treaty.

FOURTH SIDNEY WEEKLY NOTES

Fourth Sidney, March 7—Mr. and Mrs. W. Holmes spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brickman.

The play which was given in the Stone Church by Carmel talent was well enjoyed by all present. The music furnished between acts by Mr. W. Pitman was also enjoyed.

Mrs. M. MacPherson and daughter Kathleen were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. MacPherson.

Mr. M. Hannah and mother spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Hannah of Marsh Hill.

Spring seems to be peeping around as March came in quite lamb like and the sound of the crows are again heard which makes one feel the real cold weather has again taken its departure for another season.

Mrs. W. Jury has returned home having been nursing Mrs. S. Lane, of Belleville. The many friends of Mrs. Lane will be glad to know she is much improved.

Mr. Cyril Magor who for the past six years has made it his home on this line has gone to live in Toronto. Cyril will be greatly missed on this line as he was a great help in the choir, Sunday School work and Young People's Society.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Barry have moved to Mr. Geo. Reid's house and have hired to him for the coming year.

Mr. Frank Tucker is busy these days sawing wood.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris took dinner recently with Mr. and Mrs. F. Langabeer.

Master Morris Dafoe has been visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Lloyd.

The RED COATS are HERE

The Sunny Side of Life BOOK
To Keep Happy Keep Well

with something fine for family fitness

THE famous "Kellogg RED COATS" are in town. You may have seen them already. They have a message of the greatest importance—one that will help your family to enjoy more "sunny" days, and double your zest for living.

Whenever the RED COAT comes to your door, he brings you something valuable. We appreciate your courtesy in greeting him and in accepting the literature he offers. Listen for your doorbell.

You'll want the wonderful new booklet he brings this time. It's packed with facts on foods. Beautifully illustrated in color. With many tempting recipes for you to try. It also explains how to correct common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, a natural food, furnishes gentle "bulk" to aid regular habits. Also vitamin B and iron. Millions use it every day. Read the booklet the RED COAT hands you. Then get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Keep fit with this food. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

ALL-BRAN is now available in 16-oz. and 10-oz. packages

32ND ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. A. Thrasher Presented With Tea Service

On Tuesday evening, March 4th, about seventy-five neighbours and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thrasher gathered at their home on the fifth concession of Sidney, where a very enjoyable evening was spent to celebrate their thirty-second wedding anniversary.

The early part of the evening was spent in playing cards, later followed by dancing.

Just before lunch was served, Mr. Sam Nicolson called Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher to occupy the seats of honour and the following address was read by Miss Ella Phillips:

Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher:

Having heard that thirty-two years ago an important event happened in your lives, we wish to extend to you at this time our hearty congratulations and best wishes.

Since you came to live in this neighbourhood we have found you both to be true friends and neighbours. Your home has always been open for social functions and many a pleasant night has been spent within its portals. Any neighbour who needed a helping hand at any time could rely on getting assistance from either of you.

You have always been generous and obliging and we wish to convey to you our appreciation of your cooperation and good fellowship within the neighbourhood and express this wish "That they may continue for a good many years to come."

These may seem like empty words but we mean every word and to substantiate them we ask you to accept this gift as a small token of our esteem and hope that as time goes on you may find it useful and that we may have the privilege, as of old, to enjoy the hospitality of this home.

Wishing you both many more years of happiness and many more returns of this your wedding day.

Signed on behalf of the community: Edna Ketcheson, L. F. Badgley, Jos. Mulvihill.

Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher were then presented with a beautiful china tea set. Although completely taken by surprise both thanked their friends for the gift and extended a cordial welcome to all present to visit them again at any time. Several speeches followed, after which lunch was served, and dancing continued until the wee sma' hours.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Home On The Range"
Jackie Coogan Returns As Swaggering Cowboy in Exciting Action Film

A thundering turf classic set against a romantic background of the Old West is the colorful pattern into which is woven a startling drama and a pulsating romance.

The film is Zane Grey's "Home on the Range," now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

Interpreting the chief characters are Jackie Coogan, who returns to the screen in grown-up roles, Evelyn Brent, Randolph Scott, leading Western actor of pictures, Fuzzy Knight, eccentric comedian, and Ann Sheridan, the Texas beauty.

"Home on the Range" is a simple vibrant story. Two men and a woman ply a crooked trade in Alaska, that of selling "salted" gold mines to the gullible. When the far north gets too "hot" they move to newer and greener pastures in the United States.

Horse Race Climax

The going is smooth until a handsome young cattleman falls into their well-laid trap. The woman of the trio falls in love with him, and rather than see him trimmed, tips off her sweetheart. The hero saves his fortune, routs the malefactors and marries the girl.

In the background of the main plot is the stirring horse-race story, which is climaxed when Jackie Coogan, playing brother to Randolph Scott, rides their horse, Midnight, to a thundering victory.

Jackie Coogan, now grown to a six-foot man, is the dramatic surprise of "Home on the Range." Athletic, supple, handsome and bronzed, Coogan proves his ability to stay with the best of them in both acting and action shots. Evelyn Brent and Randolph Scott prove an engaging and romantic leading couple, while the supporting players turn in capital performances.

"She Had to Choose"

Reversing the usual situation of "two boys and a girl," "She Had To Choose," the second feature attraction on this program offers the story of "two girls and a boy."

Isabel Jewell and Sally Blane are the two girls, each intent on seizing the heart of Larry "Buster" Crabbe, owner of a "drive-in" barbecue stand. Isabel's the girl who is broke, homeless and jobless, and Sally's an heiress. The jobless girl wanders into the barbecue stand, saves the owner during a hold-up, and is rewarded with a job and sleeping quarters.

The complications of the two opposing girls are heightened by the entrance of Regis Toomey, playing Sally's brother. Eventually Isabel has to choose between Larry and Regis. An unusual twist gives a dramatic climax to this sparkling comedy-drama which is further enlivened by music and song.

Fuzzy Knight, Maidel Turner, Edward Gargan and a number of others are added features of the large cast in "She Had To Chose."

Capitol Super News will be shown at each performance preceding the feature attraction.

Complete shows 2.30: 7.10: 9.10.

AT THE BELLE
New Harding Montgomery Film Filled With Amusing Situations

If you like sparkling dialogue, rapid-fire action, some of the most gorgeous mountain scenery ever to be flashed on the screen, and players admirably cast, go to the Belle Theatre where Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Biography of a Bachelor Girl" is now on view Today and Friday, matinee and evening.

Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery are co-starred in the new photoplay. It is their first appearance together since the hit, "When Ladies Meet", and again they prove themselves a delightful romantic team.

Miss Harding has never been better than in her new role as a portrait painter who has quite a lot of boy friends in the past and who scares them all to death when she decides to write the story of her life.

Montgomery as the editor who presses her to write the book, finds himself surrounded on all sides by persons who would find their lives and careers somewhat embarrassed if their former admiration for the lovely artist came to light in print.

Bearing the mark of any production by Irving Thalberg, "Biography of a Bachelor Girl" is admirably cast. Edward Everett Horton appears as the comical stuffed short, Nolan. Edward Arnold brings all his well known charm to the role of Feydak, Australian composer. Una Merkel, as Slade, finds time between cocktails to fall in love. Charles Richman puts the same finesse into the screen characterization of Kinnisoott as he did on the stage, where he created the role. And Greta Meyer is again the admirable servant as Minnie.

But most of all there is Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery, the perfect co-starring team. As Marion, Miss Harding has never appeared in a more suitable role. And the part of Kurt, hard-boiled editor, was surely made to order for Robert Montgomery.

The story treats humorously of a worldly young woman trying to decide, between the pleas of her admirer and the threats of her ex-admirers, whether to write the story of her life.

E. H. Griffith did a commendable directorial job and the picture is beautifully costumed and mounted.

Grand Short Treats

A grand array of junior features are announced for presentation on the same program includes "The Girl From Paradise", a gorgeous all-star musical comedy, Pete Smith's latest screen oddity "Motorcycle Cossacks", and the popular Maestro Phil Spitalny and his musical Ladies in a delightful feast of Melody and dances. The feature attraction will be presented daily at 3.10, 7.40 and 9.50. Performance starts daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.10.

FACES GUILLOTINE

Guillotine, not monastery, awaits Andre Spade, celebrated Corsican bandit king, whom 2,000 troops pursued in vain for several years. He finally gave up, declaring he had been converted to religion and professed a desire to devote rest of his life to church work. But French have placed him on trial for first degree murder with execution mandatory if he is convicted.

No More Piles

Doctor's Prescription Does The Work

Few Pile sufferers know that the cause of Piles is internal—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

This is the scientific truth about Piles—the real reason why salves and suppositories so often may not give lasting relief and why cutting sometimes removes the pile tumor but leaves its exciting cause which may create a recurrence.

Your itching, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you actually remove the cause. For this an internal medicine should be used. HEMROID, the prescription of Dr J. S. Leonhardt, sold by good druggists everywhere, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, and acts to relieve congestion.

So isn't it better, when salves fail and before considering operation, to try this internal remedy when J. S. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with money-back if not joyfully satisfied with the help one bottle gives.

ROYAL VISITORS TO FAIR

The annual British Industries Fair held at Olympia, London, is honored by the presence of royalty. Here Queen Mary is shown with the Duke and Duchess of York inspecting the toy section.

THE GREEKS HAVE A NAME FOR THIS

These Greek soldiers are the ones who made possible the overthrow of the Greek dictator, General Pangalos, several years ago. They were commanded then by Gen. Kondylis who is now leading them in an effort to protect the republic from another revolution. The current uprising is for the purpose of returning Eleutherios Venizelos to power.

ROEBUCK'S BILL ON POLICE WORK IS TALKED OUT

Dropped to Bottom of Order Paper by Opposition Move

BILL WITHDRAWN

Necessary For All Actions of Boards to Have Gov't Approval

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Resumption of the Throne Speech debate in the Ontario Legislature today brought the possibility of further discussion of affairs of the former Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

J. H. Clark (Lib. Windsor-Sandwich) is scheduled to continue the address halted by adjournment of the debate Tuesday night. The opposition plans to have G. H. Challies (Cons., Grenville-Dundas) follow and Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways and member of the Hydro Commission, will come next. The debate will continue at the night session.

What Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn expected would be a short session yesterday developed into a three-hour debate. The time was occupied first with discussion of the Bill of Wilfrid Heighington (Cons. Toronto-St. Davids) to amend the interpretation act making it necessary for regulations of all government boards to have legislative approval. After opposition from Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck and Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn he withdrew the bill at the Premier's request.

Afterwards Mr. Roebuck introduced for second reading his bill for centralization of police in time of emergency and creation of a special director of police. The opposition talked the measure out before a vote could be taken and it was dropped to the bottom of the order paper.

Decreasing Power

While the premier gave support to Mr. Heighington's attack on arbitrary government and recalled his stand at Ottawa against it he considered the time inopportune for adoption of Mr. Heighington's proposals.

He indicated, however, the government is decreasing as far as possible power of the executive in council and afterwards said this year there would be no "blank cheque" vote of Northern Ontario estimates but they would be tabled in the legislature.

The Attorney-General declared adoption of the proposal would be a "far-reaching, destructive act and would cramp the ability of the executive to carry on the government."

Mr. Heighington had contended the Autocratic Monarch of ancient times has given way to the present autocratic government official. He said his amendment applied to such as the liquor and milk control boards and the securities commission.

During the kidnapping of John S. Labatt of London last summer Mr. Roebuck had stressed the necessity for centralization of police. He hinted at the event in his speech in his speech yesterday. During such an emergency the government must be able to issue orders, close roads, have every town at its command, he said.

He proposed such centralization of police under one man, who could gather data and know the resources available throughout the province.

Force Depleted Is Charge

While he admitted to Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member for South York, it might be possible to have the present commissioner serve in this capacity, he felt such action would arouse jealousy among other police officers in the province.

"The bill invades the field of municipal autonomy on which we have never trespassed," declared Mr. Heighington. He considered the present situation satisfactory and any change contemplated should be one on national lines. He would not definitely state, however, whether he favored having the province policed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

He attacked the government for depleting the force in the north and said proper consideration of the strike situation there last fall had been prevented by the action.

Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, supported the bill and put forward as reason for its adoption the successful drive against crime in the United States through centralization of law enforcement agencies.

W. A. Baird (Cons. Toronto-High Park) said it was the "Extreme socialist temperament on the part of the Attorney-General that makes me doubtful of the bill."

Second reading was given two other measures introduced by the Attorney-General. One made a series of technical amendments in the insurance act and the other amended the Chattel Mortgages Act to make necessary a specific time in which the statement of renewal of a mortgage could be delivered.

Mr. Croll introduced two measures, one to amend the Mothers' Allowance Act to give a stricter definition of the rights of a deserted wife and the other to clarify the action of a judge in adoption cases under the children of Unmarried Parents Act.

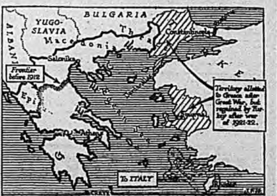
BALKANS TENSE AS GREEKS REVOLT



With civil war still raging in Greece, armies are reported again marching in Balkan countries. Bulgaria has strengthened her borders. France has sent a destroyer to Piraeas, while Turkey is reported maintaining large forces in Turkish Thrace. Meanwhile, it is indicated that Venizelos, 71-year-old leader of the revolutionary party, is fleeing from Crete after defeat by government forces. Map shows Greece and surrounding countries. Chief outbreaks have occurred in Thrace, Macedonia and Crete.

WATER GETTING LOWER

Fort Erie, Ont., Mar. 7—(CP)—According to figures issued today by the United State Geodetic Survey, Lake Erie shrank to a new record low level in February with a depth of 569.51 feet above mean sea level which is 0.11 feet below the record low stage of February 1934.

TWO WOMEN BEHIND GREEK REVOLUTION?

Stated Both Have Ambitions to Have Husbands as Ruler

Athens, March 7—(AP)—Two ambitious women are behind the Greek revolution.

Mme. Eleutherios Venizelos, wife of the famous stateman who is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $15,000,000, is declared by government supporters to be financing the revolution from Crete.

Her rival, Mme. Panayoti Tsaldaris, brilliant wife of the present premier, who is fighting the rebels, is said to be the brains behind the government in Athens.

Mme. Venizelos, who is 55, and not particularly attractive, is matching her wits against the younger and more beautiful wife of the premier.

Both women are said to be inordinately ambitious. Mme. Venizelos, who occupies a high social position throughout Europe, is reported to be anxious to set her husband up as dictator of Greece, and is prepared if necessary, according to government adherents, to spend her fabulous wealth to achieve her purpose.

Mme. Tsaldaris, on the other hand, is not wealthy but extraordinarily clever and resourceful.

MAGEDOMAS WIN FROM CHATHAM

Brockville Starry Squad Have Edge in Senior "B" Playoff

Brockville, March 7.—(CP)—Before a wildly-excited crowd of 1,850 that jammed every corner of the arena here, Brockville Magedomas defeated Chatham Maroons 6-3 in the first game of the Ontario Hockey Association senior "B" finals. The second of the best-out-of-three-game series will be played Friday night at Chatham.

A close-checking Chatham team, whose early season record of 21 consecutive victories in the Michigan-Ontario League and O.H.A. stamped it as one of the strongest forces in the province, held the high-scoring Magedomas securely for one period, but there was no holding the eastern team after that.

Following three days of mild weather the ice was in fairly good condition when Referee Joe Smith called the players to centre. Players and spectators observed a period of silence out of respect to the memory of J. G. Traub, father of the Chatham coach, "Puss" Traub, who died Monday at Regina.

In reaching the finals, Maroons had eliminated Kitchener Greenshirts by one goal in each game of their semi-finals, while Brockville was disposing of Oshawa by scores of 5-2 and 16-3.

Brockville scored the only goal of the first period, Woodcock converting a pass from Kennedy at the halfway mark. Maroons evened it early in the second session on a goal by Sadlier, but the Magedomas pushed out in front again, Price and then Sheridan scoring before the period ended.

Until midway through the last period the result was in doubt as Chatham fought grimly. Dawson got one for the Maroons. When Sherry scored for Brockville, the team from the other side of Ontario raced right back and Stoddard slapped in Hinnegan's pass.

But at the finish Magedomas were supreme. Coleman and Price cinched the contest by scoring a minute apart and the Maroons were unable to put down the three-goal lead.

Should a third game be necessary to decide the series it will be played on neutral ice.

Chatham—Peardon, goal; Sadlier and Heath, defence; Hinnigan, centre; A. Stevens and Stoddart, wings; Hales, Dawson, Murrell and W. Stevens, subs.

Brockville—Goal, Tice; defence, Sherry and Price; centre, Kennedy; wings, Woodcock and Sheridan; subs Nicoll, Coleman, Lowrey and Dexter.

Referee—Joe Smith, Kingston.

AMERICANS AND WINGS ON SPOT

Must Win or be Counted Out of N. H. L. Playoffs

By The Canadian Press

The last mathematical chances New York Americans and Detroit Red Wings have to make the Stanley Cup playoffs may disappear tonight and the lineup of teams for the post-schedule series becomes certain for the first time.

Americans must defeat Eagles in St. Louis and count on Maroons beating Canadiens in Montreal to retain the slimmest possible chance. The Habitants have only to win one game in their remaining games to clinch third place in the International section.

Red Wings must defeat Rangers in Detroit to retain any hope of getting in the money and even then they would have to win all their six games and the New Yorkers lose their half dozen.

Three points behind Boston and Chicago, Lester Patrick's team may decide to point for the top spot and a meeting with Toronto Leafs by tossing everything they have into an attempt to beat Wings. Then again, they may glance at the tough schedule they have ahead of them, consider Leafs as playoff opponents and decide to finish third and meet Canadiens.

CANADIENS TO TOUR EUROPE

Suggested Opposition be Composed of Players Born in Old Land

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 7 (AP)—Since Montreal Canadiens are definitely committed to a European tour after the Stanley Cup playoffs this spring and no rival team has yet decided to accompany them, an unofficial suggestion as to the oppositon might not be amiss.

Les Canadiens, theoretically an all-French team, figure as a "natural" with the cash customers. To provide an international angle for the tour. It has been suggested that the opposition might come from an all-star team of British born players, such as that rounded up from the professional rosters by James C. Hendy of New York, editor of the National Hockey Guide.

Searching through his records during the open season for all-star teams, Hendy discovered a complete squad, from manager down to trainer and spare goalie, of men born in the British Isles. They all learned their hockey in Canada, however. All but one or two of them are members of National Hockey League teams or have had Big League experience.

The Canadiens might contribute two of their regulars, Goalie Wilf Cude, born in Barry, Wales, and Jack Riley, centre, from Berckenia, Ireland, borrowing a couple of bona fide French Canadiens from other teams to fill their places.

Dunc Munro of Glasgow, former player and coach with Montreal Maroons, could manage the squad and Tom Dyer, who came from England and once conditioned Chicago Blackhawks, would be the trainer.

The rest of the squad might well line up in this fashion:

Goal: Wilfe Cude (Canadiens) Barry Wales.

Defence: Alex Smith (Americans) Liverpool, England.

Defence: Irving Frew (St. Louis) Kilsyth, Scotland.

Centre: Jack Riley (Canadiens) Berckenia, Ireland.

Wing: Sammy McManus (Maroons) Belfast, Ireland.

Wing: Jack Beattie (Boston) Cumberland, England.

Subs: Goal, Andy Aitkenhead (Portland) Glasgow; Defence, Freddy Robertson (Cleveland) England; Wings, Red Jackson (Boston Cubs) Ibstock, Eng; Lou Holmes (Chicago) London; Tommy Anderson (Detroit Olympics) Glasgow; Bob Kirk (Vancouver) Aberdeen, Scotland.

CAMPBELL RINK NEEDS ONE WIN

Chalks up Five Straight Victories Against Best in Canada

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—It rested with Bobby Alexander and his Alberta rink from Calgary today to say whether Canada has a team the equal of the Gordon Campbell rink of Hamilton Ont. For the third straight year Campbell last night piloted his brigade to within striking distance of the Canadian curling title and the Macdonald's Brier Tankard.

It has escaped him twice. Cliff Manahan of Edmonton snatched away the most prized event in Canadian curling in 1933 and last winter Leo Johnson of Winnipeg went an extra end to administer defeat to the young Hamilton skipper. These ex-champions couldn't win their way into the Brier again, but Campbell has.

In championship curling this season he hasn't been beaten. For the third straight year he drove his rink through the Ontario Tankard Bonspiel and on into the National event. Last night the Thistle quartette recorded their fifth straight victory in the classic.

They upset Nick Thibodeau's New Brunswick rink 15-6 to establish themselves as top-heavy favorites as the round-robin series neared an end. Two rounds were booked for today, but if the Campbell four can achieve a win over the Albertans this morning it will be all over.

By defeating Nova Scotia last night, the Alexander rink kept within striking distance with four wins against one loss. When the leading rinks meet Alberta can deadlock the lead with a victory. In that event a playoff would be necessary if both were again victors in the final draw in the afternoon.

Northern Ontario's entry, skipped by James F. Shaw of Sault Ste. Marie, held a mathematical chance. It depended upon Alberta beating Ontario, then both losing in the final round while the Shaw rink defeated Nova Scotia and Manitoba. That would create a three-cornered tie.

Shaw won two of his three games yesterday, losing in the afternoon to the New Brunswick rink 13-8. At night the Sault Ste. Marie curlers scored a 9-7 triumph over Saskatchewan. Manitoba, defending the title, won two out of three starts yesterday but it was too late, the Killarney rink skipped by Roy T. Pritchard having dropped both opening-day matches.

TORONTO EARNS SCORELESS DRAW

Hamilton Held at Bay by Determined Toronto Squad

Hamilton, Ont., March 7—(CP)—All even with one game of their best two out of three behind them, Hamilton Tigers and Toronto marked up their first scoreless tie of the season today.

Last night a close checking Toronto squad kept the Tigers at bay for 70 minutes but failed to do any goal-getting themselves. On the whole it was the Bengal outfit, that had the advantage on play before the 4,500 fans.

The game was the first of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" final series and as a result of the draw two more games will be necessary. The next fixture is scheduled for Toronto Saturday afternoon.

Only five penalties were issued, three of them going to Toronto players. Hamilton had all but one of the early scoring chances and Torontos were hardly in on the enemy zone. Both defences laid out husky body checks but Tiger forwards had a wide edge in backchecking and gave Teno in the nets plenty of time to handle shots coming his way.

The Queen City squad perked up in the second period and there was little aside from close checking in the last frame.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

There seems to be considerable controversy relating to the date of the return Toronto Lizzies at Belleville Deacon junior O.B.A. basketball game. It seems, that Coach Bob Abate, of the Lizzies wants to play in Belleville on Saturday night, while the Deacons are willing to play any other night in the week, except Saturday. Both clubs presented their reasons, excuses or whatever they might be termed, to the O.B.A. yesterday. The Toronto crew naturally want a Saturday night stand and simply because they can't get some of the better players off on a week-day. The Deacons have players, who are employed locally and work every Saturday night, so the battle is on. The Deacons rightfully point out, that the game is their own personal home game and should be played at their suggestion. It is a well known fact, that Saturday night is a poor night financially for sport in Belleville and sensing this view-point the Deacons suggested that the game be played either Friday night of this week or Tuesday of next. A definite answer in the matter is expected some time tonight, as the question is being taken up by the parent body today.

Over in Trenton they completed a fine town hockey league this week and are in their play-off round at present. Fifty-five scheduled games were played, during the season and the league embraced something like 165 players, eleven teams completing the season. Naturally those at the head of the organization are proud of their efforts and accomplishments during the season. Little, if any, controversy was entered into by any of the clubs, the league running along very smoothly terminating with all teams enjoying amicable feelings towards each other. A growth of young and prospective hockey players were not only unearthed but coached to a point whereby Trenton have sufficient material at hand now to place a strong junior O.H.A. team on the ice next winter, if they so desire. As pointed out by the sponsors of the league, however, the teams, the Arena and all concerned made money and financially the project was a huge success. In years past the winter pastime has been a financial failure in Trenton, but with a successful town league in operation they naturally expect to continue their activities along those lines again next season.

"Rain, snow, or freeze the second game of the city league will go on tonight," stated league officials today. Despite the inadequate facilities that presented themselves during Tuesday nights game, soft ice, water, etc., the game carried plenty of interest and sent the fans home quite satisfied with their evening's entertainment. Naturally the Alemite squad is on the well known spot tonight, as another defeat will rub them out and crown the Trenton aggregation as champions. A win for the "lubricants", however, will knot the count and assure another game. Naturally both teams will be on the offensive tonight, due to the fact, that there is no lead to protect, games counting in the final standing. Incidently, it is understood, that in case of a tie score at full time, overtime must be played until a winner is declared. When the local Arena management announced that the Arena would close its doors this week, both clubs threatened to take the third and deciding game to Trenton, if such was needed.

The city leaguers should well remember, that the local citizens have patronized the loop all season, maybe not quite as much as was expected, but never-the-less all financial assistance came from the sport fans of Belleville and both Trenton and the Alemite should take this into consideration, as not only the future of the league, but the future of the Arena is at stake. After all the city league was only organized in order, that players who were not qualified to play O.H.A. might enjoy a little sport and recreation. If the Arena management is approached in the proper manner, they would gladly reopen the Arena one night next week, if necessary, we imagine. Taking a third and final city league play-off game out of the city would be a direct insult to all fans, who have financially supported the project all season.

Located in Belleville is a Toronto pitcher by the name of Arthur Calhoun, who hurled for the G. & W. "Grads", champions of the T.A.B.A. last year, we understand. Incidently Mr. Calhoun was one of the few strange faces seen at the hockey game the other night, the others also resembled diamond celebrities somewhat. Incidently we observed a catcher of note, one who did the receiving for one of last year's champion O.B.A.A. teams, nonchalantly walking up the "main stem" yesterday. After the usual salutations we fired— "what brings you to Belleville, young man?" "Oh, just looking around and enjoying the sights," he came back and we today learned, that he was right, he left town just as silently as he entered and without ceremony. (Maybe he didn't like the burg who knows?)

Although there has been little information released relating to the Golden Gloves boxing tournament, in all probability they will be held the latter part of this month in Belleville. While on the subject of boxing there is a fine large silver trophy in town, owned and put up by a local organization, that is to be offered for city competition, all fighters around the 135-pound mark being eligible. More information regarding this proposition will be given out by the donors of the trophy later. Incidently it is a fine large trophy and well worth fighting for (in the ring of course).

Table tennis is a man's game, British critics are convinced. In the recent word championships here a singles match between Haguenauer, the French champion and Kohn of Austria, lasted two hours and ten minutes before the Frechman won in five sets. One rally alone lasted 19 minutes. It was estimated the ball crossed the net 1,500 times.

Owing to the lack of ice in the Tweed Arena last night's B.C.I.-Tweed High interscholastic play-off game was postponed. During a long distance telephone conversation with the management of the Tweed Club last night it was suggested, that the game would be played tonight. The local "collegians" enjoy a three goal advantage to open the game. . . . Local anglers have been seen anxiously fingering their precious rods and reels all week, nervously handling them in high expectation of Friday night when the local Anglers commence their plug and fly casting activities at the Arena. . . . The Brockville Magedomas trimmed the Chatham Maroons 6 to 3 last night and enjoy a game lead. . . . . . The Royal Canadians of Toronto, open the intermediate "A" semi-finals in Peterboro tonight. Incidently this will be the first game the Petes have played since they won the group over the "Combines".

WINNERS OF MEMORIAL CUP

By The Canadian Press

The Memorial Cup finals—junior hockey's classic series in Canada—will be played in Winnipeg next month, and the west will be favored to provide the winner if only for the reason that neither east nor west has ever held the trophy more than three years running.

Sudbury Cub Wolves were winners in 1932, Newmarket kept the title in the east by winning in 1933 and last season St. Michael's College were victors.

List of Memorial Cup champions follows:

1919—University of Toronto Schools
1920—Toronto Canoe Club
1921—Winnipeg Falcons
1922—Fort William G.W.V.A.
1923—University of Manitoba

BOXING'S BIGGEST BRAWL

Fistiana will toss its biggest party of all time on March 15, when the groaning ring in Madison Square Garden will be asked to stand up under the strain of a meeting between Primo Carnera and Ray Impelletiere. These boxing behemoths will carry on to the canvas a total weight of almost 550 pounds —more than a quarter-ton of ponderous humanity, which will wave its fists and go through the manoeuvres usually associated with a boxing bout. Whether it will really become a fight is problematical. The size and weight is there in abundance; the boxing skill and possibly the willingness to make it a real fight is only problematical. Impellitiere, who looms into th tmosphere for six feet seven and one-half inches and tips the scales at 270 pounds, has not yet proved himself a heavyweight boxer of class and he has been around quite a while. Generally he is classed a chronic second-rater. Carnera, the "Da Preem," whose ponderous 278 pounds wilted so helplessly before the concentrated fury of Max Baer in their title bout, may or may not fight— depending mostly whether Da Preem loses his temper or not. It certainly will not be a boxing bout. Neither of these maulers has much skill. Strictly as a brawl between a pair of overgrown bruisers it shapes up as a success. A quarter-ton of animated bulk should be able to make the strongest of rings groan a bit and maybe by leaning a little on some of their punches the mastadons may even hurt each other and make the customers believe they are witnessing a fight. Anyway it will hold on erecord—its the biggest thing the battling business has yet seen.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

"I beg of you to stay, Therese." Hunter turned, frowning at Faith. "I think you're forgetting yourself, my dear," he said sternly. "Anyone Madame de Luze chooses to bring under our roof becomes our guest. You owe her an apology."

"Very well." Faith's lips were dry. She stood quite still as an inner tempest swept down on her with roar as of wind in her ears. "She can stay under your roof. But I'm going, and nothing you can say now will stop me."

"Faith!" Hunter's low horrified voice had no further effect.

Roger's hateful smile and the Countess' fluttering gesture passed as on a screen where moving faces and figures surged forward, receded. Her head down, Faith made for the stairs and on up to her room.

In a passion, she flung off her beautiful dress, tossed her pearls on the dressing table. Like a whirlwind she went through her closet, snatching down a black wool dress, her astrachan jacket and turban.

"Are you mad, Faith? Where are you going?" Hunter had come in. His face was white, set in rigid lines.

"To the hospital where I should have gone long ago," Faith flashed at him from the door. "Don't worry. I'll take the back stairs." Before he could say another word, she had slammed the door and was speeding down the hall.

A LIFE SAVED

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

The white hospital room seemed like an uncharted little island, remote from every safe, every known short. Faith sitting there beside Paul, felt cut off from the world in timeless, unmeasured space. Hours might have passed, or only minutes since she had cast aside her beautiful ball dress, her precious pearls, leaving a blaze of lights, music, and the brilliant people, who had been bidden to meet her.

All the way to Neuilly in the taxi a gaping footman had summoned for her, the memory of Hunter's white set face reproached her. His eyes had never before seemed such a deep extraordinary blue against the black wings of his brow, the smooth black line of his hair. Imperiously those eyes caused her back even at the portals of the great hospital. But it was too late to turn back.

Faith was glad now that she had come. She sat on, her cool fingers stroking Paul's hair that flamed on the pillow like a fire she must keep lit through the night. Sometimes he was quiet, and then the room seemed hollow like a sea shell with faint confused echoes of dance, of charming voices and of laughter. Far away at the other end of Paris these things were happening. Madame de Luze danced with Roger Welsh. Sacha de Markoff tilted his blonde head, tossing off glasses of champagne. Hunter walked darkly, handsomely among his guests pleading the sudden indisposition of his wife.

At other times Paul moaned and called Faith's name again and again.

"I'm right here with you, dear." Faith's strength gathered up within her, flowing in a vital stream from her finger tips to the sick boy. Now and then she moistened his parched lips from a bowl of cracked ice the nurse brought her, and then his eyes would fly open lighting his thin face with the torment of a mind not at rest.

"Nothing happens—nothing, nothing, nothing, — my God, how I've worked—put everything into them—where are they, my plans, my model?—They'll be lost, stolen—" Paul muttered and tossed. "I shouldn't have left them—Faith. My plans, my models—I shouldn't have—" He struggled to his elbow.

"I'll get them for you and keep them. You must rest now, Paul darling, and not think of anything." Oh, if they would only give him something to make him sleep! But they didn't dare on account of his heart.

He should sleep—he must sleep, they had told Faith. "Paul, will you listen to me? I'll take care of your model." Faith's voice was very strong. She had taken off her astrachan turban, and as she leaned over him, the pale soft gold of her hair, the silvery green of her eyes was as cool as woodland places.

He lay looking up at her, his brows twisted, tortured, trying to smile. "It was wonderful of you to come," he murmured. "But it's no use. I'll never get anyone even to look at them—my own fault—coming over her—" He was working himself up again, gasping, panting for breath.

The nurse hurried forward. Faith went to the window staring blindly out at the great wings and blocks sentinelled by lights. Money, she thought bitterly. That was at the bottom of it all. Money feeding in like oil to machinery to make it go. Money making Hunter's world go around. Lack of money stopping Paul's. Hunter who had everything without working for it, Paul who had only his dreams, his genius that no one seemed to need. And she had believed that the only thing worth while in life was wealth, leisure.

Faith turned back to the bed. Paul was quiet with the dreadful quiet of exhaustion.

"Paul—Paul—" Faith called him. "If you'll get well, I'll sell that invention for you. I swear I will!" Her voice was solemn, urgent. It reached out and pulled him back. Her eyes upon him hypnotic as crystal. "You believe me, don't you, Paul. "You sleep, you'll get well I'll see that you get your chance, Paul. I promise you. I know a man I can get to back your motor."

Over and over, Faith said it. "If you sleep, you'll get well. I know someone who will back your motor. Paul."

"It wasn't a lie, she told herself passionately. She would find someone to give him his chance. She laid her strong beautiful hands on his forehead. "I'll keep faith like my name," she said. "You never need worry again, Paul. I'll go and get your plans and things as soon as you sleep. Then when you're well, we'll do something about them."

"Faith—like your name." His thin fingers twined around hers, held them tightly. "You're good. I-think-I-can-rest-now."

He sank back, his face wonderfully relaxed. Faith thought it was the end. She stood rigidly looking down. But the nurse touched her arm.

"He's asleep, Mrs. Barclay," she whispered. "He'll sleep for hours. He'll wake very weak but without a fever."

But it was not until dawn that Faith crept out of the hospital. She wanted to be so very sure that Paul had passed the danger line. Shivering a little in the grey chill of the early morning, she gave Paul's address to the chauffeur of a taxi.

She couldn't go home yet, she thought. Not while there might be sign or trace of the party she had left to come to Paul's side. Not until she had redeemed the first part of her promise to Paul, and had his plans, his model in her safe keeping.

Huddled in her astrachans in a corner of the taxi, Faith closed her eyes. She felt the utter blankness of fatigue, the almost blessed sense of travelling alone on a self-appointed errand. Time enough later to face the consequences of this night.

The concierge, omnipotent guardian of even the humblest rooming or apartment house, proved amenable to the arguments of the hundred franc note Faith slipped into her greedy palm. She would have let Faith take away more than a few of Monsieur Tuckerman's possessions for less.

Paul's door wasn't even locked. Faith paused on the threshold of the melancholy garret pinched under its dust and cold. The very air she breathed was sharp as a knife edge. Shapes were stark against the peeling walls. Crumbled ashes of old newspapers in the pot-bellied little stove. A dead plant on the window sill. An unwashed plate and glass on the rickety table, and the cot tumbled as they had left it when they took Paul to the hospital. How dismal it all looked!

Against such a background, the drawings and small model of his airplane motor seemed drearily like junk. Faith's heart sank as she stared at them. She had only Paul's word for what they represented. But he had her word, and Faith's delicate chin was set in firm lines as she collected every scrap of paper that could concern the invention, and ordered the chauffeur to carry the model down to the taxi. The room seemed indeed barren when that was done.

But Faith still lingered. Before her lay that home-coming in the cold morning light. Now that Paul in what she considered fi was saved, and herself engaged in what she considered a sacred responsibility, she began to realize what her impulsive performance must have meant to Hunter.

"He should have undertood," she said aloud standing in the shabby room. If only she could believe that he would understand when she went back and told him more about Paul and the invention! If only she could make him see that there were other things besides just society and pleasure, that his philosophy was selfish and wrong. She felt humble, and still a little uncertain at her readjustment of values. And, as slowly she closed the door of the damp cheerless room, her thoughts turned to shrewd old Dan Rider and his sane outlook on life. Perhaps of them all, he would best understand the strange doubt and uneasiness that last night's crisis had brought up in her mind.

But Mr. Rider wouldn't be there to help her with Hunter. Faith's smile was wan as she realized how it would look, her turning up in a taxi at this hour in the morning with rolls of strained drawing paper and a queer looking piece of machinery.

She felt as if she had been away for eternities. It didn't seem the same place, nothing seemed the same. The second man opened the door staring at Faith as at a ghost. Through the yawning hush of the house, were the faint stirrings and rustlings of sleepy servants abroad on their business of clearing up. The scent of flowers was still strong in the air, the pungent tang of chrysanthemums, the sweet almost sickly odors of fading mimosa. A pair of long white kid gloves lay on a chair by the door.

Faith ordered Paul's things brought in, and neither looking to right nor left hurried to her rooms. How ridiculous of her to imagine that Hunter would be waiting up to take her to task! After a bath and a cup of coffee, it must be she who would request an interview; she who must do the explaining.

But when she had had her bath and coffee and called up the hospital to hear that Paul still slept, such weariness overtook her, that she threw herself on her bed. Three hours later she woke and rang for her maid who handed her a note from Hunter.

Faith fingered it a moment before daring to open it. There was a stern definite look to the pen strokes on the envelope. With a sigh, she drew out a single sheet. There were only a few lines.

My dear Faith:—

I am leaving with the Dawtrey's for Juan les Pins, and shall not be back for a week in any case.

Since I was obliged last night to tell people you were taken suddenly ill, I hope you will be discreet in your appearance for a few days.

That was all except for his signature slanting boldly across the white page.

Faith sat up in bed staring at the words which so coldly pushed her out of his life again. She hardly heard her maid, a pretty soubrette in black and frilled cap, who went on to stay that Monsieur had asked her to tell Madame that he had sent her pearls to the bank where Madame could get them when she wished.

Her pearls! Faith laughed mirthlessly, waving the maid away. What good were they? Hunter hadn't even cared enough to stand by, or at least to listen to what she might have to say.

Bitterly she looked around the lovely room, the cream panelled walls, the yellow taffeta hangings caught up with little wreaths and mauve French bows, the silk and lace of her bed. It was grey outside with the drip of rain on the wintry garden.

The telephone at her side rang sharply. With a beating heart Faith lifted the receiver. She had a sudden premotion it was Hunter. But it was Therese de Luze. Faith didn't at first recognize her voice, it was so swift and shrill in panic.

"I am in terrible trouble," the Countess wailed. "Oh Faith, ma cherie, will you come to me at once?"

STARTLING REVELATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Faith forgot her own troubles as hastily she dressed to go to the Countess de Luze. After all, the older woman had done her a great many kindnesses in the past, and this mysterious telephone call for help found Faith ready to forgive the painful scene of the party. Her mind slaped ahead in nervous conjecture. Could it have anything to do with Hunter's rushing off to Juan les Pins?

The Countess lived in the stately gloom of the rue de Varennes. The dowager Countess still occupied the main grandeurs of the house with her daughter, another son and their children. The unfortunate marriage of her eldest son, Jean, to Therese made no difference in the inflexible family arrangement which permitted Therese, although separated from her husband, to own an apartment in a small wing of the house.

Faith always felt a little awed when she entered the imposing stone entrance and courtyard presided over by a grizzled major domo. Today she didn't even wait for his ceremonious question, but ran past him up two shallow flights of steps, turning off at the small door and narrower stairs that led to Madame de Luze's quarters.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was listening to her wrist watch not going, saying to pop, I'm afraid it's stopped again, and that reminds me how time flies. Here the middle of the week, hasn't come and gone yet, and my household allowance for the week has dissapeered like black magic, she said.

Just like last week, not to speak of the week before, pop said. When are you going to start that budget sistem that you've been so proudly announcing? I told you I'd bring you a nice empty account book from the office as soon as you say the werd. Do I hear the werd? he said.

Well, it mite be a good ideer, ma said, I heard Bertha Cornhouse telling about how much better she gets on in a mercenary way since she's started to keep weakly accounts, or at least I overheard her, because I personly never speak to the dubble face snake in the grass. Anyway it seems she saves famulous sums every week just by keeping eagle eye track of every outgoing penny, she said, and pop said, And that Cornhouse woman is the werld's prise dumbell, I bleeve I've heard you say.

My goodness she's so stupid she wouldn't know enough to come in out of the rain even on a brite sunshiney day, ma said, and pop said ,Well then if she can werk such wonders by keeping household accounts, you awt to be able to make the fortune of the entire family, shall I bring that ledger home tomorrow?

Well, I was just thinking, ma said. If Bertha Cornhouse can do so well with the aid of an account book. I would consider it an insult to my own intelligents if I couldn't do even better without one, and I'll prove it. And meanwhile Willyum I wish you'd write me a check while you think of it for the rest of the week, she said.

Wich pop did, shaking his head like somebody feeling against it

The morning sun awakened Tarzan with a new sense of strength and well-being. And, so at last he came through the hills out of the valley of death into a land of park-like beauty, rich in game.

A deep valley lay below him. Through its centre, dense vegetation marked the course of a river. Beyond, a primeval forest extended for miles, ending finally at the foot of lofty, snow-capped mountains. It was a land that Tarzan had never looked upon

Probably no other white man had ever set foot in this beautiful land. Three days he spent resting and recuperating, eating fruits and nuts and the smaller animals that were most easily bagged. Time meant nothing to him now.

The last tie binding him to civilization was severed. Absolute freedom was his. This had been spent the greater part of his life; he was alone but not lonely. Yet very soon his peaceful solitude was rudely shattered!

TOURIST TRADE TO BE FOSTERED BY LARGER ESTIMATE

Beauties of Canada Told by Members From Various Part

HOUSE IN AGREEMENT

Three Rules Laid Down For Guidance to Increase Trade

OTTAWA, March 7.—(CP)—The rare spectacle of complete harmony in the House of Commons was witnessed yesterday, when members from all parties lifted their voices to commend the Government for its efforts in promoting tourist trade. Last year the Government spent $100,000 through a new organization set up in June under the leadership of D. Leo Dolan. Estimates this year call for $300,000.

Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, threw the tourist question open for debate with a review of the work so far and drew unanimous commendation. The only complaint made was the proposed expenditure was too small. One member wanted to make it $20,000,000.

Could prospective tourists have listened in on the debate the advertising allowance could have been reduced, for the holiday attractions of all parts of Canada were painted in such rosy hues as would have induced the most self-satisfied stay-at-home to embark at once on a tour of this country. The mountains and lakes, the fish, the seacoasts, and even the onion fields were hailed as surpassing the most famed beauty spots of Europe.

All afternoon the lofty Rocky Mountains were compared with Switzerland. The attractions of the Prairies and the Highlands of Ontario were pictured in superlatives. Challenges were thrown around to find anything to compare with rural Quebec. New Brunswick entered the lists with salmon fishing on the Miramachi and moose hunting in the north. The Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia was termed a Paradise on Earth.

The opportunity was too good to be lost for home-sick members. They fought for the floor to extol the scenic beauties of their constituencies and provinces, one of them making 11 attempts because he was not quick enough to catch the Speaker's eye.

Onion Fields Wonder Spot

It was Eccles J. Gott, Conservative member for South Essex, who maintained the onion fields of his country, four feet beneath the level of the lake, were one of the wonders of the world. In addition he had the largest bird sanctuary in the world, Jack Miner's place.

The Prairie Provinces came in for commendation from Col. Harry Mullins, Conservative member for Marquette. "Until you visit Manitoba you have not seen Canada," he said. That province had Riding Mountain National Park and one of the most beautiful lakes in the world, Clear Lake, as its main attractions. In addition it had a well spouting medicinal waters that would "cure a wooden leg or anything that may be wrong with you."

Dr. Manion said there was reason to believe Canada's tourist business could be stepped up to $500,000,000 a year with return of prosperity should a judicious and vigorous advertising policy be pursued.

The Dominion was giving leadership to the many organizations interested in expanding the tourist trade, the Minister said. In 192" $309,000,000 was estimated as the value of the country's tourist trade and in 1934, $140,000,000.

Three Rules Laid Down

The Railway Minister laid down three rules for Canadians in dealing with tourists—courtesy on the part of customs officials, honesty and fair dealing by merchants and hotel-keepers and general courtesy by the public. He said the people of Quebec were among the most courteous to tourists.

Efforts of the Tourist Bureau were designed to promote inter-provincial traffic as well as induce Americans to enter Canada, Dr. Manion said. About 85 per cent. of the money would be spent in United States papers. Better results had been obtained from newspaper advertising than radio.

The Government was moving in the right direction, said Hon. Charles Stewart, (Lib. Edmonton West), but it was doing nothing that was not done between 1923 and 1929 by the Liberal Government. The Conservative Government dropped all tourist activities formerly carried on by the Department of the Interior and now they had been revived the Government was trying to take credit for a new idea.

FILM LITERATI NOT IN AGREEMENT

Producer Says Some Should be Pushing Plows

Hollywood, March 7. —(AP) —A statement in New York of Movie Producer Samuel Goldwyn that "three writers out of every four in Hollywood should be pushing plows instead of typewriters brought reactions of agreement, silence, and thinly-veiled dispute from the film literati.

Among those who spoke was Philip Wylie, well known for his novels and his magazine stories as well as his screen product. He said:

"While Mr. Goldwyn's statement is true, it is not very profound. Innumerable great novelists and dramatists have failed in picture writing. It is no secret among successful playwrights hundreds of highly-paid Hollywood 'authors' couldn't keep soul and body together by writing fiction or even patent medicine copy."

William Slavens McNutt, also successful in print before he began writing for pictures, said:

"What Goldwyn says of screen writers might also apply to actors, novelists, short story writers and other creative workers. Out of the hundreds—yes —, thousands —following those professions, how many top-notchers are there?"

And Horace Jackson, considered in Hollywood to be a specialist in high, sophisticated drama, replied:

"It seems to me we have some pretty fair writers here. Rupert Hughes, for example, is getting a good start in the magazines. Then there are Donald Ogden Stuart and Robert Benchley, who show great promise as future humorists, now and then."

TO CLOSE STORE DURING FUNERAL

To close store

Picton—In Belleville, on December, 15th., 1934, by Rev. Dr. Semple Berneice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Duetta of Picton, was united in marriage to Lawrence Robert Whattam of Bethel, Township of Sophiasburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Whattam.

The C.D.S. is closing on Thursday afternoon from two o'clock until four that the employees may attend as a body the funeral of Mr. John L. Graydon, formerly one of the staff.

Personals

Miss Helen Hubbs, M.A., supplied in York Street School on Friday owing to the illness of Mr. Bruce Yarwood. An epidemic of colds and 'flu seems to have hit the school children particularly, and the attendance is down in all rooms of the public schools.

On Monday evening, the Young People of St. Gregory's Church held their final dance before Lent in the I.O.O.F. Hall. There was a large attendance, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Mrs. Garnet Cowan was able to leave hospital on Wednesday and return to her home.

COLDER WEATHER HELPS SITUATION

Flood Danger Passed For Time Being With No Damage

(By the Canadian Press)

Flood danger seemed over today as colder weather saved the situation along the valleys of the Grand and Thames Rivers.

Yesterday a series of ice-jams were reported between Grand Valley River and Cayuga on Grand River but no serious damage resulted.

The two-day mild spell, however, had made its threat.

The Blair-Preston Highway was flooded yesterday, and the Canadian National Railways tracks were under water for a distance of several hundred yards. Ice was jammed at the Blair Bridge, and the structure was in danger of being washed away. A family in its home 10 yards from the River was surrounded by water.

Ingersoll and Gordon, along the Thames River, yesterday reported alarming rises of water level.

An ice-jam three miles below Caledonia sent the Grand River up three feet in that district, flooding the North River Highway between Caledonia and York.

At Stratford, the Avon river had subsided today after swelling to a dangerously high mark.

Two large ice-jams had formed yesterday in the seven-mile stretch of the Grand River between Fergus and Belwood. Inhabitants in the vicinity were prepared to blast with dynamite to save their property.

London, Ont., reported the Thames receding today.

The Credit, the Speed, the Irvine and the Nith Rivers, all intimated they might go on a rampage, but subsided with the change in weather.

Rev. N. A. McLeod Is Nominated For Moderator

The Presbytery of Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada met in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston on Tuesday the fifth day of March inst. with the Rev. A. G. Cameron and Rev. R. J. Craig, M.A., officiating as clerk.

The Rev. L. L. Young, B.A., missionary to Japan was introduced to the court and was cordially welcomed by the moderator.

Rev. C. E. Kidd reported givings to the budget for 1934 which were slightly above those for 1933. Throughout the Synod of Toronto and Kingston and throughout the church as a whole donations were largely satisfactory. Expenses are being reduced to a minimum, legacies forthcoming will compensate for deficiencies existent during these years of financial depression.

Rev. Dr. Young of Kobe, Japan, addressed the meeting on his work on that field amongst resident Koreans. He explained at some length the training of Korean young men preparatory to missionary work amongst their own people. It is evident that tempation for Koreans in Japan are greater in the form of the consumption of liquor, opium, etc., than in Korea and because the evangelistic trend towards those living in Japan.

Mr. Young told of a remarkable revival of confessional in Korea which originated in the mind of one minister missionary who spent much time in fervent prayer. This was made possible through the well organised Korean church. The mission work amongst the five hundred thousand Koreans in Japan began about seven years ago and most satisfactory results have been obtained. Women's Missionary Societies, Young People's Societies, Sunday Schools and Bible Schools have been organized. Mr. Young in the course of his address pointed out that by means of decentralization of manufacturers Japan is able to compete most favourably with other countries which have large centralised factories. In like manner he claimed that the Korean system of comparatively small congregations proves most effective. The moderator on behalf of the Presbytery thanked Mr. Young for his illuminating and inspiring address.

Reports Submitted

The following report of standing committees was presented by Rev. Dr. Stephen, Mission, Mr. D. C. Hill, convener, and Messrs. Koffend, Kidd, Kelley, Earls and H. S. Vancleef.

Y.P.S. and SS., Rev. S. M. Scott, (convener) and Messrs. Reid, Hill, Kelly, West.

Evangelism, Church Life and Work, Messrs. Hunter (convener), A. E. Cameron, Walker, Sharpe, Koffend, Ketcheson.

Pensions, A. G. Cameron (convener), Messrs. R. J. Craig, Kidd, Rutherford, Whyte.

College Students, Dr. Stephen (convener), Messrs. Walker, Earls, McMicking, Diak.

Budget, C. E. Kidd (convener), A. E. Cameron, W. J. Campbell, C. V. Wilkins, S. M. Scott, W. J. Walker.

A call from St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae to Rev. J. A. McMillan was dealt with by the court. Mr. McMillan's services during the past year, when he acted as stated supply were highly approved of by representatives from the congregation, who were present. Provisional arrangements for Mr. McMillan's induction in the near future were made as follows. Mr. Walker to preach, Mr. Koffend to relate the steps leading up to the induction and address the people and Mr. Kelly to address the minister. The moderator of Presbytery will preside and induct.

Mr. Koffend reported for committee on Home Missions and stated that the total amount received by the Presbytery of Kingston from the Mission Fund was $1872 for 1934.

Dr. Stephen reported for the committee on college and students. The application of Rev. J. A. Evans now of Indian Head for reception to the ministry of the Presbyterian Church was approved by Presbytery.

Mr. Stanley Smith, 4th year student at Queen's University, requests certification to Home Mission committee for mission work during the coming summer.

Commissioners Appointed

The following Presbyters were appointed as commissioners to General Assembly: Ministers, R. J. Craig, Dr. Stephen and C. E. Kidd, and elders from Deseronto and Gananoque.

Rev. N. A. McLeod, D.D. of Brockville was nominated for moderator of the General Assembly for the ensuing year and Rev. C. E. Kidd B.A., B.D., for moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, the moderator of Presbytery to support the nomination.

A. E. Cameron, convener of committee on Evangelism, Church Life and Work presented the report of that committee, which report endorsed the recommendation of the joint committee on evangelism whereby revival of life and religion be enkindeled through united prayer and consecration.

The next ordinary meeting of Presbytery will be held as agreed upon by the moderator and clerk.

PRINCE MAHIDOL PROCLAIMED RULER

Takes Over Throne With Regency Vacated by Prajadhipok

BANGKOK, Siam, March 7—(AP)—Prince Ananda Mahidol, 11-year-old nephew of former King Prajadhipok, has been proclaimed ruler of Siam with a Council of Regency, it was announced today.

The regents named were Prince Anuwabana, President Abitayu, and Chao Tsyn Yomaraj.

The Siamese Throne was left vacant last Saturday by the abdication of King Prajadhipok after a prolonged controversy with the Siamese Parliament over Governmental reforms.

Prajadhipok was particularly aroused by plans of his Government to deprive him of the power of life and death over his subjects which he had long wielded.

After renouncing the throne Prajadhipok declared he had so acted because his efforts to give his country democratic institution had met with failure. He named no successor in his abdication document, explaining later that the laws of Siam provided for this contingency.

Prince Ananda is at present in Lausanne, Switzerland, with his mother, studying in an exclusive school.

NEW "GAS AND OIL" PIT IN NEW YORK

A general view in the commodity exchange, New York, just after the opening of the new gasoline and crude oil futures market. This is the first time in history such a "gasoline and oil put" has been opened anywhere and corresponds to Chicago's famous "wheat pit". It should prove a great influence in the oil industry. The opening was attended by men most prominent in the petroleum world, headed by Dr. William E. Dunn, assistant director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the United States.

MONTREAL HIKERS REACH PACIFIC COAST

From Montreal to Vancouver in eight months is not a strenuous hike, even when you pull behind you a small home on wheels. At least, that is what Pierre Carron, 25 and Elzear Duquette, 21, claimed on their arrival at the Pacific coast recently. They are shown on the road in this photo. Their "house" contains an upper and lower bunk and cooking utensils. It was built by Duquette and Carron, following a dream by the former. The young adventurers plan to pull their home to California and then hike across United States to Florida before turning north along the Atlantic to Halifax and home.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Chicago, March 8 (CP)—A child is never too old to obey, William Witt, 77, declared—and he backed up his statement yesterday by giving his 54-year-old son, Walter, a spanking.

Walter, thinking he was old enough to be his own boss, visited a nearby tavern, police said, and returned home in a happy mood. He swung a hard right to father Witt's eye when the elder man told him to be quiet and go to bed.

The spanking followed.

St. Louis, March 8 (CP)— His wife's dogs—50 bull terriers—got all the cream from the milk at his home and he got what was left, Charles E. Ette testified in his divorce suit.

Mrs. Ette in a counter action said he had blackened her eyes and broken her nose. The court took the case under advisement.

Edmonton, March 8 (CP)—Neither the Mayor nor a Commissioner alone has the legal power in Edmonton to dismiss civic officials or employes according to a written judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Frank Ford. The question was taken to the Supreme Court when Mayor J. A. Clark sought to uphold his action in dismissing employes of the city relief department.

St. Louis, March 8 (CP)— Mr. and Mrs. Ollie A. Maier were divorced Thursday for the third time.

In her petition, in which she charged her husband loved another woman, Mrs. Maier said they were first married April 16, 1925. They were divorced, married again, and then obtained another divorce. The most recent marriage was December 16, 1934.

Los Angeles, March 8 (CP)—For undertaking to instruct her 12-year-old son Robert, at home instead of sending him to school, Mrs. Edith M. Gassoway, a former school teacher, is serving a 30-day term in the county jail.

She was sentenced by Justice of the Peace Kenneth C. Newell of Pasadena on charges of violating the state compulsory school law, which required all children attend classes or be instructed at home in courses practically identical with those taught in the public schools.

Havana, March 8 (CP)—It took a lot of luck to win the $250,000 first prize in the latest National lottery but apparently it's going to take a lot more luck to collect it. This became evident today when the Treasury Department, paralyzed by a strike of its employes, held up payment of the $700,000 in prizes in the drawing. The bulk of the profit from the lottery was to be turned over to local charities.

The average Cuban takes his lottery seriously and the failure to pay off promptly furnished a lot of fuel for gossip.

AVERAGE LEVELS OF LAKES LOWER THAN IN JANUARY

ENGINEERS TO REPORT

Little Relief Expected, Minister of Marine Admits

Ottawa, March 8 (CP)—Figures released today by the Department of Marine indicate little relief from the exceedingly low water levels along the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River.

In most cases the average levels for February were lower than those of January.

This week in the House Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine, said a report would soon be completed by his engineers on plans to offset the lack of precipitation, which has caused the levels to drop. This announcement followed speeches by members, whose constituencies bordered on the St. Lawrence telling of the great inconvenience to municipalities along the shore.

Today's report shows the average level for February in the port of Montreal was 20 1-4 inches lower than in January, eight inches lower than February last year and 156 1-2 inches below the record high for February, which was in 1890. Last month was the lowest February since records were started in 1860. It was also the lowest at Kingston and Port Colborne.

The level of Lake Superior is regulated at Sault Ste. Marie. The levels for the other lakes follow:

Lake Huron, at Goderich, during February was 1-2 an inch lower than January; 2 1-2 inches higher than Feb. 1934.

Lake Erie, at Port Colborne, during February was 3 1-2 inches lower than January; 3-4 of an inch lower than February 1934.

Lake Ontario, at Kingston, during February was 1 1-2 inches higher than January; 8 1-2 inches lower than the previous lowest Feb. (1934) since 1860.

ICE AT EQUATOR IN GLACIAL PERIOD

So Reports Dr. A. P. Coleman Who Finds Drug-Tribe in Andes Mts.

Toronto, March 8.—(CP)—Warm places on earth even at the equator were few and such as existed were crowded with millions of animals seeking escape from the advancing waves of ice. Such is the picture drawn by Dr. A. P. Coleman, Glaciologist, just returned to Toronto, from exploring the Andes in search of fresh evidence of the extent of the "ice age", which existed 25,000 years or more ago.

"I have established the glacial periods existed at the equator just as they did in the Northern Hemisphere," he said.

Dr. Coleman who is 83 years of age, one of the oldest active scientists, said a tribe of drug addicts was among the non-scientific "discoveries" he made in the Interior of Columbia. Dr. Coleman said they grow tobacco but do not smoke and he saw no use of alcohol. They grow cotton and weave their own clothes.

CAMPBELL, SETS NEW RECORD OF 276.816 MILES

On Thursday, March 7th, sir Malcolm Campbell recovered car just in time to make new world record. Fired with impatience to send his monster racing car Bluebird across Daytona Beach racing sands at 300 miles per hour or better, Sir Malcolm Campbell flirted with death in his opening attempts to set the mark. On one of his runs a broken engine cowl, while hot and flapping crazily, almost ended his mad cruise with disaster. Trying again in a reckless effort to smash the existing record, the Bluebird travelling at over [illegible] miles an hour, dipped into a gully, swerved, hurled Campbell up out of the cockpit and left him literally hanging to the steering wheel. Wind tore at his head, smashed his goggles down on to his nose and mouth. He was riding blind on the edge of destruction as he tore through the measured mile. LEFT, Leo Villa, chief mechanic, examines the torn cowling. RIGHT, Sir Malcolm, photographed in the cockpit as he completed one of his nerve-wrecking dashes.

Sir Malcolm Campbell Drives Famous Bluebird 276 M.P.H. to New Record

My EDWARD J. NEIL

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 8—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell had a new world's automobile speed record to tack to the cockpit of Bluebird today—276.816 miles an hour—but whether that would satisfy him for this year, or for any other year, not even he knew.

In other years, the moment he fractured the straightaway, running start standards, that he alone has been able to challenge since the death of Major Seagrave, he has packed up immediately, put the monster bluebird in a crate and started straight back for England. This time he's hesitating.

He went out on Daytona's sands yesterday and lifted his mark from 272.108 to 276.816. It was a fractional improvement, as he soared southward through the measured mile in 13.29 seconds at an average of 272.727 miles an hour, and came back through the same stretch in 12.81 seconds at a 281.030 mile an hour clip.

No Decision

When he set his 272.108 mile record two years ago he averaged 13.23 seconds for the measured mile.

Campbell said last night he had made no decision as to whether he would stay here and continue to shoot for the 300 miles an hour he feels is in Bluebird if the beach ever reaches the millenium of perfection he desires. Yet, at the same time, he had asked the officials to stand by, and be prepared to clock him in future attempts.

He said yesterday, as late as 1 p. m., the beach was impossible, rough and lumpy, and could not possibly sustain the speed he sought, yet three hours later he had Bluebird on the sands, breaking his old record.

Campbell set out on the late ebb tide, shortly after 4 p.m. and came thundering down the 11 1-2 mile stretch, Bluebird hitting on all 12 of her 2,500 horsepower cylinders.

He was doing 262.390 miles an hour as he headed into the measured mile in the middle of the coure, 272.727 as he flashed through it, and from there on he coasted to a stop at the far end of the course.

"It was quite smooth going down" he said.

Within half an hour he had changed tires and was on his way back. He was doing [illegible] this time as he came up the measured mile north, and [illegible] as he squished through it in [illegible] seconds, thundering beautifully and riding like a man in a rocking chair, just [illegible] seconds above the mile he'd have to make to average 300 miles an hour.

Mother is Proud

London, March 8—(CP-Havas)—Mrs. A. Campbell, mother of Sir Malcolm Campbell, is proud as punch over the new speed record of 276.816 miles an hour he hung up yesterday at Daytona Beach but she wants him to come home.

"I want him to come home now he has broken the record. But I know he's got his mind set on a 300-mile-an-hour mark," she said, adding philosophically, "well I'd like to see him get it but I am worried about the risks. Let him get it, if he must, but then come home," she concluded.

HOG CHOLERA IS QUICKLY CHECKED

42 Animals Destroyed by Health Department Near Brockville

BROCKVILLE, Ont., March 8.—(CP)— Because of an outbreak of hog cholera on farm property in Elizabethtown Township, two miles from Brockville, officials of the Health of Animals branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have destroyed forty-two animals. Their carcasses were burnt on the spot. The Department also treated ninety-six hogs with serum to prevent any spread of the disease.

The outbreak occurred at a piggery where Brockville garbage is taken for disposal pending construction of an incinerator. It was believed the disease originated in a shipment of hogs brought from Western Canada a short time ago.

Cabman Fears Not Blackjack and Fights Off Robber

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—Police are searching today for a thug taxi passenger who slugged John Fuller, driver, with a blackjack but took to his heels when the cabman showed fight.

As he was hit over the head Fuller threw himself at the attacker and whirled him out of the car. The would-be robber took to his heels, the partially stunned driver in hot pursuit. The assailant was picked up by a car apparently driven by an accomplice and escaped.

Fuller then ran back to his car and gave chase for more than a mile but failed to overtake his attacker.

Brokerage Firm Hands Back To Belleville Women $3,000

TORONTO, March 8—(CP)—The campaign of the Ontario Securities Commission to curb the activities of financial racketeers saved two elderly sisters, whose home is near Belleville, Ont., $3,000, it was learned today.

Upon reading an advertisement inserted in newspapers by J. M. Godfrey, chairman of the Commission, the sisters reported to the Crown Attorney at Belleville, that they each had given a broker $1,500 worth of bonds to be invested in stocks, but that efforts to obtain delivery of the stocks had been unavailing.

The Crown Attorney communicated with Mr. Godfrey and was instructed to proceed against the broker, issue a warrant if necessary. It was not necessary. The sisters, one 79, the other 85 years old, received a certified cheque for $3,000.

The advertisement which indicated the means of recovery to the sisters was headed, "Warning to Investors", spoke of the aim of the Prime Minister to eliminate improper financial practices and asked all who felt they had been defrauded to communicate with the Crown Attorney of their County.

WAR IS INDICTED IN NATIONAL FILM

Parliamentarians View Film "Lest We Forget" At Ottawa

Ottawa, March 8.—An indictment of war as an instrument of national policy and a heart-searching commentary on the inevitable disaster which is the fruit of war, were portrayed to representatives of Canadian public life Thursday night, when, Parliament adjourning for that purpose, they witnessed the premiere showing of the Canadian Legion's peace film, "Lest We Forget," nearly two years in the making, and drawing from the accumulation of material in the Government Motion-Picture Bureau, the film tells many stories and reads many lessons.

The picture has been selected from many thousands of feet of film which, taken during the war years in Canada, the United Kingdom and France, now reposes in the custody of the Motion-Picture Bureau. Reinforcing it is a considerable quantity of film from the official archives of the former Allied and even enemy Government.

Canada's activities are followed with an accuracy that is assured by the official record. The statesmen and soldiers of this Dominion are shown in the course of the events which made history. Canada's first contingent, its baptism of fire at Ypres, and its subsequent course through four years of agony, are faithfully depicted.

SLAYER OF FAMILY DIES IN "CHAIR"

Former Ohio Magistrate Called Man Who "Put Something in Juice"

Tucker Prison Farm, Ark., March 8—(AP)—Mark H. Shank, 43, former Ohio Magistrate, died in the electric chair today for the poisoning of a family of four in Saline County, Ark., in August, 1933.

He was convicted late in 1923 for the murder of Alvin Colley, a professional associate, who with Mrs. Colley and two Colley children died after drinking poisoned grapejuice which Shank served at a picnic lunch.

Shank said in a reputed confession shortly after his arrest Colley had attempted to blackmail him in connection with a case pending in Ohio.

Four-year-old Clyde Colley was the only member of the family to survive. He pointed to Shank as the "Man who put something in the grapejuice" and on the child's statement Shank was charged with murder.

Greeks Start Offensive On Rebels in Macedonia; Follow Bombing Planes

Rebels Reported at "End of Rope" And Ready to Capitulate

Turkey Anxious, Says Report to Keep Balkans at Peace

(Copyright 1935, By The Associated Press)

Athens, March 8.—Loyal troops began an offensive from the north in Macedonia today.

General Kaliastras, commanding the division in the north, sent his troops plunging down across snow-covered fields in the wake of bombing planes that roared across the rebels' position to harass them with aerial bombs and machine gun fire.

Just before Kallastras launched his drive, General George Kondylis, in command of loyal forces in the field, hurled twelve planes at the rebels' Macedonian lines.

The Government announced today interception of a wireless message indicating rebel forces which have been fighting loyal troops were "at the end of their rope" and ready to capitulate.

"Completely Lost"

The message, purporting to have been sent by General Demetrius Kamanos, leader of the Rebel forces, was claimed to say "We are completely lost."

It was said to be addressed to rebel chieftains in other sectors.

A revolt within the revolt was reported as advices were received of internal trouble spreading in rebel ranks. The soldiers, it was reported, were demanding arrangement whereby the command be passed to non-commissioned officers.

General Kondylis was handicapped by heavy weather and faced further difficulties in the river section because the stream, swollen by rains and melting snow, overflowed its bank and flooded entire districts.

An appeal from Venizelos to John Politis, Greek Minister to Warsaw, exhorting him to relinquish his post and become diplomatic representative of Venizelos was transmitted from Canea to Alexandria by wireless for further

Local Girl Awaits Operation, Stomach Misplaced in Chest

'Florence', Aged 11 is Being 'Built up' For Operation Shortly

LIKE McHENRY CASE

(By S. R.)

During the past week the newspapers of Canada and the United States have given a great deal of publicity to little Alyce Jane McHenry of Omaha, Nebraska and the operation performed on her at Boston by Dr. Philemon Truesdale to replace her misplaced stomach and other organs. Emphasis was placed on the fact that this operation is one that calls for a high degree of skill on the part of the surgeon not only because of the complex nature of the work to be done but also because few cases are met with even by any doctor no matter how busy he may be.

With this thought in mind, inquiries were made by a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer of the medical fraternity in the city as to whether many similar cases were met with by them in their years of practice. To our surprise, we were informed by Dr. Geo. Stobie, F.R.C.S., that he has a little girl under his care at the hospital, who is afflicted in a manner similar to Alyce McHenry and on whom he plans to operate as soon as her system can be built up to withstand the shock of the operation.

Dr. Stobie outlined the case to your reporter and after listening to what the child has gone through for the eleven years of her life it seems almost a miracle that she is now alive. It might be added here, that the deformity is known to medical science as diaphragmatic hernia. To understand the nature of this type of hernia we might explain it as follows: stretching horizontally across the thoracic (chest) cavity is a strong muscu-

MOUNTAIN GLACIER FOUND IN YUKON

Hitherton Unrecorded Range Reported By Young Explorer

Washington, March 8—(AP)—Discovery of a hitherto unrecorded mountain range and a large glacier in the southwestern corner of Yukon Territory has been reported to the National Geographic Society by Bradford Washburn, young explorer of Cambridge, Mass. Washburn telegraphed from Carcoss. The expedition's base camp had been established near the tongue of the unknown glacier which descended eastward for nearly 50 miles into the Alsek Valley from the peak of Mount Hubbard, one of the highest of the St. Elias range.

OTTAWA, March 8.—(CP)—Officials of the topographical survey here in touch with Bradford Washburn's National Geographic Society expedition into the southwestern corner of the Yukon today confirmed reports from Washington the young explorer had discovered a new range of mountains in the district surrounding Mount Logan, highest peak in North America.

They said the territory in which Washburn is working has not previously been mapped. Washburn is testing a new method of photographic mapping developed especially for the expedition.

OPEN SEASON FOR MUSKRATS GIVEN

Annoucements were issued from the Game and Fisheries Department of the Ontario Government yesterday relating to the open season dates for the trapping of muskrats. In the district south of the Mattawa and French Rivers, which includes this immediate district, it will be lawful to trap muskrats from the 25th of March to the 25th of April 1935. Local fur buyers stated today that in all likelihood there would be a slight decline in the price of muskrat skins this year over last year's prices.

CAPTURE SIX WOLF PUPPIES

Wolves are holding their own in this district. Last week Mr. Fred Husband and Fred Akey, of Empey Hill, while strolling through a wooded section of land north of Napanee were successful in capturing six wolf pups. Tramping through the district just north of Empey Hill church, the two men noticed some peculiar tracks and decided to follow them. After going a short distance they heard some yelping and found the six young pups frolicking in the snow. No older wolf was in sight. They decided to take the pups home and secure the bounty given by the Ontario Government. On the way home they saw the mother wolf, but she was too far distant to shoot.

LOCAL JEWS HONOR CHAMPION

Dr. Masaryk, President of Czechoslovakia is 85 Years Old

The Jewish community of Belleville yesterday sent a telegram to the Consul-General of the Czechoslovakian Republic, Dr. F. Paviasek, Montreal, conveying congratulations and good wishes on the occasion of the celebration of the eighty-fifth birthday, Thursday, of the President of Czechoslovakia, Dr. T. Masaryk. The telegram read;

"In extending cordial congratulation to His Excellency, Dr. T. Masaryk, President of the Czechoslovakian Republic on the occasion of the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birthday, the Belleville Jewish community have reason this day to feel proud and grateful of the singular manner in which Dr. Masaryk has championed the fate, the honor and the happiness of the Jew and minorities everywhere in the time of tribulation.

"J. J. Berger,
"Secretary."

The Jews of the world have never forgotten that in time of tribulation Dr. Masaryk raised for them his authoritative voice against persecution, slander and intolerance. He also gave his assistance and encouragement on behalf of the rights of minorities everywhere.

POLICE COURT

Walter J. Hedger, of this city, pleaded guilty to two charges of theft when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., this morning. Sentence was postponed for one week in both cases, at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Hedger pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and the theft of seven pounds of butter and $500.00 from the Belleville Creameries and also of breaking and entering and theft from C.N.R. box cars, while in transient. Owing to further investigations in the matter by the Provincial Police, sentence was postponed. A similar charge and warrant was laid against one Gordon Monnohan, who is alleged by police to be Hedger's accomplice in both above matters.

A local truck driver donated two dollars to the Provincial Government, after pleading guilty to a charge of operating a truck at night without displaying the proper rear-light reflector. No costs were assessed in the matter.

Another local youth, who had pleaded guilty in a previous court to a charge of assault arising out of family altercations, was given one week to pay a fine of five dollars imposed, or serve ten days "on the hill" in default thereof.

The court room was filled to capacity, spectators even being observed sitting on the floor, while the outer corridor was also filled to overflowing.

Police News

Tony Quathorchi, local Front St. fruit dealer, complained to the police that some person had stolen the battery from his truck within the past few days. Mr. Quathrochi had parked his truck at the rear of his business, 332 Front St., early this week, having no particular use for it. Yesterday afternoon he proceeded to start his truck, but the engine refused to function, upon investigation the owner found that the battery was missing, not the enigne. The theft is being investigated by police.

Sixteen transients slumbered peacefully in the police cell block last night, free from the cold wintry blasts that blew. There has been marked increase in transients passing through Belleville during the past few days, which is attributed to the fair weather, that is being enjoyed at present.

Six local youth found themselves in the clutches of the law last night after an investigation by local police relating to the theft of six hockey sticks from the Belleville Arena last Tuesday evening. The boys returned the stolen hockey sticks, following which the police turned the same over to the Trenton Hockey Club, from whom they had originally been stolen. The boys were allowed to return to their respective homes, but will be summoned to appear at Chief Kidd's office later.

No serious motor accidents were reported on local streets or adjacent highways during the past 24 hours.

MASONS WELCOME DISTRICT DEPUTY

Rt. Wor. Bro. W. C. Mikel Officially Visits The Belleville Lodge

A large gathering of Masons attended the Temple last night on the occasion of the visit of Rt. Wor. Bro. W. C. Mikel, K.C., D.D.G.M. on his official visit to The Belleville Lodge No. 123.

After the work in the Lodge room was completed the members and visitors adjourned to the banquet hall, where the toast to Our King and our Craft was proposed by the Chairman. The Toast to Grand Lodge was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke and responded to by Rt. Wor. Brother Mikel. Most Wor. Bro. W. N. Ponton, K.C. proposed the toast to the Visiting Brethren, which was responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. C. Cooper of Picton, and other brethren throughout the District.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Mikel in responding to the toast to Grand Lodge said that Grand Lodge and the various branches of the Masonic fraternity in Ontario contributed about a million dollars a year to benevolence, which amount, he believed, exceeded such contributions by any other organization in the Province, notwithstanding the fact, that the Masonic fraternity was not an insurance organization or a service club, and these contributions are done so quietly, that even the members themselves know little about such contributions.

He gave an interesting description of King Solomon's Temple, and spoke approvingly of the Free Masons, who sixty years ago acquired, furnished and decorated the present Masonic Temple. It was a tribute to their enthusiasm. The time has now come for some additional improvements, that will meet the increasing needs of the fraternity here and modernize all the appointments in the building so that it will not only be revenue producing, but will afford opportunity for greater social pleasures for the members and their families.

The Masonic orchestra furnished a splendid program of music and was highly praised by all present.

Chamber Favors Summer Date For Motor Car Licences

June or July Issuance of Car Licences Discussed

The directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly meeting on Thursday placed themselves on record as being fully in accord with the proposal now being advocated in the province of Ontario to change the time for the issuance of motorcar licenses from the beginning of the year to some time in June or July. The directors agreed with the claim put forth that many persons find it inconvenient owing to shortage of funds to buy their licenses during the winter months and that as a consequence hundreds of cars are laid up until the cash can be more easily spared in the spring. Being unable to use their cars some country residents do not visit the city as often and much business is lost. The motion favoring the change in the time for the issuance of licenses was moved by Mr. W. H. Morton and seconded by Mr. H. E. Fairfield.

Arrangements for the annual meeting of the Chamber and dinner on Tuesday evening, March 26th are about completed and it is expected that the event will be largely attended and enjoyable in every respect. The guest speaker for the evening will be Mr. D. Leo Dolan of Ottawa, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau which is operated in connection with the Canadian National Railways. The directors of the Chamber hope to receive from Mr. Dolan many suggestions for the increasing of tourist traffic in this district.

The Board of Trade of Brighton will give a banquet on the evening of Wednesday, March 13th, and in response to an invitation as many directors of the Belleville Chamber as possible will attend.

Mr. Fred S. Douglas, manager of the Belleville branch of the Garage Supply Co., Limited, was a guest at the meeting and was welcomed by Vice President Leo B. Riggs.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. J. B. Boyce, president, W. C. Springer, W. H. Morton, H. E. Fairfield, E. V. Illsey, Leo B. Riggs, E. P. Bernstein and secretary-manager, J. O. Herity.

Church Societies

JOHN ST. W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of John Street United Church was held on Wednesday, March 6th., with the President, Mrs. Harry Hill in charge. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. James Buchanan, who read from Moffat's Translation of 1st Corinthians, Chapter 13, and gave a talk on our relationship to young people.

After the routine business had been disposed of, Mrs. Ross, the Secretary of Christian Stewardship made a plea for increased membership and givings.

The topic for the afternoon "The Christian Women's Duty to Youth" ,was very ably presented by Miss Templeton.

The speaker pointed out that the older generation are separated from youth by years and methods of living. It is not easy for young people of today to decide how to live and contribute to life. Youth has very vital problems, in which the older generation should be interested. Such problems as unemployment, delayed marriage, smoking and drinking must be studied with sympathetic understanding by the older generation. Youth needs constructive criticism, and we ourselves must undertake constructive thinking and planning to do this in the right way. Youth and age must build together with a love that is the energy of a steadfast will bent on creating fellowships. Whether they be boys and girls in Belleville, trying to find jobs, or European students undaunted in their will to get an education, or youth in India searching for freedom, our missionary battlefield is by their side, seeking to withstand conditions, sharing, what we can, helping other people to see the truth that will lead to help.

A special feature of the meeting was a literature shower for the camps in Northern Ontario, which met with a splendid response from the members.

TABERNACLE W. A.

The March meeting of W. A. of Tabernacle United Church was held on Thursday, 7th inst., in church parlors with a splendid attendance and the President, Mrs. H. Hall in the chair. The meeting opened by all singing "Stand Up, Stand Up For Jesus" and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. The President read the Scripture lesson followed by prayer by Mrs. Emmerson. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, also the treasurer gave the financial report showing a splendid balance which was also approved. The visiting committee reported thirty-six calls made for the month. Birthday greetings were extended to one of the older members of the Society by sending a small gift in remembrance of her many happy associations in the past. Collection $2.45. Mrs. Kelly's Group then took charge of the programme. A lovely solo was rendered by Mrs. P. Cornell; a reading, "The Ladies' Aid" by Mrs. Paul; a violin solo by Mrs. Panning, assisted by Mrs. Bradley at the piano. Each number was enjoyed by all. The meeting closed by repeating the Mizpah. A home-cooking sale was held after the meeting by Mrs. Kelly's Group and readily disposed of.

Obituary

MRS. G. R. JENNINGS (Brighton)

A highly esteemed resident of Brighton passed away at the Belleville General Hospital, Thursday afternoon, March 7th., in the person of Mrs. G. R. Jennings. She had been in failing health for some time. Possessing many fine qualities of character her death will be regretted by many friends.

MRS. M. DENYES

On Sunday, March the third, as the bells in the steeples were calling worshippers to the morning services, Mrs. M. Denyes of 74 Catherine street, left her earthly home for a heavenly home. After an illness of more than two months she heard and gladly responded to her Master's call and went to be forever with the Lord.

Two days later a large gathering of relatives and friends from near and far completely filled the large home and devoutly participated in the memorial service conducted by Revs. R. E. Newman, her pastor and J. D. P. Knox.

The hymn "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung very feelingly. Mr. Newman offered prayer when all present were profoundly moved and heaven was very near.

Mr. Knox spoke from the words, "And there was no more sea," found in Revelations XXI: 1.

The burial took place in Jones' Cemetery near to the home of her childhood and beside her husband Mr. Jay B. Denyes who predeceased her in 1911. Soon after her husband's death, Mrs. Denyes took up residence in Belleville, where she continued to reside until the Master sent for her to occupy the mansion, he had said that He would prepare for her. Her passing touched a tender chord in many hearts.

She leaves two sons, Percy C., of Campbellford and Otho R. of Belleville; also five sisters and one brother, Mrs. Sills and Mrs. Lloyd of Toronto; Miss May Casey of this city; Miss Annie Casey of Chicago; Mrs. L. Ward of Sidney and Mr. H. Casey of Thurlow. —(Communicated.)

SPORTS NIGHT AT CURLING RINK

Completing a successful season of hockey the players and their parents of the bantam and midget series of the local Ki-Y Hockey League enjoyed a gala "sports night" at the curling rink last night. All-star hockey matches, figure skating by the members of the Quinte Skating Club, pleasure skating and an hour's social evening was enjoyed. Secretary J. E. Shortt having arranged the complete program.

The evening's programme opened early with a bantam hockey match the result of which the group champions of the year the "Y" Preps were defeated by an all-star team picked from the remaining clubs composing the loop, by the score of one to nil. A similar set-up was presented by the midget group when the S.E.A.C. defeated the "Stars" 2 to 0, the group champion O.S.D. team being unable to be present.

Following the hockey games, at which were presented the players of all teams composing the Ki-Y League, their parents and friends, the Quinte Skating Club, under the direction of Stan Wilbur, gave a delightful half hour's program of fancy and figure skating, pleasure skating for all and refreshments followed to terminate the most successful Ki-Y League ever operated in Belleville.

The line-ups of the hockey teams:

Bantams — "Y" Preps — Oakton, Blaker, Kerr, Graham; Weller; Illsey; Lyle and Jones. "All-stars"—Hayes; Asseltine; Herrington; Cooper; Wiggins; Stoble; Goyer and Kerr. Referee—Clare Ridley Midget—S.E.A.C.—Martin; Samain; Storms; Christie; Stone and Asseltine. "Stars"—High; Graham; Warren; Peets; Mansfield and Semark. Referee—Stan Wilbur.

REPUDIATION OF POWER CONTRACTS NOT ENTERTAINED

Hon. T. B. McQuesten Joins in Hydro Debate

PLIABLE COMMISSION

Charges Contracts Aid to Party Funds in His Address

Toronto, March 8 (CP)— With allegations that political rather than economic aims actuated negotiations of power purchase contracts by former Ontario governments with Quebec Power Companies the lengthy Hydro debate in the Provincial Legislature entered new phase today.

After two weeks of almost continual discussion of Hydro subjects the members, however, had a respite until Tuesday, when the debate resumes. Today business of the legislature concerns public bills.

Second cabinet member on the Hydro Electric Power Commission to attack administration of Hydro affairs by former Conservative governments, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, last night declared negotiations of the contracts "was not to assure power to the people of Ontario but was to make good political obligations."

At the same time Mr. McQuesten, making his maiden address in the legislature, indicated the government contemplates no repudiation of the contracts.

Serious Consequences

"We don't want to hear any more lectures about repudiation from the opposition," Mr. McQuesten said. "We have no thought about that. We will wait for the people to say—after they have had all the information on the situation."

Speaking before Mr. McQuesten, George H. Challies (Cons. Grenville-Dundas) had warned the government repudiation would bring serious consequences.

Diversion of the Throne Speech debate to a discussion of Hydro matters came more than a week ago, when Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck, also a member of the Hydro Commission, devoted three days to a review of the Hydro situation.

Another Hydro speech came before adjournment of the House last night when Arthur Ellis (Cons. Ottawa South) attacked the government for appointing cabinet ministers to the Hydro Commission, scored the dismissal of P. D. Ross from the Ottawa Commission and reviewed policies of Sir Adam Beck.

Charging a "volte face" from Sir Adam Beck's policy of not purchasing imported power, Mr. McQuesten reviewed the various power contracts later negotiated.

Attacking former Premier G. Howard Ferguson for his connection with the various contracts, he Miniser said he signed he James MacLaren contract in 1930 before he went to England "because of an earlier pledge."

Further assailing the former Conservative Premier, he charged "suppression" of the suplementary Gatineau agreements in 1926 was 'nothing short of criminal.'"

KING OBJECTS TO INFRACTIONS OF INSURANCE BILL

After Argument Clause Held Over For Consideration

NO SLIDING SCALE

Sir George Perley in Charge Due to Illness of Premier

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—A clause in the government's Unemployment Insurance Bill, which would empower the proposed Insurance Commission to prescribe penalties for infraction of its regulations drew vigorous objection from Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal Leader, yesterday. Claiming it would delegate the power of parliament to an irresponsible body and place liberty of Canadian citizens in jeopardy. Mr. King induced Sir George Perley, acting Prime Minister, to hold the clause over for further consideration.

The House of Commons made progress yesterday in passing the few sections of the bill remaining through the committee stage. It sat only in the afternoon. Today it will return to the task and possibly take up the eight-hour day bill.

Mr. King argued no commissions should have power to prescribe a jail term for any offence. Neither should it have power to define offences. This was delegating law-making power to parliament. He said the same objections had been made to the marketing bill last session but without avail.

Before discussion of the bill ends Sir George promised to give a statement of the government's reasons for excluding certain groups of workers from scope of the insurance scheme. J. S. Woodsworth (Labor Winnipeg North Centre) said he had requests from various labor organizations as to reasons for this phase of the bill.

An attempt to incorporate a sliding scale of premiums in the scheme failed. It would apply to men, who had steady work over a period of years and would draw no benefits from the fund.

Sir George, who took over the bill when Premier R. B. Bennett had a setback yesterday and returned to his sick bed, said he could not accept the principle of graduated premiums suggested by Joseph Bradette (Lib. North Temiskaming) and approved by E. J. Garland (UFA, Bow River).

Premium Scale Refused

Several minor amendments were incorporated including one to abolish appeals to the exchequer court from decisions of the commission. It was thought it would stop possibilities of passing the buck between the commission and the courts.

The sliding scale of premiums was suggested by the Northern Ontario member to be applied to workmen, who paid into the fund for years and never drew compensations. Under his proposal a man, who paid in steadily for five years would have his contributions cut 20 per cent a year until a minimum of five cents a week was reached.

Sir George agreed with Humphrey Mitchell (Lab. Hamilton East) it was impossible to say, what class of workmen would have steady work a period of years. The Laborite referred to stone cutters, whose jobs had been abolished by machines.

A long discussion took place on a clause giving the insured employe a right to sue an employer, who failed to make contributions under the Act and recover from him the amount of benefit he had been deprived of. A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni), Hon. Ian Mackenzie (Lib. Vancouver Centre), E. J. Garland (UFA, Bow River), and C. G. Power (Lib. Quebec East) urged the responsibility for such collections should rest with the insurance commission and not with individual employee. They also said the insured employee should not lose any benefits by reason of failure of his employer to make contributions. Sir George agreed to hold the section for further consideration.

BILL TO PROVIDE FUNDS FOR BANDS

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—Col. F. Fraser Hunter, (Lib. Toronto St. Patrick) has a bill before the Ontario Legislature to provide support for bands in Ontario municipalities.

The measure proposes municipal councils, on receipt of a petition for 10 percent of the ratepayers qualified to vote on money bills, shall order a vote at the following municipal election to decide whether a tax shall be levied for support of a band.

If the question carries the bill provides the council must levy the tax and continue to do so until the Act is cancelled by a similar process of voting.

The tax necessary for support of a band would be from one quarter to one half mill, Col. Hunter estimated.

"It is a cultural measure," he said, designed to develop the musical instincts of the people. In the United States hundreds of municipalities have adopted the system.

RESIDENTS OF ATHENS MOVE OUT

Alarmed at Prospect of Bombardment of Ancient Capital

(Copyright 1935, By The Associated Press)

Athens, March 8.—Residents of Athens, alarmed at the prospect of a rebel bombardment of Greece's ancient capital, flocked today to the comparative safety of outlying districts.

Every available piece of artillery was mounted on the ramparts of Piraeus, the city's seaport, to repel the expected attack.

Apprehensoin approaching terror gripped the populace despite the Government's assurances there was "nothing to be feared."

The exodus from the city started at dawn. Families streaming towards the suburbs carrying basket lunches.

The Athenians' concern was occasioned by reports Admiral Deametichas, commanding the little insurgent fleet, had delivered an ultimatum to the Greek Government he would shell the city unless Premier Penayoti Tsaldaris resigned and delivered the reins of Government into the hands of former Premier Eleutherios Constantine Venizelos.

Reports from Eastern Macedonia that heavy snowfall is still impeding the advance of the Loyalist Troops' heavy artillery dashed the Government's hopes that General George Kondylis would start immediately to crush the insurgents' land forces.

The bitter weather was said to be causing acute suffering among the ill-clad troops, most of whom were hastily thrust into whatever uniforms were available.

The commander of the Government troops estimated the rebel forces pitted against him number only 6,000 compared with his 80,000. The generalissimo asserted flatly he could capture Kavalla, rebel stronghold, "within 48 hours". The fall of Kavalla, he said, would deal a serious blow to the insurrectionists.

52ND ANNIVERSARY HELD AT MISSION

Dundas Street Congregation Enjoy Special Sermon on Occasion

The fifty-second anniversary of The Dundas St. Mission was held March the third and fifth. Last Sunday, March the third, the Rev. R. E. Newman delivered a soul stirring evangelistic address at three p.m. much appreciated by Sunday School scholars, parents, teachers and adult members of the congregation present. The speaker of the evening was Rev. B. Howard, principal of Albert College, who brought a unique, captivating practical message in which he translated Christian principles into the lives, the needs and demands of our present day. The singing of the day was most inspirational and many old favorites such as "The Glory Song" and "Pentecostal Song" and others were much enjoyed. Mr. E. A. Ridley, Mr. D. Palmer and sons, Mrs. J. Donaldson, Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth participated in the musical program of the day.

The annual supper on Tuesday evening when every Sunday School pupil—the inmates of The Home for the Aged and other needy ones were treated to a free supper and program—was a fine spread, well-sustained and patronized reflecting much credit upon the generosity and efficiency of the ladies of the Mission and of other churches contributing.

The Rev. Enos Farnsworth presided in his usual happy and unique manner and the following program was rendered:—

Opening chorus—"Make Somebody Happy today"; Prayer, Rev. R. E. Newman; Reading, Miss Helen Brown; Chairman's Address; Solo, Mrs. Hagerman; Reading, Mrs. Cordes; Duett, Palmer, Ridley; Address, Rev. I. B. Naylor; Quartette West Belleville friends; Reading Miss Helen Brown; Quartette, Kingston Road friends; Reading, Mrs. Cordes; Solo, E. A. Ridley; Duett, Mrs. Denton and Mrs. Moynes; Solo, Mr. Cordes; Reading, Mrs. W. Deline. Pastor's remarks and announcements.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

MUNICIPAL OBLIGATIONS

"Every taxpayer in Canada is directly affected by the ill-advised efforts being made to arbitrarily reduce municipal debt charges. Every policy holder in a Canadian insurance company, every depositor with a Canadian chartered bank and every investor with a Canadian Government or municipal bond will suffer some loss unless very definite action is taken to counteract the effect that has been created in London and New York by the blatant statements of a few demagogues with axes to grind and some well-meaning but ill-informed municipal officials."

These words are taken from Financial Times of a recent issue, which points out that Canada has always gone to London or New York to secure funds and it is thought that ultimately Canada will have to go back to these markets for money and to do so it is necessary that credit be maintained. Reference of course is made to the Vancouver situation, to Montreal's financial problem and the difficulties of the defaulting municipalities in Ontario. The taxpayer, policy holder and bank depositor suffer loss if bond prices are depressed and cerdit is injured abroad.

Of the debenture debt of $1,300,000,000 of Canadian municipalities, it is estimated that $325,000,000 is held by trusts for estates and as security for deposits with trust and loan companies. $275,000,000 is held by insurance companies, according to Thomas Bradshaw of Toronto, and $100,000,000 is held by fraternal benefit societies, fire and casualty companies. Funds for pensions, accident and sick benefits contain $50,000,000 of municipal debentures and charitable institutions hold $60,000,000. Banks carry 90 millions of municipal debentures as part of their liquid assets securing depositors, and private investors and institutions abroad have 200 millions. Municipal sinking funds hold 200 millions of these debentures bought with taxpayers' money to redeem their own obligations.

"As an Anglo-Saxon nation Canadians will continue to uphold the sanctity of contracts. If adjustment becomes necessary creditors and debtors can and will come to an equitable agreement," says the Times.

Belleville like other municipalities has debentures in the city sinking fund. Fortunately only a small number of these are for municipalities which are defaulting. More fortunately still, the debentures are extended so that in no period can there be a heavy defaulting and by the time that some of the debentures fall due there is likely to have been a correction of the conditions which have brought about the defaulting.

Throughout Canada there has been a strong feeling expressed in this matter of default—a feeling which will no doubt act as a corrective to the first thoughts of some persons.

ART INTEREST GROWS

A deeper public interest in the arts has been the aim of the National Gallery at Ottawa during the past twenty years, says the annual report of the trustees and it can now be recorded that the public teaching of art is beginning to be realized as a major instead of a minor responsibility in Canada."

Satisfactory progress in the arts in Canada has been shown despite restrictions of this age, from the standpoint of public interest. "New foundations have been laid, projects beneficial to the whole field of Canadian arts and sciences have been placed in operation. One of the few valuable fruits of the recent restriction of material things, disorganization of customary interests and pleasures, has been to turn the public mind towards the more enduring interests of life. The arts begin to come into their own to some extent and many people lacking definite remunerative occupation turn towards them, frequently with the most surprising and permanent results, in the discovery of talents and abilities hitherto unexpected and henceforth all-engrossing and both individually and nationally valuable."

Accessions during the year included "The Mocking of Christ" by Gerard Van Honthorst (1590-1656) and "Job in His Misery" by the Dutch painter Jan Lievens (1607-1672) the gift of the National Art-Collections Fund of Great Britain. A large number of prints and drawings have been purchased.

Exhibitions were features, two important exhibitions of single pictures being those of Titian's "Venus and the Lute Player" and Rembrandt's "The Baptism of the Eunuch."

Among the places holding exhibitions were Cornwall, Fort William, Guelph, Orillia, Port Hope, Smith's Falls, in addition to the leading cities of Canada.

RELIEF PUBLICITY

Brampton may publish the names of relief recipients in the local press weekly with the amounts of the relief they receive, in an effort to cut down the expenditure total.

Persons who are on relief and do not deserve assistance should receive all the publicity and notoriety it is possible to give them.

But the rule must be impartial. To publish one name means that all names would have to be published and that would not be just for those who can do nothing else but go on relief should be protected from undesirable publicity. Enough of it is given as it is when they have to submit to investigation and present vouchers.

If there should be persons on relief who should not be securing assistance, there is a possibility that publication of names and the amounts of relief might deter them from remaining on the list, but then there is a possibility that it might not.

It would be more likely that there are some deserving persons who to avoid publicity might go without essential food and fuel and so do themselves and their families an injustice.

It is of course the duty of municipalities to keep the total of relief down as the burden which falls on those who can pay is very heavy and as the load is shared by the province and the Dominion wtih the municipality. Accordingly the municipality investigates every case and is protected against waste.

Publication scarcely seems feasible as it might work hardship on some who are really deserving and do not want their plight generally known.

ATTACK RELIGION

Perhaps the most significant statement in the highly significant speech of Baroness de Rueck, to members of the Lodge of the Ancient Lnadmarks at the Masonic Temple in Hamilton recently, was this: "I read a survey of Canada by the Third Internationale that said this country was hard to approach because it was standing the economic pressure very well. This survey said, however, that the country could be approached through atheism! They have proceeded to do so." This remark was followed up with proofs that the sinister effort is not without results. As usual, it is through the young that this blasting propaganda is being spread; but, to their shame be it said, there are thousands of adults, self-blinded Canadian citizens, who are energetically assisting in the campaign. What is the plan of attack by the assembled forces of atheism? One of their most telling arguments is that "the Christians preach what they don't practise." Even if that were true, it does not in the least condemn Christianity, but only the imperfect conception and observance of it by its professors. The atheistic appeal is obviously specious, but people who are discouraged by poverty and a sense of injustice, through failure to secure for themselves a self-respecting livelihood, are not over-concerned about the niceties of dialectics. They are apt to pay more attention to example than to precept. But, if we analyze the charge, we will find that in so far as Christians have lived up to their doctrine, the world has been blessed beyond estimation. Let them call it what they will, whatever is good in the Soviet system is based on Christian ethics. Without God there can be no humanity. The baroness was not disposed to exonerate Christians entirely—either the churches or their congregations—from charges of hyocrisy and indifference.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE SANCTITY OF CONTRACTS

Premier Pattullo says that Mayor McGeer's proposal regarding refunding of municipal bonds is hurting the credit of the province. That is too bad, and we use that expression not in dissent or derision. We well know that, under the old system a contract has been sacred and that a promise to repay borrowed money was just that—inviolate. But, no matter what may be said about contracts and their sanctity, the fact remains that they can only be paid if there is money with which to pay them. In the case of municipals, they can be kept sweet just as long as taxpayers provide the wherewithal, but no longer.—Vancouver Sun.

VALUE OF RETAIL SALES IN JANUARY

The index of the value of retail sales stands at 61.2 for January, according to figures compiled by the Dominon Bureau of Statistics, January 1929 equalling 100, an increase of nearly 1 per cent over the 60.6 recorded for January, 1934. Comparing December 1934, and January 1935, all index numbers showed a decline due to seasonal influences, January always showing a decline from the high level of Christmas activity. The general index fell from 99.5 to 61.2.

Comparing January 1935 with January 1934 index numbers were higher this year for six groups, four showed declines and one remained unchanged. Sales of boots and shoes rose from 49.2 to 52.0; drugs from 75.3 to 79.2; furniture from 34.0 to 36.5; groceries and meats from 74.7 to 76.0; hardware from 49.8 to 56.3 and music and radio from 20.1 to 25.9. Candy sales fell from 56.1 to 40.7; clothing from 55.1 to 53.5; dyers and cleaners from 76.5 to 69.3 and restaurants from 53.2 to 52.9. The general and departmental index remained unchanged at 55.1.—Bureau of Statistics.

THROUGH MAYTIME MEADOWS

So many love the night, you loved day's breaking,
So many choose bold autumn, you chose spring;
For you, no other charm like morn's awaking,
Each April grass-blade was a welcome thing.
The glow of dawning blossomed where you entered
And through your glance shone springtime, fresh and bright;
Though something starry in your being centered,
It was as stars of morning, not of night.

Life sometimes wears unlovely, harsh disguises;
But you, even so, found secret beauty there;
Now, where you rove in fields past our surmises,
All must be glad like spring, like sunrise fair.
Somewhere you are through Maytime meadows straying,
The glory of the dawn about you playing.

DESPATCH FROM LONDON, ENGLAND published in the First Column of the Front Page of this gfj recently, states that drinking milk within two hours after eating meat is highly detrimental to the digestive system. This was determined by a conference of British medical men. The conference praised the ancient Jewish law prohibiting such a combination, it is stated. This is just another proof that the folks that read the newspapers, particularly this g.f.j. get many useful pointers on how to live a long, happy and useful life and keep their machinery and mental power keyed up to the highest pitch. We might say more but modesty overcomes us and puts the brakes on our loquacity, so lest we get inebriated by the exuberance of our own verbosity, as Disraeli once said, it were far better to stop short of a calamity. ABYSSINIA OR ETHIOPIA is a land with a history, a kingdom with pride—surrounded by the colonial empires of other nations and always in danger of getting into a war with any one of half a dozen nations or all of them because of proximity and conflicting interests. Abyssinia never dodges a fight and her warriors love a fight, hence the present threat from Italy does not scare King Haile Silassie green, or pink or yellow. He still retains his conventional ebony color and will be waiting if and when the Duce's troops invade his domains. King Silassie comes from the royal family of Menelik, a family that traces back to the Queen of Sheba and her visit to Solomon, two rich and gorgeous monarchs who found much in common and lavished magnificent gifts upon one another. King Solomon had one thousand wives and every one of them was jealous of the Queen of Sheba, so it is presumed that the latter cut her visit short lest her very life be cut short and hurried back to her beloved deserts and mountains of Ethiopia. In the fulness of time she died and was succeeded by her son who became King Menelik, whom the court gossips said was a son of Solomon. In any event he had the wisdom of a Solomon and a long line of descendants preserved the royal strain at concert pitch, a high grade of intelligence, courage and fair mindedness. Italy once before had an argument with Abyssinia and rather regretted it ever since. Some folks think that this gesture is for the purpose of revenge for the aforementioned reverse.

A small boy came hurriedly down the street, and halted breathlessly in front of a stranger who was walking in the same direction.

"Have you lost half a dollar?" he asked.

"Yes, I believe I have!" said the stranger, feeling in his pocket. "Have you found one?"

"Oh, no," said the boy. "I just want to find out how many have been lost today. Yours makes 55."

During a lesson in "Hygiene" in a school the teacher pointed out how dangerous was the habit of spitting. "One of the first rules of hygiene is, therefore: Do not spit. Can anyone give me another important rule?"

"Yes, Teacher," replied a small girl. "Keep off the grass."

BROKE HER LEG AGAINST A STAIR

Whilst Hampered by Rheumatism

"Two years ago," writes a woman, "I was suffering with rheumatism in my legs, and when walking upstairs one day just kicked my right foot against the stairs, and broke my leg just below the knee. I was in hospital for four months, and when I came out someone advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and now I have no trace of rheumatism. I would not be without my daily dose of Kruschen, which I take every morning—half a teaspoonful in warm water."—Mrs. P.B.

The six salts in Kruschen stimulate the liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action; assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of rheumatic pains. When poisonous uric acid goes—with its deposits of needle-pointed crystals—there's no doubt about those aches and pains going too!

KEEP A STIFF UPPER LIP IF DISCOURAGED

Proper Mental Attitude Surmounts Many Misfortunes

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

No matter what misfortune or unhappiness may befall you, never allow yourself to become discouraged. For your mind possesses tremendous possibilities which can be drawn upon to overcome your handicaps. Indeed, no disadvantage, no matter what it may be, is unsurmountable!

Old age is no barrier—Cato learned Greek at eighty! A physical defect cannot hold you back—remember how Demosthenes, curing his stammering with pebbles, became an orator whose fame has lasted through the ages.

Illness should not discourage you—Robert Louis Stevenson had tuberculosis; Charles Lamb and his sister, Mary, suffered repeated attacks of mental derangement; Florence Nightingale, the immortal nurse, admitted that she did her best organization work while bedridden.

Poverty and lack of education can be overcome — Spinoza, Johnson, Rousseau and Goldsmith conquered them. In modern America one hears of similar cases every day.

Nothing should or can stop you. No matter what you are now, no matter what you have been—even if definite impediment exists, such as I have mentioned—there is still no overwhelming reason that would prevent you from forging ahead to conquer your handicaps.

But do not make the common mistake of looking outside yourself for help. All the help you need, more than you need, lies within yourself. Don't wait for mere chance influence or inspiration. Start right now to unearth those hidden abilities of yours without depending on the vagaries of circumstance.

The vast majority does not realize how much they can do for themselves, how comparatively easy it is to achieve the joy of living.

Sit down to an earnest, courageous, fearless, heart-to-heart talk with yourself. Be frank. Don't gloss over the truth. Write down all your faults without making excuses. If you do that honestly and carefully, you already will have taken the first big step toward releasing your mental capacities.

First remove the dead wood of your faults and mistakes. Clear the ground of the underbrush that hampers your progress. Write down every asset and ability you may possess!

Conscientiousness, ambition, energy, kindness, perseverance, loyalty, love of wife, family and home—these are the personality attributes worthy of record.

Think about them! Emphasize them by every possible means! In a few days you will find yourself changing. You will be surprised to see your viewpoint and outlook become brighter and more hopeful. Your ego will mount. You will begin to feel more sure of yourself.

And when that happens, the buried and hidden powers will come to the fore with a rush. You will find your concentration improving, your work absorbing and your imagination accomplishing that which is your rightful due.

Therefore, I repeat, never be discouraged. Who know what wonderful things the future may hold in store?

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Although many people are afraid to eat shell-fish, the truth of the matter is that these foods are quite wholesome and readily digestible for most people. For instance, oysters are digested as quickly as beef, while crabs and lobsters take as long as pork. However, absolute freshness of shellfish should always be of paramount importance.

Laguardia May Ban Hurdy-Gurdy

New York, March 8—(CP)—The passing from the New York scene of the hurdy-gurdy which for more than a half-century has been a sure harbinger of Spring seemed just around the corner today.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, the city's first Italian-American mayor and the son of an army bandmaster, issued an order to the License Bureau no more permits for the operation of street organs were to be handed out.

The mayor felt the city should not exact license fees from men who depended upon begging for their existence and said he would hurn the whole hand-organ industry over to the Department of Public Welfare for investigation.

EXPERT DEFENDS ARMS WHITE PAPER PEACE PACT BEST

Says Cold Realities of Situation Must be Forced

GERMANY REFERRED TO

Collective Peace System Gives Greater Security Than Arms He States

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Swindon, England, March 7 (CP Cable)—"We must have some regard for the cold realities of the present situation," declared Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal and the Cabinet's disarmament expert, in a speech here this afternoon in which he warmly defended the now famous Government white paper on armaments.

This document initialled by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald accompanied the increased defence estimates and among other things explained them by saying that if German re-armament continued "unabated and uncontrolled" a situation would develop in which peace would be imperilled. It was promptly followed by Berlin's postponement of Anglo-German security talks scheduled for this week-end.

Mr. Eden opened with a sentence of regret over Adolf Hitler's indisposition, given by Berlin as the reason for postponing the visit of Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, and Mr. Eden. This was the only direct reference he made to Germany.

He then plunged immediately into the international situation.

Peace System Best

.."In my view," he said, "there is no security in armaments comparable with that which can be derived from the effective working of a collective peace system."

"The foreign policy of His Majesty's Government is unalterably based upon the League of Nations as being the most effective mechanism yet devised to operate such a system.

"It will, I am confident, be clear to any impartial critic upon examination that the moderate measures of national defence provided for do not constitute in themselves any departure from that policy.

"Our devotion to the League and to the collective peace system has many times been demonstrated in recent history."

Spirit of Peace Needed

"But," Mr. Eden continued, "we must have some regard to the cold realities of the present situation. I myself hold that peace cannot be fully assured on earth until all nations are not only members of the League but are inspired in their national policy with the spirit of the League covenant.

"Unfortunately actively membership in the League is by no means complete.

Howard D. Graham is Elected Head Trenton Conservatives

Defeats Eben James, Holder of Office For 15 Years

Trenton, March 7 (Special)—The Orange Hall was filled to capacity last night for the election of officers of the Trenton Conservative Association. W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P., was in the chair for the ballotting. Four names were nominated, Eben James, Howard D. Graham, K.C., Ed A. Simmons and William House. The latter declined to enter the race. On the first ballott, Eben James was eliminated. The second saw H. D. Graham elected for the office of President. Mr. James had headed the Trenton Conservatives for over fifteen years. Mr. Simmons was elected 1st Vice-President and Mr. N. J. McNair and William House as 2nd and 3rd Vice-Presidents. Harold McClung was returned to the treasurer's office and Reg. M. Armstrong re-elected to the secretary's position. W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P. and W. E. Tummon were chosen as honorary presidents of the association.

On the advice of the newly-elected President it was decided to hold separate ward meetings for the election of ward chairmen. It was unanimously decided to write the Prime Minister at Ottawa expressing the fact that Trenton Conservatives were solidly behind his New Deal.

The new President promised his time in reorganizing the Trenton Conservative Association in order to elect the candidate and the return of the Bennett Government at Ottawa. He extended his appreciation to Eben James, the former president. The speaker realized that a hard battle was ahead and he told the meeting that the opposition had chosen a good man to contest this riding. Mr. Graham said, "It will be our business to have meetings and place facts before the people."

Mr. N. J. McNair, in a few words gave his opinion that we must return Prime Minister Bennett and uphold his policy if we want prosperity. He warned those present, that if the government fell we would see much harder times than at present.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Admits Running Away

A big kidnap story fell through last night after William Luckin, aged 15, son of Edward Luckin, 286 Princess Street, Kingston, well-known chain butcher store owner, confessed to the local police that he ran away from home as he was costing his parents too much money for his education.

The lad made his way to the police station early last night and told the officer on duty, that he had been kidnapped as he was going to school yesterday noon. All he remembered was that a man threw a blanket over his head and put him in a large black car. The next he knew of was when he awakened on the side of the road near Trenton. He made his way into town to Amodeo's fruit store on Front Street where he phoned his parents in Kingston. He then went to the police and told his kidnap story. He was in earnest and not till after an hour did he admit that he ran away. He attends a private school in Kingston. His parents called later and took the boy back home.

Rhythm Club Sponsor Dance

Another successful dance, sponsored by the Rhythm Club, was held on Tuesday evening in the I.O.O.F. hall on Front Street. The music was supplied by Geo. Mawson and his Blue Rhythm Band and was enjoyed by the large crowd present.

Elmer Bonter, one of the founders of the club, acted as master of ceremonies. The dance committee was composed of Jack Cooke, Dave Reid and Hugh Blair. Ormy Anderson won the door prize and Miss Mildred Reynolds won the novelty dance prize.

Another Canadian actress to score a brilliant succes in London is Miss Elaine Wodson, of Toronto. Miss Wodson's most recent triumph is "Happy and Glorious" which has earned her unqualified praise of London critics. There are only two characters in the play, Miss Wodson, and the author, Wilfred Walter.

FULLER TALENT PRESENTS DRAMA

"Wild Ginger" Well Received by Audience at West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon, March 7— On Wednesday evening, March 6th, the drama "Wild Ginger" was presented by the Fuller United Church Dramatic Society in West Huntingdon Church to a very appreciative audience. An excellent cast made the most of its many opportunities in this splendid comedy-drama.

The Story

"Wild Ginger" tells the story of the Tallman family, Mr. Tallman who believes the possession of wealth or money means everything in life. So he builds his home for his young attractive wife out of cast off material on a city dump heap and lays by every dollar he can secure. They have no comforts not even the necessities of life. The wife becomes discouraged and disgusted with Mr. Tallman and after the birth of their daughter, she leaves him, but leaves a message that if he ever reforms she will come back to him and his child and make a home for them.

Mr. Tallman gets along in some way until his daughter, Virginia, is sixteen, a wild uncultured uneducated young woman. Into this unhappy situation comes Miss Rachel Lee, a cultured refined lady who befriends Virginia and encourages her to rise above her surrounding and be a woman who lives her best She is aided in this by Sanford Lakey, a successful businessman who succeeds in showing Mr. Tallman that by his grasping stingy way of living he is estranging himself from his wife and child and all friends and making himself miserable. This makes a strong appeal on Tallman and he turns over a new leaf, buys a comfortable city home, provides for its upkeep, changes his attitude to life, seeks the love of his estranged wife and child, and wins them. The result is a happy home coming and a family tragedy diverted.

The Characters

Frank Palmer as Jake Tallman gives a splendid performance of grasping, selfish, mean old grouch.

Mrs. Palmer takes the part of Virginia or "Wild Ginger" and does so well that the audience moved to smiles or tears as the play advanced under her able acting.

The part of Geoffrey Freeman a likable clean young man and lover of Virginia is taken in a very pleasing manner by Frank Brough.

Herb Burk gave a splendid performance as Sanford Lakey a successful businessman and made all realize "That life's greatest joy is in helping others."

Arthur Brough convulsed the audience with his characterization of Wuzy Walker a would be chiropractor.

The part of Marwood Lakey a spoiled and over indulged youth was splendidly played by George Brough.

While Gordon Mitts appeared in the best of form keeping the Peterson's county store.

Miss Bessie Hollinger as Miss Rachel Lee, appearing as best friend of Virginia, by her perfect poise and natural ladylike carriage holds the admiration of her hearers throughout the play.

Mrs. Gordon Mitts as Miss Stanley performed well as a health nurse.

Mrs. Vain Mitts as Miz Walker by her actions added very much to the fun of the evening.

Miss Mabel Geen as Bonita Lakey played the part of a pretty girl of eighteen, extravagantly dressed and inclined to be snobbish.

The play closed with a pretty scene of Virginia's return home with high honors from college and the reunion of her father and mother in a newly purchased city home.

Between the acts Mrs. Wm. Fitchett sang playing her own accompaniment on the guitar.

PANCAKE SUPPER WELL PATRONIZED

Annual Event is Held in Tweed Opera House

Tweed—The event of the season is the pancake supper, sponsored by the ladies of St. Jame's Anglican Church. On Shrove Tuesday, March 5th, the Opera House, where the supper is usually held, was well filled with those who have learned by experience that they make no mistake in attending this event. The ladies left nothing undone on their part. The tables which were tastefully decorated were loaded down with an abundance of pancakes, salads, meats, pies, cakes and every other good thing. The enviable reputation which the Anglican ladies have established for themselves was further enhanced by the 1935 Pancake Social.

Miss Grace Houston, teacher of the primary room of Tweed Consolidated School was taken suddenly ill at the school on Monday afternoon. A local doctor was summoned and pronounced it acute appendicitis. Miss Houston was taken to Belleville General Hospita where she was operated on on Monday evening. Her condition is reported as satisfactory.

During Miss Houston's enforced absence, which will extend over a period of weeks, Mrs. A. Montgomery will supply for her.

The recent rains have made the sidewalks and streets very slippery Several pedestrians have met the usual fate under such conditions and tumbles have been frequent, though without serious results. Some sand has been spread where most needed and has helped the situation materially.

The following students were elected as members of the Executive of the Senior Literary Society of Tweed High School at a meeting recently held at the school:

President—Dorothy Barnett.
Vice President—Norman Bowers
Secretary—Dorothy Quinn.
Representatives—
Fifth Form—Cecilia Quinn; Kenneth Alexander

Roads Under Water Near Dorchester

London, Ont., Mar. 8—(CP)—The Hamilton road beatween Nilestown and Dorchester is blocked today by flood waters and ice. The Thames river near Dorchester overflowed following the warm weather earlier in the week. For a distance of about 35 rods the Hamilton road west of Dorchester is flooded. In some places the road was four and a half feet under water.

The water was up to the floor of a mill near Dorchester, but this was the only building which was surrounded by the floods.

Mr. A. C. McFee of Ottawa formerly of Belleville, was renewing acquaintances in the city today.

Today the World's Day of Prayer was observed by women of the various churches in the city. The service was held in Holloway Street United Church.

Mrs. H. A. Poste, 17 Dunbar St., was hostess at a delightful bridge and shower last evening in honor of Miss Theda Mott, bride-to-be. Three tables of bridge were in play and the prizes were won by Mrs. Edward Poste, first, and Mrs. Harold Ingram, consolation. The gifts which were of linen were presented in an interesting manner. A gaily decorated parasol with pretty petals, ribbon-edged, was hung from the ceiling and as the guest of honor pulled each ribbon she discovered a dainty present. A delicious lunch was served at the close of the evening.

SOCIETIES

ST. ANDREW'S W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was held in the lecture room of the church on Wednesday afternoon. The President, Mrs. J. Pargey, was in the chair.

The devotional exercises for the day were led by Mrs. Pargey and Mrs. Baird, Mrs. R. Carmichael was in charge of the programme and gave a most stirring talk on the frontier work of the Society, dealing particularly with women workers in Alberta and making special mention of Miss Freda Matthews and her work in the Red Deer district.

Mrs. Baird read the paper prepared by Mrs. George Reid and Miss Reid on "Current Events." This paper whetted the appetite for further information from "Glad Tidings" on the subjects mentioned.

In the business for the afternoon Mrs. Pargey was appointed a delegate to the Provincial meeting in Toronto.

Mrs. Ransom, the Treasurer, reported the allocation for 1935—$380.00.

Mrs. O. J. Reed reported a request for literature for outlying districts. Anyone having magazines to spare, please phone Mrs. Reed, 1883.

The attention of the meeting was called to the prayer meeeting on Friday afternoon, the World Day of Prayer.

The meeting closed with hymn and prayer.

Mrs. E. H. Gundy At 53 Awarded Honors in Music

Brantford, Ont., March 8—(CP)—Convincing evidence of what can be achieved through the medium of diligent study and an unquenchable desire for fulfillment of an ambition, is contained in the announcement that Mrs. Enid H. Gundy, 53-year-old resident of the Village of Scotland, had graduated after 18 months study with honors in both practice and theory (piao) from the Toronto Conservatory of music. She is now entitled to the degree of associate from that institution.

When just a child, Mrs. Gundy commenced taking piano lessons but after a very short time decided to give up the idea of becoming a pianist.

Years passed and it was not until 18 months ago at the age of 53, she cherished a desire to take her place in the realms of music as an exponent of the pianoforte.

How to Fight Bacteria on The Skin

Face, Because It Is Exposed to Elements, Requires Daily Lubrication

(The Beauty Box)

Ruth Peterson

She gives her complexion constant attention.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Bacteria lurks upon the surface of even the cleanest skin. That's why no woman can be too fastidious about her beauty props.

The skin on the body is superior to that on the face and hands because it is protected. The complexion exposed to sunlight, strong winds and atmospheric dust, requires daily lubricating. Dip often into the cold cream jar, give your face a treat.

Don't economize on cosmetics. Buy a good grade powder, use sparingly; won't cost any more than a cheap one used lavishly.

Fashion says, curve a bit if you like, but be reedy in the middle. Waistlines are ever the same old problem. She who has a neat one is entitled to strut a bit, show off her pretty figger.

To snip off a few inches, one must take tucks in tissues and make muscles resilient and strong. This trick is accomplished by cultivating good carriage, holding the tummy flat, lifting the chest. Slouchy posture is responsible for many waistlines that measure more than they should.

Buckle down to hard exercise, the rewards are magnificent. Lift the hands high, straight above the head, touch the floor without bending the knees. Place hands on hips and rotate from side to side. Lie down on the floor, lift and lower the legs slowly. Tuck feet under a piece of heavy furniture, lift and lower the upper portion of the body. Ten minutes night and morning will do the business.

BEULAH W.M.S.

The February meeting of Beulah W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Wood. There was a good attendance, nine members and eight visitors. A quilt was quilted for Mrs. Mitz and one put together for the society for later use. The meeting was called to order by the President and proceeded with a hymn. The scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. Ernest Bateman, after which Mrs. B. Reid led in prayer Mrs. Prest and Mrs. Lovibond gave readings on prayer. The minutes of the previous meeting was read by Mrs. Prest in the absence of the secretary. It was agreed that we make blocks for another quilt. No delegate was appointed to the Presbyterial in Picton. The lesson in the Study Book was prepared by Mrs. Kilpatrick was read by Mrs. Cooney. Watch Tower heralds were heard from Mrs. B. Reid and Mrs. J. Benson read about Dr. Hunter being honoured by the King.

Collection $1.16 was taken. Proceeds of dinner $5.75. Quilting 75 cents. Mrs. Clements closed the meeting with a short prayer.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Finds Cure For Husband Who Was "Mum As An Oyster"

Copyright 1935

Is Silence a New Form of Torture?

I've never thought much about it until a few weeks ago when I received a letter from a woman who told me her husband had not spoken an unnecessary word to her in years. He said "yes" and "no", gave the briefest orders about his requirements, and beyond that practically never opened his mouth except for the admission of food.

This woman told me she felt as if she were losing her mind under this peculiar punitive system. I published her letter and lo! I have received several more from women who tell me their husbands are expert "silencers."

Extracts from two letters follow. The writer of the first letter has lost her nerve from silence treatment. The other, with more spirit, tried a little domestic discipline until the "strong, silent man" begged for mercy. I leave it to you which is better, to "suffer in silence" or to turn the tables.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My husband is simply driving me crazy, because he will not talk to me. If I try to talk, he answers 'yes' or 'no' and goes on with his reading. He never acted this way before we were married. When I beg him to talk to me, he says, "What could I talk to you about"

He never takes me with him when he goes places. If I had money I'd get a divorce, but I haven't any, and I'm not strong. I have among my friends so many who are happily married, and I look at them with envy. I'd do anything to make our marriage a success, but I don't know how to fight this horror.

L. M. P.

The other letter is from a woman who met the situation as follows:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I too was married to one of these 'strong, silent men.' As I earned fifty percent of the family income, the torture was not for me. I got the children to bed early every evening, and invited three or four friends to the house. My husband greeted them as usual, then began to read his evening paper. They had been tipped off before, sat in the same room, and never uttered a word.

"The next evening I invited some of my family who also were congealed in a silence as disconcerting as his own. They did not leave until he went upstairs.

"At meals I never spoke. In pantomine I would hold up a coffee cup and two fingers to ask if he wanted a second cup. I kept the children away from him as much as possible, so that their pleasant chatter might not break the monotony. I went around on tiptoe. When I did speak to someone else, it was in a ghostly whisper.

"At the end of two weeks, my 'strong, silent' mate began to get fidgetty. He'd ask questions. I'd shake my head 'yes' or 'no'. He begged me to be sensible. I pointed to him as my model.

"I kept up the silent treatment until I beat him at his own game. I'll admit it was hard, and it would not have been possible if I had not had my own money. These suggestions may interest wives who have been submitted to the "thunders of silence".

Sassy Wife

Correct Manners

NO JOKING MATTER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I expect to be married soon and jokingly I told my sister "sure" when she asked if she could be my matron of honor, and now she takes it for granted that she should be so honored. My sister is six years older than I am and is married. She, too, is three years older than the groom-to-be. Now it so happens, when we are starting to make our plans, that I want only one attendant, and she to be my girl friend. My boy friend agrees, as his brother who will be best man is only nineteen years of age. My wedding will be a simple church affair. Too, the groom-to-be feels that he cannot afford three bouquets.

As my sister's husband will not be an usher, is it better to tell her in a tactful way about our plans, or should I let her carry out her one hope to be matron of honor? I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I feel that it is my "party" and I should have my wishes fulfilled?

D.

You have two choices open to you; to have your sister your matron of honor, and your friend maid of honor; or to run the very definite risk of hurting your sister's feelings. Since your plans had apparently been made so definitely before your sister asked you about them, that was your opportunity of being direct and honest with her. You "muffed" this opportunity, and now I should think that your sister would indeed be hurt. If you mind her being hurt — and you should — then you should readjust your plans to make up for your indirectness.

It would be very natural for her to expect to be your chief attendant. The fact that she is married, he fact that she is older than you, the fact that she is older than you, best man makes no difference. It was apparently no "joke" to her that you assured her that she was to be your matron of honor.

If I were you, I wouldn't for the world let your sister know that there is any doubt in your mind that she is to be your matron of honor. And have your friend as your maid of honor. And it is you who should buy the bouquets for the attendants....so you can solve that problem easily too.

Regrets — With Flowers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received an invitation from a very dear friend to attend a bridge-luncheon at her home. I shall be unable to attend, but would like your advice. This woman is about twenty years older than I am, and the question is, should I send her flowers for the house or to wear on the day of the luncheon, in addition to sending my original note of regret

S.

I'm delighted with your idea of making this charming and friendly gesture to this friend who invited you to her party..and I am sure that she will be very much touched by your thoughtfulness. Either would be correct .. the flowers for her house, or the corsage for her to wear at the party. The corsage is, of course, more personal.

DINNER AFTER CHURCH

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have asked a young man I have just met to attend church with me and now I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask him to my home for dinner as he also lives in the vicinity of the church? He has never attended the services before, however.

W.

Yes, inviting the young man to your home to dinner after the services would be a gracious and hospitable and thoroughly correct thing for you to do.

Extravagance Of Young Couples

Lack of Good Training in Home Financing Deplored by Expert

By LISA GRENELLE

The Hollanders were a nice young couple, but they just couldn't seem to live within their income. Not that it was such a pitifully small one either, for young married couples. Quite the contrary, Walter Hollander was earning a very respectable salary for a boy only out of college for three years.

Emily wasn't a spoiled girl, either, but very sweet and sensible, apparently, about everything — except money. When it came to finance, Emily just got wuzzier and wuzzier. She was not exactly extravagant, but careless. Buying, for example, a prize dachshund before she figured out where the rent was coming from.

The Hollanders were a nice couple but their marriage went on the rocks, ending with that bitter, shameful ad at the bottom of the help wanted column: "I, Walter Hollander, will no longer be responsible for my wife's debts." And all because Emily couldn't learn to live within her husband's income.

She was a well-educated girl, knew Latin and algebra, but she had never been taught how to keep house, how to spend money wisely and in proportion to needs and means.

Many and many a marriage has had the fate of the Hollanders. Or, if less disastrous, certainly this common incompetence in young wives has caused much grief, much unnecessary friction and many a pitiful quarrel.

Training at Home

Why must we always be forgetting the home we create is the most important of institutions for the purpose of turning out young people adequately trained for their positions in life, with at least enough practical knowledge to defend them against defeat?

We want our daughters to be happy, to marry and live happily ever after, and yet in what way do we train them for marriage? How often do we stop to consider Janie, not as our little girl, but as a potential wife Is she prepared to be a wife—a successful wife Must she learn everything afterward, by trial and error, through tears and tragedy?

Some things she must, of course learn this way. But we can save her so much if we will but think ahead, have the bigness to become detached for a moment, drop the possessive passion, and instead take a compensating pride in turning out into life a capable, and in some respects, even an experienced worker.

Budget-keeping is certainly one thing that a girl can and should know thoroughly before she marries.

ST. PATRICK'S TEA HELD AT ROSLIN

Roslin, March 8—A delightfully arranged St. Patrick's tea was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. E. Welsh when the ladies of the Women's Association of the United Church entertained the members of the Presbyterian W.M.S. and the Anglican Women's Auxiliary.

The spacious rooms were suitably decorated in green and white with bowls of spring flowers.

Over forty ladies were present and enjoyed the following musical programme of which Mrs. H. Chisholm was in charge.

The programme was opened by all joining in singing a hymn and repeating the Lord's prayer. Mrs. H. Welsh gave an interesting talk on the life and work of St. Patrick, this was followed by Irish jokes about twelve ladies taking part.

Miss Lily Ketcheson of Moira then favored with an instrumental selection following this Miss B. Reid sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. G. Burleigh at the piano.

The next number on the programme was a violin and piano duet by Mrs. G. Burleigh and Miss Blanch Reid, after which all joined in singing a hymn. Miss Aletha Howes and Miss Lily Ketcheson gave a piano duet.

Mrs. (Rev.) H. B. Herrington sang a solo "Leave it With Him," accompanied by Miss Mae Lee at the piano. Mrs. H. Welsh and Mrs. G. Burleigh gave a piano duet "The June Bugs Dance."

Mrs. J. Chisholm gave an Irish reading and the programme was concluded with all joining in singing a hymn.

After a delicious lunch was served the girls acting as waiters wearing green and white caps and aprons.

Service was held in the Anglican Church on Ash Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. "Turn ye even to me, saith the Lord, with all your heart, and with fasting and with mourning." was the text chosen by Rev. Beaser for his Ash Wednesday message to his congregation. The hymns sung were in keeping with the Lenten season.

Some from here attended a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Carter on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hart spent Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hart.

Mrs. F. Coulter spent a couple of days recently with her sister, Mrs. W. Gillespie.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McAvoy and family moved on Wednesday to their new home Fourth of Hungerford.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Chisholm and Mrs. J. Chisholm visited relatives near Frankford on Sunday.

Mrs. Thomas Emmons, of Deseronto spent the past week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. Fitchett.

MRS. R. T. PORTER HOSTESS TO W. I.

Thomasburg, March 8—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 28th at the home of Mrs. R. T. Porter. The president, Mrs. C. Jeffery opened the meeting by singing a missionary hymn followed by prayer led by the president. Mrs. W. W. Morton read a portion of Scripture found in the Act of the Apostles chapter 27. The roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture containing the word "Love." The secretary gave her report and several items of business were discussed. A very interesting paper on Missionary Work was given by Mrs. Clarence Mouck and Miss Marguerite Jeffery gave a reading "It Isn't the Church It's You." The meeting was closed by singing a hymn and prayer.

The euchre party under the auspices of the Crescent Rebekah Lodge held in the Oddfellows' Hall on Saturday evening last was a splendid success. Eighteen tables were in progress. At the conclusion of the games a very delicious lunch was served by the members of the lodge. The prizes were won by Mrs. Murney Geen and Mr. Fred Gray while Mrs. Glen Ish won the lucky chair prize.

Mrs. Charles Grills and children have returned home after visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. D. Carney at Roslin.

Mrs. Laura Prentice and friend of Toronto spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrison, Mrs. Harrison and little Miss Betty Burley returned to Toronto with them for a short time.

Miss Alice Heasman, principal of the public school spent the week end at her home Stirling.

A number from here attended the party on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Burley at Moneymore.

Mrs. Harry Kennedy has returned home after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. Badgley at Tweed who is ill.

On Thursday evening Mr. and number of their friends at a progressive euchre party. Nine tables being played, the winners being Miss Olive Kennedy and Mr. Wm. Adams. The hostess served a delicious lunch at the conclusion of the game.

Mr. John Steven made a business trip to Toronto on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morton spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Morton at Moira. Miss Leona Morton returned home with them.

Mr. Ernest Carter of Ottawa, spent Sunday with relatives here.

The Women's Association of Thomasburg United Church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Elliott on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Wells of Chatham has been visiting relatives in this community recently.

Mr. Joseph Chappelle and Mr. Melburne Adams are confined to their homes under the care of Dr. H. E. Welsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg Reid and Douglas of Ivanhoe were week end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Reid.

Sponsored by the ladies of the Women's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church a very successful and enjoyable party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jeffery on Friday evening. During the earlier part of the evening progressive euchre was played. Nineteen tables being in progress. The prize winners were ladies' first, Mrs. Thomas Emerson, consolation Mrs. Ernest Coulter. Gents 1st, Mr. Clarence Jeffery and Mr. Gerald Blakely won the consolation prize. At midnight refreshments were served after which dancing was enjoyed with Bethel orchestra furnishing music. The receipts of the evening were gratifying as over one hundred people were in attendance.

HEALTHY nerves to meet the strains of modern life — nerves which let you sleep soundly at night—are partly the result of one important element in our diet—Vitamin B1. An outstanding nutritional authority has said: "There are hundreds of thousands of border-line cases of nervous maladies that occur because of a deficiency of Vitamin B."

New Food Drink Helps Bring Strong, Steady Nerves

Vip is the delicious, chocolate-flavoured, food drink which contains 27% wheat germ—the vital hearts of wheat. And wheat germ is one of the richest sources of Vitamin B1. No other food or drink you can buy contains as much of this vital element as does Vip. Start now to build a strong nervous system for yourself, your whole family, by making Vip a regular part of your diet. Take it at bed-time, hot, and see how much better you will sleep.

Vip Far More Than A Nerve Food

Vitamin B1 does more than protect the nerves. It promotes appetite, especially in children. If your youngster is finicky about eating, if you yourself lack appetite, Vip will help. The B Vitamins (both found in Vip) promote growth in children, increase the resistance to colds and other infectious diseases, help prevent constipation. More—Vip contains the necessary iron so vital to the building of blood and to prevent that tired, listless feeling which comes from lack of iron in the blood. Ask your doctor about Vip.

★ Every claim for the Vitamin and the iron content of VIP has been proved in laboratories with actual feeding tests, and is certified accurate.
F. A. J. ZEIDLER, Ph.D., F.C.I.C.

Money-Back Guarantee
Start your family on Vip today. Mrs. B. Courtney of Toronto says, "Florence, aged four, was very nervous. She is taking Vip and there is a surprising difference in her." It will cost you nothing if Vip does not satisfy you. If you feel that Vip falls short of our claims, return the unused portion of the tin and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Get Vip from your druggist or grocer.

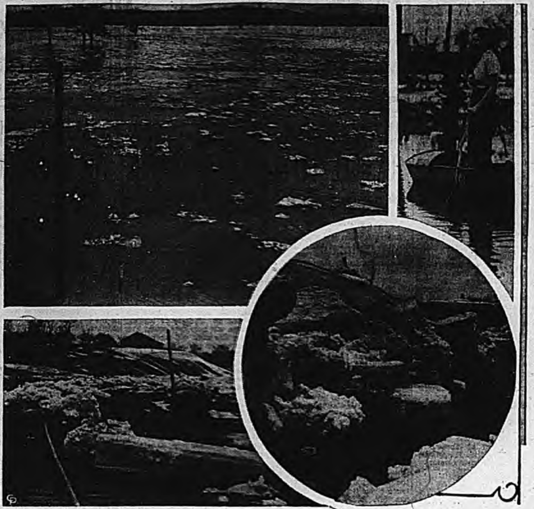
SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO RAVAGED BY STORM AND FLOOD



Coupled with sleet storms, thaws and rains, rivers in southwestern Ontario are on their annual rampage, flooding large districts and doing considerable damage. Pictures show flood scenes on the Grand river (UPPER LEFT). Boats were used on the Etobicoke river near Toronto (UPPER RIGHT). Railway tracks near Blair, Ontario, littered with huge ice blocks (LOWER LEFT). Huge formations of ice pushed back by the Grand river (CIRCLE). No loss of life is reported, although one family was marooned for about three hours.

"The Iron Duke"

George Arliss in Duel of Wits With Duchess

"She is the only real man in the Bourbon family!" Such was the compliment paid to the Duchess of Angouleme by Napoleon. A duel of wits, sarcasm, plot and counterplot between the said Duchess and Mr. George Arliss, in the role of Wellington, takes place in Paris, where the action of "The Iron Duke," Gaumont British dramatic and historical spectacle coming to the Belle Theatre Tomorrow (Saturday) for three days, matinee daily, is transferred after the Allied victory at Waterloo. Gladys Cooper appears in the Duchess' role. Her vivid personality is said to be peculiarly well adapted as a foil for the stern, commanding figure of Mr. Arliss whose portrayal of Wellington shows the latter as a man not insensible to the wiles of womanhood; yet crushing all opposition before him in a palace as relentlessly as he would on the field of battle.

Arliss' Fair Enemy

In the Duchess, however, he finds a worthy foe. Niece of Louis XVIII, proud, lovely, ambitious, imbued with the fanatical belief that Wellington has only aided the Bourbons to the throne of France in order to displace them again when he sees fit, and become king himself, she fights the Duke in the vindictive fashion of "a woman scorned" using the feminine weapons of intrigue, deceit and falsehood mercilessly. It is stated that Mr. Arliss has never been seen to such advantage as in his encounters with Gladys Cooper, as he evades skillfully the attempts to embroil him in a scandal with beautiful Lesley Wareing, who plays the part of Lady Frances Webster.

The conflict between these two notable antagonists is said to be the very acme of polished dramatic warfare. The seeming calm of the great commander, which is but a cloak for the craft of one who would have been as great a courtier as warrior, proved a defense against which the artful assaults of his fair enemy break vainly.

The Woman Who Dared

When Bonaparte began his march toward Paris, the Duchess was in Bordeaux. Instead of sharing the general panic caused by the tidings of his coming, she rose grandly to the occasion by ordering the National Guard of Bordeaux to take up arms and prepare for battle. She did not content herself with issuing orders, however, but visited the barracks where her impassioned address to the soldiers might have resulted in arousing them in defiant action against the aggressor, had that aggressor been anyone else beside the supposedly invincible Napoleon.

This, then was the feminine adversary, who, after the Allied cause had triumphed at Waterloo, was destined to make almost as much trouble in social warfare for Wellington, as the Duke had in battle against the veterans of Napoleon's army. The work of Gladys Cooper in this intriguing role is said to be only secondary in dramatic power and magnetism to that of Mr. George Arliss as the star of the picture.

A special extra attraction on the same program is a film depicting "The Life of a Country Doctor" revealing the life of Doctor M. W. Locke, the famous Williamsburg, Ontario, Miracle Man. This film is crammed with interesting and unusual events in the career of this human benefactor.

"Songs of the Birds" a tuneful Kartune in color, and the Belle Latest News of the World complete a program of exceptional screen entertainment.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Home on the Range"

Zane Grey's Western Fine Vehicle for Jackie Coogan

The man who is considered one of the most eligible young bachelors in Hollywood today was the boy you remember as the pathetic, little, one-gallus waif in Charlie Chaplin's "The Kid," a wistful, appealing little chap who came up to about the first button on Chaplin's vest.

He is Jackie Coogan who deserted the films after he had made eighteen pictures and returns now for his first grown up role in Zane Grey's "Home on the Range," the current attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Now twenty years old, he has grown into a six-foot, broad-shouldered, handsome and athletic young man. And as if that were not enough inducement for Hollywood's younger set beauties, he is the beneficiary of a trust fund of almost a million, built out of his own earnings during his years of child stardom.

In "Home on the Range," Jackie plays the part of the younger of the two Hatfield brothers. These two boys own a ranch and racehorse on a partnership basis. Jackie is all set to ride the horse "Midnight" to win a large purse in a coming race, but the other brother Tom thinks Jackie is inexperienced to ride to win so he hires a professional jockey to ride him. Jackie is broken hearted when he hears this, but his disappointment is soon forgotten when Tom is robbed of a large sum of money needed to payoff the mortgage on their ranch. How the boys fight for their ranch when it is seized by Beady, a gambler who wants control of their race horse, makes a thrilling story involving a huge forest fire and more thrills than could be mentioned in this short space. Supporting Jackie in this picture are Randolph Scott, Evelyn Brent and Fuzzie Knight.

"She Had To Choose"

"A Cup of Coffee, a Sandwich and You." The popular song of a few years ago is virtually the theme of "She Had to Choose," Majestic's most recent production that features Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Isabel Jewell, Sally Blane, Regis Toomey and Fuzzy Knight.

The action of the story takes place around a "drive-in" barbecue that is run by Crabbe. Miss Jewell plays the Texas girl, who arrives in the stand after a period of "forced fasting" and without a home. The Texas training comes in handy when she whips out a gun to placate a couple of gunmen in the act of holding-up the stand and thereafter Crabbe, intrigued, provides shelter, food and a job.

Miss Blane plays a wealthy young miss that likes Crabbe, while Regis Toomey is her brother who provides the reason for the stirring finish of the film.

"TAILSPIN TOMMY"

Exciting New Aviation Serial

Modern airports, the most thrilling and romantic places in today's world, form the backgrounds for Universal's aviation serial "Tailspin Tommy", the 1st chapter of which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre Saturday.

In leading roles are Maurice Murphy, playing "Tommy", Patricia Farr, Noah Berry, Jr., Walter Miller, Grant Withers, John Davidson and William Desmond. There is a supporting cast of 100 players.

Under Louis Friedlander, director the company spent weeks at the Union Air Terminal at Burbank, California, and at several other airports. In addition, the streets of Los Angeles, shore resorts and the open country of the West contribute to the colorful settings.

Practically every phase of air activity plays a part in the serial. Maurice, as "Tommy", carries the airmail and mining payrolls, takes part in national air races and in air circus events, makes parachute jumps, enters a re-fueling contest, and becomes famous when he flies physicians and nurses to a region which has been struck by an earthquake.

"Tailspin Tommy" is based on the famous cartoon strip by Hal Forrest, which is seen each day by 25,000,000 readers.

OBJECTIONS RAISED

Los Angeles, March 8—(AP)—An objection to the $10,000 funeral accorded Marie Dressler has been fyled in probate court here by her sister, Bonita Ganthony of London, England, named as residuary legatee in the film star's will.

Mrs. Ganthony expressed the belief there would be little or nothing left for her unless claims against the estate of the late actress from Cobourg, Ont., were materially reduced. The action further involved the litigated will.

WOMEN, Young or Older

ALL women at some period of their lives need a strengthening tonic like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Read what Mrs. W. Baker of R. R. 6, Cobourg, Ont., said: "I first used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription over thirty years ago before my first baby was born and I still take it. I believe it saved me many, many times from sickness. I have had five children and all were born healthy and strong. And through the 'change of life' I felt so well, I still keep a bottle on hand. I find it wonderful."

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Mar. 8 (CP)—Firmness of the metals, utilities and scattered industrials kept the stock market on a little better than an even keel today. Trading, however, was even duller than in the preceding sessions. Gains of fractions to around a point were shown by U. S. Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine, Dome, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak and Coca Cola. Such issues as Du Pont, General Motors and Santa Fe were about unchanged. Johns-Manville, Union Pacific, General Electric and a number of others eased. The late tone was irregular. Transfers approximated 450,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 8 (CP)—Distillery shares were under selling pressure on the industrial section today and losses up to 1½ were boarded. The general note was a bit soft and trading distinctly slow on the whole.

The disturbance in the liquor group was unexplained. Walkers Common dropped to 27, Distillers to 15¼ and Alcohol "A" to 7¾. These prices were improved a little in the early afternoon.

Massey Harris, the steel issues and the foods were heavy, Page Hersey dropping 1½. The oils also were barely firm.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 8 (CP) — Mining stocks began the day cautiously, sobered by the drop in the London price for gold. Prices drifted down a little in spots on only scattered trading but the early afternoon tone was better. Several penny issues were hoisted on heavy volume, including Stadacona, Greene Stabell, Sullivan, J. M. Consolidated and Chibougamau.

Senior golds continued quiet but the group held narrow gains this afternoon. McWatters and Central Patricia were the fast steppers, both trading in heavy volume at substantial price gains.

Silver and base metal issues pressed forward and Noranda, Castle, Nipissing and Eldorado were all up this afternoon.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Mar. 8 (AP) — The stock market staged another Wall Street crawl today and managed to make a little further headway upstream.

Aside from McIntyre, Dome and Dominion Stores edged a little higher in the Canadian group. Canadian Pacific and International Nickel were down a slight fraction. On the curb, Hiram Walker dropped a point but Lake Shore Mines firmed. Dominion Government 4's were up a trifle at 105½. Canadian funds were ¾ of a cent better at 99 1-16 cents.

Eastman Kodak shares got up 2 points and gainers of major fractions to a point or so included Coca Cola, Continental Can, American Can, Case, Proctor and Gamble, Texas Gulf, American Bank Note, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, McIntyre Porcupine, U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco and Noranda Mines.

Board Room Gossip

Financial News — Koch-Deneff property of Smelters Gold has intersected over 23 ft in width of vein at a depth of 90 ft on the vein recently discovered on the Koch-Deneff property in the Sturgeon River gold field where this deposit was discovered on surface it was found to carry heavy pannings in gold over a length of about 200 ft. So far opened and across a width of 3-7 ft. The official advice by telegraph last night from Jellicoe is that the diamond drill drew over 35 ft. of vein matter and that indicated a true width of 23 ft. 6 in. The official word also contains the information that the vein is highly mineralized, typical of the original high grade showing. The wide deposit lies in the contact and is declared to be striking east. This corresponds with the strike of Dikdik vein from which shipments of 7 carloads of ore graded over 4 ozs. of gold to the ton as an average. H. C. McCrae President of Smelter Gold. and who has been at the property for several days says the diamond core is being rushed out at once for assay.

Bond Market

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—Excitement engendered by the recent attack on power contracts which resulted in a sharp drop in bond prices has about subsided and trade in the Toronto Bond Market today was normal with prices of all grades steady.

Gatineau issues recovered this morning the loss suffered late yesterday but at noon were selling around 90½. Slightly lower than Thursday's best price. Beauharnois and MacLaren-Quebec Power issues were steady. High grade issues were firm with volume of turnover on the small side.

MARIA RASPUTIN TO JOIN CIRCUS

Daughter of Monk, Who Weilded Influence on Russian Court

New York, March 8—(AP)—Maria Rasputin, daughter of the monk who exerted so powerful an influence on the Russian Court until slain by outraged Imperialists, arrived on the liner Bremen today to join the Hagenback-Wallace circus as an animal trainer.

A former cabaret dancer in Paris, Miss Rasputin who is 37, will go at once to the circus headquarters in Peru, Indiana.

"Why am I an animal trainer?" she repeated, speaking French.

"I have two daughters to support. I chose a circus because I have always been an expert horsewoman."

JAIL SENTENCES FOR COAL THEFTS

Robert Johnson and Walter Kellar Each Given Two Months

Robert Johnson and Walter Kellar, both residents of this city were sentenced to serve two months in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. in today's police court after pleading guilty to the theft of coal from the property of the Canadian Fuels Company, Belleville. A woman lookout, who was alleged to have been connected with the coal thieves and pleaded guilty, was given a two years suspended sentence, owing to family relations.

Both Kellar and Johnson had pleaded guilty in a previous court and upon the presentation of their case today Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., asked for the maximum sentence under the law. "This court has tried to be lenient in these cases in the past and has imposed petty sentences, but without avail. When the time comes that coal dealers and railways are losing large sums of money owning to such thefts it is time, that an example was made of some person. I do not ask Your Worship to make an example of these two men, however, but ask the maximum sentence for the crime committed," added Mr. Donnan. Mr. R. D. Arnott, appearing for the accused men pointed out, that both men were on city relief and it was also their first offence. He asked clemency under the prevailing conditions.

Magistrate Butler summed the case up by addressing the accused men before meting out sentence. "Since I have been on the bench there have been repeated complaints relating to the theft of coal from local dealers and the railways to such an extent, that some dealers claim, that there years profits have been absorbed through these petty thefts. Apparently some of this coal is stolen for re-sale, which is a very serious offence. I had intended dealing very severely with you men, but under the circumstances I sentence you to two months in the common jail dating from the date of your arrest," stated His Worship as he clearly pointed out, that this sentence was to be no precedent, as the court would deal much more severely with such cases in the future.

PROVINCE TO PAY TRAFFIC SERVICE

Minister of Welfare Provide Relief For Township

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—A new angle in the Ontario Government cash relief program developed today when Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, approved Scarborough Township program, which includes traffic service for protection of school children.

Mr. Croll said relief recipients stationed at dangerous highway crossings will help save young lives and for the work will receive cash at the regular township wage rate.

The Minister announced approval of the $8,200 works program of Scarborough and the programmes of seven other municipalities. This list involves, a total expenditure of $62,345 with $54,600 going to the unemployed in wages.

Total expenditure on municipal works is now raised to $4,065,256 including a labor cost of $3,035,083 of which the Province pays two-thirds. There are now 83 municipalities, where the cash plan has operated successfully, the Minister said.

The municipalties and labor costs of the projects approved today are Cornwall, $7,000; Carleton Place, $400; Scarboro Township, $8,200; Pinch Township, $3,000; Pelham Township, $5,000; West Oxford Township, $1,000; King $8,000 and Grantham Township, $2,200.

V.O.N. STAFF TO OPERATE ARENA

Reserve Saturday Skating Periods to Raise Funds

Last evening's City League final, was the official closing of the Arena but owing to the fact that the ice is in good condition, the odd hockey game in the offing, it was stated today, that the rink would be opened were reservations made, which could be accomodated. In order to raise funds, the Victorian Order of Nurses have reserved rink, for to-night, Saturday afternoon and evening, when they will admit the public to skate. It is hoped that as many as possible will patronize their skating periods.

The Arena is to be operated completely by the staff of the V.O.N. for all of these skating periods.

Obituary

MRS. FRED H. McLENAGHAN

To many persons in Belleville news of the death of Mrs. Fred H. McLenaghan, which occurred at Ottawa, this Friday, will be received with deep regret.

The late Mrs. Sadie McLenaghan resided in Belleville for some years during the time her husband, the late Fred H. McLenaghan was senior clerk of Customs Excise at this port. Possessing many excellent traits of character she was popular and highly regarded by all who knew her. Since the death of her husband which occurred here a few years ago, Mrs. McLenaghan had made her home in Perth where her mother, Mrs. M. J. Finlay. resides.

Being in ill health Mrs. McLenaghan entered the Royal Ottawa Sanitarium some days ago and underwent a serious operation. She leaves one child, Frederick Holmes McLenaghan.

LOCAL GIRL WAITS FOR OPERATION

lar membrane, that separates the heart and lungs from the digestive organs and through which runs the oesaphagus and blood vessels. Ordinarily the diaphragm remains intact but should an opening be made either from deformity at childbirth or an accident wherein the person is crushed by a heavy weight passing over the chest, then the suction created by the expansion and contraction of the lungs in the act of respiration causes the stomach to be sucked up into the chest cavity through the opening, in much the same way that the inner tube of a tire will protude through break in the casing, to be followed frequently by the spleen and a portion of the intestines. This causes crowding of the lung on the side affected with its eventual collapse and crowding of the heart to one side if the hernia is on the left side. As a result of the displacement, the digestive processes are interfered with to the extent, that little food can be retained in the stomach and even that little is more frequently lost by vomiting than is retained.

To better understand the case we went to the hospital and saw the X-ray showing the deformity and there Dr. Stobie took us to see the little girl. She was walking around the halls and the first impression we had was her frailness of build and her paleness. She was a friendly youngster and she showed no shyness in meeting a stranger as do most children who are normal physically. The doctor pointed out that there was a marked bulging of the chest wall on the left side. This, of course, is due to crowding of the chest cavity by the stomach. (The X-rays showed the stomach to be just a little below the left clavicle and with the heart well over the medium line of the chest). Besides this there is a marked curvature of the spine and one shoulder is at least three inches lower than the other.

In studying the history of her case we learned, that ever since birth she has been hard to feed. At nine months she was in the hospital for four months on account of stomach trouble as she vomited almost continually. Since then she has vomited once or twice a day and she is now eleven years old, and her weight is forty pounds. The left lung is collapsed to make room for the stomach and a portion of the bowel. She has been in the hospital for six weeks and has received two blood transfusions to build up her strength.

From the view point of a layman it would seem, that Dr. Stobie has a care that will test his skill to the fullest extent, for in addition to the unusual nature of the case, the child's general physical condition has to be taken into consideration. The doctor intends to operate within a short time to correct the deformity and we know, that Florence will have many rooters among the citizens of Belleville for her complete recovery to good health. As the case is a most unusual one it is anticipated, that the medical men of the district, as well as the general public, will be keenly interested in the successful outcome of the operation.

Blood Transfusion

Fall River, Mass., March 8—(AP)—A blood transfusion was being considered today for Alyce Jane McHenry—not as an emergency measure, attending physicians pointed out, but to alleviate an anemic condition.

It merely would supplement progress described as "most encouraging".

The condition of the 10-year-old Omaha girl who underwent an operation Monday to correct her "upside-down" stomach, was reported as "satisfactory".

Farm Debts Conference

During the past five years no problem has been more critical or vital to rural people than that of "farm debts." How to live and meet debt payments has been the cause of sleepless nights for many a farmer and his family. Others, thousands of them, through no fault of their own, have had to walk off their farms leaving behind them the savings of a lifetime, sometimes the savings of two or three generations, and face the future poverty-stricken without a means of livelihood and without hope.

When prices fall, debts increase correspondingly in terms of the farmers' product. For example, a debt which would require a certain amount of farm produce to meet it in 1929 would, in 1934, require 72 per cent more to retire the obligation. This calculation is based on official index figures supplied by the Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

Realizing the injustice of such a relationship between debtor and creditor and the impossibility of some farmers being able to meet debt payments under such conditions, the Federal Government passed what is called The Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act. This legislation is designed to deal with the financial difficulties of the farmer. It is intended to provide simple and inexpensive machinery for revising or re-arranging debts between farmers and their creditors. Under this act a debtor might secure an extension of time; he might have his interest rate reduced; he might have his principal reduced, or, he might secure a combination of two or all of those factors.

Why such legislation is necessary; what the act involves; how farmers may proceed for relief from their debts under the act, and other phases of the debt problems are all matters which will be discussed at the Farmers' Conference which is being held in Rednersville, March 14.

The meeting is sponsored by The United Farmers of Ontario and M. P. Graham, Official Receiver for this county will be present to give his explanation of the act and how it works Having already had to deal with many applications, he will have much first-hand knowledge which should be of interest to all farm people.

Is Ramsay MacDonald Nearing End Of His "Reign" as Prime Minister?

Hostility to Once Popular Figure Rises Over "White Paper"

By HARRY LEVIN

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

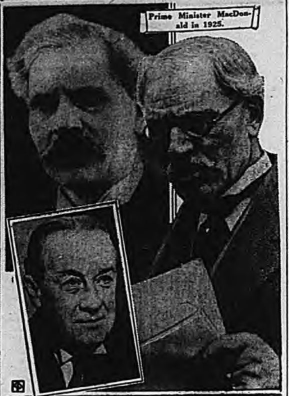
London, March 8— "I'll resign whenever I feel I can no longer pull my full weight in the boat."

Such is the first public avowal of J. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of the National Coalition Cabinet governing England, to the mounting storm of criticism against him arising from Britain's populace.

"Nuisance" and "renegade" are some of the names that have been hurled at him.

The British Labor party has openly accused his now famous "white paper", which blamed German re-armament for England's big increase in army and navy appropriations, as a menace to world peace. They demand its withdrawal.

Termed a renegade by his former Labor party companions whom he left to head the Conservative dominated coalition ministry in 1931, Prime Minister MacDonald finds himself "the politician" nobody wants, and, according to observers, Stanley Baldwin, leader of the British Conservatives, is finding political "marriage" with the silver-haired 68-year-old Scotsman increasingly embarrassing.



Prime Minister MacDonald in 1925.

Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader

MacDonald to-day

Discomfiture Applauded

Several weeks ago, MacDonald, possessor of one of the best platform speaking manners in England, was hooted to silence by jeering listeners when he tried to defend the government's policies. Then, when the heckling audience observed his enraged discomfiture, they proceeded to applaud.

It is a far cry from 1930, when J. Ramsay MacDonald, as Prime Minister of the British Labor government, received unquestioned obedience and respect from the Socialist rank and file.

But for MacDonald, the "Lossiemouth (Scotland) loon," unpopularity is nothing new. Since 1895, when he joined the Labor party and stood for election to parliament on a Socialist platform, MacDonald has felt the roar of public disapproval. His youthful pacifism infuriated an electorate glowing over England's imperialistic victories in the Boer war. Not until 1906 did he win a seat in the House.

Opposing England's participation in the world war, MacDonald resigned from the party when his fellow members "went patriotic". And throughout the remainder of the conflict MacDonald, who passed his time writing, studying and preaching peace was a reviled and harassed man.

Mentioned For Cell in Tower

Even his Socialist friends, who overnight had discarded their peace-loving tendencies, clamored for his "hide". A cell in grim London Tower, where spies were jailed prior to their execution was mentioned as a suitable residence for MacDonald by many.

With the armistice, pacifist MacDonald found himself warmly welcomed, however, in a war-weary world. The Labor party in the 1922 election returned 142 members to parliament, and J. Ramsay MacDonald became the honored leader of "His Majesty's opposition."

And when the Conservative government, led by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin asked Britain to approve its naval expansion in 1923, MacDonald, the pacifist, triumphed to head the first Labor government in England's history.

Paris Company

Since then MacDonald has slowly weaned himself away from the Labor-Socialist ranks. Gossips say he liked the swirl of nobility, the favor of King George, the need for power "at any rate." The names of Lord and Lady Londonderry are prominently mentioned as those now friendly to the Prime Minister.

Thus, in 1931, when the second Labor cabinet found itself face to face with an economic crisis, Prime Minister MacDonald said farewell to his party by forcing an election that virtually wiped it out before the Conservative onslaughts.

This MacDonald, heading a coalition ministry composed of Conservatives, Liberals, and some Laborites who strung along, found himself battling his former followers.

Gradually the Conservative party majority has been using MacDonald as a target to feel out the opposition. And it has been sweet music it is said, for Conservatives like Winston Churchill, to sit in the House and observe MacDonald defend legislation which he in past years had assailed from the opposition benches.

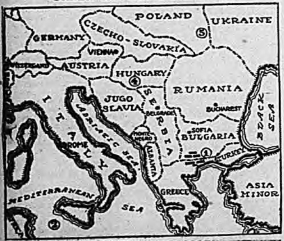
For Military Program Now

Too, MacDonald has had to do a complete about-face in regard to disarmaments. For the once reviled pacifist now informs the world, from the Prime Minister's bench of England's need and plan for expanding its air fleet, building new warships, or assertedly okaying Italy's aggression toward Ethiopia.

Since frequent by-elections in England have indicated that Labor may be victorious at the next general ballot, many Conservatives are demanding MacDonald's ouster. Let Stanley Baldwin, "assistant premier," openly set up a complete Conservative cabinet, since the Conservatives have the votes, they declare.

Therefore, say political observers, MacDonald soon may find himself kicked "upstairs" to the House of Lords and into political oblivion with a peerage.

GREEK REVOLT STIRS EUROPE



Mobilisation of Turkish troops along Greek frontier (1) to repel expected influx of refuges from Greek revolution, is latest danger to European peace to arise. Meanwhile Italy is continuing to rush troops (2) to Africa, despite establishment of neutral zone along controversial Ethiopian frontier; France is sending naval forces (3) to Greece to "protect interests"; (4) New move to restore Hapsburgs to Hungarian throne is agitating Jugoslavia, Roumania and Czechoslovakia; (5) Ukrainian revolt plot affecting Russia and Poland is denounced in Polish parliament.

Shower Festivities

A large gathering of neighbors and friends of East Seymour met in Menie Hall on Friday March 1st to do honor to the newly-wedded couple Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Ingram (nee Thelma Stollery of the English Line.) Miss Jean Ingram, sister of the groom received with the bride and groom and Miss Coral Watson, friend of the bride assisted them in the unwrapping of the various gifts bestowed on the happy couple. The gifts were numerous and costly testifying to the esteem in which they are held in the community. In fact this was the second shower tendered them since their marriage when, after much merriment the gifts were all in view, dancing followed, and was continued until the wee sma' hours.

Trenton 'Imperials' Defeat Alemites in Second Game 4-2 Winning City Loop Title

Carried Too Much Speed And General Hockey Ability

3RD PERIOD ROUGH

Winners Made Alemites Carry The Play To Them

New champions were crowned in the Belleville City Hockey League last night when the Trenton "Imperials" downed the Stewart Warner-Alemite by the score of 4 to 2 to annex the city title, the victors having won the initial game of the series to take the final round in two straight games. Last night's Trenton victory not only assured them of the championship of the Belleville City Hockey League for 1935, but gave them the Rowsome Trophy, which they were presented with, following their clean cut dual victory over their Alemite rivals.

Displaying absolutely too much speed and checking ability, the Trenton squad was never in danger despite the fact, that the Alemites carried the play for the better part of the contest and led by the score of two to one mid-way through the middle frame. The victors scored in the initial frame, when they played a waiting game and allowed the "lubricants" to carry the rubber to them and then take advantage of the breaks. Early in the second stanza Stan Hagerman's charges threw caution to the winds and launched determined offensive attacks, that saw them out-speed and out-play the Trentonians for five minutes, during which time they scored two goals in quick succession. Staging a belated rally, however, the Trenton lads not only knotted the count, but forged to the fore when Lott and Rosenplot scored, after Smith had bagged the initial Trenton goal, on a solo effort in the first period. The third period proved rather hectic as high sticks and general roughness entered into the fray. A dual penalty to Rosenplot and Harry Morgan ended any signs of the possible out-break of roughness, early in the frame, however. Norm Johnson batted home Doug Powers' rebound to put the game on ice for the winners.

Ice Little Rough

The game was delayed fully thirty minutes, owing to shell ice at the Arena, it being eventually removed from the playing surface. For the first two periods, the rough ice mitigated the carrying of the puck, but the final stanza saw some excellent hockey throughout. Sinfield, in the Alemite nets, stood out as the star of the night as he repeatedly saved his team from a much worse defeat by his marvelous saves, at times. Ethier and Gilbert were the best of the losers' rearguardsmen, with Ethier carrying the puck forward with some success. The Alemite second line of Lee, Ridley and Wilkins overshadowed the starting line despite the fact that Carl Morgan and Covert repeatedly carried the puck to their opponent's goal mouth without scoring. Don Lee led the second line into battle and stood out as one of the losers' best players.

Once again the defence of Lott and York starred for the winners, both Trenton rear-guardsmen playing a stellar game, going both ways. Their blocking was deadly, while their rushing was always dangerous as Lott scored two Trenton goals. Norm Johnson looked the best of the initial line tossed over the boards by Manager Smith, but Rosenplot scored the only goal of this line. The second line saw Roy Smith and Bill Miller divide the honors of the night, although Smith scored, while Miller was forced to be satisfied with bringing Sinfield to his knees repeatedly. The Trentonians showed repeatedly too much speed general hockey ability as they won their back-checking ability assuring them of the hamplonship, as they checked the local Alemites to the well-known stand-still.

The game was delayed for over one half hour as the attendants were called upon to remove considerable shell ice from the playing surface at the Arena. The ice was wet and rough throughout, naturally mitigating the efforts of both teams. A post-season series, including them of the championship, as district is being arranged by the heads of the City loop, following last night crowning of new champions, Trenton.

The line-ups:

Trenton—Goal, Gould; defence, Lott and York; centre, Johnson; wings, Powers and Rosenplot; subs, Smith, Miller, Lamore and Kidd.

Alemite—Goal, Sinfield; defence, Ethier and Gilbert; centre, Covert; wings, H. Morgan and Carl Morgan; subs, Lee, Hammett, Wilkins and Ridley.

Referee—"Larry" Goyer.

DAY BY DAY

George Pepper, local motorcycle exponent who is at present basking in the warm sunshine down Florida way, is hobnobbing around with Sir Maloom Campbell these days, we understand. In a letter received from young Pepper this week, he informed local members of the Quinte Motorcycle Club, that he had been successful in breaking track record for Class "C" single cylinder motorcycles. On his test trials Pepper drove the mile at the rate of 97 m.p.h., while on the return lap he touched 93 m.p.h., giving him an average of 95 miles per hour for the complete test, a new record.

Naturally being a Canadian, Sir Malcolm Campbell took a fancy to the young British cyclist and they have become fast friends, Sir Malcolm has given George a position assisting him during his trial runs and naturally Georgie is about the proudest boy in all Florida. What a lengthy yarn he will have to tell the local yokels, when he returns home later this month. Congratulations are in order for George Pepper upon his recent sand track success, however. The time was made on a stock machine and at Daytona Beach.

As is the usual procedure in sports throughout the province of Ontario of, whatever suits the Toronto sportsmen goes, again comes forcibly to the fore in yesterday's announcement from the O.B.A. to the effect, that the Toronto "Lizzie"—Belleville Deacon A.C. junior O.B.A. game must be played on Saturday night in Belleville. The Deacons pointed out to the parent body, that Saturday night was a poor night for sports in Belleville but without avail. Coach Bob Abate told the locals in Toronto last Saturday, that the return game would be played on Saturday, March 9th., regardless as to what the Deacons said, and apparently Bob knew what he was talking about, or maybe Bob is the O B A all rolled into one. At any rate the Deacons are red in the face and ready for battle. Despite the fact the local hoopsters are 16 points down on the round they are quite optimistic as they feel, that the Broadviews of last year were a better junior squad than the Lizzies and the locals gave the former a real battle before being eliminaed. As pointed out by Captain Ab Faulkner today—"we may have a tough time over-taking those Jewish boys, but if we can cut that lead down fifty per cent in the first half, you just watch us take them into camp," said Capt. Ab.

Although the local "Y" intermediate basketball team did not actually protest any games played in the E.O.B.A., President Phil Brockell found out, that when the local "Y" quintette played in Kingston versus the Queens intermediates, the latter used a senior hoopster and naturally should be disqualified. At any rate the locals thought little of the incident, but yesterday Coach Morden received a wire to the effect, that the Belleville "Y" at Queen's game had been awarded the locals leaving them a tie with the R.M.C. squad, who, incidently, are entered in the O.B.A. as a senior "B" team if the truth was known. Satisfied with their lot, however, the "Y" intermediates now meet the Cadets in a play-off series for the group title and the right to continue further in quest of the intermediate provincial basketball title. The dates of this play-off series are expected to be announced today.

Perhaps the most upset manager of the National Hockey League, barring Eddie Cerard who started with St. Louis, is Jack Adams of the Red Wings. He guided the Wings to the N.H.L. title one year ago. This season his team finishes last in the American group. But Jack has been given another chance. He will be back next season.

The latest bulletin from Secretary Bill Snyder arrived yesterday to remind all baseball-inclined persons, that the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. is to be held in the Walker Hotel, Kitchener, on Saturday, April 6th. All nominations for officers and executive must be in the hands of the Association secretary before, March, 23rd as do all amendments and proposal of constitutional changes. This year's annual meeting is being sponsored by the officers and members of the Intercounty Baseball Association. Already applications have been received by the parent body applying for change of residence Included on this list is John M. "Bud" Murray, requesting a transfer from Peterboro to Toronto; Arthur A Calhoun, soliciting a transfer from Toronto to Belleville ,these being the only two to date effecting the C.O.B.L. area. They will be dealt with by the O.B.A.A. executive on March 23rd.

After playing in the mid-winter golf tournament at Vancouver last month, Jimmy McLarnin decided competitive golf is about as tough as any sport. "Ugh", shuddered the welter champion one day, "36 holes of golf a day! I'd rather go ten rounds I think."

At last Belleville fans have a championship team to follow, the local Collegiate squad stepped into Tweed and downed "northerners" 7 to 3 last night to win the round 12 to 5 in the first round of the C.O.S.S.A. play-downs. Coach Shiels' outfit looked much the better from the barrier to the wire and completely out-classed the Tweed "students" throughout. A five to two victory gave the B.C.I. a three goal lead to carry into Sam Curry's village, but the tri-colored squad, from the local seat of knowledge, stepped onto the ice in Tweed last night and scored the first four goals and the show was all over. The B.C.I. & V.S. pucksters now meet the Owen Sound C.I. in the C.O.S.S.A. semi-finals. No arrangements have been made as to when and where this game is to be played, but a suggestion is in the mail that a sudden death game be played in Belleville next Wednesday, as the provincial interscholastic final play-downs are to be played in Kingston on March 15th and 16th, this year. Providing the Owen Sound squad would agree to play a sudden death game with Belleville C.I. on Wednesday night in Belleville, the winner could eventually continue to Kingston and enter the finals for the interscholastic championship of Ontario.

New champions were crowned in the Belleville City Hockey League last night, when the Trenton "Imperials" won the Rowsome trophy, emblematic to the city hockey title. The visitors, from along the shores of the Trent, displayed a far better brand of hockey in the final city league series and well deserved the honours they today enjoy. The Trentonians today enjoy the fruits of a season's endeavour, as they were repeatedly mitigated throughout the season by the loss of players in their personal connection with the Trenton Town League. We were glad to welcome Harry Moore, sports commentator of all Trenton athletics, to the Belleville Arena last night, inasmuch as he could witness an outside team receiving a sportsman-like welcome throughout, but more-so the fair dealings, that were administered in all departments where the officials were concerned. (Page Harry Smith.) The Trenton Club won the city league honors carrying too much speed both ways and well deserved their honours, but unfortunately the ice conditions in both games were slightly adverse to the advantages of fast skaters, such as Stan Hagerman's Alemites. The Alemites were the first to congratulate the Trenton squad on the winning of the Rowsome trophy, which was hard to swallow as the "lubricant" boys naturally wanted to take the "mug" home to the donor, but after defeat the locals were the first to congratulate the victors.

Immediately after the city league was decided the question of the annual post season league came up. Vice-President Art Young, Secretary Bill Fry and the executive met and brought the management of the victorious Trenton team into conference, along with the Arena management. After much discussion, into which Manager Smith of the winning Trenton team, took the paramount part, it was decided that an invitation round for the Burrows and Robertson cups would be played at the Belleville Arena. The teams to compete in this invitation series are—the winners of the Prince Edward League, Madoc,. representing the Central League, Trenton "Imperials" who won the local City League, but are to represent Trenton and the Stewart Warner-Alemite to represent Belleville, due to the fact that they finished second in the local city loop The success of such a series depends on the patronage, all four teams appearing the first night of the play-downs.

DETROIT AND ST. LOUIS WIN, MAROONS TIE

Amerks, Eagles And Red Wings Now Out of Playoffs

SYD HOWE STARS

Jack Adams Building His Team For Next Year's Race

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit Red Wings have lost all the slightest of hopes they will make the Stanley Cup playoffs but that is not preventing their indicating what might have happened but for the slump, that sent them crashing into the American Division cellar.

With one eye trained on next season's contracts, Jack 'Adams' hired hands stepped out at Detroit last night and handed New York Rangers a 6-1 beating to retain a mathematical chance of edging into the picture. Two points for Rangers in their remaining five games will make it impossible.

New York Americans threw up the sponge at St. Louis when they lost 3-2 to the Eagles, making it positive Toronto Leafs, Montreal Maroons and Montreal Canadiens will form the International division playoff trio.

Maroons and Canadiens played a rather pointless 70-minute game at Montreal to a 2-2 tie. The Habitants already had won the George Kennedy Cup, emblematic of the city championship, with four straight wins after an early season loss.

Red Wings showed the form, that carried them to the National League championship, when they scored twice in the second period last night and rapped four goals past Dave Kerr in the third. Bill Cook got the New Yorkers' only goal in the first.

Syd Howe Stars

Syd Howe, the centre Wings bought from St. Louis led the scoring parade with two goals and an assist and Eddie Wiseman, Ebbie Goodfellow, Yank Boyd and Herb Lewis got the others.

Frank Boucher, Rangers' centre received his first penalty of the season in the first period.

The American defeat was the fourth Eagles have handed them this season. They were outplayed throughout the game. Joe Lamb got the first goal in the middle frame and Eddie Finnigan, of Ottawa, brother of Frank, of Toronto Leafs, scored his first pro counter soon after.

Working with Art Chapman and Lorne Carr, Sweeney Schriner got both American goals, one in the second and the other after Ossie Asmundson had made it 3-1 in the third.

Wilf Cude, whom Canadiens are counting on to aid them greatly in the post-schedule series, worked up to his real playoff form in holding Maroons to two goals. He stopped 35 shots, many of them tough ones from close in. In the Maroon nets Alex Connell had to handle only 15.

With Nels Crutchfield in the penalty bench, Cy Wentworth gave Maroons the lead early in the game, taking Hooley Smith's pass from the right boards to beat Cude. Wildor Larochelle tied it up three minutes after, taking Pete Lepine's pass after a faceoff near the Maroon net.

Aurel Joliat parked on the crease line to take a passout from Sylvio Mantha for Canadiens' second goal in the middle frame and Russ Blinco tied it up after a pretty solo rush through the whole Canadien team two minutes later.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Syd Howe, astute centre for Detroit Red Wings picked up two goals and one assist against New York Rangers last night and took over third place in the National Hockey League Big Seven today. "Sweeney" Schriner of New York Americans gained last place by virtue of his two goals against St. Louis and his teammate Art Chapman added two points with assists.

Collegiate Students Win Round Defeating Tweed, Will Enter Interscholastic Playdowns

Win Game 7-3 And The Round by 12-5 Count

MUCH THE BEST

Score Four Straight Goals Before Reply From Losers

Unlashing a terrific offence, that netted them four goals in the initial frame the Belleville Collegiate hockey team swept through to a 7 to 3 victory over the Tweed High School at Tweed last night to not only win the game, but return home with a 12 to 5 victory on the round and annex the first round of the C.O.S.S.A. hockey play-offs and eventually earn the right to enter the provincial interscholastic semi-finals.

From the drop of the puck the local "collegians" showed their superior hockey ability and repeatedly continued to mount the score. "Bud" Johnson opened the soring early in the first canto, when he batted home McCreary's pass-out and from then on the Shiels-coached clan romped home to an assured victory as the local "students" swept rough trod over the Tweed youngsters, despite the fact, that the homesters carried an advantage in weight. The locals repeatedly out-guessed the homesters with their speedy plays and continually carried the rubber into the Tweed territory.

The score stood four to two for the Belleville Collegiate at the end of the initial frame, while the Shiels-coached aggregation added another counter in the middle frame as the Tweed crew was kept from the scoring sheet. Again in the final stanza the B.C.I. marksmen proved their superior ability as the "tricolor" out scored the homesters two to one and emerged ultimate winners of the game by the score of 7 to 3, giving the B.C.I. pucksters the round by the score of 12 to 5. The victorious B.C.I. squad now meet the Owen Sound C. I. in the second round of C.O.S.S.A. play-downs.

B. C. I. Play Well

Sharpe, in the B.C.I. nets, was given yeoman support by McElrath and Logie, while the front line of Johnson, flanked by McCreary and Finnegan played marvelous hockey for the winners. Ed Muir led the second line into battle and was assisted materially by Ling, Lee and Hanna. Ellsbury starred for the homesters, as Leal, Arber and Tummon played good hockey with Luffman materially assisting as an alternate.

The scoring honors of the night were well divided as McElrath, Johnson and Finnegan each bulged the hemp twice, while Muir notched the remaining Belleville counter. McCreary and Johnson led all players with two assists. Ellsbury got two and J. Tummon one for Tweed.

The line-ups:

Belleville C. I.—Goal, Sharp; defence, Logie and McElrath; centre, Johnson; wings, McCreary and Finnegan; subs, Ling, Lee, Muir and Hanna.

Tweed H. S.—Goal, Mouck; defence, Leal and Arber; centre, Ellsbury; wings, E. Tummon and D. Courneyea; subs, Sayers, J. Courneyea, Luffman and J. Tummon.

Referees—Jack Trualsch of Belleville and "Mickey" McGuire of Tweed.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Madame de Luze greeted her hysterically. "How good of you to come!" she cried, drawing Faith into a large and cluttered bedroom. "You will forgive the disorder, dear child." Among photographs ranging from royalties to pet dogs, to huge four poster bed, a prie-Dieu and an embroidery frame, the Frenchwoman seemed to have gained years.

"What on earth has happened?" Faith asked breathlessly. 'Is it Hunter? Did he leave any message?"

"Hunter? Mon Dieu, non. It is that terrible man——Roger. The wretch, the beast!" wailed the Countess, pacing the floor. She looked old and haggard in a pink chiffon robe, her hair carelessly piled on top of her head, her lips thin and blue without their scarlet facing.

"Roger!" Faith echoed stupidly. But the chill of his name struck to her heart, and she guessed what was coming.

It came with a rush, a confusion of words. Out of it all rose two stark facts. Madame de Luze had written indiscreet letters, and Roger was blackmailing her for 50,000 francs.

Faith's conscience was digging at her with mean little claws, digging through the shock and disgust of the story of an older woman's folly to her own responsibility. If she had told Madame de Luze in the first place the whole truth about Roger and Agnes' suicide, this wouldn't have happened. The menace of Roger seemed to strike out hideously, venomously from shadows of the past.

"How can he hurt you?" Faith tried to comfort. "You're not living with your husband, Therese. There's no way he could use those letters."

"Not hurt me? Grand Dieu!" the Countess raved, fumbling with a cigarette. Her hand trembled so that she couldn't light it. "He will take those letters to my husband's family unless by five o'clock this afternoon I have not met his demands. I am in debt—I cannot pay——"

"But what has the de Luze family got to do with your private affairs?" Faith fought off the contagion of panic.

Madame de Luze grew wild and incoherent again. Faith didn't know French families. The heads of them were autocrats. The de Luze family hated her. They had always blamed her for the dissipations, the indiscretions of Jean de Luze. They would seize upon those letters as a pretext to ruin her reputation in Paris. They could forbid her the Chateau de Luze, force her out of this house——

"Can't you do something with your pearl necklace?" Faith began hesitantly. "Not that I advise you to pay him anything, but——"

"My pearl necklace!" The Countess laughed bitterly. "The de Luze necklace, you mean. Whenever I wear it, I must ask permission. No—you must help me, Faith. You are my only hope." She clutched Faith's hand. "See him—tell him I have only 10,000 francs—make him have pity."

Faith shrank back. "I can't Therese. He wouldn't listen to me," she faltered.

Madame de Luze sank into a chair, her hands to her face. "Then I am finished," she murmured.

"When did he start this?" Faith asked in a strained voice.

"Coming home from your party," the Countess answered, shuddering. "He told me he wished to move into an expensive apartment—that he might need money. I pretended not to understand, so this morning he called me up."

Faith stood looking down, her small white teeth clenching her lip, her grey eyes veiled. If Roger had not fastened himself on Therese, he would probably be blackmailing her and she couldn't let Therese down now. Couldn't sneak out from under.

"I'll do all I can," she said slowly. "I'll see him for you."

Madame de Luze sprang up and flung her arms around Faith's neck. "You are generous,' she sobbed. "How can I ever thank you, ma cherie? You can make him understand—you can explain—He is at the Hotel Caumartin. Will you go there now?"

Faith nodded and moved to the door. "You'll hear from me soon," she promised.

But there was nothing but fear and loathing in her mind as she sank back in her luxurious car. Faith had no illusions about her influence on Roger.

Waiting in a shiny red upholstered salon of the showy little hotel, she caught a reflection of herself in a mirror between artificial palms, and a bitter little smile hardened her lovely mouth. This slender silvery gold woman in sables seemed remote indeed from Faith Martin, the girl once involved with Roger in a cheap sordid Greenwich Village drama.

Yet memory of that past shone in Roger's bold dark eyes as he finally swaggered in with a mocking bow.

"I didn't expect this pleasure." His look crawled over her with a sudden intimate gleam.

Faith looked back at him as if he were something slimy she held away from her at the point of a stick. "You must know why I'm here. I needn't mention names."

Roger didn't pretend to misunderstand. "I hadn't hoped for such a messenger," he said. "Have you brought—?" And his fingers moved suggestively.

"I've come to ask you for the one thing you haven't got— pity", said Faith.

That seemed actually to please him. "I've always had a yen for you Beautiful," he said softly. "You can get anything you want out of me—under certain conditions."

Faith's eyes blazed from her white face. "Ten thousand is all my friend can raise," was her answer. "If you have any vestige of decency, you'll give me those letters now."

Her contempt angered him. "Begging for your fine friends," he sneered. His narrow shoulders dipped as he sidled closer. "Well, it's no go. You've snubbed me once too often. And I'm telling you," Roger's tone was vindictive. "If you interfere in my business, I'll write a billet doux to the New York police telling 'em who Mrs. Hunter Barclay was. How'd you like that?"

"You'd be wasting your time." Faith drew herself up, hiding the icy touch of fear.

"Maybe. But I could make it damned uncomfortable for you,' Roger murmured. "So you'd better run back and tell your friend that my offer stands until six. I'm giving her another hour."

"You filthy beast!" Faith lashed at him and walked away.

She couldn't have made things worse, she thought wearily as she drove home. There was nothing now for her to do but telephone Therese that she had failed.

Old Leon opened the door, his face creased with smiles. "Monsieur Rider is in the salon waiting for Madame," he announced.

Shrewd, kindly Dan Rider whom she had only seen once. But it was as if a dear trusted friend had come back into her life. Faith flew across to the wide hall, into the cream and old rose of the salon.

Mr. Rider rose to greet her, a portly welcoming figure, his keen eyes twinkling behind his glasses. "What's this husband of yours mean by deserting you so soon?" he jested. "I just got in from Berlin, and your man tell me Hunter left this morning." He took her hand in both of his. "How's the girl?"

Rider seemed like a rock of Gibraltar. The kindly grip of his hand broke Faith down. She hadn't realised how near to the breaking point she was.

"I'm not very well, thank you," she said in a choked voice. Through her gathering tears, his ruddy face, his grey hair swam in a blur.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come," she half sobbed. "Everything's wrong. Hunter went away because he's angry at me. And I need advice so——

Mr. Rider didn't say anything. He stood patting her hand.

"It's such a mess!" Faith went on frantically. "I'm —a friend of mine is being blackmailed, and I'm trying to help her. If Hunter knew that—!"

"Blackmail!" Mr. Rider seemed to swell in violent reds and purples "What's this?—What's this?"

"He's got some letters," Faith floundered on, drawn deeper and deeper into the luxury of unburdening herself. "And, oh, Mr. Rider. Im so afraid of this man. Before I married Hunter I had to work f[illegible] living. I was going around with some terrible people. I met him then—this man, Roger Welsh——", she hurried on. "I saw him again here not long ago—Hunter doesn't know any of this—Now he's blackmailing her. and it's all my fault."

"Let me get this straight," Mr Rider was frowning. His thick grizzled brows bristled over his red face. "Some scoundrel's blackmailing you for some letter."

"My friend's letters," Faith faltered. "I can't tell you her name.'

"I see." Mr. Rider's expression was stern. "Give me the fellow's name and address at once," he said "I'm dealing with this."

"But you can't—" Faith protested, regretting her impulse.

"No more nonsense, young lady," snapped old Dan Rider. "Out with it."

Faith wavered uncertainly, her mouth quivering like a child's, her grey eyes bright with tears. She must keep Therese's secret. But Mr. Rider need never know who her friend was. He wouldn't read the letters even if he managed to get them. Suppose he did get them—suppose he forced Roger——!

She turned, clasping her hands. "I don't see what you can do," she cried. "But his name's Roger Welsh and you'll find him at the Hotel Caumartin."

"Without another word, Mr. Rider wheeled about and left her.

TRAILING THE BLACKMAILER

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

As soon as old Dan Rider had stamped out of the house, Faith knew she had made a mistake in telling him so much. What would he think of Hunter's wife now? A girl mixed up in blackmail; a girl who by her own admission had played around with the wrong sort of people.

Her mind was tortured by terrors of what would happen when, or rather if, the determined old gentleman confronted Roger Welsh. There was an authority about Mr. Rider under which a mean little bully like Roger might quail. But the poison in his malicious soul would first drip and leave corroding strains on her reputation. What a fool she had been!

Faith dared not go out until she had further news; she dared not telephone Madame de Luze what she had done. The house held nothing but tragedy and suspense for Faith. The monotony of rain almost drove her mad. The damp grey skies seemed to ooze into rooms that only last night had so brilliantly held the smartest people in Paris.

She wandered restlessly upstairs. Looked at a book and tossed it down again. Telephoned the American Hopital. Paul had wakened, asked for her, taken a cup of bouillon, and gone to sleep again. It was merely a matter now of regaining his strength, they told her. And here again was another urgent problem. What could she do about her promise to put over his invention? Mr. Rider had been in the back of her mind when she promised that. But after this Roger mess, could she ask Mr. Rider anything more?

Faith fretted out into the hall, listening for the door bell. Only the patter of rain broke the pervasive hush. She found herself in front of the door leading to Hunter's private quarters. She had not crossed this threshold since they moved into the house, but today she opened the door.

There was a stand-offish look to the Empire furniture, with its wreaths and crowns and eagles. A man's apartments, vaguely and pleasantly redolent of tobacco. A wave of longing swept over Faith. Then she saw the photograph of Gertrude Stevens on the leather-topped desk. Gertrude seemed to mock with all the arrogance of her exotic beauty.

Faith stepped back, clenching her hands. How she hated that woman throning here in this room. But at least Gertrude wasn't with Hunter now as he sped into sunshine toward other gay and pretty woman.

"Oh, dear. I need him so!" Faith cried aoud, And then she heard the trill of the doorbell.

She ran out of the room, a hand to her heart. Her breath came in light, quick gasps as she flew down the stairs.

Leon stood at the door holding a small package, which he handed over to Faith.

"Why didn't Monsieur Rider come in?" Faith asked nervously. But she was too upset to understand the swift volley of Leon's answering French.

She snatched open the front door staring out into the rain. The taillight of a car disappeared around a corner.

The package proved to be a stout yellow envelope tied with cord and sealed. Inside was another white envelope, also sealed. Inside this second envelope were half a dozen letters, held together with elastics.

Mingled with immense relief questions battered at Faith's brain. Why hadn't Mr. Rider waited to see her? However had he got the letters so quickly? And at what price!

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said, When it comes to prize snakes in the grass, bleeve me Bertha Cornhouse takes the poisoned diploma. A woman like that awt to be languishing peacefully in jail instead of contaminating the pure free air, she said.

What have you been doing to her now, I mean what's she been doing to you? pop said, and ma said, She's not going to get the chance to do anything to me, because I'm too smart for her, that's the size of it in a nutshell. I knew I'd be asked to serve on the entertayment committy for the Dawters of Cleopattera bridge and dance, but before I accepted I wanted to be sure Bertha Cornhouse wasn't on the committy. I know if there was any way she would squeeze her insinuating way onto it, she'd do it, so I decided to take the bull by the other horn and speak to Mrs. Willitts before she had a chance to accost me ferst ma said.

Whose Mrs. Willitts? pop said, and ma said, She's the executive director of the bridge dance, and I said to her, Mrs. Willitts, I said, I know you'll be wanting me on the entertayment committy because of my record of previous servitude along those lines, but before we go any further; in fact before we start, I want one thing understood, I want it understood that I wont serve on the committy if Mrs. Cornhouse is to be a fellow member, I said to her, ma said.

Did you get away with it, I mean what was her reaction? pop said, and ma said, Well, here's what she said. To speek frankly, Mrs. Potts, she said, Mrs. Cornhouse has been appointed chairman of the committy, so she ony accepted the post with the understanding that you were not to be asked to serve on it in any capacity. Well, I wasn't to be litely cawt in any such trap as that, I assure you, ma said.

What did you do? pop said. and ma said, I promptly resigned as a canidate for the committy in all present and future senses of the werd and left Mrs. Willitts standing flat, what are you lanehing at Willyum. is anything funny?

Wich by that time pop was behind the sporting page and didn't say.

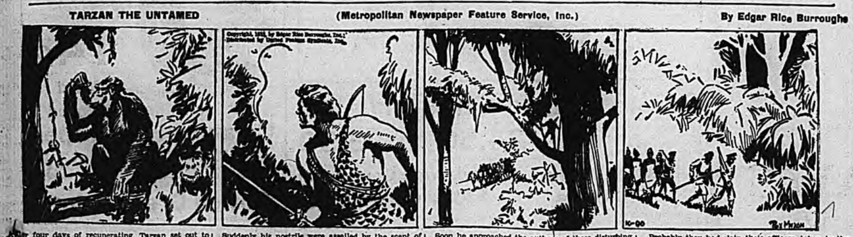
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Copyright, 1935, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

After four days of recuperating, Tarzan set out to explore this unknown valley and search for his fellow apes. He believed he must be somewhere near their hunting grounds. He had proceeded southward a short distance.

Suddenly his nostrils were assailed by the scent of a man—of Gomangani, the black man. There were many of them and mixed with their scent was another, that of a she Tarmangani! Tarzan reconnoitered, swinging through the trees.

Soon he approached the authors of these disturbing scents. From the dense foliage of a great tree he watched them pass—a disreputable mob of natives. The ape-man guessed they were deserters from the Reds' native regiments.

Probably they had slain their officers, taken to the jungle, and stolen their women from some village. They were hurrying into the impenetrable interior, but Tarzan was most interested at something he saw they had with them.

GREAT RACE IN INTERNATIONAL

Five Teams Are Closely Bunched For The Four Playoff Berths

(By The Canadian Press)

Five teams were bunched together for the first two places of the International Hockey League today as the struggle for play-off berths tightened.

At the top Detroit Olympics shared the lead with London Tecumsehs who last night scored a 4-3 victory over the tail-end Windsor Bull Dogs.

Behind this pair who have alternated on the top spot for some time were Cleveland, Buffalo and Syracuse. The stars made it a three-way combination by defeating Cleveland Falcons 4-1.

London and Detroit are virtually assured of a place in the play-offs but one or other of the second place squads must be eliminated.

Bernie Brophy and Eric Pettinger, the Regina sniper, were the London heroes. Brophy scored the tying goal in the third period and Pettinger notched the winner.

Other London scores were provided by Sammy Godin and Eddie Ouellette while Steele, Bill Touhey and Clarence Drouillard scored for Bulldogs. Three times Windsor established a lead only to have one of Frank Nighbor's smart puckchasers erase it.

Toronto Maple Leaf farm players were prominent in the Syracuse victory. Davie Downie put the stars ahead in the first period and Eddie Burke added another in the second. Then in the third period George Daley replied for Cleveland and before the game ended Art Jackson and Nick Mes snapped in another star goal apiece.

CURLING

Toronto, March 8—(CP)— There was scarcely a regret today among the curling kings from east and west that old Ontario held the MacDonald's Brier Tankard and the Canadian single rink title for the first time. It was a personal attitude, aroused by admiration for four young men from Hamilton, Ont.

The same four—Duncan Campbell, Gordon Coates, Donald Campbell and skipper Gordon Campbell —swept through Ontario opposition three years running and three times faced the greatest rinks from the rest of the country before they triumphed yesterday. There wasn't a sigh of regret from the opposition.

In 1933 and 1934 the Coates and Campbell brothers team were runners-up, first to Alberta, then to Manitoba. Yesterday they faced Alberta again in the crucial match of the round-robin series and crushed Bobby Alexander's Calgarians 15-8. That made six straight wins and ended it all.

Alexander's foothills band could have squared the standing by beating the Campbells. Instead the western rink accepted its second defeat of the bonspiel and then held steadfastly to second place in the standing by defeating New Brunswick 10-8 in the seventh and final round in the afternoon.

Defeated by Saskatchewan

When the excitement and the strain were removed, the Hamilton curlers relaxed against Saskatchewan in the seventh round and were beaten 10-4 by James S. Black's rink from Saskatoon.

Third place was held by Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Nova Scotia, with Northern Ontario sixth and Quebec and New Brunswick tied at the bottom of the standing. The brilliant comeback of Roy T. Pritchard's Manitoba rink from Killarney was one of the bright spots of the last two days.

Pritchard, defending the title, that had been Manitoba's seven times in the last nine years, dropped his first three games. Then he won four straight, finishing with triumphs over New Brunswick by 20-11 and Northern Ontario by 13-5 yesterday.

During the presentation of prizes following the event, the sponsors of the national bonspiel invited the championship Campbell rink to take part next winter in the Winnipeg bonspiel, greatest curling festival on the continent. That may be the last time the Campbells and Coates will team, because they have won all there is to win in the east.

GOMEZ HAS SIGNED—BATTERS BEWARE

MR. AND MRS. VERNON GOMEZ

They may call him "Goofy" but Southpaw Vernon Gomez has proved himself far from "Goofy" either when toeing the slab against opposing American League batsmen or facing New York Yankee officials in salary negotiations. Back from an Oriental tour, Lefty cast one glance at his fine record last year and demanded more money. He held out when Yankees submitted an initial offer—and got it. Mrs. Gomez, seen with Vernon, was formerly the musical comedy star, June O'Day.

Allan Cup Playdowns

(By The Canadian Press)

Another danger signal had been hoisted today, marking the downfall of another champion, and the Allan Cup stood to be taken by newcomers. The herd that once thundered for Fort William in the amateur wars was driven out of the 1935 battle-zone last night by Port Arthur.

It was the first Port triumph in the Thunder Bay duels between these inevitable rivals since 1931. The first time the sailors have demanded serious Allan Cup consideration since 1929 when Bud Jarvis, Jimmy Creighton and Cliff Barton led the tri-colored outfit to the Canadian Senior title.

With a promoted junior standing guard in goal, the Ports last night won the fourth of the five-game playoff series 2-1, taking the series three games to one. Jackie Nash, up from the junior ranks, held off last year's Allan Cup finalists with a great display in the nets. Billy Thompson, right wnger, scored the winning goal in the third period.

Other acton in the widespread Allan Cup gunning last night brought Winnipeg Falcons, a team with a famous name at last, into the front rank as Manitoba's likeliest representatives in the interprovincial playoffs. Falcons eliminated the Manitoba Senior "B" champions, Winnipeg Deer Lodge, 4-3 and 6-0 to finish the three-game series in two straight.

San Antonio Mines, in Central Manitoba, will take a crack at the Falcons in another three-game jout before the Icelanders are ready to play Port Arthur in the first playdown round.

The only 1934 champions to survive in the west are Kimberley Dynamiters, who upset Vancouver Cubs in three straight games to retain their British Columbia title. Winnipeg Monarchs didn't defend in Manitoba. Regina Aces fell early in Saskatchewan and Luscar Indians succumbed early in Alberta.

Montreal Royals went into the lead in the Quebec senior playoff, winning the second of the three-game series 3-0 from Ottawa Senators last night. Senators can force an extra game by winning the next contest.

VOTE FOR LIQUOR STORE

Alexandria, March 8 (CP)— The village of Lancaster has voted to retain the government liquor store. The vote taken yesterday had nothing to do with beer and wine licenses. The vote stood 196 for and 87 against the store. About six weeks ago the liquor store was destroyed by fire and no liquor had been sold since. A new store will likely be built.

Show Their Wares in English Cup Semi-Finals

JACK MILSOM Bolton Wanderers — B. RICHARDSON W. B Albion — W. H WALKER Sheffield Wed.

Narrowing down the field still in the hunt for the English Football Cup, four teams will compete in semi-final games. Sheffield Wednesday oppose Burnley and Bolton Wanderers seek to continue toward the Wembley classic at the expense of West Bromwich Albions. Here are four of the players who will show their wares in the semi-finals. W. H. Walker, former Aston Villa forward, is in his first season as manager of the Wednesday. George Waterfield, veteran Burnley fullback, is a grand all-round player and has lined up with his team for more than ten years. Bill Richardson, the Albions centre half, played for West Bromwich when they won the cup a few years ago and hopes to repeat. Jack Milson is centre forward for Bolton Wanderers and is a dangerous scoring threat, leading the second division in goals tallied this season.

CONSERVATIVES OF TYENDINAGA RE-ORGANIZED

Mr. Wm McMechan And Mrs. Clarence Whiteman Presidents

ISSUES DISCUSSED

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., and Mr. J. F. Hill M.P.P. and Others Speak

Tyendinaga, Mar. 9—The Church Hall, Melrose, was filled to capacity last evening, the occasion of the annual re-organization meetings of the Tyendinaga Men's and Women's Conservative Associations, presided over by W. H. White of Roslin, President of the Men's Association with the Secretary C. Long at the table.

Following the election of officers, conducted by the Chairman during the past referring to the men's organization, and by Dr. H. E. Welsh for the Women's Association, Mr. J. F. Hill M.P.P. gave a brief review of some of the highlights of the current session at Toronto.

Dr. Kinnear brought greetings from the Conservative Association of Belleville and referred to his early days as a teacher in the Melrose Public School. He also touched on the Provincial Hydro question in view of the attack of Attorney-General Roebuck, launched in the House recently.

Brief pointed addresses were given by Mr. Jack Sargent, President of the Young Canada Conservative Club of Sidney by Dr. J. A. Thompson of Tweed, by Mr. Fred Mitchell, representing the Young Conservative Club of Thurlow and by E. W. Jones, President of the Tweed Conservative Association.

W. E. Tummon, M.P., in his remarks congratulated the Conservatives of Tyendinaga on their efforts to bring their organization up-to-date and also upon their intention to develop the social activities of the Club. He dealt briefly with current Federal events and promised to return at their next meeting to go more fully into matters.

Master Edgar Burby of Roslin, sang acceptably and instrumental music for the occasion was furnished by Messrs. Snider and Allison.

Short addresses by Dr. H. E. Welsh and Mr. C. E. Goodman, the latter moving a vote of thanks to the visitors who had assisted in the programme.

The slate of officers elected is as follows — Men's Association, President, William McMechan, 1st Vice-Pres. Earl Whiteman, 2nd Vice-Pres. Harold McCullough; Secretary Treasurer, Arthur Waddingham.

Women's Association, President, Mrs. Clarence Whiteman; 1st Vice-Pres. Mrs. Arthur McKinney; 2nd Vice-Pres. Mrs. K. R. Vivian; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Letitia Wilson.

In addition to the foregoing committees consisting of a Chairman and four others were named for each of the seven wards of the Township. The new executive met at the close of the meeting and made arrangements for next month's gathering.

Driven from Church, Statement Of Rev. W. H. Daw of Hamilton

Denies He Caused Schism or That He Separated From Church

Hamilton, Ont., Mar. 9—(CP)—Rev. W. H. Daw of St. Francis Church, ousted by an ecclesiastical court from the Church of England in Canada, denies he separated from the church and caused a schism, but feels, rather, he was driven from the church.

In a 2,000-word statement issued last night, Rev. Daw says that Rt Rev. L. W. B. Broughall, Bishop of Niagara, told him dogmatically that he would never be appointed rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, where he had served as assistant for some time. It was, he said, suggested to him, that he leave the church and city and no other appointment was offered to him.

Considering the suggestion of the Bishop that he leave Hamilton to be unjust, he had organized the Church of St. Francis so he could continue ministering to his congregation.

"When matters finally came to the point where the Bishop was threatening to fight the congregation if they attempted to prevent his nominee from entering the church, I myself, pleaded with my congregation to desist from using force. The congregation still insisted on my serving them," the statement read in part.

The difference between the Bishop and himself, Rev. Daw said, 'arises through the refusal of the Bishop to allow the Laity to have any voice in the appointment of the rector of the church, whom they are compelled to support."

"The four charges of which I was convicted-canonical disobedience, schism, performing services without the Bishop's license or another clergyman's consent, all turn on the simple question of whether he took the proper course in considering the Bishop's command to be unjust and in continuing to minister to my congregation."

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED

Kitchener, Ont, March 9.—(CP)—A charge of manslaughter against Archie Peterman of Galt was withdrawn today as Crown Attorney W. P. Clement, K.C., submitted no evidence when Peterman appeared before Magistrate J. J. A. Weir. The charge arose out of the death on the Galt-Preston Highway last week end of 15-year-old Mabel Sharpe, pedestrian who was struck and fatally injured by Peterman's car.

ARTIST CHARGED AS GOLD MISSED

Cecil Swanland Associated With Three Others, is Allegation

Croydon, England, March 9—(AP)—Cecil Swanland, 47, described as an artist, was charged today with complicity in the disapperance of $107,000 worth of gold from the Croydon Airdrome March 5. He appeared before a magistrate and was remanded to custody until Tuesday, March 12.

Swanland allegedly was associated with three other men in feloniously breaking into the Airdrome bullion room and stealing three boxes of gold. The others are not in custody.

The gold disappeared mysteriously March 6 from the closely guarded strongroom. Scotland Yard investigators who made a close search at the time and who questioned employes said no clues had been found.

DRIVE STARTED ON STRUMA RIVER BY GOV'T FORCES

Rebel Army Marches Against Salonika And Battle Imminent

AIR BOMBARDMENT

Statement Denied That Italy Behind The Revolution

(Copyright 1935 by the Asso. Press)

Athens, March 9—Greek Government planes and artillery engaged the Macedonian rebels today and government sources here declared a drive on the Struma River area was about to begin. Gen. George Kondylis, the government's minister of war, left Salonika for the front. The weather had cleared.

There had been reports of a rebel advance upon Salonika being imminent, possibly marking a climax in the week-old civil war but apparently the government decided to step in with its own offensive.

The movement out of Salonika was accompanied by a bombardment from the air upon the rebel stronghold of Siderokastron, ten miles south of Kulata, on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier at 8.30 a.m. Rebel artillery answered the first bombardment with brisk fire, altho' apparently without effect on government planes. Reports said this was followed by a second bombardment of the stronghold.

Alarm was caused by charges and counter-charges between Bulgaria and Turkey, with Yugoslavia joining in with a reported threat to invoke the Balkan pact if Bulgaria attempts to aid Greece.

A government spokesman in Rome denied a statement Italy was behind the Greek revolution, printed in London.

The Turkish foreign minister at Istanbul gave reassurances of Turkey's "sincere attachment to peace and a firm intention to safeguard it." Adding Turkey's peace-time forces had not been augmented by a single man.

Belgrade, March 9 (C.P.-Havas)—At least 50 Greek rebels were slain or wounded in an engagement on the east side of the Struma River with Greek government troops today, according to reports reaching here.

Athens, March 9 (AP)—Rumors published abroad today that Athens had been bombarded by rebel warships were regarded as completely unfounded. Rumors the government of Premer Panayoti Tsaldaris had resigned also were entirely without basis.

MRS. WILMA GOULD HOLDS VERDICT

Charges Pseudo Prince Drugged Her to Secure Evidence

New York, March 9 (AP)—The man in the case was "Prince Michael Romanoff" and that, the jury foreman has disclosed, is why Mrs. Wilma E. Gould holds a $25,000 verdict for conspiracy damages.

Mrs. Gould charged the defendants had hired the pseudo-prince—in reality Harry Gerguson, erstwhile pants presser—to drug her and take her to his apartment to provide evidence for a divorce by Edward B. Gould, who married the plaintiff in Chicago 13 years ago.

The defendants, who said they would appeal, are Norman J. Gould of Seneca Falls, plaintiff's brother-in-law, Ellwood W. Kemp, Jr., attorney, Gerald Luisi, and the Luisi Investigation Company, Inc. which he heads.

"If it had been an 'outside' man with whom the plaintiff was caught in the flat, it would have been a different situation," said Bruce Reynolds, novelist and jury foreman. "But we thought, that because the defendants financed Gerguson they "framed' her."

Henry A. Uterhart, her counsel, in his summation said Mrs. Gould had gone out with Gerguson because she had been cut off by her husband, was lonely, "practically penniless and perhaps hungry." He denied "this was any amorous adventure."

The Goulds separated in 1927 and the raid occurred in 1931.

BLOOD TRANSFUSIONS GIVEN WILLIAM HASLIP

Possibility Arm May Have To Be Amputated to Save Life.

William Haslip, C.N.R. switchman, 181 Station street, seriously injured early Friday afternoon, when he fell between two flat cars, while attempting to cut them off and was dragged a considerable distance before being noticed by other trainmen, spent a fair night in the hospital, where he was admitted soon after the accident. The injured man suffered from loss of blood and shock to the system and three blood transfusions were administered, one being given by Louis Maraskas and the other two by Harvey Leeman, a fellow railway employee. Members of the family stated today, that Mr. Haslip sustained two fractures of the front bone of the shoulder and three at the back of the shoulder bone and there was a possibility that the arm would have to be amputated close to the shoulder to save his life.

FRENCH-CANADIAN WANTED BY POLICE

If Found Will be Questioned Regarding Double Murder

Randolph, N.Y., March 9 (AP)—Sheriff Lester W. Carlson of Chautauqua county today broadcast an alarm for the arrest of Albert Lindsay, 23, French-Canadian, for questioning in the double murder of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Farnsworth, found shot and hacked to death with an axe.

Sheriff Carlson said Lindsay was discharged as the Farnsworth hired man. He was a "pal" of the slain Farnsworth while both were serving sentences in Great Meadows prison, Carlson said.

The slaying of the couple in their neat little farm home, tucked away on an obscure and deep-rutted road in the Cattaraugus Hills, today had ended a romance, that budded in a county court.

The bodies of Farnsworth, 36, and his wife, 57, were found late yesterday by Ira Bennett, their nearest neighbor.

The husband was found lying at the foot of a flight of stairs near the tiny parlor, three bullet wounds in his head; his wife, apparently trapped as she sought to escape the killer, was found in the cellar where she had been struck down with a two-edged axe.

Farnsworth, said to have come from Montpelier, Vt., first met his wife, the former Miss Bernice Kenyon, as he stood trial about five years ago in the court of Judge Orla A. Black on a charge of illegal possession of dangerous weapons. It was his third arrest on that charge. He was 30 at the time.

Judge Black's stenographer was Miss Kenyon. She was 51 then.

BOY SAVES SELF CLINGING TO ROCK

Thoughtfulness of Lad Brings Rescue to Him in Well

Raymond Myatt, a young son of Mr. W. Myatt, a resident of Stoney Lonesome, Thurlow Township on Thursday, narrowly escaped drowning in a well. The father was repairing the curb of the well and as he temporarily left it, the lad who was playing at some distance approached and fell into the well, which contained some feet of water. Coming to the surface the boy had presence of mind to grasp stones at the side and at the same time cried for help. His cries were heard and with a rope the boy was brought to the surface and taken into the house for a change of raiment. Fortunately he was none the worse for the cold ducking he was the victim of.

THOMAS MEAGHER FATALLY INJURED AS LIMB FALLS

Victim Assisting in Felling Tree on Own Property

RIGHT LEG BROKEN

Taken to Hospital, Dies Early Saturday of Head Injury

Struck down by the top four feet of a seventy-five foot soft maple tree on his own property, 55 Charlotte Street, which he was watching being felled and which he was told to avoid by Wellington York, 88 Grier Street, who was lowering the tree, Thomas Meagher, well-known Belleville man, was fatally injured about four-thirty o'clock on Friday afternoon. Death ensued this morning at five o'clock as a result of the injury to the skull. Other injuries included a fractured right leg above the knee.

York with the assistance of David Kenney and two women who hurried into the field where Meagher was injured, carried Mr. Meagher into his home and by that time Dr. R. A. Flynn who was called, had reached the house. After first aid was given it was evident that the injury was of a very serious nature and that it was advisable to remove him to the hospital.

Three Trees Removed

On Tuesday of this week Mr. York began the task of lowering three trees for Mr. Meagher. On that day one tree was taken down and on Thursday another followed and it was in the operation of lowering the third that the fatal accident took place.

York had been cutting down trees for Meagher for some years and this year he was engaged to take down the three for six dollars.

Was Warned Away

Meagher was standing watching the operation of felling the tree and had been warned by York to go farther away to a place of safety as if he stayed where he was the tree might strike him. "Yesterday afternoon when I came back" said York, "I took away the top of the tree. I took my forty-foot rope and fastened it 60 feet up and drove in an iron, and snubbed the tree to it. I notched the tree on the outside. Mr. Meagher being out in the field, I told him to go farther off as the tree was tall and might strike him, as they are often longer than they seem. So he moved away a distance. When I got ready to pull on the rope, I warned him again and he said he was away far enough. I pulled the rope, my back of course being to him. The top four feet of limb struck him and knocked him down. When I realized that he had been hurt as I saw by his bleeding from the nose, I got help and Mr. Kenny and I and two women carried him to his house. I took the head, Mr. Kenney the feet and the women assisted. By the time we got to the house the Doctor had arrived. He was placed on the sofa."

Tree Was Toward Field.

One of the trees which had been removed was overhanging the house, and the other two were towards the field adjacent to the dead man's property. It was in the felling of one of these that the accident took place.

"I have cut down trees ever since I was a boy and never had an accident before. You cannot realize how sorry I am that it happened. The trees were soft maple and were perhaps seventy-five feet high. The tree in question was about seventy-five feet in height as I climbed to a height of sixty feet, which would be within fourteen or fifteen feet of the top.

"Mr. Meagher was not assisting me. While I was cutting down the trees I kept children of the neighborhood away."

No inquest will be held.

Meagher had suffered years ago from cataracts and was virtually blind for some years. After an operation he was able to use his sight with the aid of strong glasses.

Native of Belleville

The late Thomas Meagher was born in Belleville about seventy years ago, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Meagher. All his life was passed in this city and he was well known and highly esteemed by many friends, who will regret his sudden death. In religion he was a devout member of St. Michael's Church.

Being a harness maker by trade he was employed for many years in the harness manufacturing establishment of the late James Cummins. Later in life he worked in the Springer Lock Works. His last employment was with the Ontario Intelligencer in the capacity of caretaker. For some years he served in this position, being faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties and popular with the management and all members of the staff. He retired a few years ago.

Up to the time of his death Thomas Meagher was the oldest surviving member of the Belleville volunteer fire brigade, he having been a lieutenant in No. 2 company. He enjoyed running and in his younger days was prominent in track events. In connection with the fire department he was a member of the hose and reel team and took part in competitions here and throughout the district.

Thomas Meagher was a good citizen, a kind neighbor and he will be much missed by his numerous friends.

Requests Mothers To Stop Wars

Kentville, N.S., March 9.—(CP)—Daniel Marven, 48-year-old war veteran who died in a Quebec Police station, left Kentville over a week ago for Ottawa to claim a renewal of his pension, discontinued in January. He was found unconscious on a Quebec Street Thursday night. An inquest will be held today.

His grief-stricken widow declared: "I don't believe he took his own life and there is no reason why any person should take his life."

Then she implored "all Canadian mothers, all English mothers, all Scottish mothers and all other mothers in the Empire" to unite to stop war.

"War is hell. It gives nothing for thousands upon thousands of fine young men and women and countless fathers and mothers," she said.

"My husband enlisted in the 1st Canadian Contingent to go overseas. He was grievously wounded in the head in 1917."

The fire siren had sounded, and against the red lights traffic was proceeding warily. With apprehensive glances at the bluecoat on the corner, pedestrians sneaked across.

But the dog held his ground. He had one eye cocked toward the signal light, the other focussed upon the constable. The latter turned—but the dog refused to disobey the law.

Presently the lights changed. Traffic began to flow again.

Nose in air, as if satisfied with a duty well done, the dog ambled on.

Skunks Still Hide Under Kitchen, Water, Gas and Trap Attack Planned

Brockville, Ont., March 9.—(CP)—Notwithstanding overnight operations on the part of an experienced skunk trapper, William Watters, the skunks which sent Brockville Municipal authorities into a huddle, today were still under the summer kitchen of J. A. Hueston.

Watters set traps for the animals last night but they failed to accept the invitation. Today in a last effort to rid the premises of its unwelcome tenants he plans to rip up the floor of the building, place a light on the ground underneath and tap each animal on the head with a haummer as it comes into view. Watters explains the presence of the light will blind the skunks and nullify their usually effective method of defence.

Fire Chief John Hartley, whose water and poison gas assault upon the skunk stronghold has been abandoned, will watch Watters at work from a respectable distance.

WALKS INTO STATION ARRESTED BY CHIEF

Walking into the local police station to inform the authorities, that he was unable to pay a fine that had been imposed in a former court, brought further trouble to Charles Dean of this city last night. Dean was arrested on a charge of intoxication and now finds himself with an unpaid fine, levied one month ago on a charge of intoxication, on his hands along with a charge of intoxication. Dean appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. today and was remanded in custody until Monday.

When Dean walked unsteadily into the police station to inform Chief Kidd that he was unable to pay a previous fine last night, he was immediately arrested and upon searching the prisoner a portion of a bottle of wine was found on his person. The wine was confiscated and Dean now finds himself charged with a third offence under the L.C.A. which calls for the maximum sentence, police disclosed today.

Sunday Schools Present Two Plays at Prince of Wales School

Two interesting plays were presented last evening in the auditorium of the Prince of Wales School under the auspices of the Sunday Schools of University and Kingston Road Missions. Rev. E. Farnsworth presided as chairman.

The visitors were welcomed in song by a chorus from Kingston Road Mission, singing "Blue Bird" and between the plays selections by the boys' orchestra of the University Sunday School were much enjoyed. The play "The Sewing Circle Meets at Mrs. Johnson's" was well given by the University Sunday School and the amusing dialogue was well received by the audience. The cast, under the direction of Mrs. Matthews and Miss Bird, included Mrs. Burley, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. White, Mrs. Vandervoort, Mrs. McCluskey, Misses Kinnear, Annie Henderson, Mabel Mason, Doris Burley and Gladys Pomeroy.

The play given by the Kingston Road Young People's Sunday School classes was equally interesting and amusing. It was entitled "Jerusha Dow's Family Album" and was in the form of living pictures in a large frame. Mrs. E. Farnsworth very capably directed the play.

MAN RIDING BICYCLE STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

David Melville, of City Taken to Hospital for Attention

David Melville, 123 Moira St. W., Belleville, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from severe head and body injuries following an accident near Shannonville last evening. Melville was riding his bicycle along the highway, when he was struck by a motor car driven westward by Chas. D. Home, Kingston.

The matter was investigated by Traffic Police, who ascertained that in some unknown manner Mr. Home's car struck Melville's bicycle as the former was passing the cyclist. Mr. Melville was thrown to the pavement and badly injured. Mr. Home immediately stopped his car and rendered what assistance necessary subsequently placing young Melville in his automobile and driving him to the local hospital. Medical attention disclosed, that the young man was suffering from head and back abrasions.

Police Search Man For Murder of Seven Year Old Child

Ypsilanti, Mich., March 9—(AP)—A fiend killer who wields a two-edged knife was sought by local and state police today for the murder of seven-year-old Richard Streicher, Jr., whose body was found stuffed under a footbridge leading to an island park in the Huron river Friday.

Prosecutor Al Rapp said authorities were without a cue and in an effort to pick up a lead had questioned and released several men.

Dr. Mark Howard, pathologist, described the case as a "sex crime" after he completed his autopsy. He said he found by examination the boy's body bore 10 stab wounds inflicted by what appeared to be a double edged knife. Dr. Howard explained three of the stab wounds pierced the child's heart. He decline, however, to explain his theories it was a "sex crime."

Young Streicher, son of a wealthy tool and die manufacturer here, left home after school hours Thursday and was not seen again until two school boys found his body hidden under the bridge, Friday.

Huge Plant at Wisconsin Rapids Managed by Belleville Man

Robert T. Gillespie is Cheesemaster in Charge

METHOD OF JUDGING

Robert T. Gillespie of Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, formerly of Plainfield and Belleville, is in the forefront of interest in Wisconsin Rapids for his work in bringing up Wisconsin Cheddar Cheese to the high position it occupies. Today Wisconsin, it is said, produces more Cheddar than England, the ancestral home of the aristocrat of the cheese family.

Mr. Gillespie known as "Bob" Gillespie, was a buyer on the Belleville Cheese Board representing the firm of Grant of Montreal and bought cheese here for many years. He then went to Montreal and thence to Wisconsin. His Belleville friends are pleased to hear of his success.

The Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune in a full page story of the industry and of the record of the Dairystate Storage Company says:

Mr. Gillespie, who lives at 1431 Fourth street south, with his wife and three children, did not build up our state's reputation for fine Cheddars overnight. "Bob", as he is familiarly called, came to Wisconsin Rapids for the Kraft-Phoenix Corporation in 1924. His greatest recommendation at that time was more than twenty-four years of experience in choosing, grading, and preparing American cheese products for export. And it was his complete familiarity with the phases of the cheese appraiser's art, gained through many years of experience, that gave Mr. Gillespie his present position of responsibility.

A cheese must, as Mr. Gillespie insists, be more than just properly aged and attractively presented to the consumer. There must go with it the assurance that the purchaser will, in the future and whenever he wishes, be able to buy more cheese of exactly the same texture, subtle flavor, and aroma. Just how largely the good will and buying habits of Mr. Cheese-eater are in the hands of competent experts such as Mr. Gillespie, is thus obviously apparent.

A past-master at the arts of selecting, curing, aging, and marketing fine cheeses, Mr. Gillespie works with a sureness that suggests the talents of a connoisseur of rare, old, vintage wines. He is self-critical, nervously zealous in his chosen field, and thoroughly at home in his plant which has a capacity for housing, curing, and disposing of some four or five million pounds of Cheddars, Little Herkimers, and Daisies per year.

Recent housing and engineering improvements in the Dairystate Cold Storage company's cheese-curing plant at 2221 Gaynor avenue have directed popular attention to this progressive subsidiary of the Kraft-Phoenix Corporation and to Mr. Robert T. Gillespie, the cheese-maker in charge.

When Mr. Gillespie came to Wisconsin Rapids for the Kraft-Phoenix Corporation in 1924, he found a curing plant in the process of organization and replete with all the usual unskillful practices which characterize many of the small curing "warehouses" of rural Wisconsin. A warehouse was really all that he found; for the plant had once been used by a local packing company and for several years was an abandoned building in bad state of disrepair.

He Set to Work.

Mr. Gillespie set to work correcting such faults as he found in the plant, and at the same time he began instituting new methods which were eventually to embody the full principal of the "Coon" patented "cave-cure" treatment for cheese, a method controlled and used today only by the Dairystate company. The immediate and thorough revamping of the local cheese-curing plant in 1924 was typical of the way Mr. Gillespie works.

Mr. Gillespie, upon our questioning him, recalled with a wry smile the reception that some of his methods and aims enjoyed when he first put them into practice at the Gaynor avenue plant. There were at that time few dairymen in the Wisconsin area who had ever heard of judging cheese by scent or aroma rather than by tasting. Mr. Gillespie's method of judging cheese by smell was accepted only after he had convinced cheese-factory men of its soundness with proof in the form of a better finished product. Other subsequent innovations of his, however, went unchallenged.

Has Created The Demand.

There is no doubt of the fact that recent innovations in the local Dairystate plant have contributed much to the rapid rise of the popularity of Wisconsin Cheddar and Little Herkimer cheese among consumers in the eastern and New England states. The most noteworthy of these changes were those created by the realization of the true "cave-cured" quality and flavor. These changes involved the installation of a system for strict and intelligent control of both humidity and temperature during every stage of the aging period.

HOLLOWAY CHOIR GUESTS OF CLUB

Allan Lennox Acts as Toastmaster at Enjoyable Function

Twenty-two members of the choir of Holloway Street United Church were guests at a banquet last evening tendered by the Men's Club of the church. One hundred and twenty sat down to the delicious meal and during the evening an interesting program was given. Community singing was led by Mr. Charles Brown.

Mr. Allan Lennox, president of the Men's Club, presided as toast master and proposed the toast to the King to which all responded by singing the National Anthem. The toast to the Church was proposed by Mr. A. Campbell, Rev. Mr. Newman making the reply. The toast to the choir was proposed by Mr. Jack Shaw, and Mr. Clifford Templer, organist and choir leader, responded.

Musical selections during the program included solos by Sid Hector, and numbers by the choir quartet. Mr. Chas Dracup delighted the guests with several readings.

The speaker of the evening, introduced by Rev. Mr. Newman, was Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John Street United Church, who gave an interesting address on conditions in the Balkan States. The appreciation of the audience for the speaker's address was voiced by Mr. Arthur Sills.

GAELIC TONGUE WILL NOT DIE

Whole Culture of Scotland Department on Genius of Language

HALIFAX, March 9. — (CP) — From Stornaway in Lewis in the Isles of the Hebrides comes Catriona Mairi MacIver with a message for the sea-divided Gael of New Scotland and the new world. "The Gaelic language will never die in Scotland. It is taught in the schools of the Highlands and Islands and its place is secure in the hearts of the people, for they realize that the whole culture of Scotland is dependent upon the distinctive genius of the language, Scottish culture is Gaelic culture."

Miss MacIver will lecture upon the actual life of the Hebridean Islands today illustrating her lectures with snatches of song and examples of Gaelic poetry. Her lectures are intended for non-Highland as well as Highland audiences. She is a native speaker and was educated at Aberdeen University.

Asked as to present creative writing among Scottish Gaels she said that the outstanding figure in Highland Literature today is Kenneth McLeod who was the guiding star of Mrs. Kennedy Fraser in her epoch-making working of collecting Hebridean song. Kenneth McLeod is the only true mystic and the greatest poet in Scotland today according to Miss MacIver. 'Iona' is his latest masterpiece of prose-poetry. Since the collaboration of these pioneers there has been a great deal of collecting of folk-lore and song in the Islands.

"However sordid" their life or death they always make it a thing of beauty," said Miss MacIver speaking of the people of the Hebrides. "It is the genius of the Saxon to take adverse circumstances by the throat and make them bend to his will. It is the genius of the true Gael never to fail to bend his knee to beauty wherever and in whatever form he may meet it."

Miss MacIver will lecture throughout Canada and possibly in the United States.

SIR JOHN SIMON TO MEET HITLER

British Foreign Secretary to Visit Berlin Last of Month

LONDON, March 9.— (AP) — Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today extended a new invitation to Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary to visit Berlin in about two weeks, it was officially announced.

BERLIN, March 9.—(CP-Havas)—Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, will visit Berlin at the end of this month, it was reported today after a conversation between British Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps and Foreign Minister Konstantin Von Neurath. The date of Sir John's departure for the German capital probably will be announced Monday in the House of Commons.

The important conversations expected to take place between the British Foreign Secretary and the German Foreign Minister also include a probable meeting with Chancellor Hitler. The negotiations for the "new peace" of Europe, interrupted by the British White Paper and Hitler's subsequent "diplomatic cold", will again place the Western European Powers and Germany in the centre of the International spotlight.

Argyll Light Infantry
THE ARMOURIES WILL BE OPEN FOR RECRUITING and the issuing of uniforms on the evenings of MONDAY, WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 13, and 15 1935.
The first dress parade of the season will be held on MONDAY, MARCH 18, 1935, at 1945 hours.

NO WOOD IS USED IN NEWEST HOUSE

Jersey Builders Give Expression to Their Ideas

New York, March 9—(CP)—Not a single piece of wood was used in a fireproof house just built in Teaneck, New Jersey.

This house makes an advance in low-cost home construction by having the second floor also of concrete, this being the structural roof and terrace deck. The first floor is placed over cork insulation, and the second floor is supported by reinforced concrete, joists, which in some rooms are left exposed and decorated as beams.

A penthouse living room and open terrace for sun bathing, open dining and recreational space occupy the second floor. On the first floor are the dining room, kitchen with modern science cabinets, breakfast nook, three large bedrooms, tile bath and extra lavatory. There is an attached heated garage.

Its concrete construction makes it free from deterioration and, consequently, upkeep costs are virtually eliminated. Concrete floors add little or nothing to the original cost of the house.

The exterior of the dwelling is in several textures and tints, the outside walls consisting of two courses of concrete with air space between to provide a thermostatic effect. A heating and air-conditioning plant has been installed in a small unique space just below the first floor level, making the usual basement unnecessary.

2 CONVICTS ARE TAKEN TO LONDON

Will Testify as Witnesses of Blackmail Charges in Court

Kingston, Ont., March 9—(CP)—Vincent T. Foley, young London lawyer, and Frank Taylor, also of London, at present serving terms in Kingston Penitentiary in connection with blackmail charge, today were taken from the institution and escorted back to London, apparently as witnesses in the Spring Assizes of the Supreme Court opening Monday.

Mrs. Mae Turnbull, sentenced to five years at the same time, is ill in the penitentiary hospital and was unable to be removed.

The trio were sentenced in London last October, Foley getting four years, Mrs. Turnbull and Taylor each getting five years. The sentences were the outcome of the trials on blackmail charges in which two others were given terms in the Ontario Reformatory.

QUINTUPLETS TO HAVE GUARDIANS WITH AUTHORITY

Hon. David A. Croll Brings in Bill to Legislature

PARENTS PROTECTED

Guardianship to Last Until Quints Are 18 Years of Age

Toronto, Mar. 9 (CP)—With the aim of making the Dionne quintuplets "special wards of His Majesty the King as represented by the Minister of Public Welfare of Ontario", Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, Friday introduced a bill in the Ontario Legislature regarding the famous babies of Collander, Ont.

By the bill, cabinet is empowered to appoint a board of guardians with authority over the finances, education and physical well-being of the children.

These "active guardians" will share authority with the father, Oliva Dionne, the "natural guardian", and with Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, whether or not the physician is appointed as a guardian, Mr. Croll said.

Guardians Responsible.

All the guardians are made directly responsible to the minister whose approval is essential to all contracts and who will hold the quintuplets' money in trust for them until they reach their majority at the age of 18.

"Contracts entered into by the old guardians are confirmed, but those which did not receive the guardians' approval are null and void and incapable of performance and may not be sued in any court."

The bill specifies that the children shall be reared in the father's faith.

Introduction of the bill took place after a series of conferences between Mr. Croll, Olica Dionne and Paul Martin, Dionne's lawyer.

"Do you approve of this bill?" Dionne and Leo Kerwin, were asked.

"Wait until his lawyer comes in," Kerwin interjected.

Preamble of the bill notes the unique circumstances of the case and necessity for special measure to protect the children.

Can Suspend Guardians.

It contains provisions authorizing the minister to suspend one or all of the guardians at any time.

The guardians are empowered to act on a majority vote and constitute themselves a continuing body notwithstanding the death of any of them.

The bill authorizes compensation to the parents so their position will be properly recognized and protected.

A clause in the bill accords special recognition to the important place which Dr. A. R. Dafoe occupies in the children's lives. His rights and interests are fully protected.

'Swell War Next— A Real Wipe-Out'

New York, March 8—(AP)—H. G. Wells, re-echoing the prophecy of his book another war would sweep the world, came forward today with further comment that it would be a "swell war."

"There will be a war," he went on, "that will gradually include the major powers, and there shall be alternate booms and depressions".

He said the war would find all nations equipped to annihilate civilization with armaments.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

Queen Alexandra and her son, the future King George

THIS is Silver Jubilee year. On May 6, 1910, (the year of Halley's comet), the Empire mourned a king and cheered his successor — "the King is dead. Long live the King". Ailing King Edward VII. only a few hours before his death had said as he sat in his dressing gown at his desk: "No, I shall not give in! I shall go on, I shall work to the end."

They were his last words. A few minutes later he was carried unconscious to his deathbed. On his death, a new king was proclaimed. He was George V., by the Grace of God King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of all British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

At 45 years of age, the task of being ruler of the greatest empire in history, of one-quarter of the peoples of the earth, fell upon the shoulders of George, Prince of Wales, and his consort, Mary. Said the new king on the death of his father:

"I take courage and hopefully look into the future; strong in my faith in God, trusting my people and cherishing the laws and constitution of my beloved country."

Prince George, the future king, was born at Marlborough House, London, on June 3, 1865. He was christened George Frederick Ernest Albert Guelph. At that time, Queen Victoria ruled the empire.

One of the earliest pictures of Prince George is illustrated above. It shows Princess Alexandra, later to rule as Queen with Edward VII., giving a "piggy-back" ride to her second son George, who was about two years old when this picture was taken.

It was in April of the year of the King's birth that President Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, was assassinated.

BRITISH TAUGHT TELEPHONE TALK

Free Lessons in Speaking Over Wires Are Provided

London, Mar. 9 (CP)—"Dont's for telephone talks" is the way a London newspaper reporter characterizes an examination by acoustics experts at the Post Office Testing Station at Dollis Hill, N.W. He underwent tests to find out what was wrong with his voice over the telephone — this being a part of the London telephone service, free advice for faulty telephone speakers.

Sitting nervously with a telephone receiver in one hand and a pencil in the other, he made notes of his faults as they were pointed out to him by the Deputy Controller. He thus described the examination:

"'Speak right into the mouthpiece, please,' the Deputy Controller said. I did. 'Your lips are still too far away,' he declared. I moved them closer to the apparatus.

"'Not too loud, please — it harms the instrument and is unpleasant for the listener. . . . That's better.' The test amounted simply to a one-sided conversation. 'Your main trouble is that you don't give the full weight to your vowels,' my critic added. 'Pause between them and you will give greater emphasis to the consonants.' . . . And so on.

"After a few minutes my telephone voice was pronounced 85 per cent efficient. I heard with relief that very few people are 100 per cent. 'If you remember all the points I have told you and read all the information in the pamphlets we provide you will never have any more difficulty. But if you do, let me know, and we will send round to your own home.

"'Finally, never keep a cigarette or a pipe in your mouth while talking, it's unfair to the listener.' With few exceptions, I was told, most people can hear better with the left ear."

KING TO REVIEW MODERN ARMADAS

Many Famous Fighting Ships and Air Craft For Spithead

Portsmouth, Mar. 9 (CP)—Plans for a brilliant week of Royal festivity in July, when the King will hold the jubilee review of the fleet at Spithead, are already being made at Portsmouth and Southsea.

Vessels ranging from giant warships to small auxiliary craft to the number of 200 are expected to take part in the review, including the whole of the Home Fleet, a large section of the Reserve Fleet and the Fleet Air Arm. Many famous ships will be here — Nelson, Rodney, Malaya, Valiant, and Barham — and possible Hood and Renown, which were recently in collision.

There will be five different sets of reconnaissance and fighting aircraft attached to the aircraft-carriers Furious and Courageous. It is expected that the king will arrive on July 16 and join the Royal Yacht here. Subsequently, if weather permits, he will lead the fleet to exercises at sea.

The civic authorities are likely to entertain a section of their naval visitors, facilities will be provided ashore for many thousands of ratings and the whole town will be decorated. The hotels are actively making preparations for an invasion.

NOTED CHICAGO PASTOR HONORED

Rev. H. Hoover, Rawdon Native, Achieves Distinction in Ministry

Rawdon, March 9—The following article was taken from the Berwyn News when a large group paid honor to Rev. and Mrs. Henry Hoover formerly of Rawdon, Ontario, with their children Virginia and Gordon.

A reception was tendered them at the First Congregational Church to commemorate 16 years of active service to the church and community.

Distinguished civic and religious leaders, ministers of Berwyn churches, members of the city council, church members and friends throughout the city jammed the church for the ceremonies.

Mrs. Percy Wilson explained how Rev. Hoover induced her to form the community circle. Rev. C. B. McQueen of the Chicago United Mission thanked Rev. Hoover for his help at the mission.

The Rev. F. Paul Langhorne, president of the Berwyn Ministers' Association spoke on "Who Is Who in Chicago." Rev. Henry A. Hoover's civic activities are listed, as president of the Ministers and Citizens Association of 1924 and 1925, an organization of citizens in Berwyn, Stickney and Riverside where he led a determined fight on many fronts against the organized gangsters, challenging Cook County officials to do their sworn duty and protect the suburbs.

The Rev. Warren N. Clarke, representing the Berwyn Community Welfare Association told the group that the Rev. Hoover was one of the men who helped to form the association and was its first chairman.

In 1933 Rev. Hoover was general chairman of Berwyn's three day silver jubilee celebration and for three years has been chairman of the program for Berwyn's day at the Century of Progress. Mr. Hoover was chairman of the first community unemployed of the city and the suburbs. In 1926 Mr. Hoover was elected director in civic relations for the Chicago Church Federation a position which he now holds. He is serving his third year as a member of the Advisory Board of the Chicago Congregational Association.

Federal Judge Mr. E. O. Johnson said he had wanted to pay tribute to Rev. Hoover for several years. He explained how the congregational Church minister had dared to tell the truth before the grand jury and give enough testimony to conduct public ememy No. 1 on five counts. In this connection he also thanked Mr. Chester Bragg and Mr. David Morgan who aided in the prosecution.

Rev. Hoover responded to the speeches made in his honor expressing appreciation for the rapid growth of the church membership and said that some of the praise should be given to the west suburban ministers association which has done excellent work to further the church in his community. He thanked the participants for the reception and the evening ceremonies concluded with the reading of the telegrams from those who were not able to attend.

In 1919 Rev. Hoover was called to the pastorate of the church, with 53 members on the roll. During his ministry the membership has grown to over four hundred.

As a preacher Rev. Hoover is at home with various audiences. A stack of letters attests his popularity as a radio speaker. An evangelistic note in his preaching and breadth of sympathy for all people is seen in his mission work for once a month he may be heard preaching a message of hope and cheer to men who are down and out at the West Madison Street Mission in Chicago. Mr. Hoover is a brother of Mr. H. V. Hoover of Harold and his many Rawdon friends are pleased to hear of his splendid success at Berwyn.

The assessors Messrs. McComb and Gay are busy making the rounds.

Mrs. C. Dracup of Bethel and Mrs. Charles Morton of Wellman's are ill.

Miss M. White is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. George Storie at Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Badgley of Frankford have been holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sine.

Galt, Ont., Mar. 9 (CP)—When his car skidded into the path of a slow moving freight train at the Main street crossing of the C.N.R. Gilbert Hobson, 21, farmer of near Valens, escaped with minor cuts. His car was wrecked. Hobson was fifteen feet from the crossing when he sighted the train and applied the brakes. Since the removal of the watchman the trains have to come down to a speed of six miles an hour at this crossing.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Salvation Army Cadets Coming

The impending visit to Belleville of the party of twelve Salvation Army Training College Cadets, under the direction of Captain E. S. Payne, promises to be a very live and effective effort. Adjutant A. W. Martin has announced the personnel of the party which is as follows: Thomas Britten, who came into the service from Chilliwack B.C., Allen Church, from Timmins, Ont.; Douglas Church, from Midland, Ont.; Amos Dutcher, from London, Ont; Allan Fitch, from Vancouver, B.C.; Herbert Jones, from Calgary, Alta; Douglas Kaill, from Halifax, N.S.; Frank Pierce, from Prince Rupert, B.C.; Fred Randall, from St. Catharines, Ont.; William Shayer, from Montreal, Que.; Charles Stewart, from Biggar, Sask.; John Velle, from London, Ont.

The party will arrive in the city on Tuesday next at noon and will immediately launch an exacting schedule of evangelistic effort in co-operation with the offices of the local corps.

The public events will be varied in character and such as should command the earnest moral support of all who hunder for honest evangelism.

Special appearances in the open air will mark the duration of the campaign for seven days' continuous effort

The campaign theme has been announced as "Make Jesus King", and special original musical arrangements for congregational singing will centre around this theme.

It is the expressed desire of Adjutant and Mrs. Martin that large numbers of local people will derive much good from the campaign.

Special costumes will be worn by the cadets.

Extinguishers Are Compulsory

The following letter has been sent out to the policyholders of The Bay of Quinte Agricultural Mutual Fire Insurance Company:

Picton, Ont., Mar. 7, 1935.

"To our policy holders:

"Realizing that the use of fire extinguishers aids materially in reducing the fire loss, the directors of your company, The Bay of Quinte Agricultural Mutual Fire Insurance Company, are making it compulsory for every policy holder to have one or more extinguishers on his or her premises, as the insurants warrants.

"Therefore the following resolution was unanimously passed at the march meeting of the directors:

"Resolved that every policy holder be compelled to provide himself or herself with one fire extinguisher and policy holders carrying over one thousand dollars insurance and up to three thousand dollars insurance two fire extinguishers and over three thousand dollars insurance. Three fire extinguishers or more if the policy holder so desires. The new ruling goes into effect on all insurance new or renewed on and after March 1, 1935. Excluding the town of Picton and the city of Belleville the company is anxious to co-operate with its policy holders in this matter and accordingly have arranged to sell to them the fire extinguishers at cost.

"The new ruling goes into force when your policy is renewed after May 1, however, the directors feel it to be to the mutual advantage of policy holders and company to have all policy holders procure estinguishers as soon as possible.

"Acordingly they are asking every policy holder regardless of the renewal date of his policy to call at head office, Picton, H. A. Jolley, Wellington, or C. W. Burr, 311 Front street, Belleville, that the matter may be discussed.

"Would you be kind enough to give us the opportunity of discussing this matter with you.

Yours truly, Ed. B. Purtelle, Pres., W. A. Davis, Sec.-Treas.

398 PERSONS ON RELIEF AT PICTON

Delegation Asks Assistance From Government on Waterworks Plan

TORONTO, March 8.—,(CP) — Mayor W. A. Jones of Picton and a delegaton from the town appealed to Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, today for Government assistance in connection with a $150,000 Waterworks Construction program.

The Minister told the delegation to return and draw up the plans of the proposed work and then submit their request.

Mayor Jones said there are 398 persons on relief in the town. There are 140 married men and 103 single men seeking employment.

20 Year College Girl Wants to be Hangman

Springfield, Mo., Mar. 9. — Miss Thema Bediger, pretty 20-year-old business college student, wants to spring the death trap April 12 for Frank McDaniel, condemned negro murderer—"just to see how it feels" to hang a man.

She applied for the job in a letter to Sheriff Scott Curtis, in which she assured him she had plenty of "nerve for that sort of thing". She said she wasn't interested in pay. Sheriff Curtis said he would talk it over with her, but that he could not deputize her because she is a minor.

FUNDS TO ERADICATE WARBLE FLY GIVEN

Milton, Ont., Mar. 8 (CP) — A delegation of two farmers from each of the four townships in Halton interviewed county council here yesterday, with a view to securing help in eradicating the warble fly pest and were promised up to $750.00.

J. E. Whitelock, Halton agricultural representative, told council the parasite was costing the province $5,000,000 annually in damaged leather and underweight cattle.

"Beef, at certain periods of the year, is not fit for human consumption, due to warble fly infestation," he declared. Mr. Whitelock asked the council to bear the expense of supplying the powder necessary for the treatment of the 26,000 odd cattle in Halton.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

WAS IT JUST TIFF?

The suddenness of the break-off of arrangements for the conference of Sir John Simon with Chancellor Hitler at Berlin following the British White Paper gives reason for belief that the postponement was in reality due to German tiff or huff at the outspoken British words. Now it is said that the conference is likely to be shortly arranged.

Is it that the world has been too gentle to call a spade a spade and that underneath references to disarmament are at work minds which desire to hide their real purpose.

Frankness in this White Paper is probably what the world has been needing for a long time. There has been too much fear of offending.

During and after the Great War it was commonly said that the old diplomacy was dead. It was but another diplomacy took its place, a diplomacy of too great softness perhaps.

Even if the White Paper hits hard in its inferences, it would be best for Germany, were Germany to listen. But in reply the Germans have attacked Britain fiercely as a powerful nation slapping diplomatically another nation which is disarmed and when there is no danger of a physical comeback or that Britain is doing so to justify expansion of armaments. Such could be believed only in Germany.

However, a little bit of plain talk would do much in this era as disarmament as a principle seems to be about talked out. On the other hand this plain talk may reveal to other nations the folly of their warlike purposes as if the greater nations did not know what is under the surface.

Sir John Simon's visit to the German Chancellor was purposed to encourage the Germans to join the alliance of France and Britain, under which Germany would have been allowed to strengthen her arms and to join the western air pact in return for consent to the independence of Austria. Hitler, being an Austrian no doubt is still pursuing the phantom idea of union of the North and South Germans as a Teutonic unit. Now that the announcement has been made that the meeting may be held shortly, perhaps the real evidence of value in plain speaking is to be seen.

MAXIMS OF JUSTICE HOLMES

Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, came by his wit from his father, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the figures in the literature of the New World. The son who began as a soldier and ended as a member of the Supreme Court of his country, was one of the most brilliant of men. He was famous for his dissents and for his sparkling wit. A number of examples of that brilliance which he revealed may be quoted for the infinite variety of the maxims he let fall from his lips. Among the aphorisms are—

A horsecar cannot be handled like a rapier.

A man cannot shift his misfortune to his neighbor's shoulders.

Most differences are differences of degree when nicely analyzed.

Every calling is great when greatly pursued.

The notion that with socialized property we should have women free and a piano for everybody seems to me an empty humbug.

Free competition is worth more to society than it costs.

There is no general policy in favor of allowing a man to do harm to his neighbor for the sole pleasure of doing harm.

One of the eternal conflicts of which life is made up is that between the effort of every man to get the most he can for his services and that of society disguised under the name of capital to get his services for the least possible return.

Man must face the loneliness of individual work.

The man of action has the present, but the thinker controls the future.

Nature has but one judgment on wrong conduct—the judgment of death. If you waste too much food you starve; too much fuel you freeze; too much nerve, you collapse.

A dog will fight for his bone.

The life of the law has not been logic; it has been experience.

The Constitution is an experiment as all life is an experiment.

The word 'right' is one of the most deceptive of pitfalls—most rights are qualified.

Persecution for the expression of opinion seems to me perfectly logical.

We should be eternally vigilant against attempts to check the expression of opinions that we loathe.

There is no basis for a philosophy which tells us what we should want to want.

We are all fighting to make the kind of a world that we should like. Others will fight and die to make a different world with equal sincerity and belief.

There is in all men a demand for the superlative, so much so, that the poor devil who has no other way of reaching it attains it by getting drunk.

Great constitutional provisions must be administered with caution. Some play must be allowed for the joints of the machine.

DECREPIT WOLVES

We see by the papers that at the hunters' convention in Toronto somebody objected to the payment of bounty on "decrepit" wolves, which it was claimed was a fraud on the game department, and of no use to any one, as these were past harming game. If this view prevails, then there should be a physical examination of all wolves before they are shot. How is an ordinary layman to know if the animal is in good health? And the thought impinges also: who is to blame for undernourished wolves? Plainly the department, which does nothing to increase the deer supply, and is careless about the rabbit increase. It won't listen to a one-buck law. It is against the law to use dogs to hunt wolves—or deer. If we want vigorous wolves we have to have more deer. The underprivileged kind won't do.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

WISDOM TEETH AND TURPITUDE

According to Professor G. B. Henry, of the Royal College of Surgeons, wisdom teeth are responsible for many human ills. He cited cases of delusions, asthma, and moral turpitude being cured by extraction of wisdom teeth; but he did not try to establish the old wives' connection between the offending molars and misdom. That connection doubtless grew up from the fact that wisdom teeth are incident to maturity. But few people with any knowledge of the world would connect the two. Maturity too often merely confirms ignorance. If the knowledge that comes with maturity brought wisdom, the world would be an earthly paradise.—London Sunday Referee.

MOTHER-IN-LAW DAY

Mother-in-Law Day has just been celebrated for the second year in Amarillo, Texas. Presumably it has become an annual fixture in that town. The thing to watch now is the spread of the new holiday, first throughout Texas, then throughout the Southwest, then throughout the Southwest, then throughout the country.

Mothers-in-law are much fewer today than once upon a time, just as real mothers are fewer when measured by the amount of territory they cover, so to speak. Presumably just as many married women are mothers to fewer children apiece. Once upon a time a woman might easily be six, eight or even ten times a mother-in-law. She is now most likely a mother-in-law once or twice.

Would this mean that the modern mother-in-law makes up in intensity what she has lost in coverage? That is the plea made for the smaller number of children by real mothers. Two or three children now get the care and guidance that half a dozen children once required. By the same token, mothers-in-law should be making themselves more strongly felt.

Yet amid all the wars of the day—national wars, class wars, labor wars, sex wars, art wars, ideological wars, and the like—one never hears of the mother-in-law as a contemporary sore spot. It follows that the old stories about mothers-in-law were slanders, and the Amarillo editor is a pioneer in a movement to remove and atone for an ancient wrong.—New York Times.

FALLING POPULATIONS?

The general tendency of population in all Western civilized States is to reproduce itself much more slowly, and almost everywhere birth rates are declining. According to statisticians, the British population will begin to fall in 1942, that of France in 1937, that of Germany in 1946, and that of the United States about 1960. This tendency should be kept steadily in view in planning social legislation. It has an important bearing in such directions as housing policy—for twenty-five years hence the number of children will be half what it is today.—London (England) Daily Mail..

A NOBLE ART LOST

While we are far from being one of those who mourn the glories of the good old days, and view regretfully the signs of present-day decadence, yet we are compelled to admit that in one respect, at least, the present lags behind the past.

There are liars' contests, Ananias' clubs, and various other organizations, including the Sault Hackle Club which make it their business each year to collect tall stories. Some of the recent ones have been fairly good, giving evidence of thought, originality, and the true spirit of disregard for any semblance of veracity which is the prime need of these yarns.

But they suffer by comparison, all of them. Laid beside the efforts of Baron Munchausen—the real baron, not the pseudo-article of the radio—they are as chalk beside cheese.—Guelph Mercury.

Riches without charity are nothing worth. They are a blessing only to him who makes them a blessing to others.—Fielding.

THE SPIDER'S WEB

The tinted symmetary of a shell,
The clear design on a turtle's back,
These strangely prove to me all is well,
That there is no shadow of fault or lack.
The patterned sheen of a peacock's tail,
The splendid hues of the pied macaw,
These show a power which does not fail
In its changeless purpose, its perfect

The spider's web and the stars that

The turning tides and the worlds that

Whirling on and on until thought must

The stripes of bronze on a kitten's face
Strangely free me from fear of doom,
And strangely cheer me with hopes of BROKEN BONES, the result of falls, are caused, says a smart writer, because the one who falls, in the act of falling, tenses muscles and bones in a fight to recover balance and avoid completing the gesture. Says this writer, when you feel you're falling relax, let yourself go and all will be well. He cites the ease with which actors fall without harm, after much training—but does he suggest that everybody should go into intensive training so that we can tumble about, do high and lofty falls, and all that kind of thing without breaking even a contract? Practise all summer on the grass and then we could tumble around on the ice in the winter, and like it. 'Sall very well to theorize, but when a fellow falls it is not premeditated and he just doesn't know he's falling until he hits. The actor has a fall in his part and he knows just when the fall is to occur and is prepared. The young man on the flying trapeze has to time his act or his act will time him, and so we'll just have to go on falling, falling for all the fall guys and taking our bumps as they come.

BARBERS ARE GETTING UPPITY, and why not? It's a far cry since Professor Skinner, Tonsorial Artist, walked Front Street in a frock coat and high silk hat and profitted by the publicity—and he sure was a pioneer of the publicity gag for the common or garden variety of barber. Now what have we? Conventions of barbers at the Royal York, Toronto, called now Hairdressers, and divided into two distinct camps, The National Hairdressers' Association and The Registered Hairdressers and Barbers' Association of Ontario. Both organizations met this week at the Royal York, Toronto, at what one delegate described as a yearly "dog fight", and a move toward amalgmation was started. Legislation is being sought to enforce sanitary methods in barber shops, and also an apprenticeship system backed by legal requirements. All of which shows that the tonsorial artists are keeping pace with the times, having conventions 'n' everything. Barbers of the old school say the young fellers are certainly spreading themselves, but shucks, away back when the art was young barbers were classed as surgeons and had to do all the blood letting, and believe you me, the first thing a doctor did in those days was to bleed the patient. We are tempted to say that nowadays it is the first and last treatment but that would be unkind, and our doctor wouldn't like it, and he might put a bit more on the bill just for getting even, so we'll not say it.

WITH SOME MINIATURE WARS ON THE TAPIS it will be interesting to watch and see if any of the belligerent nations will stoop to the use of gas and liquid fire. No doubt Germany will be glad to supply quantities of mustard gas which penetrates the clothing and raises merry hell with the epidermis, or even deadlier gas invented by German scientists since the Great War. War is Hell but the German War Machine even outhells any man-made conception of hell.

WORRY GREAT HANDICAP TO ADVANCEMENT

Use Every Means to Banish Worry From System

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Everybody worries. Even children get upset over their toys and playmates. And the curious thing about care is the fact that most people believe if they were in somebody else's position they would have no cause for further anxiety.

The poor, who worry about obtaining the barest necessities of life, picture all their troubles gone if only they were rich. The middle class, who so often live beyond their means, worry about paying bills and feel certain that some day, when fortune smiles upon them, they will live a serene and contented life. But the rich, whom so many envy, frequently worry just because of their riches.

There are so many varieties of worry that it would be impossible to set them all down. Every individual carries his own particular cross an infinite number of business worries, family worries and love worries. But whatever your own variety of worry may be, the point to be emphasized is that everything in your power should be done to banish it from your system.

A constant apprehension regarding the future—what may or may not happen—is the most serious handicap to a person's advancement. It is the most dangerously undermining influence the mind could possibly have. When a person worries, his thoughts are confused. He cannot see his way out of the difficulty that confronts him.

People have an idea that worry can be controlled through willpower. But that is not true. You cannot push worry out of your thoughts through force, or even by means of substituting diversion and a shifting of attention. You may succeed for a time, perhaps. But invariably the anxiety will slip back into your mind despite everything.

If you have fallen into the habit of worry, it is important to remember that anything that lowers your vitality will make your worries worse. Not only must you avoid confusion by thinking clearly and to the point, you must also lead a sane and sensible life.

First of all, stop the mental confusion that, like a danger signal, always precede worry. This can be accomplished by sitting down quietly and looking at the situation from every angle.

Next, be sure your mind is not playing you tricks, that your facts and promises are correct, that you are not simply manufacturing foolish ideas.

Then make up your mind to stop indecision! Arrive at a conclusion. And when once your conclusion is reached, stick to it.

Furthermore, lay the foundation for a personality free from worry by living less excitedly and less tensely. Set aside an hour a day for quiet reflection and introspection. Be sure to take short but frequent holidays.

Conquer your worries by every means possible, for worry never led to anything but misery and nerve exhaustion. Bear in mind that Lowell said: "Let us be of good cheer, remembering that the fortunes hardest to bear are those which never come!"

If you go at this business of overcoming worry in the right way, you will be astonished to find that it actually can be done.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

During the early weeks of life, babies can't avoid swallowing air when feeding. This often results in distension of the stomach and vomiting. In such case the infant should be fed in a semi-upright position. In order to expel the air from the stomach, the baby should be occasionally held upright during the feeding period.

Mr. E. F. Chapman left today for Toronto where he has obtained a position as reporter on the staff of the Toronto Telegram.

The Trade Bulletin of Montreal in its issue of March 15th, gives the following particulars regarding a sale of Belleville cheese in London, England: "This season has been noteworthy for the high prices of Canadian cheese in England, and a case is mentioned of the sale of a choice lot of twenty boxes of prime, mellow Belleville cheese in London by a Tooley Street House at 97s. 6d. per cwt. It is referred to as the highest price ever obtained for a lot of Canadian cheese in the English market. At the same time 92s. per cwt. was the other highest sale reported in the London market. Reports such as the above are very encouraging to all those engaged in the Belleville district who are interested in the production and manufacture of cheese."

SEE RE-DRAINAGE IN LONDON PLAN

English Counties Affected by 25 Million Dollar Plans

London, Mar. 9 (CP)—New trunk drainage system for Middlesex, Hertfordshire and Essex, at an estimated cost of $25,000,000 are being planned. It is expected to be the biggest main drainage system in the world.

The scheme is under consideration by the county authorities, including the London County Council, with the Ministry of Health also interested. Some thirty councils, urban and rural, are holding conferences on the subject. This is only the first of a series of vast new plans to modernize and co-ordinate the drainage works of Greater London.

The scheme will transform completely the drainage undertakings of the three counties over an area of 650 square miles and benefit more than twenty towns. Direct employment will be found for 5,000 or 6,000 men for five years, and thousands more will be employed indirectly in the production of materials.

Half a million people live in the area, but provision is made to deal with an ultimate population of nearly 2,000,000. More than thirty separate disposal works will be replaced by a central station at Edmonton speakers including Charles A. Cameron, C. H. Howard, M.P. of Sherbrooke, Quebec, George W. McPhee, K.C., M.P., of Yorkton, Saskatchewan, and W. A. Fraser, M.P., of Trenton. The Argyll Light Infantry Band under the direction of Ross Hunter and through the kindness of Col. E. A. Geen, O.C. of the Argyll Light Infantry gave a varied program before the meeting opened and during the evening which was much appreciated and for which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered by by I. L. Moore, seconded by W. V. Fairburn. The mover and seconder of this vote of thanks also included the speaker of the evening and W. A. Fraser for arranging for their appearance.

Candidate Applauded

Charles A. Cameron was given an enthusiastic reception, when he was called upon to speak by the President of the Association and in opening his remarks thanked the large number for their attendance in view of the fact that the election date had not been set and prospects that it would not be held until the late summer or early fall. He compared a general election to an annual meeting of a large company claiming, that when cheques for dividends were coming in promptly, the shareholders bothered but little about those, who were elected in authority but once the cheques started to dwindle or fall off altogether, the shareholders immediately proceeded to the annual meeting to find out, what was wrong. "Such is an election" said the speaker "and right now the shareholders in Canada, which are the electorate are beginning to wonder what is wrong and they are going to the polls to try and remedy the situation." Mr. Cameron was of the opinion, that things were not right in Canada, that taxes were unbearable and the burden was not getting lighter but heavier. "I do not believe in talking blue ruin" said the speaker "but things are not reassuring and the gaunt spectre of unemployment is rearing its head with no signs of it being controlled." He showed there were one million on direct relief in Canada at the present time and only 117,000, when Hon. Mr. King relinquished office in 1930, that the price of produce was not adequate for a scale of living and that in Belleville, which is a railroad terminal one third of the personnel was unemployed with many of them not having a chance of ever becoming regular employees again. He also showed that municipalities were defaulting and some say, that it has been caused by expensive spending of public funds but the speaker thought the situation was caused by the sheer inability of people to pay.

Figures Quoted

Mr. Cameron quoted a number of figures to show the increase in the National debt of Canada, stating, that the debt at the present time was two and three quarter billions of dollars. He showed that from 1922 to 1930 were banner years in this country under a Liberal administration and that from 1924 to 1930 the budget was balanced and sometimes a substantial surplus was shown but from 1931 to 1934 the budget was never balanced and in 1933 the deficit was 220 millions. The speaker stated, that he admired the patience of the Canadian people in their time of trouble and that he did not criticize the reform legislation but believed it was only a half baked proposition and would not cure the ills it was intended for. Referring to the Prime Minister and his promises of 1930, the speaker told his listeners, that Mr. Bennett had not blasted his way into the markets of the world and the magic wand of high tariffs was not the cure. Again quoting figures he showed the imports of 1929 to be $1,300,000,000 and in 1933 under Hon. Mr. Bennett $401,000,000. The exports in 1929 were $1,200,000,000, while in 1933 they were $537,000,000 a decided falling-off. The exports in agricultural products in 1929 were 336 millions, while in 1933 they had decreased to 195 millions. The export value of meats alive and dressed in 1929 were 100 millions while in 1933 this value had been reduced to 63 millions.

Two Way Trade Needed

The speaker offered four suggestions for the curing of this ill, namely a two way trade among countries of the world, believing that if Canada shut out imports, they were shutting in exports and by keeping out imports the government was keeping down the national revenue. Mr. Cameron advanced the opinion that Canada had its greatest prosperity under Liberal rule with a low tariff and that was the cure to the present situation and to end unemployment the trade channels of the world would have to be opened.

W. A. Fraser M.P., introduced the two speakers from Ottawa in a short address, thanking all for their attendance and the reception he always received from a Belleville audience. The speaker believed he had two of the outstanding men in Canada on the platform and they represented a cross section of the representation of Canada, one coming from the Province of Quebec and the other from the Province of Saskatchewan. Mr. C. H. Howard stated in opening his address he was glad to support a candidate the calibre of Mr. Cameron and believed he would be successful at the polls, whenever the election was held and that whenever, that election was billed the Liberals of the Dominion were ready for a fight. He referred to the many promises made by the present Premier during his election campaign of 1930 stating only two had been kept, one of calling a special session of parliament and the other of raising the tariffs.

Statement Analyzed

Mr. Howard referred particularly to one statement made by the Premier in his home town of Sherbrooke, "that this condition was not a world condition and that Canada was a young country and the blame should rest on the government in power". "I will turn that statement back at the Premier" said the speaker, "by blaming the government for the condition, that Canada finds itself in at the present time". At the time of the last campaign Premier Bennett stated, that if given a chance he would cure unemployment in Canada and again he comes to the people through his radio addresses and still maintains he will aid unemployment if given another chance, yet he has been given a chance for five years and what has he done?" asked the speaker. "Mr. Bennett thought protection would bring back prosperity", continued the speaker "yet in Sherbrooke in 1922 there were 2,899 men employed in industry drawing three millions in wages and producing 13 million dollars worth of goods, in 1929 there 5,000 employed and paid five million with 23 million dollars worth of goods produced, while in 1932 under the present Prime Minister there were 3,325 men employed being paid $2,700,000 and producing only eight millions dollars worth of goods." The speaker went on to show how high tariffs had practically ruined the tire business showing that in 1930 Canada shipped to the Argentine 400,000 auto tires, while in 1932 only 55,000 were shipped and at the same time Italy in 1930 shipped 508,000 tires to the same country but in 1932 the country shipped 822,100 tires. "Placing of a tariff wall increases internal competition and causes a decrease of price", said the speaker and he challenged anyone as to the correctness of that statement.

"Everyone realizes, that if the country is going to be put back on its feet, the farming industry must be improved", said Mr. Howard and he then asked "what has Mr. Bennett done to improve the condition of the farming community? He showed that in 1930 the government was financing for 4 1-2 per cent. workingmen were being paid 40 cents an hour, for unskilled labor and pork was ten cents a pound, yet not so long ago, Ontario floated a thirty million dollar loan at an interest rate of 6.15 per cent., the workingman was reduced in pay by the present government to 15 cents and 20 cents an hour and in cases no job at all and pork was down at one time to 2 3-4 cents a pound and the speaker believed there was no excuse for this situation, and that Premier Bennett has taken no steps to rectify the condition. "Help of the big fellow" was the chief concern of the present Premier", continued the speaker, "and one of his first bills put through was that any big corporation, that had bonds sold to the public could get half of them back and that interest would be deferred on the rest." "Did the little fellow get that concession?" asked the speaker.

Railway Question

Turning to railway question, the speaker stated, that some favored amalgamation and particularly the paid press and he gave as his opinion, that amalgamation simply meant the selling of the C.P.R. to the taxpayers of the Dominion but he admitted the greater part of the huge railway debt could have been eliminated had the bonds been refunded and the interest saved. In this case the Premier said the contract could not be broken but what about the contract, that has been broken with the workingman? Mr. Howard reviewed the Premier's action on the wheat situation, stating he did not believe, authority to invest the money of Canada in wheat on margin should be given any one man as had been given the Premier by parliament. What would the citizens of Belleville think about the treasurer if he took $25,000 of the city's funds and went into the stock market and supposing he made $25,000 or lost? He would soon be in jail for theft, yet the Premier is allowed to go into the wheat market with the money of a nation to gamble on wheat. He told how the price of wheat had been pegged 20 cents above the world price and how Argentine, and Australia had shipped their wheat into the Canadian market, while the Canadian miller has had to buy the high priced wheat for flour. "Canada used to sell Newfoundland flour but now England is buying Argentine wheat, making it into flour and selling Newfoundland, while Canadian millers are left holding the bag." said the speaker.

Treaties entered into with other countries during the Liberal administrations were reviewed by Mr. Howard and he showed, that nearly all of them had been cancelled by the present government and in their place high tariffs had been imposed, which has greatly restricted Canadian trade, "Canada has the goods" said the speaker "but we have got to have a market. Premier Bennett said he was going to blast his way into the markets of the world but all he has done is placed the dynamite and the fuse and forgot to light it." The butter situation was fully discussed, the speaker showing that despite the promise of Premier Bennett to restrict the importation of butter from New Zealand, in 1934, 2,650,000 pounds were brought in. "This was brought about", said Mr. Howard "by the depreciated currency in Australia, who could ship into this country realize 35 cents a pound for their butter, when it was only selling for 24 cents in this country." He also showed how the situation was solved by the Hon. Mr. Stevens and Hon. Mr. Weir, who had Australia ship their butter to storages in Halifax and Vancouver and the government advised when to sell their product. This the speaker called telephone and telegraph tariffs.

King Great Reformer

"Premier Bennett was called the new messiah by his party," said George W. McPhee of Yorkton, Saskatchewan, "yet Mr. King had been fighting for the laboring men all his life as he was the editor of the Labor Gazette and also the first Deputy Minister of Labor in the Dominion of Canada, and that while Mr. King was working for the laboring men, the present Premier was working his way into the millionaire class. The speaker told his listeners, that all reforms of any consequence were instituted by a Liberal government both in Canada and Britain and he asked when the Conservatives ever became a reform party." Turning to the reciprocity campaign of 1911, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was defeated, the speaker stated, "that the present Prime Minister stumped the country against the movement, stating at that time, Canada would become the back door of Chicago, yet that same man is today advocating the very thing Sir Wilfrid wanted in 1911 and I can say, that had the Liberal party been successful in that campaign, Canada today would be in a better position than at present." Mr. McPhee reviewed the different periods of Canadian history since 1896 and believed that Canada enjoyed its greatest prosperity under Liberal rule.

"During the Liberal administration" said the speaker 53 treaties with other countries were promulgated and today not one is in existence the last one to be cancelled was with France and Mr. McPhee showed his listeners the hardships, that had been brought by this section. Wheat was the first item dealt with, the trade agreements with Britain being covered fully and in that agreement Canadian wheat was to receive a six cent preference but the British statesmen put in a clause, that it must be said at the world's lowest price. In exchange for that preference automobiles from England was allowed in free, which permitted the wealthy man to get his Rolls Royce at an English price but a bicycle had a duty imposed of 35 percent. Other instances of the preferential tariff was discussed and in every case the one to benefit was the more wealthy class. The speaker also dealt with the wheat acreage reduction in an effort to bolster prices but still wheat is selling much lower than when the Liberals went out of power in 1930 and asking why the speaker explained that in 1930 Canada had a market and today she has none.

Retaliation by other countries with high tariffs against Canada was also dealt with by the speaker, he stating that the spirit of friendship so prevailed under the Liberal regime had entirely disappeared with the coming of the Bennett government but he believed when the people of this Dominion had a chance to speak they would in no uncertain terms turn down the Bennett regime and elect a Liberal government under Rt. Hon William Lyon Mackenzie King.

ROWBOATS USED TO GO TO SCHOOL

Children in Bosanquet Tp. Surmount Obstacles of Flood

Sarnia, Ont., Mar. 9 (CP)—While rowboats were being used to convey children to and from school, residents of Port Frank, a village in Bosanquet township, today watched with concern levels of the Au Sauble River.

Part of the resort village is reported flooded and the water around the school is about two feet deep. No serious damage has yet been reported but another sudden mild spell may result in further flooding.

The Thedford celery growing district is also reported partially flooded.

POLICE BILL IS TALKED OUT FOR THE SECOND TIME

Opposition Contends Bill Takes Away Rights of Municipalities

SHORT SESSION

Decision on Power Purchase Contracts in Few Days

Toronto, March 9 (CP)—Uncertainty continued today to surround the future of power contracts the former Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission negotiated with Quebec companies despite two weeks of debate on Hydro matters in the provincial legislature.

Latest development in the lengthy legislative discussion of Hydro matters came yesterday, when Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, following a demand from opposition leader George S. Henry for a declaration of Government policy, announced the government would make no decision on the matter of repudiation for several days.

Previous to the opposition leader's question Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, declared he had no intention in his Hydro speech Thursday night of giving the impression the government has no thought of repudiation.

The session yesterday lasted but two hours but it produced considerable discussion on two bills of Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck, after opposition by Conservative members his bill to amend the Division Courts Act received second reading but the bill to centralize police activities was talked out by the opposition for the second time this week.

Conservative opposition to the police bill concentrated on the general principle of centralization. Leopold Macaulay, South York, upheld the present police system which like the education system, is in the hands of the municipalities and the officers are responsible to the various municipal governments.

Termed Vicious Bill

Contending the barons at Runnymede had fought in vain if the bill passes, Mr. Macaulay said "Magna Charta secured us our liberty, this bill seeks to take it away."

A. R. Nesbitt, Toronto-Bracondale, followed Mr. Macaulay and labelled the measure as "a vicious bill from the standpoint of large cities."

He said the bill woud destroy the efficiency of a police force in any large city and asked what right has the director Mr. Roebuck proposes to tell the chief police, what should be done when, for instance, there is a riot in a city.

The centralization charge was hurled by Col. W. H. Price (Cons. Toronto-Parkdale) at the Attorney-General's bill amending the Division Courts Act. The former Attorney-General charged the bill centralizes power in the hands of the executive council, which was formerly in the hands of the people in the counties.

Replying to a statement made earlier in the session by Col. Price, the Premier said A. G. Slaght's salary in connection with arbitration proceedings at Niagara Falls between the Niagara Parks Commission and the International Railway Company was $200 a day and not $450 as the former Attorney-General had said.

Two other bills intruduced by Mr. Roebuck received second reading. They were amendments to the County Courts Act and the Adoption Act.

MUST KNOW LIFE TO WRITE BOOKS

Criticism of British Novels of 1934 is Given

New York, Mar. 9 (CP)—British novels have been flat during the past year, in the opinion of Dr. A. J. Cronin, Scottish author who is now on a visit to the United States.

Dr. Cronin, who wrote "Hatter's Castle" and "Grand Canary", said in an interview here: "The trouble with most of the authors is that they have no idea of life, which is absolutely essential if one has to write a book about people.

"Many young fellows in England imagine all they have to do to write a novel is to draw up a plot and then hire a stenographer to dictate it to. I was a practicing physician in England for fifteen years before I ever tried to write a book."

Dr. Cronin, accompanied by his wife, who also holds a medical doctor's degree, is travelling leisurely through the States. They will go later to Hollywood, where "Hatter's Castle" is to be filmed.

GET HOPPER EGG LOCUSTS OR NOT

Senator Advises Aussies on Pursuit of Common Foe

Melbourne, Mar. 9 (CP)—While the locust by any other name does just as much damage, Senator P. S. Malan of South Africa, who recently visited Australia, said he could not understand why Australians described it as a "grasshopper plague".

"To my mind," said Senator Malan, "the insects are only hoppers at one stage. They become locusts when they begin to fly."

Cousins of the hoppers who cut a wide swath in Canada last summer are now having their innings in both South Africa and Australia. Senator Malan hastened to admit the name didn't matter.

"The really important thing is that to combat invasions of this kind with any hope of success the insects must be destroyed while they are still eggs and hoppers — before developing into the flying stage."

Commissioner of Windsor Makes Charge at Meeting

Windsor, Mar. 9 (CP)—At an organization meeting of Italian Conservatives here, commissioner Oscar Fleming charged Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, with using his office to further the interests of the Liberal party in the border cities.

"He (Mr. Croll) controls the city of Windsor through the Board of Control," declared Mr. Fleming. "Some time ago he gave a job to Magistrate Brodie's son, W. M. Brodie, who was appointed a member of the municipal board. Magistrate Brodie of Windsor is also a member of the Windsor control board. Unless the father does as Mr. Croll tells him, the son will be fired."

"All the Tories in the welfare office were fired and replaced by sons or daughters of families who worked for Hon. Mr. Croll in the last provincial election," continued the commissioner. "Through these appointments he knows he can get more political backing from these same people at the federal election," he asserted.

Toronto, Mar. 9 (CP)—Hon. David Croll today had no statement to make in reply to charges by Commissioner Oscar Fleming in Windsor that Mr. Croll "controls the city of Windsor through the Board of Control."

STOP BELITTLING CANADA, ADVICE

Look on Bright Side Says Dr. Manion in Answering Opposition

Ottawa, March 9 (CP)—Parliament's annual battle over, Canada's war preparations are underway and stands adjourned over the week-end while opposition members thin up answers to a whirl-wind 10-minute speech which Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways, brought the week's business to a close, in the House of Commons.

Stop belittling Canada and look on the bright side for a change, was Dr. Manion's answer to a chorus of opposition attacks on the Government for spending money on the army and navy and in particular for its administration of the camps for single unemployed men. Hon. Grote Stirling, Minister of National Defence, was piloting his estimates through the house last night and made little progress owing to criticism of the opposition.

"Canada has come through this depression better than any other country in the world and I make no exception," declared Dr. Manion. "I do not except Britain or any other country."

He added Canada had fewer unemployed in proportion to population than Great Britain or the United States and that of the 30,000,000 odd unemployed people throughout the world the Canadian unemployed had been treated better than those in any other country.

"I am only stating the Canadian point of view," said the Minister, "when I say I do not think it is good for this country that anyone should be continually describing conditions in Canada as if we treated our unemployed worse than other countries have treated theirs, when as a matter of fact, we have treated them better."

A few minutes before Dr. Manion spoke J. S. Woodsworth (Labor Winnipeg North centre) had protested against treatment of unemployed men in relief camps and questioned the purpose of spending money on militia and defence. He wanted to know what enemy the Government proposed to fight.

Although Canada had renounced war as a national policy the country was being dotted with preparations for one.

Who was the feared enemy, asked Mr. Woodsworth. And of what use would Canada's tiny army and two-ship navy be.

STATES AND JAPAN SPEND MILLIONS

Armament Expenditures Near Passage at Washington

Washington, Mar. 9 (AP) — The largest appropriation for the United States army since Great War days rolled along toward enactment today after the senate had heard the warnings and quick denials there is danger of conflict with Japan and other nations.

Supporters of the bill to provide $400,000,000 for the war department, all but $50,000,000 of which would go for military activities, predicted senate passage during the day.

In prolonged debate over the bill half a dozen senators shouted warnings of possible conflict, particularly in the Pacific. But equally as many contended "America has no foes" and said the war talk was "all bosh".

Tokyo, Mar. 9 (AP)—The House of Peers enacted the 1935-36 budget today, giving final approval to the demands of Japan's army and navy leaders for the largest military appropriations in the empire's history.

The budget totals 2,210,000,000 yen (about $600,000,000). From this sum the army will receive 490,000,000 yen (about $142,000,000) and the navy 530,000,000 yen (about $154,000,000).

KINGSTONPRESBYTERIAL EXECUTIVE MEETING

Kingston, March 9.—An executive meeting of the Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. was held at the home of Miss E. L. Mowat, Johnson Street, Kingston. The newly-elected president, Mrs. Hunter, of Madoc, occupied the chair and conducted the devotional exercises. The following names were suggested as nominees for provincial offices: finance secretary, Mrs. Hugh McKay, St. Mary's; Home Helpers, Mrs. D. L. Fleming, Belleville; Young Women's Secretary, Miss M. E. Tier, Stratford; members without portfolio, Mrs. Rogers, Peterboro, Mrs. McEachern, London.

The summer meeting of the Kingston Presbyterial will be held at Deseronto on July 4. The presidents of auxiliaries in the vicinity were selected as the program committee. In the event of the resignation of Mrs. McIntosh of Madoc as Glad Tidings secretary, it was decided to ask Miss Mary McIntosh to continue the work so splendidly done by her mother for many years.

Arrangements were made for the visitation of auxiliaries by Presbyterial vice-presidents during the coming summer. Delegates were again urged to ask auxiliary treasurers to make monthly remittances to the presbyterial treasurer, Miss A. C. Fowler. The meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer.

"An Autobiography" by Vincent Snowden. Two Volumes. Ivor Nicholson and Watson: London — 1934. 1094 Pages

H. G. Wells recently predicted in his Experiment in Autobiography that "the novel will dwindle and die altogether and be replaced by more searching and outspoken biography and autobiography."

One hesitates, however, to consider this prediction seriously at anything but its surface value. For people are continually predicting the fate and future of the novel, and with much the same success as the soothsayers who predict the end of the world. Years ago Jules Verne quite innocently prophesied that the novel would be replaced by the newspaper but more novels have been published lately than ever before. It is equally true of course that more and more biographies and autobiographies are being written. But they do not appear to be replacing the novels nor does it seem likely that they will. Although it is apparent that they are rapidly being relegated to an equal rank beside the novels on the bookshelves.

"An Autobiography" by Viscount Snowden would seem to be the nearest approach, as yet, of any autobiography to take the place of a novel. For Viscount Snowden has written what is virtually a novel about himself — "the story of a romance" — he calls it. And it has the very essence of a novel and all the drama of a play. In fact, his life would make excellent material for a novelist. Here is a boy born in the Bronte country, brought up in a moorland village, a Yorkshireman. He begins his political life as a public speaker. One day his fellow-townsmen ask him to reply to a visiting Socialist. He agrees, but — being a thorough young man — he decides to read up a little on his subject before he speaks on it. So Snowden reads some Socialist literature. And then he makes his speech — but, in favour of the subject instead of against it. For suddenly but completely he has been converted to Socialism. That was the dramatic way in which Philip Snowden became a Socialist.

He confesses quite frankly that he has never read Karl Marx. But he observes at the same time that neither did Keir Hardie nor William Morris. This was the spirit of early British Socialism, Snowden says. "It derived its inspiration far more from the Sermon on the Mount than from the teachings of the economists."

Such is the spirit of Philip Snowden's Socialism — this early British Socialism. It is exemplified plainly in an incident which he relates about another Socialist orator who was advised "to put a bit of Come to Jesus in the meeting like Philip does."

Viscount Snowden has a reputation for being "bitter". Lloyd George has described his bitterness as "acrid ferocity". In answer to this accusation he says that he is only sincere and earnest. And these are virtues which no one will deny him. He is also to be admired for his courage in the face of a physical handicap. For Fate turned an active athlete into a cripple. Despite this Philip Snowden traveled all over Great Britain preaching Socialism. He won a seat in parliament under the Labour Party and subsequently became the hero of his country as the Iron Chancellor of the Exchequer.

No more revealing biography has ever been written than that of Philip Snowden," declared Dr. Albert R. Carman, Editor of the Montreal Daily Star. To this we would only add that none has been more honest. For Viscount Snowden does not disguise himself as many writers of autobiographies do in order to make a favourable impression on his readers. He is honest with himself and his readers even to the point of petty dislikes and superstitions.—E. F. H.

URGE GIRLS' CLUBS IN SOCIAL SERVICE

Manchester, March 9.—(CP)—Efforts are being made to start courses of study in order to train workers for girls' clubs in this vicinity.

Councillor Miss Mary Kingsmill Jones, who opened a recent conference, dealt with the importance of girls' clubs as social service. They carried on the work which had been done in the schools for the formation of character, she said, for this was work which would otherwise come to an end when the young, immature being was flung into the world of industry and withdrawn from the help and the guidance she had had up to that moment. And the girls' club movement seemed of particularly great importance now when the increased use and efficiency of machinery was leading towards a great deal more leisure for people.

Anyone who sat on the bench of magistrates know how serious were the effects of increased leisure when young people did not know how to use it rightly, said Miss Jones, for they always got their biggest crop of juvenile cases after the week-end.

The "finished article" felt she was going back to school if it was suggested she should take up this craft or that game.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Bodes Well For Love When Interested Husbands Ask Advice

Hail. And all success to the new school of husbands who feel they do not know intuitively all 'bout women.

Several young men have written to me within the last few days, saying they expect to be married and they'd like the arrangement to be permanent. I quote from one letter:

"At last she has consented, and I want to make her happy and stay married to this girl. What do you think is the best way of avoiding those ugly jars, scenes, fusses that make family life a caricature?

This letter is a most hopeful sign of the times. Are men really beginning to question that nature has not instinctively endowed them with every qualification for being perfect husbands For marriage has always been the amateur's marathon for both sexes, but women have been humbler about their responsibilities than men.

No one really knows much about women, as every philosopher has affirmed. But certain rules to which the fair invariably react may be set down as a good working basis for matrimony.

First, have a distinct understanding about financial matters. Let your wife know what your salary is, and then establish the budget system. Decide what's to be spent for rent, food, clothes, amusement, and what's to be put by for emergency and the possible rainy day.

It's unbelievable the number of women who write me they do not know anything about their husbands' incomes. They do not know if he has any life insurance. They do not know if any provision has been made for the children, after the husbands' death. This situation is all wrong.

After a thorough knowledge of one's money matters, the next thing, and equally essential to a happy marriage, is courtesy.

Why think, because a man or woman has paid you the compliment of marrying you, that you can sulk or growl and show temper the way you do toward "Central" when she gives you the wrong phone number?

Politeness in the home is more necessary than money in the bank, credit at the grocer's or the ability "to look a million dollars" when you haven't.

As these husbands-to-be have asked for suggestions, please let me say that most of the shipwrecks in married life come from philandering. From pure vanity, a man will start some sort of pickel-up flirtation with a girl in whom he really hasn't the slightest interest. He sees how cheap and tawdry she is, but he has got to prove to the word what a "devil with the women" he is. And the next thing you know, he's floundering like a fly on fly-paper to get free.

And don't, young husband, because you're married, forget to pay an occasional compliment. Tell your wife often that she looks pretty, stylish, sweet, kissable, and charming. That really goes farther than a five-pound box of candy.

And lastly, a sense of humor is a great asset to a happy marriage. The ability to see the funny side, to make merry over the things that go wrong.

Correct Manners

BUFFET LUNCHEON

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am having a party and as there will be fourteen guests and my husband and myself, my midnight luncheon is my problem. There is not room to seat all at my dining-room table, so would you suggest a buffet luncheon? I have a luncheon cloth made of a thirty-six inch square of lovely linen, with crocheted lace about eight inches deep around it. Could I use this of would a large linen tablecloth be better?

2. Could I place the tray of sandwiches, cakes and so forth on the table for the guests to help themselves, or is it more proper to pass them around

3. How should the serviettes and small plates be distributed?

K.

1. For use on your buffet table this cloth that you describe as if it would be just the thing. It would be more appropriae than the formal linen table cloth.

2. Guests at a buffet party are supposed to serve themselves. Have everything conveniently placed on the buffet table so that this friendly informality will be convenient.

3. Have your plates too on your buffet table. Have the pile of plates with the serviettes between the plates so that each guest can first take a plate with its accompanying serviette.

Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I plan to be married soon and I would like your advice on the question of wedding announcements. My mother and father were divorced when I was quite young. I have always lived with my mother and stepfather. However, I have been quite friendly with my father and his second wife, and have been a frequent visitor in their home. For the last few years I have been living and working in a city distant from both of their homes. Now the question arises, as to how to word the announcements? Any advice you give me will be appreciated.

Lou.

The best form would be for your wedding announcements to be sent in the names of your mother and stepfather. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Smith announce the marriage of their daughter
Miss Louise Graham Hill
to
Mr. George Worthyman
on Tuesday, the first of May Nineteen hundred and thirty-five
Chicago, Illinois.

If you wish, you may change the second line to read:

announce the marriage of Mrs.
Smith's daughter

but this is not such good form as the first form I outined. Also, if you prefer, you may omit the Miss before your name, although the title is usually included when the last name of the bride differs from the last name on the first line of the announcement.

BRIDESMAID.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for the sister of a girl's fiance to give a shower for her? 2. Can a married woman be a bridesmaid at a wedding, or is it only proper for her to be a matron of honor?

Z.

1. For obvious reasons bridal showers are not supposed to be planned by close relatives of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be. 2. Yes, a married woman may be a bridesmaid at a wedding. Nowadays when bridal attendants are chosen, no distinction is made between married and unmarried people.

THANK-YOU NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a gift from my boy friend's sister, who is in Ireland. I have never met this girl, but I would like to write her a note of thanks. The gift was a prayer-book. Will you kindly let me know just what to write

C.

Your letter of thanks might be worded something like this:

Dear Milly,

I just can't begin to tell you how deeply I was touched by your wonderful friendliness and thoughtfulness in sending me such a beautiful present. You were extremely kind to plan such happiness for me — and the prayer-book will always be an especially treasured possession. I have used it every day since it came to me, and it is precious to me for its own meaning and for the fact that you sent it to me. Blessings on you, and my deep, deep thanks. Tom has always told me what kind thoughts you always have to make your friends happy, and now I know that he is gloriously right — and that you are even kind to people you've never seen.

The rest of your letter might be a friendly chat about your friendship for this girl's brother, and about you and your life and interests. She will enjoy knowing about you, and your letter can begin a real friendship, even if this friendship will have to be by letters only.

Announcing the Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to be married in the fall and as I am not getting an engagement ring, I would like to know just how to announce my coming marriage. I have gone with this boy for three years. Should I have a party to announce it, or should he?

2. It will not be a large church wedding. Is it necessary to send out announcements as only the immediate family will probably be present at the small reception after the wedding?

Puzzled

1. The fact that you are not planning to have an engagement ring needn't make the slightest difference in the announcing of your engagement. All you have to do, when you decide to make the announcement, is to tell your relatives and close friends, and to write to those who are too far away to be told by word of mouth.

By doing this your engagement is announced. Then if you wish — though it isn't necessary — your mother and father may send a formal engagement announcement to the newspapers. And if they wish, they may give a party, as formal or as informal as you and they please, to make the announcement. And it is they who give the announcement party — not your fiance.

2. Notes of invitation, written by your mother, are the correct form of invitation for such an informal wedding. Then, if you wish, you may send out announcements, after the ceremony, to those who have not been invited to the ceremony or to the reception.

GIRLS MAY PICK BETROTHAL RING

Jeweler Points Out Trade Must Cater to Taste

Birmingham, England, Mar. 9 — Geoffrey Lloyd, M.P. for Ladywood, gave some hints to a jewelers' banquet about the modern girl's views on jewelry.

He asked, he said, "a particularly smart and charming girl — daughter of an earl," what girls thought of jewelry today ,and her reply was: "Of course, tastes have changed since the old days. Now we don't want such expensive jewelry, but we like more of it, to wear with different frocks."

When he asked whether the boys still slipped on the engagement ring under the moon, she replied: "That's practically finished. The couple go together to the jeweler's and buy the ring." This meant, he said, that jewelers had to cater for what the girls really like.

Miss Ford, of the Ontario School for the Deaf, was the guest speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the King George Home and School Club, held last night in the Teachers' Room. The President, Mrs. W. J. Harrison, presided and opened the meeting with the singing of "O Canada." The picture contest was won by Miss Wedden's room.

Miss Boyle introduced the guest-speaker who gave an excellent talk on Deafness and the Work of the Ontario School for the Deaf. Miss Ford stated the enrolment of three hundred at the school ranged in ages from five to twenty-one. The speaker said that partial deafness was the least evident of any of the afflictions that can befall childhood and before it is detected often language or the powers of articulation are lost. Miss Ford explained very effectively the anatomy of the auditory structure and the relative causes of deafness and partial deafness.

Under the causes of deafness the communicable diseases of childhood play a paramount part. Accidents and brain injuries at birth were also listed. Miss Ford admonished the parents never to regard any communicable disease casually and prevention was a prime requisite.

The speaker told in a very interesting manner of the academic and vocational training at the School and of their efforts to rehabilitate those afflicted with deafness. The school's facilities for detecting impaired hearing were always at the disposal of the public and at all times they were eager to co-operate with the public schools.

Miss Ford's address was of inestimable value and the wrapt interest and appreciation of her audience was evident. On behalf of the Club, Mr. L. A. Kells moved a hearty vote of thanks for her helpful and splendid talk. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.
